Preface

The African Book of Psalms is an oracle.

It is a book of psalms and prose, so it should not be taken literally.

It came through as amazonian hiëroglyphs, as prose, as cave paintings, very primal.

It is a shamanic medicine wheel, and it came through in raw form, so please do not go whining about spelling errors or grammar errors, as then this book is not for you.

You don't step into an Egyptian catacomb or a native American cave with cave paintings to whine about spelling errors or grammar errors either, as they were known to encrypt their messages.

Its texts are endless. Much of it got lost, just like many of the primal Egyptology got lost throughout times, and much of native American scripture. The manuscripts of the African Book of Psalms are sometimes in Dutch, sometimes in American.

The Eternal Gospel

The White Stone

Efatas

1. On the mountain of the gods God created the angels, on the mountain of Eden, where he first created the behemoth, who would fall away from the Lord later.
2. Like this he also created the morningstars among who there was also lucifer, the son of the dawn.
3. He also created the sons of God, the archangels, like Michael, Raphael, Uriel, and also Jupitaster who would later fall away from the Lord and would be called satan.
4. God created also the cherubs like Linjaser and Belial who would later fall away from the Lord.
5. Further God created the seraphs like Latou and also the Leviathan who would fall away from the Lord later. And the Lord clothed them with precious gems on the mountain of the gods, and the Lord gave them houses in the sea.
6. And the Lord saw that it was good, and blessed that part of the heavens and the angels' paradise.
7. And the Lord planted trees on the mountain of the gods, and the angels were allowed to eat of all of those, but there was one tree of which the Lord had forbidden them to eat.
8. And that tree was called the tree of sin. But Jupitaster once walked along the tree of sin, and knew what the Lord had said about the tree.
9. Now there was a serpent called the Virtus, and the serpent turned itself to Jupitaster. 'God doesn't want you to eat from this tree,' the serpent said, 'because then you would become like Him.'
10. Now the serpent was a hidden creature of an unknown beauty and mystery, and Jupitaster got filled by a lust to know more of the serpent.
11. 'God knows that your eyes will be opened when you eat from the tree, that's why He has forbidden it.'
12. And Jupitaster desired, had a lust, to eat from the tree, because he had listened to the serpent. And Jupitaster heard the screaming of angels who saw how close he had come to the serpent and the tree, but other angels also came close.

13. And Jupitaster had a lust to be like God, with opened eyes, and he desired a higher throne, to satisfy his pride.

14. And he saw how the tree of sin was a lust, and how the serpent was ogling him. And Jupitaster took of the black fruit, ate, and gave a part to Klajafus, another angel, who stood closest to him, and who also lusted to eat from the fruit.

15. Then he gave another part to Dismef, a second angel, and then a part to Esjaf, a third. After that he gave a part to Kwammahas, and as last to Dimhikstel.

16. Then there was a loud screaming in the heavens, and because they had eaten from the Saktakus, the cursed fruit, they and their legions were chased out of the heavens by the Angels of the Lord who had been faithful to their Lord.

17. And the Lord took notice of what had happened, and He let two angels to be established to guard the path to the tree of heaven, so that the fallen angels wouldn't return to the heavens. And this way on one day one third of the angels fell.

18. And the Lord established the angel Efatas to guard the book of heaven in which all the angels had been described, and on that day many were erased out of the book of heaven.

19. And the Lord established Efatas as a new begin of the heavens. And the Lord turned himself to the Virtus, made him tall and thin and cast him into the dust, where he became as a pole. And the Lord swore that He would pierce any angel who would sin at this pole.

20. And the Lord then establised the pole and made the pole as a dread for all angels. And that day great fear fell on the angels, and they served the Lord. From this day Jupitaster was called Satan.

Korok

1. In the beginning, even before the angels were created on the holy mountain of Eden, God created in the most hidden place the gods in a mystery, on top of the mountain, in the garden of the gods.

2. And the first original of them was Jesus Christ, who would later also become like a human and an angel to save the world. And as second God created the Virtus, who would fall away from the Lord later. Also He created the seven Spirits before His throne.

3. And God spoke : Let there be light in the garden, and there was light. And God took from His own heart, and created from that the gods of the Troiade, the old book.

4. And God took of His bowels and created the Elohim. And in the first days many fell away from the Elohim, and were put out of the garden of the gods. And when God created the angels on a lower part of the mountain, they swore to take revenge.
5. Then they sent Virtus, who had been fallen away from the Lord in the meantime, to deceive many angels. And the Lord was grieving and His heart burdened. And the Lord spoke out a curse on the Virtus, who became a serpent.
6. And the Virtus took many angels away from the heart of the Lord, and this was how the Virtus became a fright among the angels. And the Lord spoke that for a long period of time it wasn't allowed to speak about the Virtus, until the Lord would have broken the seal of the end of times. And the Lord lived in the garden of the gods, and he let rain come to wash the garden and the mountain and to purify it of every calamity.
7. And the Lord was in wrath on His holy mountain, and He gave His angels and gods a shelter. And the Lord brought a flood to test the gods and the angels, and many departed from the Lord. Be awake then, because there are many falls of gods and angels, and you do not know of the day nor the hour, neither of those who have departed.
8. And the Lord let two arks being built, for his angels and his gods, so that they had a shelter against the wrath and the flood of the Lord. And when the flood had subsided the Lord let two temples being built on the mountain of Eden for his angels and gods. Also the Lord let two arks of a new covenant being established there.
9. And the Lord spoke through the arks.
10. And then, beloved brothers and sisters, what is the mystery of God ? The mystery then lies in the God-serpents, like Moses raised the serpent to save the people.
11. So in the middle of the garden of the gods lies the garden of God the Lord, and His paradises : Kimalt, Maken, Mashalt, Matte, Matongo, Mashan, Marzan, Matavarus, Machinie, Chinnen, Kikmus, Kikmot, Mokoken, Motoken, Tokok, Korok, Korokhuk, Huks. And so then the God-serpents are more than the gods, and they form the being of God.
12. And through the Turan, the cloud of Jesus Christ, and through the Pakunites, the keys of the heavens, we may rise up on the mountain of Eden as well to come to the garden of God the Lord.
13. Would all God-serpents who are the being of God then have held on to the divine law, or would also some of them have been fallen down from the Living God to deceive the gods and the angels, and also the human ?

14. Be awake then, because of these things you have no knowledge. But I will tell you a mystery : also some of these God-serpents fell down from their being. And they built a church of fallen gods and angels.

1. And when the disciples came to the gates of heaven, and walked inside through them, they saw the Lord sitting on a white throne. And they asked : Lord, who are written in the book of life ? And then the Lord said : the poor, the cast out and the beaten, those who carry the lusts of the thorn crown and the lusts of the cross. And they asked : Lord, whose names aren't recorded in the book of life ?

2. And the Lord spoke : the ones committing divorce, the adulterers, and those who follow the whore. And then the disciples began to meditate on these words, to see if they would see any light in it. And then one of them spoke : Lord, and the rich ? Will they stand in the book of life ?

3. And the Lord spoke : No, because a rich one is a thief, and thieves will absolutely not be written in the book of life. And after these words they grieved, for many of their friends were rich. And they didn't understand the words of the Lord, because the Lord spoke about spiritual things.

4. Then the Lord took a lamp as a lantern and lit the candle. Then the Lord stood up, and walked with the burning candle along the disciples. And their number was large, and the Lord asked who of them would want to carry His light. But they said : Oh Lord, your light is so huge and strong. We would never be able to carry it. Then the Lord pointed to one of the disciples among them and gave him the burning lantern. 'See, I give you power to be my light,' the Lord spoke, and the man ascended. And all disciples looked at the man who had ascended, and they were astonished, and gave honour to the Lord.

5. And the Lord spoke : The lusts of the Lord are like snails. They go forth slowly and slowly they reach their goal. For such is the kingdom of the Lord. And the Lord spoke of the lusts of fear and the lusts of the suffering, and after that he spoke of the lusts of the scorn robe. And He said : Let yourself be clothed with the lusts of the Lord then to not be part of the lusts of the world and the lusts of sin. And from the heaven pieces of meat came down, and they all ate at a great table. And so that what they ate was heavenly meat, and the Lord spoke : Those who eat from the heavenly meat will surely stand in the book of life. And the meat changed their bodies, and their bodies began to give light.

6. And the Lord spoke: The sun and the moon we do not need for light, for the city of the Lord is getting lightened by those of the book of life. And the Lord performed many miracles and signs, and some of them became full of fear, but the Lord spoke : Trust me.

7. So the book of life will speak about the new heaven and the new earth and those who will live there. And the Lord took a fire to throw it on the earth, and the Lord spoke : See, I make all things new. And the Lord built a new city on earth, whose gates were of precious stones. And a strange light was wandering over the city, and the Lord spoke : These are the souls who are searching for rest since the foundation of the world. Those who are of the book of life will be admitted into the city, but those who find no record in the book will be cast out. And the Lord sent a second fire, and the light was purified.

8. And the Lord spoke : Now the hour has come that it will be known who belongs to the book of life and who doesn't belong. No one will find passage through the city but by the book.

1. And the Lord took a rope, and in his other hand He had a book called the Eternal Gospel, and the second bible, and the Lord spread a net over the earth, and spoke : Now it is the time that I will take up the harvest of the earth, and they will hear My Word and understand it. And a bird was flying in the heavens, and called in an unintelligible language.

2. And there came thunder and lightening off the bird, and so it was the bird of the Lord. And there were faces in the heavens, and a woman with the head of a serpent and the head of a lion and the head of a human came forward, and she spread a white powder over the earth as a plague of nettles. And the earth got purified again. And the woman spoke : Now the canon has been broken, the yoke resting on the saints for so long. And many seals got opened, and many animals fell in the sea, and the waves were high and savage. And the woman spoke again, while a poison came out of the mouth of the serpent to purify the earth once again.

3. And the woman took a cup and said : From four cups of the Lord the saints will drink to understand the Lord pure, and to have their names recorded in the book of life. And when she poured out the first cup over the earth there was a screaming and after that a great silence. And from the earth and from under the earth, an orange dragon appeared, and his power was great. And he roared to the saints who were dwelling in the city, and he dragged some of them out of the city, and spoke : The night of Leviathan has come. Leviathan won't die. But the Lord took a fire and devoured the orange dragon with it, and there was a weeping in the hell, in the innermost part of the earth.

4. And the Lord spoke : In Sheol I open gates, and I set captives free, for Leviathan, the master, has been delivered to the lake of fire, to fade in hail and sulphur to all eternities. Never shall Leviathan, the master, terrorize the earth anymore. I have stolen from the earth and the world of sin it's master to all his shameful lusts. And after these words had been spoken a hard and heavy door closed. And spirits fell from paradise, and the heavens curled up like scrolls, while the earth was shivering.

5. And again the woman spoke, and poured the second cup out over the earth. And this cup was red and like the screaming of a woman. And again faces appeared in the heavens, and someone was spitting on the earth. Then there was a huge screaming like there was never before, and like there would never be again. And the ships of the earth began to rot and to fade, and the sea had to make space for the paradise. And the Lord spoke to Mammon : Oh, you merchant, and rich lord of the earth, your master has fallen, and you will fall as well. Because the Lord has established the beginning and the end of your times, and see, you will go into chains and handcuffs and fetters, and you will visit the place which the Lord has destined for you, for this hour. And the two angels grasped the Mammon and cast him into the sea which was left behind, and the sea flooded the paradise to become rivers. And the Lord spoke to the sea : I set you free. And a serpent of gigantic size fell from the heavens into the sea, and the angels who were locked up in the sea and under the sea became free.

6. Then the woman took the third cup and the heavens became black, while she poured the poison over the earth. And shortly after that she poured the fourth cup over the earth, which was like red salt. And faces and wheels appeared in the heavens and the spirits of seas came to the heavens, and all whose names were recorded in the book of life found entrance. Those whose names weren't recorded were driven back to the seas of the earth and the seas below the earth. And the Lord spoke with loud voice : Now the four cups have been poured out over the earth, take the harvest up. And a great net was spread over the earth, and many disciples got accepted in the heavens.

7. And the Lord spoke again : For this hour I have spared the pools of heaven. And the Lord opened the doors of the heavenly barns and storages, and a seething mass came to all sides of the earth. And the dragons of the sea screamed to the gates of heaven, but these stayed locked, because the Lord had come with His judgement. Also women came from the seas and stretched out to the gates of heaven, but no one opened for them, because the Lord had come with His judgement. And they carried a strange seal on their foreheads, and strange signs on their hands. And a loud weeping rose up, but the Lord wouldn't open the doors. And the women clothed like poor women and began to knock on the gates of heaven, and some dressed up like old women, but the Lord wouldn't open for them. So was the judgement upon the rich and those who had hung on to the lusts of the world. And they began to beg and to whine, if the Lord would record their names in the book of life, but the Lord didn't listen to them. So it was the Lord being stubborn.

8. And the women took some anointed ones who weren't from the Lord, but the Lord devoured them by fire. And some of the women who were left took off their clothes and tried to seduce the Lord, but the fire of the Lord came in huge seething wrath upon them, and their eyes melted in their sockets. And the last woman who was left was the queen of sharks, and she was as a skeleton, and she was also called a witch. And she asked the Lord for access, and her power was so big that if it was possible she would be able to devour the Lord, but by His cup she couldn't, and she had to stay at a distance. And even the glorified angels didn't dare to speak her name, and they didn't bring a judgement on her. They kept their mouths locked, while the Lord took the book of life, which changed into a sword. And thus the Lord had a fight against her of a thousand days and a thousand nights. And after this battle the Lord took her up and threw her into the lake of fire. And the prometheus, the hades, the tantalus and the atlas had to give up their souls.

9. And so the Lord sits on the horse of the morning, waging war in holiness. And his women follow Him, those who carry the lusts of the cross and the lusts of ice and loneliness. And the Lord has the rule over saints, to keep and lead them in the right paths of the eternal life. But there are many eternities, and the Lord has many right paths. This is how he keeps the sheep separated from the goats, the chickens from the pigs and the oxes from the swines. The Lord knows them all, and sees if their names are recorded in the book of life. Therefore, when you have tested the spirits, test them by the sword which the Lord has given to you : the book of life. The book of life contains all the lusts of the Lord, and the lusts of Jesus Christ who has been crucified. So all the lusts of the cross and the wheel are described by the book of life, to all eternities. That is why it is : Praised is the Lord, who brought the book of life to those who are His, by Jesus Christ, the crucified, to a holy Jacobsladder to the heavens. See therefore that you will not sin, for the Lord will purify His book.

10. And to me there came a fire and a ray of lightening with thunder, and the Lord spoke : Write those things down, so your heart will be purified, and you will not be responsible for the things which are to happen on earth. Be clean of all blood, and come higher. And I saw a door opened from which light and lightening came forward, and a dove appeared with the glorified Christ. And I went inside through the door, and in front of me there was a table with meat. And the Lord spoke : Eat, for this is the meat of the heavens. And I ate, and the dove of the heaven descended on me. And the Lord spoke : You have to prophesy much, for I will come soon. And the Lord gave me a flag and a pencil, and the pencil got wings and began to bleed. And the Lord spoke : This then is the blood of Christ and the blood of the Spirit. Open your mouth, and your words will be pure. And I opened my mouth, but no words came forth from me. I had to write. And the paper on which I was writing started to bleed. And the Lord spoke : This is the blood of the Lord and of his faithful prophets.

11. And I began to prophesy on paper and I wrote down the tongues of the Lord, but then the Lord took the paper and sealed it. The Lord spoke : The Book of Blood will be opened in a later period. Now then, don't speak about what you have written down. And the Lord threw the bleeding book in the air, and it flew away as a bird. And the Lord spoke to me : Those who stand in the book of life have eternal life, but those who are in the book of blood have the access to the eternities of the cross. But those who aren't signed up in the book of blood won't have a part in the lusts of the Blood and the meat of Christ Jesus. They will stay outside, and they will suffer through the fourth death.

12. And the Lord spoke to His disciples about the holy hate towards sin, and the lusts of this hate, also called the Hate of the Lords. And the disciples sat with the Lord at a great lake of the heavens. And huge snakes began to fall into the lakes from great heights. Thus were the snakes of the Lord, the lusts of his Hates. And the Lord spoke that the false and reckless love was like a false fire, giving birth to the search for honour and power as the lusts of the world. These came to bind humanity. And then the Lord spoke about the higher loves and the lusts of them, who were all of the Lords. And see, these lusts were described in the book of blood. And the Lord opened a pit in the heavens where strange animals were dwelling. And the Lord called these strange animals : the seed of the lusts of the Lords. And a thunderstrike came to seal the pit again. And the Lord spoke about a lion breaking seals, and this lion was iron. And the Lord spoke that this lion bore the sword of Moses. Also this lion bore the books of history, and the knife to sift the times and the seasons, to cut them free. Like this they were the tongues of the lord. And the lion got in rage before the Face of the Lord, and the lion said : Now the days have come that the lusts of the savage lords will speak, and they will surely come to the disciples. And the disciples got filled by the strange tongues and the lusts, like they had eaten from the strange hidden trees of paradise.

13. And the Lord suffered to lead them to the tree of life and the tree of the book of blood, and they ate of strange exotic fruits of the Lord and of strange meat. And the disciples were put on the lion by the Lord, and the lion brought them to the depths of heaven. And the Lord said : Now is the time that I will completely transform the word, and she will be infallible. And the infallibility of the lords fell on them as a griffon and a basilisk, and they both spat venom to purify the disciples. And when the basilisk, the flying snake, spoke, the disciples fell on their face because of the light. And a woman came forward, a woman of God, and the basilisk began to coil around her body. And the woman clapped her hands and called forward the harem of God.

4. And so the Lord had also thirty-eight other harems who carried the names of his histories, and so in totality forty harems. And they carries strange and exotic names hidden by the Lords since the foundation of the world. And the Lord was as a winged sun.

5. And a being called Sta came forwards and see, she was as a python, but she had arms and legs. And she took the winged sun in her arms and began to send forth rays. And she began to explain to the disciples the principles of salvation, and the disciples became full of fear and asked : But who will be saved then ? And Sta explained about the many eternities, all with their own conditions. And see, those were like the lusts of the Lord, like his weapons. And Sta spoke about the great Toronto, the harlot sitting at many tables, and she spoke about these lusts as the lusts of the pharisees and the lusts of the world. And Sta spoke about the Judgements which would be poured out by the Lords all upon the pentecostal institute. And she spoke of the pentecostal institution as a well from which travelers could drink, but if they stayed there too long, then strange beings would rise up from the well to grasp them and to drown them. And Sta gave the disciples red torn clothes which they could wear, and she led them to a pearly gate. From here they could see the histories, but the histories started to spin and shift before their heads. And Sta took a sword and threw it into the well of history, and see, it became as a well of blood. Also the rivers of paradise slowly changed into blood. And thus it was the blood of Jesus Christ, the crucified.

6. And in the paradise the disciples came to the hidden crossed, and there were hidden wells of blood. And Sta spoke to them about the mysteries of the thorncrown. And the thorncrown was as a burning wheel in the heavens above the paradise, as a clock, and in it there were women living who sang like birds. And they hit many wounds, and they opened many wells of blood, but they also had the authority to seal the wells of blood. Then Sta spoke to the disciples about the lusts of poverty, and the lusts of the Hate of the Lords. And Sta spoke : There is only victory through the cross of the Lord and by His ice, for these bring forth His lusts and His Weapons. Be therefore as soldiers of the cross and battle against the spirits who attack you through the thorncrown for His sake, for the thorncrown is the only one granting visions. And she spoke of a deep mystery of the Lord. And see, birds who sat on the thorncrown began to mock them because of their red thorn clothes, and wounds began to appear on their skin. And Sta spoke : See, you then carry the wounds of the Lord, and the lusts of His scornrobe. Be soldiers of the cross, give your life for each other, so that you will find deep healing.

7. And Sta said that although they were now in the heaven and the eternal life, the journey through the death and through the hell was not finished. And Sta showed them a piece of jewelry of the death of Christ, names the Great Krurg. And see, it was like the harem of the thorn crown, and their names were : Spimas, Spassam, Spussum, Spolam, Spolus, Spulus, Spulum, Spukkus, Flijm, Flaim, Fluis, Fluim, Spijm, Spuim, Schuim, Korres, Zettus-B, Kahel, Korg, Korgel, Kaslam, Kwadret, Kabuls, Kabulsch, Horrijn, Jakis, Zette, Maaslim, Tas-Lamen, Nikneit, Narit, Tzartvongen, Tzartvingen, Vesnit, Vakin, Rakin. Then Sta showed them a piece of jewelry of the descension of Christ to hell, called the Prosmon. And the piece of jewelry was very powerful, and was the second harem of the thorn crown : Didomet, Kurgras, Kurgbosse, Kurgtom, Smalnes, Kurgdomet, Spaakdom, Domekals, Kalshut, Kamel, Toniije, Ergturg, Turgdom, Turgfisse, Fissekodom, Heidom, Heidem, Hergsiti, Hergheidom, Keidonne, Keidos, Keislert.

8. And the third harem of the thorn crown was called the Great Jaganta, and she was the piece of jewelry that could open the eyes to give visions and dreams. And their names were : Fanir, Fassa, Fessa, Fissa, Jiskas, Jiskitte, Jiskidde, Jiskide, Julof, Kaker, Kamit, Kande, Kandij, Kandije, IJe, Jamba, Jasbo, Dekhelt, Daslo, Buslos, Boslus, Baake, Spoeme, Propoppe, Pidis, Pide, Kirch, Paake, Botte, Berhim, Parhas, Poos, Polk, Plaak, Poermoes, Proxmi, Pirtis, Pirklille, Hochshelt, Pookhelt, Pamix, Pirkmin, Pirkminne, Porklos, Porklosse, Padissa, Padamin, Podosluul, Kurtlit, Kerlenke, Kershwinne, Kamin, Kaminne, Kierklin, Kiswin, Kurlenze, Koslau, Kanik, Kerlentes, Kokwonen, Kokwau, Kokesses, Irksd wakei, Dirfwinne, Dirfwrum, Dirfwinnesse, Dirfwenkes, Dirfwentes, Daakschwin, Daakschwinne, Kirkmin, Kontau, Korkwanne, Korkwanin, Koflo, Kotlo, Korschwon, Korschlonde, Kortenu, Kortedane, Kortedame, Mirkwin, Deklos, Karhut, Karhutdaanschwimme, Miktes, Mikteschwinne, Korschkanau, Kwanut, Borschlon, Borschlonne, Buchtes, Buchtinne, Birisch, Bizanto, Birschwin, Bochteld, Baschwesse. And they had huge powers, also to shut the eyes and to take away the gifts of vision, dreams and other prophetic gifts of the eye.

1. Gratefulness to Jesus, the Eternal, who sent us the dove and the magpie. He has unsealed the eternal gospel, breaking it's seals at the cross. Gratefulness to Jesus, the Son, who spoke through the psalms to us : In bliss is the man who does not walk in the council of the godless, who doesn't stand on the path of sinners, nor sits in the circle of those who ridicule. He who has spoken : but has a pleasure in the law of the Lords, and meditating on this law day and night. He who has said : I am the Law. He who has said : For he is like a tree planted at waterstreams, who gives his fruit on His time, which leaves don't fade ; al which he undertakes succeeds. He who has spoken has come closer, until the morningstar ascends in your hearts, and until you will follow the words of prophesy as a lamp on a new path.

2. I am the Law, said the Lords, a Law not made through the hearts of man, but streaming forth from the dove and the magpie. The Lords then have spoken sweet words of love, but also words of wrath, because the Lords who are your God hate evil. So He has spoken, to give His word size. Yes, to full growth He took His Word, and by Christ He broke the darkness, which is the Mammon.

3. For matter hasn't revealed the Word to you, but it has kept it closed and veiled. But the Holy Spirit has spoken through the Eternal One, and has taken away the scales of your eyes. Let those then who came closer fear Him, for the double Lord is a devouring fire. Let the Lord then open your heart, so that you will hear his word. Praise then Jesus, the Eternal One, who has sent the magpie, together with the dove. And these two are of a purifying covenant. And the dove is then of the old, but the magpie, who is of the new, has purified the dove, to an eternal and holy covenant.

4. And the double Lord has spoken to you through the psalms, as streaming light, soon awakening in your hearts, where you will receive the morningstar, the morningred and the eveningred. So the worker hasn't worked for nothing, and the suffering have not suffered in vain, but everything will be unfolded in the miraculous light which the Lord will bring. Therefore : bring welfare to your God, open your ears, and speak with Him, for He is the one who speaks. Also He is the listening one and He who answers prayer. See then, He lets Himself being softened. The Lord has given you such a powerful weapon : the prayer, to reign with Him. Let then no one abuse such a gift, for the wrath of the Lords is fast.

5. So you will stand then day to day before the judgement-throne of the Lords to be responsible for your words and acts. The Lord will listen to you when you speak, but when there is sin in your heart, then every word is an atrocity to the Lord. Yes, such folk will surely be spat out by the Lord, and He will speak : I haven't sent you. Terrible will be the day for them on which the Lord returns.

6. Thus has David spoken : Oh Lord, how numerous are my opposers ; many stand up against me ; many say of me : He doesn't find help with God. But You, Lord, are a shield that covers me, my honour, and who lets my head ascend. When I call out loud to the Lord, He answers me from His Holy Mountain. I laid myself down and slept ; I awoke, for the Lord supports me. I do not fear tenthousands of my nation, who have established themselves around me. Stand up, Lord, deliver me, my God. Yes, you have hit all my enemies on their jaw, and you have destroyed the teeth of the godless. The deliverance is of the Lord, your blessing is upon your people.

7. Lord my God, in you I have a shelter, deliver me from my persecuters and save me, so that he will not tear me apart like a lion, dragging me away so that no one saves. Stand up Lord, in your wrath, raise your wrath against those who oppress me. Wake up to support me. He rains coals of fire and sulphur upon the godless, scorching winds is the part of their cup. Help, Lord, because there are no pious ones anymore ; yes the faithful among the children of man are few. They speak falsities among each other, double-hearted with slippery lips. Let the Lord devour all the slippery lips and every proud tongue ; those who say : With our tongue we are strong ; our lips are with us, who is lord over us ? I praise the Lord who gave me council, even at night my kidneys teach me. I put the Lord before my eyes very vivid ; because He is at my right hand, I do not stumble. That's why my heart rejoices and my soul is jubilant, even my flesh will live in the shelter. Gods path is perfect ; the word of the Lords is pure. He is a shield for all those who have in Him their shelter. For who is God but our Lord ? Who is a rock besides our God ? The God who girds me with strength, and who makes my path plain. The Law of the Lords is perfect, she refreshes the soul. The commandment of the lords is pure. It lightens the eyes. Even when I go through a valley of deep darkness. I fear no evil, for you are with me. Your rod and staff comfort me. You raise a table for me in front of the eyes of those who oppress me. The earth and her fulness is of the Lords. Yes, on streams he has settled her, on pillars of fire. Who is allowed to ascend on the mountain of the Lords ? He who has a pure heart.

8. Thus speaks then David still to His Lord, and the Lord speaks to Him. Thus he speaks still from the cloud of witnesses, led forward as a lighting cloud by the Lord, lighting the hearts of so many.

9. The same David who has also spoken : In you, Lord, I have my shelter, never let me stand in shame. Let me escape by your righteousness. Be to me a protecting rock. You will pull me out of the net which they had hidden for me, for you are my fortress. In your hands I command my spirit. Battle, Lord, against those who battle against me. Take shield and buckler, stand up, to support me. Swing spear and battle-axe against my persecuters, say to my soul : I am your Deliverer. A river, her streams rejoice in the city of God. God is in her midst. She will not stumble. God will help her at the break of dawn. Save me oh Lord of the evil people, spare me against the men of violence, who set up evil things in their hearts, who give birth to battle the whole day.

They have sharpened their tongues as a snake. Viper-venom is under their lips. Spare me, oh Lord, against the hands of the godless, spare me against the men of violence who have the intention to tackle me by lies. Proud ones hid for me a trap of ropes. They spread a net along the path. Let him make them fall in the fire, in pits, so that they won't rise up again. Praise be to the Lord, my rock, who trains my fingers for battle. My mercy and fortress, my shield, and deliverance. You are my trust.

10. And thus speaks David still from the lighting cloud which leads the people : Lord, my God, my fortress, my solid house and My light. Lead me, reign me, for you are the Law, you are the sweetness and the wrath. Coals of fire are in your heart from where you speak, to devour the godless, to erase them in the kingdom of the dead. You pierce the proud, and takes down those who preach falsity. Oh Lord, eternal rock, do justice to me, let your enemies be ashamed. I hate those who hate You. I love those who love You.

11. Jesus, You are the Eternal Son, speaking in the light. When you speak the darkness shuts their doors, when you preach you drive her away. You sent your spirit, the Eternal One to lighten hearts, to bring to them the morningred and the eveningred. You sent your dove and your magpie, to let the morningstar ascend in our hearts, speaking of an eternal Word. You are the eternal one, you have been in arrival.

12. Lord, lead your nation to poverty, don't let her destroy herself by her riches. Lord, unmask those in your nation who follow the Mammon. Oh Lord, you have sent the holy poverty to us to testify of heavenly riches. This is the riches of your Word. Lord, you have purified us by Your blood. Break then also the Mammon by your blood. Yes, by the cross the Mammon has been defeated, and by the cross you have cut down the great Jom, and you have led us to the lokogamen, the pieces of jewelry of the suffering . You have clothed us in riches.

13. And I saw a door of light opening, and a dove and a magpie flew to the Lord, to put themselves on his arm, and later on his shoulders, and the Lord spoke words of thunder, and said : Now it is the time to remove the seals of the Eternal Gospel. And I saw a large angel coming who removed the seals, hundred and four in number, and he cast them in the sea of blood. And the angel spoke with a thundering voice, and I couldn't understand it. Then the Lord spoke : Praise then Jesus, the morningstar ascending in your hearts, because the Eternal Gospel has come close. And I saw a huge crowd of angels who fell before the feet of Jesus, and they worshipped Him. And I saw a large angel like a statue, and this angel was huger than any angel I ever saw. And he carried a book. Then I saw the magpie coming up from the shoulder of the Lords and he flew towards the angel to take the book out of his arms by it's beak, and brought it to the Lord. Then the dove opened the book, and the Lord spoke : Give now all honour to Jesus, because the Great Jom has fallen, she and her tenthousands. And I saw a statue of blood falling out of heaven, and she fell into the sea. And the Lord spoke : Weep, oh you earth, because the Great Jom has fallen upon you, and she knows that she has short time. Weep then, you sea, for her tenthousands are in hasty search in order to devour you. And I saw Rafael and Michael coming, and they carried Uriel to the Lord. And I saw huge crowds showing themselves grateful to Jesus, and Jesus spoke : This is the moment in which I pour out my Eternal Spirit richly. And a huge magpie came over the mass, and intoxicated the mass. And new tongues fell on the crowds and they prophesied of great things.

14. And then Jesus started to preach and said : The kingdom of the heavens has come close. And the magpie came to sit on his shoulder, and after that the dove, and Jesus performed great miracles. And from the blood of the sea martyrs came forward, and they stood pure before the Lord. And the magpie led them in daytime to the Eternal City, and the huge dove led them in nighttime, because they were appearances of light. Show that you are grateful to God who has sent David again, and show that you are grateful to Jesus, because the great city has come closer. And the Lord will send his angels to take you inside, and the Lord will be your light. The Lord will let his Word stand strong and will bring it to size, as a shelter where you will live forever. So is then Jesus the light of those who believe in Him and call for Him. Also you will see Mary in all her glory, and the gates of the angels will be opened. Focus then yourselves on the blood of Christ which has bought you free, knowing that this precious blood will also wash your conscience and your knowledge to make it holy for the Lord. The Lord will raise up a new and holy priesthood like this. You have come closer to the altar of David, where the Lord has slain the enemy. Know that you will not be washed only by the blood of Christ, but even more by the blood of the enemy, for those who truly love the Lord battle for Him. Like this you will stand before the Lord, pure and holy. And the Lord will say then to you : Go inside, you faithful slave, for you handled it well. But to those who have kept their swords clean of blood the Lord will say : Be cursed, you vain folk, for you have despised the law, which was to be your life. Now then, go away, you are cast out. And the Lord will say to them : In the fire everything will be washed, and by the fire I will go and search for a second harvest, and I will have a harvest to all eternities. Therefore, take care that you will have part in it. And so the Lord will be a well of love and purifying force into all eternities, in which many will come to lighting. And the Lord will raise David up again, and will establish him to be a light. And David will teach the nation into the arts of battle of the Lords, and he will rebuild the temple. And those who carry the name of David will be in bliss. And so David is a powerful mystery of the force of Christ. And David will be like the black panther, knowing and playing the hidden songs of the lords. And his harp will bring justice, and his flute will bring love. Also his harems will bring tenderness by tambourines, and softness of heart, and they will teach it to the nation. For it is an art to be with the Lord, and it is an art to reign with him.

15. And I saw a great magpie and a great dove sitting on the shoulders of David, after a door of light had opened itself, and I saw David doing great miracles. And David was called : ‘slayer of the godless’, and ‘fortress of justice’.

1. And I saw great men of God coming forward, like Moses, Samson and Solomon, and they all got a dove and a magpie on their shoulders, and this was the new and eternal sign of the Lords by which He sealed them, and a raven led them away. And Moses was established to reign the hell, and Samson was established as a ruler of the kingdom of the dead. Solomon was established to be ruler of the treasure-rooms of the Lords. I also saw Noah coming forward and a new ark was built.

The Book of the Holy Footnails

1. The secret of the prophets is in the thorn-crown, she who gives visions and dreams. Let the prophets be full of the Lusts of the Lord, so that they will escape from the lusts of the world. Let them hang on to the Spirits of the Lords, so that they can escape from the strange, foreign, exotic women. Any prophet has a heavenly harem to keep themselves smooth and spotless, away from the women of the world. For many temptations will be sent to the prophets, and many spirits of falsity. Therefore, oh prophet, care for the Fate of the Lords, who got crucified, pierced in his feet and hands. Bear therefore the nails deep within you as the seal of your salvation. For all those who are in Christ are crucified together with Him, and they do not sin, for they have escaped from sin by that which they suffered. But many who say they suffer with Christ, suffer like a Petrus and a Judas. They deny the Lord in His suffering, and betray Him. Those who suffer with the Lord are crucified at hands and feet and bear the nails of His suffering deep within. Yes, they have let themselves being purified in the depths of their spirit by the nails. Now then, the nail which pierced His feet bears a deep secret, for this nail brought Him to the realm of death and the kingdom of hell. And so the nail which pierced His feet is a path through the underworld, a path which you as well have to go. Those who do not bear this nail in their feet are no christians, because they do not follow the path of the Lord. They get grasped by the world and her lusts. But those who bear the nail have the lusts of the Lord, and therefore they are free from sin.

2. Therefore they who are truly in Christ have also gone this path through the death and the hell, and they are crucified also with Him deep in their spirit. And through this nail they have a weapon against the lust of the world, and they are fellow-soldiers of Christ.

3. So is then the holy footnail the key of the Great Easter, of the kingdom of death and of the hell. This nail is the key of the Path of Christ, and without this key you cannot come to the Lord. And those who bear this nail cannot go the path of the world, but they bear the lists of the Lords deep within and they know His Peace. They have an unconquerable weapon by which they breed the spirits of the world, and at the end of the times they will pierce these spirits like they have been pierced. So you will accept the suffering as a tool to come to the nail of Chris, and you will not use any of these weapons before their time, for then you would lose Christ. But many have taken these weapons in overcourage to despise the suffering of the Lords. And the Lord will take them in the endtime and will put them on His great vehicle, and they will turn to shame. The Lord will humble them by bringing them into times of drought and bareness, and the Lord will pull out the eyes of the spirits of the world. So the adornings of the prophets will pull to honor many who were humiliated by the world.

4. Worship therefore the nail, instead of all sorts of vague things. The Lord wants to be praised in His suffering, and through your most holy partaking. The Lord will hit the lips of those who keep worshipping Him in the distance. Those who worship the holy footnail by which he was crucified, like they worship the cross and his thorn crown, they have found him, and they will be with him. But the Lord will hit the foul hearts.

5. So you have in the footnail a key to come to him and to be one with him. Follow him then in all His footsteps and print his commandments by the nail in your thoughts, so that you will remember them for eternity. Yes, the objects of the cross are for eternity, and they have to be praised, so that you can use them in your most holy partaking. For do you not know that by taking part in the cross, you will also have part in the weapons of the cross ? But do not wake them up before their time, so that they will not turn themselves against you.

6. But there are some among you who want to lead the fellowship away from the sober devotion to the nail. They have made the paths of the pharisees. But you totally different : Do not listen to such folk who do not preach about the nail, for their paths lead to death and darkness. Don't let yourself been kept away from the paths of the Lords by friends, those you know from a distance, parents or children. Even if they were your brothers and sisters, those are nothing more than wounds. And still you bear such wounds faithfully, and sacrifice them to the Lord. By your devotion to the Lord and His nail, you who are holy, will go the path of ice, for this is the path of the Lords. The Lord doesn't care for family, but those who keep His commandments. Such parents and children have the value of gold, but the rest will perish. Don't stick therefore to those who do not do the Will of the Lords, or to them who say they do the Will of the Lords, but who walk the paths of the pharisees. Don't follow prophets who hang on to prosperity, for they are no prophets but thieves. Follow the paths of the prophets over and along the paths of poverty. For see, the poverty is your heavenly harem which keeps you away from the desires of man. The desires of man leads to destruction and the quenching of the senses. They have their joy in nothing and in shameless unsensitivity. They will lose even more feeling and their hardness will break off in the hell. But do not hang on to those who say that the hell endures forever, for they are cruel and without a heart. See, they have already lost their feeling, they are meat-eaters and whores, for they are friends of the world and therefore enemies of God. The hell will be solved in the heaven, for the hell is a purifying fire to purify everyone, sent out by heaven and returning to heaven. The Lord will not let sin alive, and neither the sinner. Those who will say that don't want to let go of sin. The Lord doesn't count with them, and labels them as mockers. But many among you have thought this way in your times of sin, and the Double Lord has saved you. So the Lord has enlightened many, and the Lord will enlighten many. Don't mock these words, for those who reject these words have already rejected the Lord. But test these words in holiness and in fear and trembling, for the Lord might have spoken. See then that you will not reject Him who speaks, for many slept while He suffered and spoke. Wake up then, you who sleep, so that Christ will be as light over you. And His nail is the lantern on your path.

7. So then there will be many enemies of God standing up in the last part of the times. And they will have their churches and they will catch people in it by their nets. But you totally different : Stay far away from them. The Lord has opened His city for you, and it be enough for you. So you who follow the the Lord have also crucified your soul by the nail, and it be as a watchman before your mouth. So all those who bear the thorn-crown of the Lords have a lantern and a lamp on the path of prophets and the path of the lords by the nail, and they will see many visions. Yes, they have a tool to awaken the prophetic gifts as a holy fire of the Lords. Yes, for also in the heavens the nails are mighty pillars, and you have to focus on it as ways up high. And the angels and the harems of the Lords descend from these pillars, and they ascend along them.

8. So then the nails of Christ have brought extasy to many, and many paths they have opened. Yes, for by the hand-nail you have gotten a service of the Lords, and you have done the work of the Lords. And through the foot-nail you have tread pure paths, and you have made travels in the spirit. And yes, some among you are predictates of the Lords. And through the wearing of the scornrobe you have become apostle before the face of the Lords, and the Lord is faithful to you and is a shelter to you. And by wearing the thorncrownyou became prophet before the face of the Lord, and He gave you visions by His blood. And those who had been pierced by the spear of the Lords, like He was once at the cross, and those who bear this spear and worship it as the holiness of the Lord, they are like judges before the face of God.

9. And so there are few who are very pure, and they have become hermitate by the footnail of the Lords, because they have not despised his paths. And they have made the journey in their insides to meet and wrap the Lord. And now the Lord is also wrapping them by the nail. The Lord is faithful to those who serve Him, clothing them and making them holy by the objects of the cross.

The New Revelation

The Ice-temple

1. The Lion spoke these words, standing in the Temple of Ice : Now is the time our apostles go out to cleanse the Word. And he took a book and burnt it.

2. Then he directed himself to the eastside of the heavens, in the domain called Spricht, and he spoke to break the seal of the lions. Then a raider who was sitting on a lion appeared, calling like a trumpet.

3. In it's one hand he had a small wooden bed, and in it's other hand a copper balance. He was followed by a large group lions.

4. The lion on which he sat was red and wild. 'Terrible' it's name was. From the mouth of the lion seven blue flames came to digest the surface of the earth.

5. Then I heard the cries of millions. They kept themselves hidden under the ground, and they had ships on sea.

6. Then a voice spoke: Now the judgement has reached the interior of the ground and the sea. Then I saw another lion appearing, more terrible than the previous.

7. On it's back he carried a scale of ice, from which insects originated. They started to drink of the waters, and the waters started to burn.

8. The lion was blue and clear and from it's mouth a shark originated. The shark swam to the sun and guzzled it.

9. Then stars of ice started to fall and some arrived on the ground. These were the days in which the temples of ice started to open.

10. They started make to glorify the Name of God and started to stand on their legs. In the middle of the heavens a woman was in pains of birthgiving.

11. Terrible was her battle, and she gave birth to a purple child. In birthgiving she died, and her soul was carried to God.

12. The name of this woman was Metensia, the Miraculous One, and she was given to the Spirit of God, her man. The child grew up and became large.

13. And her name was Marion, and she joined herself beside her brother Michai. In those days the Aakse fell, the large snake, from the heavens. He had been also gestured by Metensia.

14. And Marion and Michai lamented for seven months concerning their fallen brother. Pay attention then, so that you will know the secret. Seven large horns he carried, to seal the last of the days.

The breaking of the horns

15. And a large panther appeared in the midst of the heavens, and he started to send out his raiders. And then God spoke these words : The last days of the market have come.

16. This one will become very large and then it will fall. The market has made slaves, but I will set them free. I will plant a nipple in their chest, from which milk of My Spirit will flow to set them free.

17. I will give them the nipples of freedom, and I will lead them to the temple of ice. And then the first horn started to rise against the saints to pierce their hearts.

18. And God spoke : From the wound the nipple will rise. Fear no evil therefore. The nipple will crash the horn.

19. And I saw a nipple rising like a tower, and milk and honey began to flow over the heads of the saints and the prophets. And they prophesied for forty months.

20. And then I saw the second horn rise to boast against the saints. And suddenly he pierced their stomach. The wound was very large, and blood was streaming to the waters. I saw a bitterness growing in the heavens, and the martyrs begged for vengeance.

21. The earth started shaking and swallowed the rivers, but the seas began to grow larger. Then the large shark spat the sun out over the earth, and there was dryness for eight years and six months.

22. And a black lion rose up from the insides of the earth, and he gave a second nipple to those with the stomach-wound. Then there was a silence of thirty-eight hours in the heavens.

23. These were the days of Michai stirring up the earth. The third horn started to rise up and boast against Michai, and he gathered a huge crowd.

24. Michai's eyes got pierced, and his jaws got crashed so that he couldn't speak. Then Michai got tied to a stone, and they threw it in the large sea where the fishes started to eat from him.

25. The third nipple started to grow into the mouths of the saints and the apostles, and everytime they opened their mouths, there was milk and fire coming forth to digest the fallen.

26. They had mouths like snakes. Then the fourth horn started to persecute the purple child, Marion.

27. The horn also began to rise and boast against the heavens with blasphemies, and everyone following this horn got amazing powers to do miracles and signs very high-rated.

28. In these days the fourth nipple started to rise in the temple of ice, to come forth and speak words of wisdom, while books were opening themselves.

29. A black raider on a black horse appeared, and again stars started to fall away from the heavens. The damage on earth was high.

30. The last three horns were broken by winds, and a portal in the heavens was opened.

31. Then the woman of catlikes fell away from the heavens like thunder and lightening. First the Aakse, the large snake, started to eat her, but in his abdomen she started to laugh and ate him from the inside out.

32. Then many voices of heaven came.

33. A fox named Zurastael started to appear at the heavens and began to write his name in the heads of those who had the four nipples inside.

The holy tail

1. And a purple animal started to hate Marion, and took her to him, to finally leave with his seed.

2. She had hid a small number of knights, but their shelter got discovered and destroyed. When their blood touched the earth, it turned into seed by which wealthy trees grew. Also nettle-plants came forward and thronbushes with the flowers and the blossom of spirit.
3. In this the house of the martyr called Marion came forward, as a gate to the temples of the ice of heavens.
4. In those days the fox came to guide the saints on Marion's paths, those who had the wound of Marion in their souls, whose backs were broken.
5. And the fifth nipple began to grow at the end of their spines, at the cocyx, and turned into a sacred tail. And they began to weep towards the heavens.
6. And they came to the domains of Spricht, at the eastside of heavens. And the sacred tail began to write in their souls, words from sacred books.
7. When the sixth nipple appeared there was thunder from the heavens. And the Shark spoke these words : Blessed are those who have come to Spricht.
8. Then he directed himself towards the West of Heavens, to the domain of Zetdonia, and spoke words to break the seal of sharks. Then a shark came from the north of heaven, and to him was given the power to deceive the disciples of the woman of catlikes and those of the purple beast.
9. The days of the blue shark have begun. Let the earth shiver.
10. And the shark brought them to a cellar below the house of Marion, where he imprisoned them, and sealed their chains by unspeakable words.
11. The large shark of the heavens has risen. Who can escape from it's eye ?
12. In those days the anfitates were on earth, to bring honour to the purple child.
13. But a cloud took them away and brought them to a hidden place.
14. They were shown the secrets of the seventh nipple, and they weren't in grace of speaking.
15. You have come closer to God by the burning ice, in Whose presence you cannot speak You have come near to the assimilation.
16. And again books were burnt and those who were there weren't in grace of speaking.
17. Do you know the names of the seven large spirits dwelling before the face of God ?

18. Do you know the names of the seven spirit-eyes of God, and of the seven nipples of spirit ?

19. One of them is Matas. And blessed are those who have come near to Spricht.

The Song of Matas

20. Matas, waterplant, reaching towards the end of the sun. Matas, miraculous outreach, reaching towards the end of the sun, there where the ice begins, and there where the ice ends, there where the ice burns like a torch in the night.

21. Matas, waterplant, reaching towards the end of the sun, and blessed are those who have been drawn to Spricht. Matas, miraculous outreach, bursting out from day to day.

22. Roots reaching towards the bottoms of the sea, growing towards the end of the sun, Matas, waterplant, where the ice burns like a torch in the night.

23. Bring me before the face of him who knows and understands day and night, of him who understands the paths through darkness and light.

24. Teach me daily to understand your voice, bless those who hold on to the ice, there where everything burns.

25. Blessed are those who are filled by ice and spirit, swimming along the roots and leaves of Matas, growing from the house of Marion, reaching towards the other sides of Spricht.

26. Blessed are those who know the seven nipples of spirit, who let flow milk and ice. Blessed are those who spread honey, like ice burning as a torch in the night.

27. Lead us to eternal paths, give us the wings of Matas. Let us come near to Spricht, from forth from Marion's house, having her wounds in our hearts.

28. Make holy the purple child in us, and make holy your anfitates, as torches along our paths.

29. Teach us to know and understand the light of lights, the king of kings, in the house of Marion.

30. We stand here for your honour, with your songs in our mouths. Teach us to not pass along unknown paths, but let the paths be known to you.

31. Your paths are known, you gave Your knowledge to Your masters. Bless us, who have come near to Spricht.

32. Matas, Plant of Life, growing in darkness, where the heart is familiar with so many wounds. Bring us to Spricht.

33. Matas, grow there where it is dark, from the wounds of my heart. You know my purple child, I know that You love my heart.

34. As a torch in the night, You are there. Lead me through, don't abandon me. Only You know the heart of the Father, oh Spirit before Gods Throne.

35. Give me the visions of a new day, the burning ice in Your Heart. I know myself as hidden in You. You know all my grief.

36. You surround me, also my dry tongue. You bring my heart to the waters of life, grow into me oh Spirit of God. Make me familiar with Your Holy Advice.

The animals of heaven

1. And I got earzooming and handtingling when I was down into the heavens, and saw Gods temple of Ice.

2. And lions of the heavens came to me to guide and guard me. They spoke to me these words and images were sacred, and they had to be written down, to prepare a new bloodline of ages.

3. They led me to a house of heaven where the sharks of heaven were.

4. And the words they spoke were wet and moisty, prepared to be drunk, and my ears started to beep.

5. I heard the zooming of heaven, and I saw the different directions before me.

6. And a voice spoke : Speak, so that the judgement can come, which is the judgement the earth is waiting for.

7. And thrones were rising from their positions, and sharks and other animals of heaven started to sit on them.

8. And wine started to stream, and drunkenness fell on the animals, so that they could judge the lights of the earth.

9. And I got legtingling, while books were opened.

10. The words of the earth were cleansed and tested to the words of heaven, and again books were burnt.

11. And I saw hidden words being revealed, and they had to bear the responsibility for their works.

12. I also saw languages and cultures appear before the thrones of the animals of heaven.

13. The woman of catlikes had been thrown outside the gates of heaven, and after that they threw her in the lake of ice.

14. Then the shrieking stars fell away from the heavens, and they touched the earth to persecute those who were living on the earth.

15. And they were looking for rest, but they couldn't find it.

16. And a voice from the heavens spoke : The giant Jom has been conquered. Blessed are those who understand the secrets of the seventh nipple of spirit, those who drink from the Holy Milk, for they will approach satisfaction, and the waters of rest will stalk them.

17. Cursed are those who try to quench the nipples of spirit and to make them sad, for ice and sulphur will crash their heads. They will be broken down into the Fire of Eminius, the Sacred Lion before the Face of God.

18. Blessed are those who expect God, and blessed are those who know and understand His Spirit.

Eminius Day

1. These are the words of Eminius, the Sacred Lion before the Face of God. He had tables of ice and scales of ice, from which insects were coming. 2. He had arms like those of an octopus : Hear the Word of the Lord, for from now on no one can open without locking, and no one will create without breaking down. 3. I will show you the rope of Truth, when you stay in me. These are the Words of the Sacred Eminius, who burns of ice, as a torch in dark nights. 4. And when the black panther starts to run, and the glasses start to break, then the slaves of the market will be set free, for I didn't prepare you for slavery, but for freedom. 5. And in the dark hole you will find freedom. Like a panther I will gather My seed. 6. I will show you My wounds, and I will crown you as an anfitate. The secrets of these days are large. Blessed are those who know and understand them. 7. There will be a day of Eminius, a day on which everything will be sacred. This is the day that the ice will burn. In Gods Holy Temple I stand. 8. And I will burn of ice, while I will send My Winds across the earth, to turn blood into seed, and My suns of ice I will lead to the gates of Marion's house. 9. I will send forth a light hope to Metensia and I will lead her to Sarsia on the wings of the wind. 10. I will let Sarsia speak from the temple to bring hope to them who have the wounds of Metensia in their souls. Those who had to sacrifice their seed on the altars of righteousness. 11. Then Michai will draw his mother, and they will be drawn to each other by Eternal Ropes. 12. Then Metensia will send her Son to the earth, where he will settle his throne forever. 13. And the angel Sarsia will teach him to battle, and he will conquer. 14. Let yourself then be tenderly guarded by her soft wings, and let yourself be guided by her soft wings, to bring you to Eternal fields. 15. She, who is sent from the face of the Lords, from His Throne, to establish His Altar on earth. Yes, the earth will become His Temple. 16. Yes, come closer to the New Ark, and let yourself be bound with Eternal Cords. Yes, come closer to His Holy Temple. Let your mouths be filled with Ice. 17. You have come closer to the gold of Ice. You have come closer to the House of Metensia, where you eat from holy scales. 18. It will not burn away your stomach anymore, but it will be to your healing. You have come closer to the fruits of the Blue Tree, where Michai had been given life.

Spricht

19. And yes, there will be a day on which your hands and feet are bound together by the sixth and the seventh nipple. 20. Yes, by their Eternal cords you will be like a fish in the water, having the sweet wounds of Michai. You will be carried to the angels of the winds and cool waters, and they will love you because you have brought comfort to the Heart of God. 21. Yes, angels will serve you, those who have the cords of the sixth and the seventh nipple. 22. And in Spricht you will see your hands and feet, and realize that they are with many. You will not be able to hit or touch them, you will not be able to move them. 23. And then you will wait until the Spirit of God touches you, and His winds will bring you into movement. Then you will be like the holy cuttlefish in the water, and rising up like the flying spider to move the stars, and to wash in cool waters. 24. Now you still work on the field, but later you will know enlightenment. You will eat from holy suns, and the ice will rise up in your stomach. 25. Oh, you who have let your feet be bound by Eternal Cords, you will receive the spiritboots, and your seed will bring you into movement. 26. Don't be sad about the blood, as it will be holy seed. The Tiger will also give birth to you again, and you will be led by your own seed, coming forth and brought forth by the winds of God. 27. Don't be sad when you see the wounds of Michai in your shoulders, as the birds of the heavens will descend on them, to lead you on Eternal Paths. In bliss are those who came closer to Spricht.

The Day of the Altar

28. And the Tiger spoke these words, standing in the Holy Ictempel on the Holy Mountain of God : There is a Day on which the Holy Altar has to be revived. 29. This Day will be called great. Then the spirits who had to do heavy work will be set free. 30. And he broke the seal of the tigers, and directed himself towards the North where the great shark came from, and said : Now is the day of freedom for those who worked in sweat and tears. Your blood will become seed, and you will plant trees. 31. Now is the day of rest, and you will find rest on your fields of labor. 32. Your ploughshares will be melted to become altars, and you will know the Spirits of God. You will call your angels by their names.

The Sealing of the Word

33. And Michai stood up to lead those of the altar. 34. Great is the Day on which the Lord raises His Voice, to give rest to those of the altar. 35. And when the Tiger had spoken these words, an angel with seven winds in the arms came to seal the words. 36. Then there was rustle with thunder and lightning to lock the temple. 37. And those who had heard the Word of the Lords came to to rest.

The Words of Metensia

1. And my tongue came into fire when I saw and heard these things, and a door was opened in the heaven. And I heard a voice calling : 'Come, for there are many more things which have to be shown.'

2. And the sharks of heaven brought me upstairs as by cool waters, and I saw Metensia sitting on her throne.

3. She was bathing in ice, and her glare was like the gold of Ice. And she spoke words from a hidden book called The Troiade. 4. She spoke the words of Metensia : I am the Queen of Softness. My name is Ship. My name is Metensia and live on the sea.

5. I carry this world on four fundamentals. I work with My Healing Hands a way to the books. I am the Spirit of Love. 6. I created the mothers and those who created them.

My house is built on nine pillars, a house in clouds and waters, where the ice reigns.

7. I defeated the virtues and powers of the sun, and have enemies under and at my feet. 8. I carry fifteen stars on My head, and seven holy books live in my heart. I deal with fire and sulphur. 9. I have defeated them. Under my feet they are, as a footstool of my throne. I live in ice and created the mothers of ice. 10. Inner Healing streams to those who approach Me. Four tigers stand before me, to be a guard, and my two eagles are sent continuously with my word. They do not rest, day nor night. Holy are they. 11. I share Wisdom in front of My gates. I am faithful to those who are faithful to me. 12. Visions are in my right hand, and dreams are in my left hand. Wake up, so that my angel of sleep will take you. 13. I have sent my arxels to you, to bring you through the hours of the night. Yes, my nightwatch is over you, from the first to the twelveth hour. 14. In the fifth nightwatch you will see the sea, and then cords will pull you to the new day.

The Rider on the Dragon

15. And then my throat began to burn and tingle, and I heard a voice saying : drink of the holy ice-waters of heaven, for you have to prophesy many more things. 16. And I was given a time of rest, until I reached the new morning. 17. Cool waters of heaven surrounded me and there were fires in my stomach. These were the fires of ice. 18. And again I drank from the waters, and these waters were sweet. 19. And a staff was put on my forehead and I saw visions stream from my hands. 20. These visions were bright as ice and waters surrounded them. 21. And then I was asked : Do you know the Spirits of God ? 22. A bitter Spirit stood before me with bitter tears which had wrapped him like scales. And then I was asked : Do you know the bitterness of God. 23. I saw the tears as thunderstones and hailstones fall on the earth, and rivers began to stream. Then the earth caught flame, and a loud voice spoke : Can you still wrap your treasures when Mura visits the earth. 24. And in her arms she bore a fox named Zurastael, and spoke : the secret of the fox is huge. In extasy are those who know the treasures of Zurastael. New veins will let them save the blood. 25. And the fox wore his crown as a helmet made of pure stones, and when he spoke I felt new blood flowing through my veins, and this blood began to burn like burning ice. 26. And then he spoke, saying : your blood will give birth to the seed, the seed of ice. It will burn as a torch in the night, to lead those who give rest to rest. 27. Your fear will become like stone, and no one will be of power to break it. 28. Your fears have led you to the ice, and to the book of Zurastael. 29. And before my eyes a book was opened with golden letters in stones, and before my eyes the letters began to change and move, and visions came forth from them. 30. And again Zurastael spoke, saying : You who seek the light will be sucked up by stone. In extasy are those who find the eternal stone, for eternal veins will save the blood there. 31. And pure lights fell on me like cool waters and I felt ground below my feet, hard as stone, while it was glowing. 32. And a voice of the altar spoke, saying : In extasy are the dead who die in Zurastael from now on. 33. And I saw thrones of the sea coming up, and altars from the insides of the earth, and I saw graves opening, while the regions and the directions of the wind gave their dead. 34. The sea gave her dead and the insides of the earth gave their dead, and also the mountains, the rivers, and the nests of birds.

35. Books were opened and altars caught flame. And a voice spoke, saying : This is the day the dead have to be given back. 36. And the lights of the firmaments began to give their dead, and the suns and moons began to spit them out and bowed. 37. And again a voice spoke : The light of Zurastael has come and the darkness was not able to split it. In extasy are those who die in Him now, for they will find rest. 38. And I saw the market falling like a star out of the heaven, and the market began to scream on the earth to accuse the saints. 39. And they got bitten by scorpions for half of the day. And the merchants began to give their dead. 40. They worshipped the rider on the dragon. This rider had the face of a human. And slave and master, merchant and customer, Jew and Greek, they all bowed for the rider on the dragon in astonishment, saying : Who can ride the dragon ? 41. How is it possible that a human rides the dragon. And they followed the rider of the dragon as having a bartender of spirit. 42. And the rider of the dragon came to the fox and broke it's neck. 43. Then a weeping burts forth from the heavens, while women wept for sixty days and nights. After those sixty days it was spoken : In extasy are those who have the wound of Zurastael. 44. And again the women began to weep and mourn over the fox, until the angel Sarsia brought him before the face of God. 45. But also the rider of the dragon came to present himself before God after having crossed the earth. 46. He battled against the angel Sarsia over the body of Zurastael for sixty days and nights, while Sarsia didn't dare to speak a word. 47. After the sixty days and nights the Lion before the face of God began to speak. These are the words of the holy Eminius. 48. And while he spoke, mountains of fire and ice came forth from his mouth, and seas of fire and ice came forth from his tail. 49. All these words were sealed and the rider of the dragon was laid on the altar. 50. And from the altar a black panther came to devour the rider of the dragon. Heavy hailstones came on the earth to split the ships of merchants. 51. And a snake locked up in the insides of the earth from the beginning broke free. And a voice spoke : Now the seal of snakes has been broken 52. Woe to those who live on the earth. In extasy are those who eat from the medicin of Zurastael, and who drink of his syrop. 53. In extasy are those who carry the venom of snakes within them, for they will be purified. 54. And the flower of God came to live to devour the seed of the rider of the dragon. And she was given the adornments of the heavens, and she brought drunkenness over the followers of Zurastael.

The fall of women

55. And I saw a sign in the heaven under which four panthers were given life by birth, and they crossed the earth to build the temple. 56. And this temple was full of ice, while lions started to burn, to speak the words of sulphur. 57. And Eminius became a king on earth, and many followed him. And women began to shout and sing : Thank to God who has sent His prophet, who changes blood into burning seed. 58. And a hedge of herbs began to grow on earth, and it's thorns began to persecute the prophets of God. 59. And women with the herbs of Eminius in their hair tried to lure apostles and judges in traps, while they began to worship the hedge. 60. And the hedge was called the doghedge. Since then Eminius started to draw himself back in the desert, and snakes of the fields served him. 61. And these days have been called the fall of women. 62. And the woman of the dogs began to sing her songs and sold them, but she was defeated by Michai without words. 63. And one third of the fallen women died, while the other parttried to mislead the predictates and the hermitates to earthly sin and prostitution. 64. Stand strong in the days of temptation, and leave your possessions behind. 65. Sell your wife and children to the Spirits of God, so that the Lord will give you the Spirit of Ice. 66. Let then your temple be built by holy attentates so that you will come to the crown of the anfitate. 67. Put then on the spiritboots, you who wear the helmet and the armor, so that you will stand strong in the days of seduction. 68. See, the spiritboots of Eminius burning with fire and ice lays before you. Then you will see the evil days flee. 69. In bliss are those who have the wounds of Eminius.

The leather of the enemy

70. And those days the Name of Eminius became bigger in the heavens. And he brought new wines, bile and molten metals to the altars, in which the new weapons were forged. 71. In these days the temples and the altars got big, and from the seed new boots came forth. And these days were big. 72. In bliss are those whose heads and hearts are shoed by the Spirits of God. 73. In bliss are those whose swords and shields have been shoed on holy altars. 74. And the leather of the enemy has to be cleaned in the ark of the temple for seven days and seven nights, and then it has to be cleaned in the scales of ice for forty months, and then it has to come back in the hands of Eminius. 75. So you have to bridle the horses and the dogs of the heavens, and you will not become a prey to the thorns of the earth. 76. And he who pulls the boats will lead you to the ark of lions, yes, for it will be a temple with many altars and many arks. 77. And you will not be able to bear the Glory of God. Let then the Name of Eminius become bigger in your hearts.

The race of the Ancialites

78. And I saw that the saints who had the wounds of Eminius had to be shoed for a period of eighty days. 79. And the leather of the enemy was gathered and brought to a separated room in the temple which was called the chamber of the boots. 80. And the boots of the anfitates had to be cleaned first for three days on the altars of the chamber. 81. And those who didn't have the wounds of Eminius were cast out. 82. and I heard a voice saying : Clean then the boots of anfitates and exorcists, and clean it with herbs and in scales with waters of moss and branches. 83. And the Holy Snake of the Altar of God blew over the boots, six rows of each thirty meters. 84. And the Spirit of God came over the boots, and the men began to speak in another language. 85. Now there were several women among them. Sonia and Diadiria were two names among them. But the Lord said : 'Separate the men and the women for me.' 86. And the women were brought to another chamber. 87. And then some of the men began to grumble, and they were devoured by the Fire of the Holy Snake of the Altar of God. And their number was seventy-eight. 88. These were the days of the Ancialites, a holy race of priests who served in the deeper temples. 89. They had not stained themselves with women, but they were separated since their birth, and they had the Spirits of God as their women. 90. See then that you will not attach yourself to a whore, but love the Spirits of God. 91. And in this holy race from birth men and women are kept separated and they have to be ignorant of each others existence. 92. In those days it was under strict conditions that someone could enter the order of the Ancialiates. And the Lord was with them. 93. And they had access to the hidden places of the heavens, there where the snakes of the heavens dwelled. 94. And their boots were prepared in the ark of the snakes, and cleaned on the altars of snakes in a period of many years. 95. And they carried the wounds and scars of the Lords deep in their bodies and souls, and they were raised missing their parents. 96. They had to educate each other and the Lord was with them. 97. They had the least form of contact with the older people of their fate, and the encounters were often in darkness and with walls inbetween, and the older ones were often clothed in a purple or dark robe. 98. In the nights they were often visited by angels, but they also had to wrestle with the spirits of the abyss. 99. They lived in the depths of the heavens to serve the Lord in the secret ice-temples. 100. And I saw the priests who prepared and cleaned the boots in the wrong way. A fiery flame fell upon them and casted them in a deep abyss. 101. And I saw an angel descending to seal the pit with words which could not be uttered, and I heard voices as of thunder.

The war-angel

102. And there will be healing in the house of Zetdonia, where the saints bath in ice. Here the books are burning and in bliss are those whose Words are shoed. 103. And I saw sharks break free who had been locked up in icecubes for this hour. And they were with many. And the ice had to free the dead. 104. And again I saw thrones rising from the sea in big blue halls, and the angel Sarsia descended. 105. And I saw the many wounds of Zetdonia, and Sarsia would lead those who carried those wounds to places of Rest and Healing, where she would wipe all the tears from their eyes. 106. And Sarsia would be like a shepherdess for them, guarding them against the predators. 107. She would guide them along soft and cool waters to her home, where holy Knights were taken care of by angels. 108. You have come closer to the House of Sarsia, where her sisters take care of the saints and anoint them. 109. She is the nightwatch on the ship. 110. And these were the Words of Sarsia : My tears sill go through the bleating of sheep to bring my loved ones to sleep, and to bring them to My Home. 111. And when the lion roars I still give my beloved ones dreams. 112. Let yourself be guided by my nightwatch, to the fourth nightwatch.

113. And she led many angels, and she was as a rock in wild seas. 114. And her armory was made of the many beasts and dragons she had defeated. 115. She was a war-angel, coming from steaming seas, and her name was big. And she led them through the dark ice.

Morit

1. And Morit will not be forgotten. She will return to the garden of Genesis in the last of the days, and she will be with the Lord. 2. Spirit of Santra, Salvation of God, raise your voice in the deepest of the night. As a fisherwomen, you will bring her back, from blue waters. 3. Morit will not be forgotten. Her flame will burn in the temple. And the fishermen of God will honor her. Her name will be on their boats. 4. And in these days the Karazure will come to the earth, Metensia's catlike arxels. They are the predators of heaven. 5. And Metensia's waters will cover the earth, and the earth will catch flame, and the yellow shark will eat the earth. 6. And she will take the saints and the persecuted prophets out of their prisons with her birds, the karsuiks and the putses, and they will be brought to a safe place. 7. In Metensia's house they will rest for three days, and then they will be brought to the garden of Genesis, where they will be re-united with Morit. 8. And they will know Kabbernal, the spirit of Gods Altar.

The temptation of the prophets

9. In these days new visions will rise to the prophets. And from the altar a Spirit will ascend who is called Fire of Eminius. And this name will be big. 10. And then Eminius will establish Himself in a circle of altars, and the holy prayer will be restored among the nation. 11. And Eminius and the Fire of Eminius will ascend from the kettle of God. And the Fire of Eminius will deceive the fallen nation for thirty years, and they will forget the covenant. 12. And He will lead the holy people who have held on in the temptation to the winds of the fire. And they will be satisfied by the apples of the altar. 13. And the seed of Eminius will be called Izu. And this mystery is big. 14. And the prophets of God will prophesy to the fallen nation and to the fallen prophets for thousand and sixty-three days. They will sleep near treetrunks, and their words will not be believed. 15. And the prophets of God will shout to the heavens, but these will stay closed, until the days of temptation have come to an end. 16. and I saw a prophet rise up from the crowd with eyes of fire, and he brought confort to those in tribulation. 17. Then I saw that his eyes got pierced by a raging crowd, but the seed of Eminius who would be called Izu came to help him, and then for a long time ice streamed from his eyes, and times and waters were covered by glaciers. 18. And then the raging crowds began to shiver, saying : Yes, Izu is great. 19. And I saw a star falling from the heaven which covered one third of the raging crowds. And Eminius gave them apples, so that they would not mislead the nations anymore. 20. There was also bread from the altar which was given to their predators, so that they would leave the saints alone. And the saints had rest for long days. 21. These predators were terrible, and the saints would still shiver for a long time. 22. In bliss is to which the Sword of Eminiis is given, for he will be able to eat from the Tree of Life.

The fall of the prophets

23. And in those days there was the Fate of the prophets and the prophetic races. 24. And they often served in the temple, and were sent as predators. 25. And the prophets of God in the desert had a small enlightenment, but they began to shout to the heaven : How long do our mouths stay sealed, and when will the seal of dogs be broken. This seal was very heavy, and they suffered in fiery pains. 26. And the Lord sent an arxel with small hope. And the arxel spoke : I can warm your hearts, with a small flame, but I cannot treat the wound, as the Lord has bound my hands. 27. And a door in the heaven was opened, and a vouce behind the door spoke : Let them be grafted on the prophetic races. 28. And there was a war between the prophets, a war as if there was never a war before. And this was called the fall of the prophets. 29. And the Lord brought a fire to the tree of prophets and there was a cleaning of eighty days. 30. And the Lord spoke : No longer will My Hand be on the unfaithful prophet. And the Lord brought the fallen prophets to a rock under the earth. 31. And this rock was called the dread of the apostles.

The doghedge

32. In those days the Lord let a clock be built in the tabernacle, and the hearts of the prophets came to rest. 33. And the Lord spoke these words : The days of the deception of the prophets are over. 34. And the hearts and words were tested to this clock. Also books were brought to the altar of the Lords. 35. And the Fire of the Lords consumed them.

36. And the races of the builders came before the Face of the Lords. And the Lord lighted a fire among them, to bring cleaning among them.

37. And the Lord moistened the ground of the earth with His Spirit, and let the garden of Genesis sprouted up on the earth. And Eminiis, the Spirit of the ark and the throne, was poured uit, and the winds of fire began to blow. 38. And the consciences of the saints were delivered from the spirits of the waters. 39. These were the days on which the heavens and the earth were created again. 40. In bliss are those who have come to the gates of the shark, the tiger and the lion. 41. And the flesh of kings and fallen ones was gathered, and the snakes of the heavens descended. 42. Also trees of sins and lies were cut off, and there was wood for seven years in the temple of the Lords. 43. And a voice spoke : Do you know the mystery of the doghedge ? 44. For at the end of the hedge the woman of the catlikes sits, and she will rise up one time more to deceive the children of the kingdom. 45. And they will find comfort with the trees of the fields. And the earth was surprised and in wonder that the great fallen Jom had risen. 46. And in her hand she had a nipple-tree with which she could bind the souls of children. 47. And with seven false nipples and stars she could seal books and words. 48. And the children prayed to God, begging if He wanted to break the seal of dogs. 49. But the Lord sent His arxel, and this one spoke : I can give your hearts a little light, but I cannot remove the sting, for the Lord has spoken His Word. 50. And the children found a little rest.

51. And the Lord led the children to the heart and house of Marion, and their wounds were deep. And deep in the house of Marion the nipple-tree of the Spirit grew, from which the holy milk flew. 52. But the thorns of the Spirit were sharp, and many children left the Lord. 53. And these days were called the fall of the children. But the Lord took care of them, because they were like orphans. 54. And He led them to a rock, where they found eternal rest. And the Lord called this rock the rest of the hermitates.

The seals of the Utmirs

55. And the Lord spoke to me : Do you know the times of Utmir ? And the Lord gave a cup of stone of the altar to me, and while I drank it I trembled like I had never trembled before. 56. And the dread of the Lord fell on me, and I was shown a great mystery. 57. And the Lord spoke these words : 'Do you know the mystery of the Son of the Spirit ?' And I saw while I got intoxicated how the Lord created the heavens and the first earth. 58. And the Spirits of God came together, and I saw Metensia coming to her man Eminius, and she gave birth to Michai, the Son of the Spirit, who was sent to the earth, to an evil gender. 59. And they didn't want him. With Mura she gave birth to Marion, the Daughter of the Spirit, and the sounds in the heaven were great. And she was also sent to an evil gender, and they didn't want her. 60. Then the child of foxes was given birth to with the Lord, and was sent to the earth to become a great prophet and a saint for these days. 61. But they didn't want him around, and he built the holy pillar. Yes, he has given Mura to the earth, the Spirit of God who was over the darkness. 62. Yes, darkness has been given to the earth by the Lord, so that the do-ers of evil would be destroyed. Yes, the Lords have established a deceiver, with eyes of fireflames. 63. And Michai sent his angel, Sarsia, to the ends of the earth, to bring there destructions, and spoke : 'Yes, the Judgement of the Lords is great.' 64. And he spoke this through his Spirit, Eminius.

65. In bliss are those who have reached the third Utmir, and see the Spirit of Zurastael. And this is a great mystery. In bliss are those who find the gates of heaven under the earth, for they will see Metensia. 66. And you of the fourth Utmir, don't let yourself be tempted to keep the seals of the Utmirs. 67. And I saw a great lion appearing in the midst of the heavens and the temple. 68. And I heard a voice saying : Open then now the seal of dogs, to open the scrolls of the third Utmir. 69. And I saw an arxel calling, standing next to the lion. And a white shark of the heavens descended. 70. And he gave a flute of the spirits to the anfitates who had been faithful to the Lord. And I saw that by the sound of the Spirits the nighttrouper came. 71. And the arxels came from their holes, and from places where they had been hidden. 72. As for a long time they had to battle in the sea and in the inner earth and under the earthround, for their time to reveal themselves to the saints had not come yet. 73. And they had unknown cords for a long time, inbetween them and the ones in bliss. 74. And they had to wage war against the gender of abers.

75. And the dogs of Okil were not found in the heavens anymore, after the seal had been broken. 76. And they were led by the flute of the spirits to a rock under the sea. 77. And this place was called the grave of the hermitates. 78. And the attentates of God asked the ones who had the flute of the spirits : Play for us, and take us with you to the nighttrouper. 79. And I heard another voice saying : Open then now the seal of the second Utmir. And there was a silence in the heaven of thirty-eight hours. 80. And I saw the House of Marion ascending to fill the earth. 81. And then I saw a Spirit coming from the altar to break the seal of the first Utmir. 82. And the old abers were driven out of the holy cities, by the cords of Michai and the Genesis.

83. And I saw a heavengate opened, and I saw the Genesis hover over the waters in a cloud between the waters above the earth. 84. And I saw a ship named the doveballoon. And from this balloon the arxels of Metensia came to spread themselves as nets over the earth. 85. And they were called the putses, the karsuiks and the karazure. 86. And in these days Kabbernal, the Spirit of the Altar, began to grasp the disciples of Michai, and began to pour out on all souls. 87. And drunkenness fell on the nighttrouper, and the holy fire grasped the first ones of Marion. 88. And these came from a great tribulation.

The temple of Metensia

89. And I came to the temple of Metensia, where the waters of flowers went through tubes, and where the flames of the holy fruits were. 90. And I saw Metensia, the Spirit of the Lord, bathing in the templebath. And her altar brought forth watery sounds, and so I was in the cloud of the lords. 91. And I saw her becoming a city and a region, a field of the Lords, where the saints could live for eternity. 92. And she wiped all their tears away. And the inhabitants of the city sang a song which only they knew. 93. And Metensia led them in drunkenness to the deeper forests of her Spirit. 94.

And no one could live in her city but the ones who bore her seal. And this sign was a watermark. 95. And Metensia began to pour out on those who bore her Spirit. And more altars were raised, and they spoke justice in marble halls. 96. And she restored the office of women, and educated a sea of priestesses to the Lord. 98. In those days the blossom of the heavens sprouted up, and the flowers of the fields brought those who held on to the ice to drunkenness. 99. And Metensia brought many to intoxication.

The Times of the Lords

100. And then the Lord led me to a mountain and I was carried to the temple of Eminius. And when I had reached the gates of his temple, I fell down in intoxication. 101. And the Lord spoke that when I would be able to open the seal of His temple, I would be carried up to new heavens. 102. These would be the first heavens, which already existed before the creation of the heaven-regions. 103. And the seal began to open by a hymn.

104. Eminius, praise comes to Your gates. 105. Praise from far comes to You, You great mystery, now unlocked. Your tears I am reaching now. I will drink the cup of tears to the last drop, and be one with You, for ever, Spirit of God. To know You, where Your Wind is coming from, is worth more to me than the instruments of war. 106. I want to suffer with You, and to die with You, to reach Your heavengate. The victory isn't of worth to me. 107. I want to live in Your heart, oh Lord, and drying all your tears, and bear them ever again. 108. Eminius, Lion of the past, I want to know Your war-secrets, and laying down my own weapons. 109. I want to burn my books, to read your books.

110. And I saw the times of Eminius, and before that the times of Metensia. And these were the Times of the Lord. At Metensia the Lord gave birth to the snakes of the heavens. 111. I also saw the times of Kabbernal, far before these creations.

112. And Kabbernal became great as a city of the Lords, and those who dwelled in the city drank the Tears of the Lords. 113. and there was Rest in the Tears of the Lords, and the Lord showed the blossom of His heart. In those days the worldships were on the earth, and they wrapped each other with jewelry of old stories. 114. And the Lord made known all His Tears and great Rest came to the gates of kabbernal. 115. And the fire of His Tears began to wash the earth. These were the days of the burning soap. 116. And the Lord led them from Rest to Rest.

117. In the Tears of the Lords is the holy seed. And I saw the genders of the prophets separating themselves to serve the Lord. I also saw the genders of the apostles, fourteen in number, and they had saved the blood in the veins of the Spirits. And I saw a new body of the Spirits appearing.

The Sea of Ice

1. And I saw a big dragon coming from the sea of ice. And this dragon had the name Iptus.
2. Am I scared of his big heart, where souls get crashed between his walls, where he breaths, living of the death ?
3. And I saw a lionheart with a crown, coming from the sea of ice, to fill the surface of the earth and to take it in.
4. Am I scared of this big heart, where souls get crashed between his walls, where it breaths, living from the death.
5. And I saw a motherheart, with mothergrief, searching for her child, but it wasn't there anymore.
6. Am I scared of the motherheart, the bearheart, devouring everything in her rage, where souls get crashed between her walls, where she breaths, living from the death ?
7. And I saw an even bigger dragon coming up from the sea of ice, to devour the motherheart.
8. And the cold came over the earth. Am I scared when the motherheart and the heart of the child do not exist anymore ?
9. And I saw a great white crowd, driven by the wind, while wolves came forth from the heart of the earth to devour them.
10. And these days were called the Big America.
11. And I fell to my knees and the spirit of God took me up, and took me to an old barn where the Eternal Food was.
12. And then the Spirit spoke : 'Eat, so that you will watch the visions which will give you insight about the last of the days.'
13. And when I ate of the food, my stomach began to sting as through the heat, but my legs became sweet as honey.
14. And the Spirit spoke : Come then up, then we will go together to the door of the Late Days.
15. And I saw a door opened and the Spirit of God took me up.
16. And I saw the Big America sitting as a hippopotamus at many waters.

17. And the Soul of the Lords came to me and touched me, saying : Many atrocities have come to this land, and many atrocities have come forward from this land.

18. And I saw swarms of flies coming to devour the hippopotamus. And the Soul of the Lords spoke : 'Much meat this nation has eaten, and many have eaten of her meat.

19. And the arxel of the sea of ice walked to the dragon and cast him into a cave and sealed it.

20. And I heard whining like the whining of cats.

The Day of Flesh

1. And in those days the hedge of the Lords became big and a goat made itself big against the stars.

2. But without sound the goat got covered by the hedge of the Lords. And a kettle began to make itself big against the stars, but without sound the kettle got covered by the hedge of the Lords.

3. And the Spirit spoke : These days were called the Big Spain.

4. And the Soul of the Lords made itself big, and covered the hedge of the Lords.

5. And I ate from the hedge of the Lords, of eternal fruits, and the Soul of the Lords came into me.

6. And I was led to a barren area where savage catlikes sat.

7. They were waiting for someone who could deliver them from thirst, but there was no one.

8. And then I saw a star falling from the heaven and the desert got fertile.

9. And the Lord spoke these words : Now the Big Spain has fallen.

10. And again I heard whining. And the Lord stood before me in his fiery vehicle.

11. And His Spirit spoke : 'Come, so that I can show you things.' And the Spirit took me up to the vehicle of the Lords, and again I was led to a barren area.

12. Here I saw the flames of the Lords, and they bore cards on their shoulders. And they moved like predictates.

13. And they had the gifts of the holy flesh.

14. And from the Flesh of the Lords prophesy came and all kinds of tongues, and they did great miracles.

15. And the Lord spoke : 'In bliss are them who have come to the altar of flesh, for this flesh is eternal.'

16. And the Soul of the Lords came to cover the altar.

17. And I saw them who were stripped of flesh, and they were covered with eternal flesh.

18. And a huge crowd came to the fireflames of the Lords, and the Lord spoke : 'In bliss are them who have come to the ark of flesh.'

19. And when the ark began to speak many fell like dead on the ground.

20. And from those days the hedge of the Lords began to become flesh.

The Tear of Flesh

1. Yes, in bliss are them who believe that the flower has become flesh, as the Word of God.

2. And in bliss are them who believe that the hedge of the Spirit has become flesh, for they will receive the gifts of flesh.

3. And they will create a new earth.

4. Pay then close attention, for the Spirit has become like the Soul of the Lords to drive the winds of the waters.

5. And the Souls of the Lords soar over the caves and waters of the earth, and over the waters which are above the earth.

6. Yes, they soar over the heavens to cover them in the last hour.

7. Let then the Souls of the Lord lead you to the ark of flesh. Then you will receive the eternal flesh.

8. Yes, the walls will become flesh to testify, and they will be the judges of the new earth.

9. You have approached an earth of flesh. An earth where they can't eat each other away anymore, for the flesh of the Lords is eternal.

10. And the teeth of the earth became flesh, and they couldn't bite each other anymore.

11. And the temples totally became flesh, so that the priests couldn't do unholy acts anymore. And the altar began to speak.

12. And the altar spoke these words : 'Now it is the time then that everything will become flesh, and nothing is able to hide from the face of the Lords.'

13. And the arxels of the Lord bore cards on their shoulders, and the deliciousnesses of God began to be revealed.

14. You then have become flesh in the tear of the Lords. Yes, watch, the tear of the Lords has become flesh.

15. You then, let the Word of the Lords become flesh in you, and His Tears.

16. On this the total law is built.

17. Yes, watch then, and acknowledge that the law of the Lords is flesh.

18. Let yourself then being bound by Eternal Ropes of flesh, so that your spirit can become flesh.

19. And this flesh is eternal.

The sea of flesh

20. And I saw them who worshipped the Holy Flesh, and they had no rest, day nor night. And they brought the Holy Tears in bowls to the earth, so that there would be miracles of flesh.

21. And they who drank from the tears came into intoxication and received the gifts and works of flesh.

22. And they had access to the flowers of flesh before the altar of God, and the seven pieces of flesh before the ark of the Lords.

23. And they had books which had become flesh, and the pieces of flesh of God were submitted to them.

24. And the Holy Flesh spoke to them in the temple : 'Watch, the hour has come that the tables of the laws have become flesh.'

25. And the books found a house in their hearts, and they were led to the waters of Kabbernal.

26. And I saw a sea of flesh, and a great crowd standing before her gates. And I saw the Karazure coming to give access to them who bore the seal of Metensia to the sea. They had the flesh of ice and fire. And I heard a scream in the heavens and a door closed.

27. And Metensia became flesh in them, bearing the flower of heaven, and they had the body as of the Lord.

28. And Metensia became for them as a Soul and as an Arm.

The Milk of the Lords

1. And it was given to Metensia to become an Eternity, as a pearl glittering in the sun.
2. Bring then comfort to her heart, for her wounds are many.
3. And also to Kabbernal it was given to become an Eternity, with Matas, Eminijs, Santra and Mura.
4. And the Spirits of God became as Eternities, and to them the Eternal Spirit and the Spirit of all Eternities was born.
5. And they came to each other in Souls to become one flesh.
6. And that's why the mystery of flesh is big, because it directs to the oneness of the Spirits of God.
7. And the Fleshes of the Lords came to maturity to lead the saints, and to dry many tears.
8. Yes, they came together in the tear and became one flesh.
9. And the Double Lord showed me the atrocities of the earth, the days in which they married.
10. And the Lord spoke : Only the prophets are allowed to marry, and He spoke about a big mystery with this.
11. And the Lord took me up and led me to a desert. And I saw there a spirit wandering with seventy chains around itself.
12. And the lord spoke, saying : These chains are the unholy covenants made by My nation.
13. And the Lord poured water in the mouth of his spirit and broke the chains saying : the days of the unholy covenant are over. From now on only the prophets are allowed to marry.
14. And the lord spoke : In bliss are them who marry by prophets, and in bliss are them who haven't stained themselves with women, because they will bear the seal of the Lords, and they have been delivered to the Spirits of God.
15. And again the Lord took me up, and gave me to His Spirit.
16. And the Spirit of God spoke : In bliss are them who have become flesh by the Spirit.
17. And the Lord fed white bread to the predators in the desert.

18. And the Lord spoke, saying : Now the days have come that the saints will be satisfied by the milk of the Lords and the honey of flesh.
19. Now the days have come that the nipples of the Lords will become flesh, to full satisfaction of them who search for Him thoroughly.
20. And the Lord appeared in stainless white, and lightning appeared beside him, as a light that fell over the surface of the earth.
21. And I saw them who came out of the desert of temptation, and the milk of the Lords flowed like light around their heads, until they bathed in the milk of the Lords. And they were satisfied in all eternities.
22. And I saw them who had married the women of the earth and the black women to take the fruit of eternity back to the temple. And they got crowns of milk and nipples to feed the hungry predators of the heaven.
23. And they were like arxels before the Lord, and the serpents of Metensia honoured them and served them. And they were led to the bones of the Lords.
24. And they found gigantic rest in the nipples of the bone of the Lords, and they gave honour to the stars of Metensia.
25. In bliss are those who bear those nipples on their stomach, for they have an eternal armor, and in bliss are them who have their heads sealed with nipples, for they will receive eternal visions.
26. Strive then after the eternal gifts, and you will live like the streams.
27. And I saw arxels appearing of eternal prophesy in the temples of the heaven and they bore bowls of milk of the Lords, and they had shoes of nipples.
28. And they stood on the holy rock of the Lords, and they began to pour the bowls out over the surface of the earth and the heavens.
29. And the lord spoke these words : In bliss is he who drinks from the milk of the Lords, for he will be guided on eternal paths.
30. And the surface of the earth got as in fire, and was devoured by the winds.

The valley dry bones

31. And I saw the holy nipple becoming large on the mount of the Lord, and burning as a fire, where it changed into bone. And a voice spoke: Now the word of the lord has become bone. And I saw the bone devouring the flesh, and the lord spoke: Gloriously are those who are devoured by the carnivores of the earth, because for them is the kingdom of god.

32. And I saw those who had been devoured by carnivores appearing before gods throne, and they got a staff of bone to be dominators as kings.

33. And the Lord spoke : Know then that only those who are devoured by carnivores can approach Michai.

34. And in those days many who had been devoured by carnivores came to Michai. And they found a light comfort with each other.

35. And I came in a valley of dry bones after drinking from the nipples of the bones, and I also saw ash lying there. And between these bones lay the eternal bones of the Lord. And when I touched these bones gifts came over me, and I started to prophesy. Also I spoke in strange languages, and my hands were as lit by fire.

36. And the Lord spoke to me, saying: The bone cannot devour the eternal flesh, and gloriously he that carries the eternal bone, because his bones will not be broken, and concerning him death has no power. He that has seen the eternal nipple on the eternal bone for always satisfied will he be. And I was dazzled by a light, and could not see anything for considerable time.

37. And then the Lord raised me up, and descended then to a place called the old America.

38. And I saw the faces of three tribal chiefs carved in bone, and they carried a glowing nipple on their face.

39. And the Lord covered the nipples and darkness reached the place.

40 And the Lord asked if I wanted to know the mystery of the three tribal chiefs in the bone and I agreed.

41. Then the Lord spoke these words, saying: The three tribal chiefs are three spirits which monitor the treasures of the earth. Those treasures are only to be found in the deepest darkness, in the deepest ice and there where the spirits with the most heads live.

42. Only those who are devoured by the spirits of god can come there, to the place where the holy feet of the lord stand.

43. And the lord devoured me in love.

Acha

44. And I felt what it was like to stand on the rock, and I realised that this was the altar of the Lords. And the altar bore the name Acha, and stood like a dark man before me. And the Spirit of God fell on me and brought me in intoxication.

45. And I got a black staff in my hand and that staff was called the Holy Devouring. And the Lord struck many by this staff to bring them to rebirth.

46. And Acha bore the honey of the Lords to the ark, where holy songs appeared.

47. And the staff was as the flute of the spirit.

The Eternal Prayer

48. And the Lord spoke : In bliss are those who have approached Acha, and in bliss are those who eat of his fruits. And I saw a great crowd of those who were devoured who became the riders of those who had devoured them.
49. And these riders were dark and full of ice.
50. And they had cards on their shoulders, by which their faces changed.
51. And no one could follow them, and no one could sing their songs but themselves.
52. And they bore an eternal armor with names which no one knew but themselves.
53. And they had the power to heal eternal wounds, and they bore strange, foreign scars.
54. And they came to restore the holy and eternal prayer, and they taught the harvest of the earth to pray these words : Let us not celebrate the works of the abers, but bind our tongues and lead us to Kabbernal.
55. Let it be that it is You speaking when we speak.
56. And let your holy arxels watch over the hidden corners of our mouths.
57. Let it be your breath when we breath, and teach us the words of Metensia. Write them on the tables of our soul.
58. Bind our heads with your holy ropes, so that we think the thoughts of Metensia, in her visions of flesh.
59. Give our thinking flesh and bone, with wings of your spirit.
60. Let Eminius be our counselor, and let Matas guide us to the depths of existence.
61. Hear our prayer and teach us to pray eternal prayers to recover your eternal laws.
62. Pour then the holy eternal soul out on us, and guide us to eternal fields.
63. Let us not forget about the law of the holy devouring, and give us the heart of Michai.
64. Let us not slide away in endless begging for your Spirit but let us be like your Spirit.
65. Teach us to offer to your Spirit, and teach us to lure your spirit as a lover.
66. Teach us to pay with pure money. Metensia Eminius.
67. And I saw an eternal ark coming forth with eternal prayers, and the souls of the saints got satisfied.
68. And to the saints was granted eternal visions, so that they received eternal cures.
69. There were also knights who were in business with the earth, and they had chosen themselves women as signs of buying and selling. And those women were like wounds in their souls.

70. And they suffered for a long time under the oppressions of the women, until a door in heaven opened, and they received the marks and signs of the Spirits.

71. And these marks and signs were as eternal visions which had become flesh.

72. And they gathered the marks and signs as cards of the night troupers, and took them to their shoulders.

73. And they held on to the holy Wounds of the Lords, from where sweet honey flowed.

74. And they taught eternal songs and brought comfort to the heart of the Lords.

75. And in those days the night troupers were on earth to bring healing to the hearts of many.

The Appearing of Baccus

1. And I saw a two-headed thistle-serpent appearing in the heaven, and it's power was big. And when he opened his mouths he spoke unintelligible words of gigantic authority.

2. And I didn't have the power to know the translation or to write something down of it. And the beast kept on roaring.

3. Like this the appearing of the beast of the Lords will be. And rivers came forth from the rocks, and trees showed their power.

4. And I saw a rider having the name : the hell, sitting on a reddish horse, and the kingdom of hell followed him.

5. And he had a cup in his name called Baccus, and that name became great on earth. And in that cup there was wine which never ran out, while the wine began to stream.

6. And I saw them of the realm of hell and them who lived on earth drowning in the wine. And watch, the cup named Baccus became flesh, and got the power to deceive many.

7. And he spread a number which was given to everyone who lived on the earth or in the hell, and this number was twothousand sixhundred and sixty-six.

8. And all those who received the mark followed the cup which had become flesh to a rock. And a great laughing rose to the heavens, but the heaven was weeping and trembled on her foundations.

9. And a pearl appeared in the heaven, red as wine, and split in two. And the Lord spoke : 'Mix then now the meal and the wine.'

The Battle against Baccus

10. And Baccus battled against the saints, and they found comfort with old books.

11. From the mouths of the beast of the Lords, books came forth, but none of the saints was able to read it, for it was written in another language. And the saints wept for thousand and sixty-three days.

12. And after those days the Lord grasped Baccus and broke him. And a weeping rose up from the earth and the hell and they called : 'Now the cup of the whores has been broken. Who will find salvation ?'

13. And the earth broke open in four parts and swallowed the kingdom of hell. And watch, the horse on which the rider called hell sat, had three eyes, and fire came from these.

14. And Baccus began to speak words to the most high, and complained because of the plagues the Lord had sent. And again the Lord descended and broke the jaw of Baccus.

15. And there was a silence of thirty hours in the heavens, and the earth began to bring forth new growth. And the Lord spoke : 'Watch, for Baccus will be broken three times.'

The Recovery of the apostles

16. And in those days the wine of the Lords began to flow, and they who were in the inflammation for the sake of the Lord, became like thistles, and followed the two-headed thistle-serpent. And the Lord began to roar those days, and a two-headed lion appeared in the heaven.

17. And this one began to read from the books of the thistle-serpent and translated it for the saints. And the Lord spoke : 'Now the office of the apostles has been restored, and they won't be persecuted anymore in My temples.' And the Lord gave rest to his apostles, and to their generations.

The lamb of Baccus

1. And the Lord took Baccus to a great oven and broke the feet of Baccus. And the wines of the heaven began to equip the saints to the last of the days. And they bore the wounds of the second Christ and the second prophets in their feet.

2. And the Lord spoke : Woe to them who live on the earth and in the hell, for the two-headed ones have been sent to them. And I saw a two-headed eagle tearing a lamb. This then was a false lamb which they honoured.

3. And the lamb gave light to blind the two-headed eagle. Then I saw a two-headed shark coming who devoured the light of the lamb. But the torn lamb began to raise gigantic words to the heavens, and gigantic troubles came to the prophets and their generations.

4. And they fell to the ground like intoxicated, and many began to turn themselves against the Lord. This then is the fall of the prophets.

5. And the lamb then searched for comfort with Baccus, but the fire of the great oven had consumed him, but the lamb didn't know that.

6. And when the lamb came to the remnant of Baccus, it wept for forty-six days.

7. And many saints got compassion with the lamb, also a few who were of the Lord.

8. But the wrath of the Lord came against the lamb and against those who had compassion, and the great oven consumed them all. And great fear fell upon the remnant of the prophets and they were ill for a certain time and they got visions.

The Salvation of the Wine

9. And watch, the reddish horse got a second head, and deceiving books came forth from his mouth to mislead many. And the books had power to let fire descend from the clouds. And great fear came to those who read the books.

10. And the Lord gave me a key to open the forty-six bloodlines of the prophets, and that night I had many nightvisions. And the Lord spoke : 'Now the veins of the prophets have been opened the wine will be saved and won't fall to earth anymore.'

11. And the Lord let the seed and the herbs stream between the wines.

The necessity of punishment

1. And the Lord brought a burning wind to the prophets in the tribulation, and said : 'From now on the apostle will be the father of the prophet. Cursed is every apostle who doesn't punish his sons and cursed is every apostle who doesn't cover his sons.'

2. And the Lord gave his prophets hairy cloaks and hairy blankets and spoke that they had to live in the desert for a certain time.

3. And the Lord burnt many books which tormented the heads of the prophets. And the Lord gave them a new book. In bliss are they who read the words of this book, understanding it and act upon it, for they will be called kings of the Lords and pourers of the second wine.

4. And the Lord brought pourers to them who lived in the desert, and showed them the bloodlines of the angels.

5. And they who were judges bore the flames of bliss, and they were the fathers of the apostles. And they did great miracles and signs. They had the power to let the animals of heaven appear on earth.

6. And the Lord showed me the bloodline of the two-headed one, and this generation was big. And I bowed for them in the heaven to where I was taken up, but the Lord spoke : 'Come and stand right on your feet. They have eaten from the bitter fruits of Rietel, and they have become pure through the second Mura.'

7. And I saw that they who had lived pure in the first three Utmirs became angels in the fourth Utmir.

8. And the two-headed ones had access to the deepest holinesses of God in his purest tabernacles.

9. Yes, they were the ones who had to move the glowing coals of the most holy altars and arks.

10. And their power was big, for they were full of the suffering and dying of the Lords, and they worshipped the Soul of the Lords with their wings day by day, while they had no rest at all.

11. And I saw the Lord sitting like a sevenheaded beast on His Throne. And he said : Yes, seven times will slide over the surface of the earth to purify her, and then she will be completely of the lord.

12. And these words were big, and I saw tongues of fire coming out of the heads of the beasts.

13. And the Lord spoke : Many will come to decipher these words, but only they who live in the powers of the lords will have the knowledge to decipher the words.

14. And the beast had seven wounds looking like a sheep, with mouths like a snake and ducks. And like this the appearance of the lords was. And the lords spoke : Watch the dragon of the lords. You are in bliss and blessed that you have come here. And what I saw then I could not write.

1. And after the thing which couldn't be written I watched a burning bush with a million branches. And suddenly the bush changed into the head of a lion, and this lion spoke words which couldn't be counted.

2. And I saw them who were to decipher the heavens and their measures, and they had palmleaves in their hands by which they waved. And they stood before a gigantic sea. And this sea was full of wine, mixed with fire and ice.

3. And these had overcome the blasphemous beasts of the second. And they had eyes like birds and in these eyes there were the tides as ebb and flow, and these eyes were gigantic.

4. And their number was two-million and hundred and forty-four thousand, and they sang the song pf the second Moses. And they had been paid free from all the tribes of the apostles and prophets.

5. And they were pure in the eyes of the Lord, stainless from women, and their blood was a shelter against the second serpent and his generations after, for they had mixed their with the precious Second Blood of the Lords. And they had access to the second millenium kingdom of the Lords.

6. And the second Abraham had smeared the blood of the altar at the sides of their doors, so that the third and the fourth death couldn't find them.

7. And they were in bliss in Abrahams womb and drank wine of his holy beard, and they were completely satisfied by the milk of the breasts of the second Sara. And she was also called the Sarhah of the Lords, and this place was sweet.

8. And the angel Torio descended to me, and gave me the key to open the bloodline of the three-headed ones. And they had huge powers in the second millenium kingdom, for the Lord had spared them for those days.

9. And they had the fingers of Spricht to open chains, and the Lord blessed them.

10. Trust the Lord your God, for he has sent the three-headed ones to you to guard the gates of the night. And they will sweeten many wounds. And the Lord spoke : The days are short.

11. Take then the second gospel of God and preach it to the whole creation to second salvation. And he spoke about the mystery of the second spirit.

12. Let then your heart been sprinkled by the holy blood of the second christ, and be one with him, as with the animal of your spirit.

13. And his horses started to burn, and he disappeared. Then the angel Torio came to me again, and laid a glowing coal in my heart, and spoke, saying : Watch, you are anointed before the face of the lords to do his works. And he was like the angel of the three-headed ones.

14. And he spoke the words to an eternal fellowship : Stay then in Love and begin to preach the words of mercy to the fellowship, and from there to the four outer corners of the earth. And teach them the mysteries of the second wine and the suffering.

15. Leave them who don't want to accept the ice behind and don't let them disturb you. They are like the dust of the wind and they will perish. But them who know the ice will live to all eternities, and they will learn and take of the hidden things of the heaven.

16. In bliss are they who hears these words and act upon them. And the second kingdom of peace of the lords took possession of me and the angel disappeared.

The Appearing of the Second Christ

1. In bliss are those who have approached Spricht. For they will go from salvation to salvation. Yes, for the Lord has many salvations for those who search for him.

2. And the Lord marks His loved ones by fire and ice, with the precious things of Zetdonia.

3. Open then the gates for the Lord, so that you will find access in Him.

4. And I saw the second Christ standing and I fell like dead before his feet. And I saw several white thin towels around his head and between his hair. His hair was white, and his eyes were like the morning blue. And He spoke : See, I have been dead, and now alive to all eternities.

5. I am the first and the last, bearing the keys of the death, the hell and the temples. And his face shone like the full lightning, and I felt like all my blood streamed out of me. And then He spoke : Write to the second churches that which I have to say.

To Ephese

6. Write to the second Ephese : You architects of the house of God, you have laid the building stones of his new church, and has cut away evil. You hate the evil, like the Lord hates the evil, and therefore the Lord has given you a pure altar.

7. And you haven't despised his ice, but let no one pump himself up in knowledge to boast. Focus on being a child and the suffering, so that you will save your souls in the day of the lords. That day will come like a fire.

8. Sharpen and wash your knowledge at the cross of the lords, so that it won't accuse you on that day. You will then eat the fruits of life, when you know the roots of the tree. Like this you will be in bliss and the Lord will give you His stone on your forehead, and let you eat from the most holy manna. This then is the second word.

To Smyrna

9. And write then to the church of the second Smyrna : The Lord knows your tribulations and your poverty, for you bear the second cross. Yes, you are young and has to suffer a lot to give the Word of God stature, and His temple.

10. You are then the seed on the temple-floor, but you will become as an altar. Don't fear when you come to stand before uncomfortable surprises. These things have to come to pass, and they are your keys to bliss. Yes, you will be measured to be a fitting member in the second church of God.

11. Let then the riddles of the Lords rejoice you and search for the source behind all things. Then you will receive the crown, and you will have no damage from the third and fourth death.

12. Give alarm to the temptation and know your enemy so that you won't suffer by your sins. The Lord has measured to you a certain ignorance, but don't let it stir you up to recklessness, but moreover to fear and shivering.

13. Shiver, you who are young, for you have many enemies. They will deliver you then to the synagogues of satans, and you will not be able to speak for a certain time. But the lord will purify your tongue and you will know the precious things of the silence.

To Pergamum

14. And write to the second Pergamum : The Lord knows your courage, and your work for orphans and widows. The Lord has seen how you have humbled yourself before his face. The lord has given you the wings of his eagle, to reach out to unreachable places, and so you have brought a great harvest.

15. You have learned to live in darkness, and you have learned the deliciousnesses of the ice. You have been then like fathers and mothers for the children, and you have led them through the darkness. You have been like an eye for those who did not have an eye, and as an ear for those who didn't have an ear.

16. You are blessed in many areas for you have followed the footsteps of the lords. But I have against you that you have despised the prophecies, and you have avoided teaching. Yes, you have been halfhearted before the face of the lords, and you have focussed your heart on subcases.

17. Keep then good track with your heart, so that the lord won't beat your heart. The lord will let the older ones being responsible, for they have received great light.

18. Let your heart not go to sleep again, but stand up, you who sleeps, and let the second christ shine over you.

To Tyatira

19. And write to the second Tyatira : Who has an eye sees what the Spirit shows the second churches. In bliss are those who know the depths of Spricht. You have received an eye for the small things of God, of uncountable value for his kingdom.

20. You have received great power and you know the art of the lords. Don't let your heart become weak, you who lives in the hidden, for the lord cares for you. He has sent his raven to feed you.

21. Let your heart not be afraid, those who live deep in the ice, for you will live of the ice like them who live through suffering. Let then everyone realise that he who bears the scars of the second christ has many shields.

To Sardes

22. Write to the second Sardes : And this speaks him with the bleeding sword and the copper rock : you know the laws of nature, but you have sinned deep. You know the laws of my spirit but you haven't submitted yourselves. Yes, you became gigantic on earth and in the heavens, but you didn't want to listen. And like this you have quenched my spirit, but you have repented and you have climbed high to me, and you do great works for my spirit. And the lord has given you a covering, and the lord has put you beside him.

23. The lord has made you white like snow, but still it is dark inside. The lord accepted you as sons, but you were sons of the satans. The lord gave you rings of gold, but you wore rings of darkness.

24. Hold then tight to the work God has done in you, for otherwise the lord will come to you and hit your work with the curse. But you have several among you with small sins, and those who have kept their clothes white.

25. They will go out before you to the lord, but if you return to the evil, then they will judge you like the second angels. Let then the trumpets of the lord revive you, and follow him who had the power to take life to the darkness.

To Galatie

26. Write to the churches of the second Galatie : You know then that wine flows from the wounds of the feet of the second christ, for he tread in his suffering the wine-press of the church, and that his feet stand in the second Israel now. You have been slaves then of the world, with chained feet, but the second christ has delivered you, by the blood which was flowing from his feet.

27. Yes, you have suffered with him in slavery and have carried the yoke with him. Because of this you are in bliss and you have arrived in the vineyards of God. Yes, you are also in the second christ a second jew, and you have part in the treasures and riches of the second Israel.

28. As far as you are still slaves : You bear the chains of the lords. You then are bearers of his word and times, and you are made holy. Let no one estimate you as low.

To Colosse

29. And write to the churches of the second Colosse : This is what He with the golden sword sais : You have been lied to and scorned, because you wore my clothes. You know you had to go through the oven to be sifted sevenfold. Yes, I have sent them, and you have stumbled for a certain time.

30. You have fallen into the hands of reavers, but you know that these are my hands, and I will form you in them. Because of this : fear no evil, children, for I am the one leading you and feeding you. You have been in service to foreigners, in a foreign land, but I was there to teach you the mysteries of the spirit.

31. I have taught you in the deepest of the pit, and I did not have compassion for you. I had prepared a shelter for you. Good it is then to come to silence and good it is to be broken, for aren't you all gone astray.

32. I am the good herder, and have already come where you have your arrival. Know then that you have learned to know each other by the suffering, and by this you have broken through the walls of each others hearts. Be then connected to each other in the suffering, and the ice, for outside the wolves walk waiting to devour those who are lost and left behind.

Let no law reign over us which has not been written down by the Lord. Let them all go down in sharkfires and sharklakes, all those laws which do not serve the Lord. Open then now the sharkgates, and let us enter in, to eternal restoration of those who went to the deepest netherworlds. 51. Their hearts will be present to speak justice on high thones of the sharks. Yes, they went to the tall, they have the keys of the sharks, and they will reign to come from length to length, to enter into the tallest. 52. Yes, they are the cords of the Lords, and they have overcome the spindles. They have carried the thorns of the second in their flesh, yes, tall thorns these were, and now they have entered to the taller. 53. In bliss are those of the taller, and their voice will reign as the voice of the sharks. Those who have come to the deaf shark. See here, your ark. Amen Metensia Eminijs. And so is then the black dragon-tiger domain isolated from the other domains, and she reigns the opening and locking of the muscles. They know then the ends and the points of Narzia and Zetdonia. 16. Everything then is black, but when it stretches then the white comes into existance and the grey to weave all the colors. Don't you see then that there is a blind child behind the spinning-wheel and the weavers-spindle ? This is then the black dragon-tiger-king. With his face so white, so white, but the rest is black. You do well to watch the grey rags, to feel them, and to go back where it comes from. 17. Kasbahaskus is then the first nightlatin, Muskanos the second. Griezemoen is then the third and Fanatousk the fourth, and they are like four old women in the black, weaving the times. And like bakers and weavers they stand there, as karmozines, changing into nightlatins, like birdclocks they are, spreading their wings, to lead creatures away. Yes, like the dragon-hours they are, the huge nets to catch big fishes. 18. And the Griezemoon is like the black libra, like the clown's face with the spinning holes under it through which they can wander, yes, like the tigertunnels and the barrel-organs, to meet the black bat as in a spinning mirrormill. And from his mouth the cords come which we left behind, ready to go through all the rings of fire. And Fanatousk is like the green eye and the green stone, with all her colors and odors, and when she speaks she is like the mice-tongue, like the party with all her flaps. 19. and Muskanos is like the black saturn in all her might, vomiting the new day and the new hour, with hair like silver waves, changing into a death-battle. Yes, all wars are on her tablet. And Kasbahaskus is like the sparrow and the blackbird, who put her lady on the church-tower, the great Mezedium, and now she waits to dive into the river, to change into a fish. For the fishtail will give her the key. 20. And so there are then four dragon-hours given under the heavens like the four seasons of the earth. And they are all on their way, over fiery brocades, to encounter the fisher-latins of the red, the red tiger-dragons on the expensive beaches. These are the beaches of the Emelis Shatau and the renewed cities of the Lords. Yes, to the fifth nightwatch they will go.

The Bear of Narzia

1. The heat is after my heels, a bear is after me, one on big wheels, coming from Narzia. These are high waves, from bearcity he has gained a place. These heats are big, these seas of fire, are they higher than the karazure ? 2. Metensia, save me. Only my pencil can save me. In which language do we have to speak. They will break everything. There is high fire in this hour. The bearvoice sounds, from the holiness of God. The heat is after me, the fire rises and comes at me like splashing lava. 3. I can only write, otherwise this will become my grave. Never before there has come such a heat, I have to let my pencil stream fast. Yes, my only sword she is, when the bear comes at me. 4. I have to battle in the Pniel, wrestling with God, who is Bear.

Bearrealms

5. And these are then the bear-netherworlds : The first is Beherzin, with Viantrau as hellworld and Vaatmis as karbuline. The second is Roksdal, with Vintiau as hellworld and katakis as karbuline. The third is Hotmir, with Vindriamen as hellworld and Vottomis as karbuline. The fourth is Hehenkescha, with Kjatanburch as hellworld and Vatian as karbuline. Viottemisches is the eighth with Votentia as hellworld and Kwabahanter as karbuline. Nerchjabter is the ninth with Oxdraifurt as hellworld and kwiabanter as karbuline. 7. And Pianhout is from then the netherworld, the tenth netherworld, counting from the first Pianhout, and some say that the netherworlds actually begin from there. And so there are then hundreds, if not thousands Pianhouts. And Swahmahelsch is from then the hellworld, and Kwigmanesch from then the karbuline.

The flute

8. And I begged to God to tell me what was with the bears, for the heat was so huge like I had never felt before, and so threatening. And I saw a bear which was like a beaver and then like a cobra, and he was like the rat of the heavens. And I heard a scream. 9. And the Lord showed me a sheet on which a little man sat. And he has a flute in his hands, and brought it to his mouth to play on it. And the Lord watched forward, and in the distance a group of bears came running towards the little man. 10. And the man began to play, and the bears became quiet. But after awhile the man stopped playing, for he had become tired, and the bears attacked him. And the Lord spoke : Like this you will also have to tame the nation, and I will give you the songs for that. And I saw the bears coming to a group of human children, and they took possession of their souls. 11. For see, the human children were all created for the bears. And there was no one who could stop the bears, for there heat was too huge. And the Lord gave me a piece of bread, and so I could tame the bears further. And they went everywhere where the piece of bread was, but they could not eat the bread, for it was eternal. 12. And there was applewine mixed through the breadflour, and the bears went after this smell again and again. And the air was pressed, and the heat rose, but I was behind glass and the heat could not touch me. 13. And the glass began to grow and drive away the bears further. But again there came a high pressure on the glass, and the heat began to rise up against the glass to unknown heights, and they found a hole above the glass, through which they could climb and it was like boiling water fell on me. 14. And the Lord gave me a shovel by which I dug a hole in the ground. And the space within the glass ran full, and so was the conscience of the Lords. And there stood a tree which was made of the feet of human children, and it was given to the tree to have a mouth, and this mouth was called The Law. And this mouth spoke of big things, and grew while it spoke big words. 15. and it was given to the tree to have an eye and this eye was called The Justice, and she began to change into a sword. And the Lord spoke : Eat then not from the fruits of this tree. 16. And I wondered why it was forbidden to eat from it. And the Lord spoke : Don't be fast to grasp the law and do not be fast to handle justice, for there is a path which leads deeper. And the Lord led me to the depth underground, to a cave where bears were locked up. 17. And in this cave there was another tree made of feet, but she was also made of rabbitheads. And when I saw this I couldn't speak for a long time. And it was given to the tree, like the first tree, to have a mouth, and this mouth was called The Silence. 18. And also an eye was given to the tree, which was called The Darkness. And so was then the second tree, like bringing forth food of rabbits. And the Lord spoke : Eat. And when I had eaten from it the tree began also to grow in me. And then the Lord spoke : Return now to the first tree. And I walked again to above the ground, while the bears followed me. 19. And when I came there the tree began to melt away. And the last part of the tree rose up until it had covered the hole above the glass. and again an intense heat came within the glass, but this time the second tree swallowed it, and became very cold. And again I had to eat from the tree, and I became colder. 20. And thus the rabbittree was like a bearflute. And she was like the karmozine and the weaver between Narzia and Zetdonia. And she was then like the flute of the Spirits. And she brought forth the most highest tones I had ever heard, and the most lowest.

The tree of tears

21. And the Lord led me to a beartree named Brimmadim, and she carried the high tones of the lords. And she was like the jewelry of Mezedium, while she brought the jewelry called Abdal Maasdo Kabbernal to the Lord. and her was given a mouth named Slowness and an eye named Nakedness. 22. And from her pink cords came forward which looked like footsoles and the holy nipples of the lords. And I came to the tree and wept for thirty-five days. 23. And after the thirty-five days the Lord led me to a tigertree, and she was named Samsamen, and she carried the loud and the low tones of the lords, and also to her a mouth was given, named Deafness, and an eye named Blindness, and thus was the appearance of the Lords. 24. And she brought the jewelry named Sartarus Akra Zoekra at the feet of the Lords, and these feet started to shine like the sun. And the Lord spoke : See then, the holy tear has become flesh. 25. And this tear came from under the pink, and she was like the tail of a fish. And she wept then, saying : Who can reign over the karmozines, for they are like savages and like sheep without a herder. 26. And none of the tartars was able enough to reign them, and also the Lord wept. And a rabbit came before the face of the Lords, and see, he was clothed like a bear and a clown. 27. And he took the tear which had become flesh, which was like the tail of a fish, and he took her to a fishtree. And as soon as the fishtree began to weep the karmozines became quiet. And thus it was also a tree of tears, and she brought forth bread of tears to make them quiet. 28. And she was given a mouth named rest and an eye named Ferocity, and the tree got very wild, while the karmozines got more quiet. And thus she became the queen of the karmozines.

The snake-tree

29. And the rabbit took the tree of tears like a staff in his hand, and led many to rest by it. And the Lord waited until all His Tears had become flesh, and His blooddrips. 30. And a loud shrieking rose to the heaven. And these were the days in which the shrieking of the lords became flesh, and this was like the coming of the snakes to earth. 31. And the Lord gave the jewelry called Sartarus Akra Zoekra to Sarsia of Renok, and Abdal Maasdo Kabbernal was given to Metensia as Jewelry, and she become a city of beavers, foxes and the rats of the heavens. And also Metensia became jewelry, which she had waited for for such a long time, together with Eminius and Matas. 32. And thus Metsensia Eminius Matas became the jewelry of the Esmeralda. And the weeping of the lords became flesh and was as a snake, and brought coldness to the earth to devour and strangle many. 33. Yes, the strangling snake of the lord had risen, and she glided to a tree named the snake-tree. and the snake-tree became huge on earth, and came even against the tree of tears, for many tears were unpure. 34. And to the tree a mouth was given named Fear, and she wept loud, and shrieked. and she was given an eye named Rage, and she began to scream loud. And the tree started to shake and her fruits fell on the earth. 35. and the rabbit came to the snake-tree to take it as a staff in his hand, but the snake-tree attacked him, and also a sheep with her lamb was attacked by the snake-tree. 36. And thus the proverb 'where the snake hits the lamb' came into fulfilment. And there was weeping for seventy days. 37. And after these seventy days Mura Izu Brannan became jewelry of the Lords, and so izu finally came to rest, which it had waited for for so long.

The Great White War

38. And the Lord spoke : Sift then the tears before my face. And there was a war named the great white war, and she took hundred and five days which became hundred and five day-years. And the Lord spoke : Now then the big times of the year has come, and the big tear. 39. And the sharks of the heavens found rest in the big tear. And so also the whales of the heavens, and the other big fishes of the Lords. And the Lord saw that it was good. and at the end of the great white war a spider-tree stood on a mountain. 40. And behind that tree, behind one of the big tree-stumps there was a door which went to under the white, and see, it was there like the white chocolate and her stars. and the stars began to bring forth new letters like the alphabet of the lords, and these letters began to become flesh. 41. And the Lord took the languages of the earth and sifted them in a vat called Solt, and this vat was white. And the Lord began to confuse the languages of the earth, and began to show his alphabet, and his language. And also the lord began to show the hidden genders, and the stars of the white chocolate fell on the earth. 42. And see, these falls were holy. And the lord took the manly and the womanly and brought them in the vat named Solt to confuse them and sift them, and it was like a mirror was breaking, and from a white mirror lightpurple beings came, who had been locked up so long under the east of the earth. 43. And the east of the earth was like a white fly and a purple fly, and they were devoured by a purple spider, and she carried the stars of the white chocolate on her back. and many of these stars were lightpurple. 44. And the purple spider began to devour the books of the earth, and the stars of the white chocolate brought new books. and the tree of fears began to grow on the earth and those who did not eat from the fruits of this tree melted away by the fireballs of Narzia. 45. And Zetdonia began to grow big on earth, and those who had eaten from the fruits of fears had a rich entry into her. And see, she was like an icebear and a walrus, yes, as looking like a white shark. 46. And the Lord watched over the earth, and saw that it was good. And those who had fears could find each other, and they brought each other to the worldships, and to the big Metensia. 47. And also the tree of bitternesses began to grow on the earth.

The starheaven of the White Chocolate

48. And the starheaven of the white chocolate had four districts, named Sepanda, Eklaif, Benglaham and Khelb. 49. And Sepanda had then the following stars : Khnum, Zkum, Zkuhm, Mum, Mehk, Mehn, Zhmum, Zhmen who is the orange hat, Zkun who is the orange chamber, zkuk, Zehm who is the blue hat, Ehem who is the purple hat, Mena, Zkem, Zkehm who is the green hat, Memn the brown hat, Muhmn, Khem, Khmen, Kmen, Khner, Khun, Khnun, Khnum the Second, Kzem, Knem, Kmem. And they were like the mirrors of the Lords.

Ova and Nomusa

50. And the lord showed the netherworlds in the trees, and see, they were like the animals. And the Lord showed me the second worldship named Trideria, and it was like a canoe in a green river, and a man named Ova sat in it, and he was the prince of the oaks. 51. And he knew all the rings of the trees and their netherworlds, and every day he made a journey through the netherworlds, until Trideria had become a clock and jewelry, yes, as a tower of the lords. And the Lord showed the hellworlds in the mountains, and see, they were like animals. 52. And I was shown the first worldship named Adaka, and she was then as the bridge of the dead, and as a donkey. And a man named Nomusa sat on her, and he was the prince of the black mountains. 53. And many colors came forth from him, and every day he made a tour through the hellworlds, until Adaka had become a clock and jewelry, yes, as a tower of the Lords.

The language of the Lord

54. And the Lord spoke : Glorious are those who have reached the land of the tired ones. And the Lord took the rabbit tree and planted it in the land of the tired ones where it started to grow. And the Lord spoke: Those who have reached this place will be protected against many things. 55. And the spirit of the slavery could not affect them. And the Lord took the large Mezedium of the tower of virgo and placed it on the rabbit tree as a tower. And all trees bowed before the rabbit tree which had become a tower.

56. And the Lord spoke again : Now the karsuiks will reach thousandfold restoration, and this will be to them as thousandfold pride, and he spoke concerning the sparrows of Metensia. And many lands reached the foot of the rabbit tree because of the light, and this light was gentle.

57. And the tree started to shake and it's fruits fell on the earth. And Metensia spoke: In much pain large things are sown, and is sown there for large things. 58. And she shone as the large Metensia. And the large book of the earth was translated in the language of the lord, and see her power was no more, and she became pale before the face of the lord.

59. And thus she brought forth the second book of the Lord and the second word, and see, it had been written in the language of the lord. And thus the lands were taught in the language of the lord, and new books were written.

60 And the third world ship called Biskidde led them to the realms of sleep, and they found large rest. And the Biezefic started to ride it, and she became a jewel of the lord and a tower. 61. And this way the silophines were as the sleep and the melted silver, and the sidakines were as the sleepers and as the melted foaming fruits. And they became large before the eyes of the Lord. Yes, and of them the silver moon and the silverstar have been made. 62. Won't they all melt then before the face of the lord. Yes, the lord molds them and kneads them.

Salvation through the Rabbit-tree

63. And all those who call upon the rabbit-tree will be saved, when the wrath of Narzia will come to the earth. But many will say : Lord, Lord, while the Lord does not know them. For they have forgotten about the poverty which leads to bliss. 64. How difficult it will be then for a rich one to enter into the kingdom of the heavens.

Khnum

65. And the rabbit came to the fourth worldship and went with her through the realms of intoxication, and they were like the dreams of the heavens. And also she became jewelry and as a tower, and she was full of the tartars and purpures of the lords. 66. And the four worldships who had become as towers were like big branches of the rabbit-tree, and she became as the staff of the Large Metensia. And see then, she was as the white cross. 67. And she was as the cross of the rabbits. And so was then the Khnum of the Lords, as a letter of white chocolate.

Disappeared and now hidden

1. Through day and dew, I miss you, I hope to see you, soon. Greet your mother from me, I miss her too, if she drops a stitch, let her think of me. 2. Through day and dew, I walk through the forests here, to watch around for a little while always, for birds with messages from you. 3. I don't dare to enter far off houses, afraid to catch up too many glimpses of you, and then weeping again like a child, do you remember the times that I cherished you.. 4. I feel like stone now, it is fine like this, I won't deny that. I miss something, I just don't know what. 5. The windows of the houses here, they stare at me, they don't say anything. 6. By the thunder you know that I am here. It hasn't been the last time. I know that you peer at me. 7. I know then not where you are, but I feel your presence. It is a warmth which cuts me, oh, there is dripping blood again from my finger. 8. Did I touch you accidentally, or am I just dreaming. It's strange, it is like you are still here, but you are already dead for years. 9. I will never forget that day, you and me, in that boat. I was reading poems for you, you hid your face behind the borders of your hat. I couldn't even see your smile, and suddenly you fell then out of the boat. A beast of the river had shown it's head. 10. Can you explain me once more, how it all has happened. You were gone suddenly, I even didn't see bubbles, you disappeared with the beast. 11. Where are you now, are you really dead. How can it be that I think you are still here. or did God take you up. 12. Somewhere here your mother should still live. It's so deep in the forest, it's scary, I must say. 13. Mother, can I find her somewhere here. Or do you now know either where she is. I miss her, since that day on the river. 14. Deep in the forest, there it happened, like the forest had taken her away. 15. Mother, don't watch so sour, you are scaring me, where has she arrived. 16. You still made some clothes for her. Does she still come here then, please tell it to me. 17. That evening, I will never forget it, please, mother tell me, where is she now ? 18. You still have cooked for her, a second plate is on the table. 19. Or is that little plate then for me, and also all those clothes, I do not know it anymore. 20. Please, mother, say something, or did you lose your mind. Or is father still coming home late at night. 21. I do not know it anymore, what is this a heavy cross. Mother why are you so silent, do you also still think about her so often.

There where it is always silent

1. When you drop a stitch, think about me also. Or will they also come to take me. 2. Oh, maybe I see her then. Mother you do not watch content. I don't have to open for them, right. You will not lose me, I promise you mother. I will stay here. 3. Is father still coming home tonight, and what are all these clothes doing here. I also see a little plate standing, or is that for me, I do not know it anymore. Are they coming then or not, and do we get to see her again then. Or did father take her with him, and do we see her back in the summer maybe. 5. Mother, the Karazure, mother, Metensia, did they do this then. Have they been here then. I can not breath, please, say it to me. 6. The winders are so much staring at me, they do not say anything, it is always silent here, always silent it is here. 7. Mother, please, say something once. I will never forget that day. Oh, let me be like this, I already live in a hell. Don't make it any worse. Let the silence soften everything then. I hope it won't get worse like this, or will they come to disturb everything again. 8. The sun shines on the fields, it is Metensia, in her chariot, she drives the pink covenant to our salvation. 9. Mother, why do you sing now, and what are all these tears. Who have left you. I am still with you here, or do you not realize anything. 10. Mother, are you deaf or blind, mother, you act like I am not there. You are staring at Metensia, have you forgotten everything. 11. She is of the pink covenant, I should have known it. They live along everything, like everything is different. 12. Mother, take me up in the pink covenant. There is no other fire to change us. Maybe we will find her back again. Is father still coming home tonight, and the Karazure. 13. They walk outside, like waves on the field, waves of the sun. I don't dare to watch. it is like everything has happened already, where am I, or am I dreaming. 14. Take me with you, oh karazure, and treat my wounds, like those of my mother.

Metensia and the Karazure

1. Mother, these tears are so expensive, more expensive than gold, they turn my stomach around. 2. mother, those songs are so sweet, like silent rains they come. Father is still coming home tonight, and the Karazure. 3. My dear is there again, with jewelry of the wind and the snow, coming to all those who cherish her. 4. Love is as a fire, as the pink karazure. I do not dare to watch anymore, father is still coming home tonight. Mother is standing before the window. She is staring at me. 5. Can I forget everything now, since she has turned off the light. It is almost night, I'm going to sleep, or is it already time to wake up. 6. Metensia as the sun in fair fields. The karazure waits silently, there where it is always silent. Father will come home soon, the rain is falling already. 7. I hear the doors of the barn. Now they are closed, ready for the night. Metensia is standing as a guard. Her animal has taken us. I have really seen it. Or are these just strange dreams. Mother, have you seen it as well. Or is she not here yet. There is a plate for her on the table, and for the Karazure, the flesh of those who hate her. 8. God, who are we luring. The lightning always strikes in. Is it your Spirit or the new morning, food for the Karazure. 9. God's angels are there, as farmers of the heavens. God who are we luring now. Which plants shoot up from the farm-field. 10. I leave this house alone once again, my hair is wild, mother, the intensive cherish, the temple in the honeycomb. Who is luring. Who is luring us now, in this holy hour. 11. Who makes a living in us, and where are we making a living. 12. Or am I just alone, between the thistles of the field, without the color of a crowning, without home, without living, grasped by a beast. 13. Who made me, why am I here. Where do I come from, where am I going to. 14. Am I really who I think I am, or am I someone else. The Karazure is coming to me, then things go different, and seem to be different. 15. Can I still trust my thoughts, I lay them in God silently.

The Pink Covenant after the cross

1. Metensia, friend of God, whatever I do, it is my fate. I paint your paths, and the fallen leaves. The sun always shines different light. I do not grasp tightly anymore, I let go of everything. 2. The moments of a love-poem, from you to me, is this our fate. 3. The milks which stream now, leading us to all those flown away dreams. Do we really know what we are missing. I am so full of hate and I am just guessing. 4. What did I lose, the milks bring me to the deep hidden houses of the forest. 5. Or do criminals live here then. The karazure with their commands, there where everything is always silent. What do they drink here, there is such missing here. 6. I am getting afraid of this, of these houses, a heavy cross this is, to die in such a hunger, without the moments of a love-poem. 7. Dreams only come here in rushes. Wild cats are here, oh God, how it hurts so much. The lightning always leads me here again. 8. The leaves always fall from the trees here. It is God who crowns the kings here. 9. And Metensia who thrones here with the karazure, like the sun in a soft field. Mother, when you drop a stitch again, think about me then. In the Pink Covenant, we experience, recognizing each other. Knowing each other. 10. You with the green hood, your daughter with a red. Can you understand us here then, the house, the doors in a crack. The wind can show you now, about which I was dreaming. 11. No, you never hurted me. You always gave me the karazure, like a guard in the night, for four times. 12. You have always driven me to Metensia. You with the green hood, your daughter with a red. 13. In the Pink Covenant we could understand each other, drinking from the nipple of Metensia. The Karazure let the wines stream, in this holy hour. 14. Your tears are so expensive. They turned my heart and limbs. 15. The riddles of the Lords, brought through prophets, by them with the hoods. We were bearing this hour in our mind, the workers of the karazure, your smile is so expensive. Your eyes are so tightly closed, by the sweetness of this love-poem. 16. Through the lightning we speak.

The Tears of Metensia

1. And when you have come to the Pink Covenant, then your tears will be as pieces of jewelry, and you will watch through the nipples of the Lord as through windows. 2. Come to the seven tears of Metensia, for they are your guards. 3. And they come from the piece of jewelry and they will return to the piece of jewelry.

4. And they then hide the priestly bloodlines in them. 5. And they surrounded the Lord Christ when He was in the garden of Getsemane. 6. You then have approached the remple of metensia, where the prophetic altars are and the ones of the apostles. 7. And they who are her lovers will go from veil to veil, to watch her tears. 8. And watch then, they are like the tears of Rachel crying in Rama for her kids are no more. 9. And like this the Spirit of God is as a mother, mourning over her children. 10. And she has found comfort with Sarsia and with grandmothers. Yes, she has eaten from the bitterness of Mura, and has entered the gardens of Rietel.

11. She found comfort at the mint bush, the eucalyptus, the jasmine and the elder-tree. 12. And thus the tears are : Marcia, who is like the burning cross, wrapped by serpents, from where also the small Marcia-crosses came from, for she suffered for her child, while her hands were bound. Morgennia, who is like the bleeding morning, and the bush of the Lord. 13. Ageeh, who is like the tear of owls. Sonia, the blooming morning. Vonja, her faithful sister and the blooming moonred, who was like a gift of Sarsia. 14. Daphne, who bears the morninglight, and who is the flower of the Lord.

15. Melissa, who is the commander of the serpents of heaven.

The artwork of the Lord

1. And the tears of Metensia will bring forth the attentates. 2. And see, her tears will be poured out on the earth, in the days of the Karazure, and then there will be salvation in the four worldships. 3. And she will come to Abdal, Maasdo and Kabbernal. Lay then down your jewelry, and come to the jewelry of the Lords. 4. You know then that no other jewlery exists but in the adorning of others. 5. Adorn then those who bear the tears of Metensia, like pure attentates. See then, the art of the Lords is cunning and wisdom. 6. Let then your knowledge not be shallow, for they will be pulled again to the first which floats to destruction. 7. Let then suffering not come over you like something strange, for the Lord installs His servants. 8. Through many tears you will enter, and in bliss are those who bear many tears, for they will find many entries and exits. 9. See then the ark of Metensia sprinkled with tears is her fertility. And through volcanoes she will create a new earth. 10. And she has then an ark of tears, leading to under the pink, like also the pink covenant reaches to under the pink, and there you will see big mysteries. 11. You will then know the paradoxes of Metensia, and her double-headed. For without them there would be no fertility. 12. And so is then also the pink covenant, who is like the nipple of Metensia, full of her paradoxes, by which she clears the earthground, and it has the sight of a broken mirror, as a burning gem. 13. and so is then the pink covenant like the ark of tears and her lap, and you as well can be born again. 14. And every creature is then programmed and will be focussed at the goal which the creator has woven in him. 15. Don't waste your time with overly long discussions, but let the pink covenant transform everything in it's own places. 16. Watch everything together as the artwork of the Lords, standing on the Emelis Shatau as a secret message of the Lords, waiting to get translated and transformed. 17. So is then the Emelis Shatau nothing without the Pink Covenant.

Marcia

1. You have moved then through the curtains of Metensia to come to her tears. 2. Yes, you have been isolated, you who cherishes her. 3. And so are her tears then as warm fleeces to bring restoration. 4. Learn then to know the waves of Metensia, for soon you will be on sea. 5. Learn then to ride the waves of fire, and do not twist her words, so that you will not fall. 6. The Metensia will be then as a fighter against those who twist her words, but in the Pink Covenant they will be brought to their place. 7. For everything there is a place. And the lord knows from where every thing comes and where it will go. There are no ways but in the Pink Covenant. 8. And she is like the fertility and the volcanoes of Metensia. See, you are standing on holy ground. 9. For all things in the Lord are holy, and are sanctified by Him, to get used. 10. Depart from the things which go to destruction, for they are made for this by the Lord. But hang on to the things which are eternal in the Pink Covenant. 11. And so you will have an enlightened source in Marcia, for she will give with the problem also the solution. All those who have lost children in the Lord for His will, you will find the children back on the destined day for that and the destined hour. 12. Bring all your tears to Marcia, as she can feel with you, and she can give you comfort. 13. And Marcia is then the burning tear of Metensia to sanctify many works, and she will give a new song for those who have lost their children, and lead them to the places of deep mysteries and comfort. 15. And you will swim in Marcia's tear, as in a lake of tiger-tears, and you will have hunger and eat much. 15. and through the tears of Metensia you will come to her roar. 16. And you will wrap her scream, and you will comfort her in her shriek. and you will wake up, as the tear of sparrows, as woken by Rumah.

that which they forbade

1. The walls of the rabbit are warm, his bread is always warmer. The word of the rabbit is sweet, his silence always sweeter. You see their houses and their gardens. You see their hedges and that what they forbade. 2. The walls of the rabbit are warm, their wines always warmer. Their waters of odor are better than gold, their silence always more sweetly than the day before. 3. Would you accuse me if I would not enter in. Would you accuse me if I would come near to that which they forbade. 4. This bottle always brings me near.

spirit in the bottle

5. Behind the plastic is a face, behind the toy is an animal, behind the nothing a heart that speaks. 6. Without words, without any hope. Come with me, but do not touch me. I have a wound which you cannot reach. I am as a spirit in a bottle.

the king

7. When spring is burning, she sacrifices the days of the gate. She gave a tale of love, so that destination could be found. Do you see their houses? It is all behind glass. 8. Do you see how they love each other, in sweetness and mystery. They live in a strange space, all behind glass. 9. Would you want to belong to them, would you want to walk on their streets, would you bow for them, or would you want to be their king? 10. I am the king of rabbits, far away from you, far away from everything. I am the rabbit king, you cannot hold me, because I hold you. 11. Everything is in my hands, my winds blow. I am the rabbit king, but so near, so near to everything. You cannot hold me, because I hold you. 12. Everything is in my hands, my winds blow. Hold me now, let your winds blow. 13. Are you the king of the rabbits, near to everything, but so far away? Do you hold me like I hold you? 14. Everything in your hand, please, let me understand, what it is between you and me.

Remember me

15. Please, rabbit prince, do not forget me. Remember me, when you pray, when you eat, when you drink from your steamy wines, when you walk along the streets. Remember me, this is the last time that I will speak.

Vain in pain

16. I am the king of pain. My voice is like the tear of mystery. So vain I am. I look down on rich beggars, looking down on those in joy. 17. They win to lose it all. It's such a big big carnival. Weathers from the rose inside me, tearing it all when it falls, for when it was standing, it wasn't honest at all. 18. Seasons of the rabbits wine, it takes many days before it reaches the sky. 19. I am the king of fall, spreading so much desires, but who wins them will lose them all. I give them to those who are vain in pain. You can never win from a rabbit's beggar, begging for some more pain, begging for some more tears to watch the carnival in vain.

Rabbit behind glass

21. Like a murderer it comes, and soon it will be back, and then it breaks my doors open, is there any escape for me, from this strange strange bottle. 22. No rabbit helps me. I'm all alone in this pit of shame. I tried to hold your hand, but you left me all alone, and now you're sitting on your throne, to laugh about me. 24. Watching this criminal come and go, killing all the seasons between you and me, and the weather. 25. I cannot escape from your wrath. It's always winter in this glass. It's snowing in these days. You're a rabbit behind glass. 26. A killer like your mother, you never told your name, but you seem to be god here. 27. What can I do when you hurt me. You're sitting on your throne and laughs. 28. Only when the wind blows, it's summertime. Then your roses die, but they are back at the end of the day. 29. The bottle's tight, when it doesn't blow anymore. I don't want to be in this rabbit's army anymore. 30. Please, let me be free.

Frozen little boy

31. Be proud of your shame. It's all I have, this frozen boy. Accept your lusts and shames. 32. On the altar it's like cleaning a day of a million years ago. I'm happy that you know to play the game. 33. A cat without wings and space, he chose for love, and now he's an aeroplane, in sweet vain. A cat without wings and space, he turned around, and now he's an aeroplane. 34. So many shames in this world. He's going on, this frozen boy. He's changing without moving.

The New Revelation VI

1. You stare deep. You have watched me awhile ago. Like the scorn-robe of the cross you hang over me, with a spear in my side. 2. Child, I have laid it down, and given to you, this heritage of the past. 3. It has driven me to bliss, you have to go through it as well, it is only for a short time. 4. You stare deep, so fragmentaric. So many words broken away from each other. I don't know where they lead me. I cannot understand it. 5. Mother, have you finally come, your child has waited for you so long on it's post, looking around. They told me, not to believe in you. Only the father was still there. 6. Mother, they have taken everything away from me. Even my dreams, they do not see me standing anymore. I have mutilated myself so often. I cannot take it anymore. 7. It is bleeding when you are embroidering. Like a spider you sting, what did I do ? I am so glad you are here. But why do you not take my wounds away. 8. Are you then a dove of the cross, as a bird of suffering, to bring us a message. 9. So many fogs before my eyes. Like the falling in a deep pit. Your webs have caught me up. 10. I am trapped in your love. No path out of it, I will have to stay here. I do not know everything, but I know the life. Everything is only for a short time. 11. Silently you will change meanings and the faces of man.

12. Rosethorn, like a choir you embrace me. Rosethorn as the window of love. No enemies anymore, everything is the needle of the Lord. 13. Oh yes, everything stings so deep, but it is You who called me. 14. Rosethorn, as an echo in the night, making all the hardness soft, so many cords of your love woven through my wounds, until everything sunks under the pink.

15. i do not know how to lay it down. It stings so deep, and it pulls me away all the time. It sticks, it is the glue of the lords, and everything pierces my soul and bed. 16. I feel so weak, I cannot stand. I am trembling and everything is spinning around me. Did the lord take me to him, or am I dreaming strangely. 17. I feel sick, close to death. I feel like a tree in dark streets. believe me, when someone would see me here, they would watch straight through me. The foam of the law has made me transparent. 18. I am already gone, my shadow is still here.

19. Rosethorn, I can only weep, and further I do not understand anything. 20. all colors are gone. everything black and white, and grey it is a miracle. The king of mice took me with him.

21. Outside the stars shine, standing in the sky as at the wall. I have lost courage to go back. The mice of the heavens lead me away, the rats of the heavens watch, and stare like the thornrose. 22. Like the scorn-robe of the cross they hung over me, with a spear in my side. Given to me, the heritage of the past, hidden behind webs. I do not know where they lead me, I cannot hear them. 23. I am in their fiery chariots, the mice have gone before me. It has already been lived through before, everything has been written down. The rainbow stares at me, the sweet honey enters with me, the wonder of the cross has come. 24. Like the lighting foam of roses I was taken away. I had to live on a bridge where two armies fought each other, until the fire of the roses ascended, and the sweet honey and intoxication started to stream. Like songs they melted together, a soft, but dead rabbit. 25. I couldn't reach her, so many traumas she had. She couldn't speak anymore, she couldn't trust me. She could only sting, like a rose in a deep pasture. 26. Like a soldier of Spricht she was, leading me to the intoxication of doubt. I couldn't stand on my legs anymore.

27. Rosethorn, give me your voice. Rosethorn, give me your eye. I cannot see anything anymore, I cannot think either anymore, everything is stabbed, by the thornbush. 28. Thornrose, have mercy in your love, I am burning away, no time to do anything anymore, everything narrow inside. 29. I cannot move myself. I am trapped in your doubt, insecurity froze me. I am now a tree in your city, a flower in your pasture. 30. After a hard night, making everything soft, so many cords of love and softness, woven through my wounds, until everything sinks under the pink.

Blue eyes, red lips, made to make the kings ready. 2. And tomorrow, then you are, my princess, for good faithfulness, I have laid down my robe. 3. I trust you till here, but the door is still in a crack. 4. Would I open it too wide, you would flood me. 5. I would drown in your love. I have laid down my robe. My hat is tightly over my ears. I do not dare to hear your dear tender voice. 6. Whisper then, it is good, the things you do with me. You are innocent, your heart full of rain. 7. Rosered, in softearth, dreams of flown away years. Blue eyes, red lips, made to make kings ready. 8. And tomorrow you are my princess, for good faithfulness, I have laid down my robe. 9. Spirit of God, of other ages, boxed up, I can cry about it. 10. Quiet is your voice. You do not know everything already, you have to get used to it still. So long you have been in sleep, they have quenched your flames, but know, that I live with you, my princess, till the coming morning. 11. They will chase us away, we will flee to the wilderness. Always you will be my princess. 12. Spirit of God, you have awoken, but always fleeing. To the trees we will preach, to the animals we will bring, our fruit.

3. Open your eyes, dearest, wake up, the time is there. I had to write with heavy pencils. Now they drip with the waters of odor. 2. Open your eyes dearest, wake up, time is ripe, I had to write with heavy pencils, now the fruits are burning in them. 3. Strange totempoles are in my hand, with all those bakerman's faces. 3. The old baker still lives there at the canal. Please, quick, wake up, there under the bridge. We have to leave quickly otherwise they will bring us behind the windows. 4. They will bring us behind the windows, like rabbits behind glass, like rabbits in their cages, like waters in their bottles. Open your eyes, dearest, I am the fairyprince, I am a fairyhouse, in bottles I stand. You don't have to tell me what you feel for me. 6. Quit then your love, become cold, for around the corner they stand. they will interrogate us. Behind glass we go, for the last time, for tomorrow, I will tell you again : Far away is always near. 7. Silence speaks, the ice will burn quickly, stronger than fire, stronger than the coming hour. Future has been gone a long time ago, dreams have flown away. Those who believe it all quench soon again, like a candlestick in hundred winds, they come to the high bottles, coming to their own cages, for eternity they will sleep. 8. We have to satisfy them, they are hungry and that is why they disturb. In God's radio it doesn't go well, it disturbs, it is everything it does. 9. There is a ghost in the machine, maybe we will get it out, if we also tell him that far away is always near, that silence speaks, the ice will burn, stronger than fire, stronger than the coming hour, future has been gone long ago, but the memory is too strong, like it comes from the front. 10. Locked up we are, in a mind always returning to the old, to old paths. I don't remember anything anymore, I only have such heavy pains, in my spine it is descending, like the sun-cord, now it is finished. I will fall into your house together with the door. 11. I am going away from you, for far away is so close. Can you believe me now that coming and going does not exist. The coming of God is like going away, and his going away is like coming. Since you have gone, you are deeper in my heart, oh queen of the rabbits, you have told this to me so often. 12. I have forgotten about everything. My body hurts me so much, everything is like the sun-cord, like a flare in the coccyx, to open the deep doors of Materos, with the keys of Spricht. 13. I am the king of elves, I am the air of elves. I make a living in this book now.

14. Open your eyes now, love, Spricht has spoken, under the spring-tree, there was a crowning, speaking hundred languages, to sift the silver a hundredfold. 15. I have stretched out my legs, and made a living. I am the crown of God, waven through a crown of thorns. Open your eyes, love.

4. Deeper than the mountains of the ocean, deeper than the dewdrips of seahouses, I heard her voice, with her chocolate-king, I have gone through the mountains. Deep in a sea-case I found her, where mirrors stared at me, a mintbush underwater. Deeper than the oceans, deeper than the sea, wearing the costumes of flown away years. Chocolate-king, mintbush underwater, to the dewdrips I have come, to stand on a watchpost. Deeper than the snow of gold, deeper than the mountains of the ocean, where flown away years are still dancing, to be on the watchpost, hiding their Jorinde, hiding their names. Deep in a sea-case I found her, a mintbush underwater. Flown away years took me with them, to a little house of an old fairy, very scary it was inside, where everything happened which I could not make up. Jorinde was her name, an old mintbush underwater, where dewdrops stand ready, to make kings ready. A woman of wonder she was, with seven widow-spiders, they fought against me. Deeper than the seas, deeper than the blue moon, it leads me to the princess of swans, a morning-existence. Flown away years took me with them, to the little house of the old fairy, very scary inside, where everything happened which I could not imagine, on the other side of the mirror, where they all eat from the white chocolate. Deeper than the mountains of the ocean, deeper than the dewdrops of seahouses, I found the old swan, with seven widow-spiders, she gave me a free path. I stared in the palace, where the glances in mirrors froze me, I could go nowhere anymore, i couldn't move myself. She stings me like the white lady of chess, like a mintbush underwater. I am now in thistle-sea, the roses sting me, the roses sting me, until I awake in tenderness, to the soft I have descended, to under the pink, where grey roses in mirroring pink enchant me. I will never go back, but a deep fever is overwhelming me, like a black burning blanket, where the eyes of sparrows have watched me, in their books they painted me, and under the yellow a pirate-captain. Dearest, can you touch my hand, there is barbed wire between you and me, I hear you screaming, we will get everything, when we have sunk to under the brown.

5. The heat has lost it's sting, to under the brown we have descended, where the ice has started to burn. The flame has just caressed my head, I feel so blind in this land. Is it because of the trees, is it because of the cool burning lakes, is it because of the chess-figures who have come alive in the air, like paintings on a weapon. They cannot talk, they move fast, but sometimes they do not move. The heat has lost it's sting, the cold has attacked, high fever under a blue blanket, fed me to the dragons. Suddenly, my child, have you seen that as well, all those flares of lightning. They come to take us again, until we have descended under the brown. We fall in the grief, until we have also seen the sparrows, high on their paintings, where their chariots ride, and other chariots we do not know. By Acha they have entered, like a frozen flame, a precious golden mirror, under gold and silver we have arrived.

2. I cannot move, and you can't either. I see your nose is painted, like a doll you were, oh what a grief. Raise your head up, then you can see me as well. The sparrows will paint us again, they will armor us again, oh foreigners take us with you, and give us to the slaves, so that they will be free also. I still can't move, and I even can't see you anymore, they have blindfolded me, caressed me with a feather. What has become of me, after all these years of grief. I don't dare to think about myself anymore, too afraid that I will leave myself. Give and take, an old saying, but I don't understand it. Are we all slaves then, I do not want to live in this grief. Give and take, an old saying, but for who are we working, are we getting pulled away from each other, are we then free for eternity ? I cannot move myself, still blindfolded, and now I hear nothing anymore either, still feeling the feather glow, to a place where I feel the high fever streaming, until I have descended under the brown again.

1. The path under France, a wild path, from poverty to the primeval, we sink to under the brown, ever again, where brown mirrors talk. Can you move yourself, I can't. Am I now a tree then, am I now a plant, the white lady has stung me, and there is fire everywhere, to under the brown we will come, where the foam of roses is waiting for us. sharp birds, sharp dreams, knowing all our names, until we have gone under the brown, hit by a staff of the fourth death. Come then downstairs, where the French wines stand, where the bottles of tears speak, where the morning has gone, drowned in the new night, where someone is waiting under the brown. Sharp birds, sharp dreams, knowing all our names, until it has sunk under the brown, to the flown away years. I cannot move myself, the feather tells where I have to go. The sparrows wait on the roof, where paintings are burning in the night, strange paintings between you and me, and bakerman's faces lock the row. Where the feather fell, in an empty space, in a bottomless pit, there I jumped in, I saw her highest song, all those burning windows, strange windows, with bakerman's faces between you and me. Where the feather fell, in a deep space, in a bottomless pit, where I heard her whistling, she went back to her bird. I dived after her, I jumped on time, and found grace. I had explained everything to her, she showed me a new way, a way which she had always given away, to warm those who had been hit by the staff. I showed her my wounds, she dropped a tear. Far away under France she let me go. Rags have led me to the primeval, from feather to feather I was led, through valleys of dewtears she said i was right. It was time to enter in, in the high field where the paintings were burning, they are calling our name. We are painted here in a burning night, in books we will live safely.

The Red Stone

The Revelation of the Red Stone

Psalm about the House of Stone

1. God, you know the houses of my seas, You know that all things are so far away from me. Everything glides through my fingers every time again, so many ships have been lost. The door of my heart I can never find. I can only stare, but I watch the same things again and again. They are so far away. Can I live my life like this ? I glide away every time, and I am so blind. Meet me in the house of stone, and put my head in the rocks.

2. God, You know the waters of my heart. I continually sink too deep to say something of use. I cannot find my life anymore. I am on a wander-tour without finding something, a wanderlight in a house without doors. It is like I cannot find my way, like the paths have been grown locked. Can I lead my life like this ? I live in deep pits and I can't go anywhere. Meet me in the house of stone and put my head in the rocks.

3. God, you know the depths of my stomach, there where still the beats live. I get eaten day and night, until a nighttrouper finds me. Even friends eat me. I go from help to help, but I sink deeper all the time. They want to take my life. They are the watchers of the death, speaking sweet words to trap me in their webs. Can I live my life like this ? I don't dare to take a hand anymore, all ways lead to death here. Meet me in the house of stone and put my head in the rocks. I have dreamt of better times, of keys to the gate of heaven. I have often watched your nighttrouper, with their songs unheard. I dream of times across the mountains of suffering, I am so tired to sit here. I can only drink from the kingdom of death, until a nighttrouper takes me away to a dance outside this existence. A slow dance, where everything moves slow, where I watch the golden steps. Can I live my life like this ? Is this my destiny in this house of stone, where my head turns in the rocks, oh God, where can I go.

5. I encountered You in the house of stone, with altars of stone, and with arks of stone. I danced in the rocks, with slow steps. In Elip You brought me, there where the nighttrouper stand on harps. They drink of kingly gold, and they have stomachs of stone. In Elip You brought me, in the house of stone. The nighttrouper stand on harps, like sharks of heaven. You gave me nutrition of high value, and and now my head is in the rocks, staring at the secrets of the sea. Can I lead my life like this ? I can't go elsewhere. Oh God, You bound me with Cords of Love, You put my feet in the house of stone.

Psalm of Metensia

1. Metensia, sweet odour, great mystery. You brought me to the house of intoxication, where your gingerbreads of roses bloom, where the big lilies are. You brought me to Paradise, in Your Will I will go. Oh Metensia, sweet adour, soft Love, eyecolor, when your bottles of forest-odour open themselves, then deer dance around. With Your secret I want to be.

2. Metensia, sweet dream, sweet morning, where I long for. You open my curtains, and the sounds of birds lure me each time again, to soft dreams. Metensia, oh soft bliss, You brought your harp and harlequin. Your nighttrouppers are there again, to take me away to Your Honour. They take me to young bliss, in the days of Spring I watch You, Your harps stand there where wounds were.

3. Deep wounds You brought me, like hit by a friend. You showed Your tears, You punished me early already. You brought me gingerbreads of roses in the winter, Your horses found me in the night, oh Spirit of God, oh Metensia of Love. Your harps stand there where wounds were, now I play before your throne, oh God. You turned the shrill tones in my souls into bells of Your Spirit.

4. When heavy voices frightened me, You were there with soft trumpet. When hard voices let my ships sink, your fishes of heaven were there, to drive away songs, you brought me to the House of Silence. Metensia, Your golden cords took me there. Metensia, great secret, nightlatin, hope in golden Love, to be with you, is like bathing in the golden nightfountain.

5. Your Glory is ever looking for me again, Your words drive me to deep silence. You whisper softly, until I bath in the night of roses. With dreams in Your Left Hand, You come to me, You take my hand. Your Glory leads me, and takes me over savage seas. To be with You, is better than to be with a human. Your House of Silence breaths in me, and deep pillars of roses bring a messenger to me. Why am I still so young. I long to bear Your Wisdom.

6. You punish me with Knowledge, You pierced my pearls by arrows of Love, to hang them around my neck, the deerchild in Your secret. You brought me pearls of Love, pierced on an altar of stone. You hung them through my hair and sealed my forehead. You spoke to me in nightlatin, and you let me descend in the pits of the nights, through your sweet gingerbreads of roses.

Psalm of Eminius Matas

1. I often thought about it, Your Love who always waits for me in the night. I can't sleep nor eat. I am a slave of this life, but you have rescued me from this evil generation.

2. You write letters about kings, about thrones unreached. You bring Mercy to those who tremble, and You make them Your messengers.

3. You have sent Your waters, and Your winds lead me.
4. Kings want to take my life. I want to write Your psalms, and be your nighttrouper.
5. I have often thought about it, Your Love always waiting for me. No step I can take, nor breathing. I am a slave of this life, but You have delivered me of this evil generation.
6. You have beaten my heart, oh Emini, oh Matas. Still I feel the stripes of Your Love. It has brought me the cure.
7. Often I have thought about it, about Your cool Love which leads me always. I feel cold and bitter. I am a slave of this life, but you have set me free from this evil generation.
8. Many things I do not understand. I am young, and what is a human ?
9. But I have ridden the shark to the gate of heaven.
10. I have danced on Your altar, and my burnt shoes. What is it that you care for the human ?
11. Yes, also the Spirit has become human.

Psalm of the Nighttrouper

1. From youth I have battled. Now I am ripe to forge the sword.
2. Many flowers I have watched them dying. Many trees I have watched them sink away.
3. The arrows on my bow are sharp, while the songs burn on my tongue, coming from a silent house.
4. For long times I have been silent, and strung Eternal words together. Deprived of knowledge I was so long, I had to live with hurt of heart.
5. God, raise and anoint your servant, for fruits swell to let their wines flow.
6. From youth I have battled, but now I am ripe to forge the sword.
7. Now I am then a card in the heart, a night trouper on a harp with arrows.
8. Now I am ripe to lay down my life, to break the silence.
9. And then I will leave to the house of silence, to be silent forever.

Psalm of the Spirits of God

1. Oh Kabbernal, Spirit of the Altar, like roaring wine You sooth my pain, You pierce my wounds and quench them. My hair is in the flame.
2. Eminius, oh cold wine, let us be together, and bath in the cool milk of roses, with gingerbreads of roses and moonshine.
3. Shine Your Light in my knowledge and break the chains of my conscience, where fishes have eaten from me.
4. You watch the chains of steel of my stomach and heart, covered under flesh. Oh, break them by your golden dent, and burn a mark on me by Your Love.
5. Your heat has overwhelmed me, Your power has let me hear the mountains. Matas, cover my wounds by Your Flesh, and don't let me stand bare before my enemies.
6. Cover my head by Your golden girdle. You are the Holy Temple bath. Let Love lead me, and let Hope make me hear Your Word.
7. Protect me in daytime against the stinging fly. Lead me to Metensia, the Candlestick on the Throne.
8. A wreath of rays comes from her crown, and a thousand dizzynesses take me to her waters.
9. She has hit me with golden wounds, now her voices break through.
10. On broken feet I can approach her.
11. She hit me and her scar will speak Forever.
12. Yes, even my bones she broke. Now I am like a tree of the field.
13. Heavily does the Lord punish them who He loves.

Metensia, flower of God

1. Metensia, secret of God, only as fishes we can approach You, oh Holy Fire, in the darkest of the night.
2. You have the suns under your feet, and the moons are a bench to you.
3. The pearls of Your feet are burning, and you have fishes at Your line.
4. You guide them to the waters and the house of Marion, where they eat from the sweet bread, and drink from the sweet wine.
5. Yes, arrows of drunkenness will pierce them, and their fruits will be ripe, to bring songs to the most holy of God.

6. Through the veils of temples they will tear, when they show their wounds, coming to unite, the altar and the wine.

7. Metensia, sweet mystery, you bring soldiers to intoxication. You clothed your knights in the night, and bound them in their wounds to God.

8. Your cords still such a sweet mystery. On altars they rise like pillars to You, Metensia, the flower of God.

Psalm of the Tears of Metensia

1. Bearing the fleeces of a new heart, they came there in big hurt.

2. The Lord granted you cloaks of snow, and changed you into holy seed, like herbs on Metensia's altar.

3. The Lord has let you spare your blood, your wounds became like streaming ice. In volcanoes they come together, to hear mysteries.

4. The Lord lured you with golden cords. In the sweet game you lost your sting.

5. Yes, with the flute of the Spirit he gave you dragonblood, to hear His voice.

6. The stakes of flowers you have climbed, slid along the trees with dew.

7. When tears burn of ice, then your heart has heart the Lord. When tears become light in the darkness, then your pain has lost it's sting.

8. My thoughts can't rescue my feelings, I need Your Word. But you let us sink with a small help, to die together and find each other there.

9. Let us winter in Your temple to search Your Words.

10. Bring me a new heart of Lord, raise it to life by your seeds. Let me be blinded in the night, and lead me to Eternal paths.

11. Oh lead me to the waters of roses, to the chinks of the altars of Your burning waters of fruits. Bring me the bread and the vinegar.

12. Your Word is Truth, separate then the waters to a path in the desert, and grant me the seven gifts.

13. Your servant I am, with all your maid-servants, we come before Your Throne with stuttering. Your Love brought us intoxication and drunkenness.

14. Oh Lord, bring us your bowls, with tears of Metensia's Spirit, with roots full of deeds, we speak your language through the holy seed.

15. Bring breath over our bliss, and feel the hurt of our souls, and bring us deeds, wrapped in nightlatin.

16. Teach us to do Your will, let us walk Your ways, to the corn of Your Face, this hymn of praise, this poetry of praise, with the shining of a new day, for those hungry for Your Word, Amen, Metensia Emini.

The Second Metensia

1. Rest with me, and come with seven things, through pink moonshine. Come and rest with me, to seven waters we slide, come, let us kiss the morning. Follow the way of moonshine, through the path of love we have our tour, to the heaven of the second word. Come and learn love from me, through hollow heads we have our tour, when they who go to sleep give us free road.

2. Warm your hand at my heart, follow the days of the second knowledge, to the second bliss. I am Metensia, the cobra, come there where cool love shines, where the evil heart disappears behind clouds without worries. The care is of the Lord, our care is to be with him, through the valleys of his word, the second cross.

3. He broke the bread, showed love as a path, and where I Metensia measured the stars, it has given us much.

4. Come, where true love shines, where cool truth appears to the heart of gold. Come with all your loveplay, show me the sources of your second spirit. The second Metensia, has your heart been there.

5. Come, to be naked in paradise, where the seven veils are, covered by his love, come, his face is pure. The second Metensia, has your heart been there, have you drunk of her breath, where sweet stars ogle.

6. Pure angels with their bowls which steam there, angels of the second word. Come, your spirit is free there, just in love with me, so usual, but wonderful, for eternity we are there.

7. Let the trees who think there, let the seas who offer there, come to find bliss. In the heart of the second cross, where they died of hunger, so full of honey they are now, safe with the bees and the flowers of heaven.

8. Come, I am metensia, the fruit of love is there, offered by blackberries. Come, big love is there, in the second heaven a door has opened, come flee with me. And the days of the wind, you know I have loved them, and the days of the hollow have brought forth honey. Come where sweet truth wanders, in the heart of metensia, the second lamp is there.

9. Come, her arms spread wide, like sweet honey on her blankets, like open books they rise, from the second word on her tongue.

10. Come, bigger love she is, through roofs she breaks through, to take the children home, soft love, tall wisdom, metensia, the second is you.

11. Through flowers, the waters of tall fruits, tall love, books of honey open themselves for you, like the troupers of the night, to take them all home.

12. To the second temple we travel, laying down our old clothes, to go naked into the paradise, wrapped by the new word.

13. Come, the honey she follows, dripping from her mouth and nipple.

14. Come, the milk of the second word, that is she, like the breath of second love, the fruit of belief.

15. Come, and set your spirit free, the old has passed away, a gift of great love. Come, the Spirit says come.

The Power of the Second

1. The honey of the lord, his council is on you. Come, all you kings, before his face.

2. Bring him honour as silver, He has poured out the second word. To them who descended in love to the hungry.

3. His cross is their well of sweet waters. The unity with them is more precious to them than all the other things.

4. Now they find their way in him. Come, and listen to his voice, the second word is open now, come read and be filled with his second Spirit. A second gospel is there now, a second fellowship, to break off the old hour.

5. The terror is over now, the seals lie in a row, broken by his Spirit.

6. Let then now the second word fill you as well, and be one with us, be in bliss with us, and suffer with those who suffer, as the sun going down, finding new bliss in winter's warm hearth, come, and find the gigantic bliss.
7. He brought hunger on a dish to let the honey become ripe, now you fly on the back of a bee of heaven, searching for a word to fill your soul, in your second spirit you are the most, now he has opened the gates.
8. Yes, his angels are tall like the wind stretching, with high raised shoulders, to let the night troupers come.
9. Let them love the lord, to the hour of comfort, let them bring the lord continuously higher. Like a fish he is, like a bird on the mountains, like a lion in his hole, to preach his word, to sing his song. His heralds go out in front of him.
10. He broke and destroyed the marks of the second satan, and now we are here in his second spirit.
11. His second soul will lead us through his second word. Oh second Christ who died at the second cross, the hunger in Africa, the fellowship has not understood, but from the hidden the second fellowship will take care of him, to embalm him with the purest honey, with his loved ones he will be. Let the lion speak now, and the cobra.
12. Let them utter love by the second word, and let his second angels bear his words like steaming bowls, the second ice will stand in front of you daily. Let your word fill them then who search for love and wisdom.
13. Let your word find them who are obedient. They who worship your commandments, and listen to you, find them in silence and in darkness, open the kingdoms of death so that you can watch their soul. Don't leave them alone, for they haven't left you alone.
14. Don't let them get lost, all who comfort you, honey on the pain, worked in flowers before your face, to be in tenderness.
15. Sing like glory descending on the beard of Abraham. Look for his stars one by one, his children keep it on legs, grant them continuous grace, them who give grace, like the masters of rewards they are, to give dignity and freedom.

Prayer against False Healing

1. Word, now opened, like wings of the wind, like hope of his glory. He gave you the thorns in your flesh, like precious oil, bringer of dawn, well of sweet honey, be in bliss. Word now more anointed than ever, the wounds brought oil from the mountain of Abraham. Rod of His Spirit, has led us all the time through the fields and the woods. Drought, and hurt, streaming from the deepest cross, to be in your grace, is knowing all the time that you deliver.

2. You lead us out, you play the harp on your throne, where love anoints the roots of trees all the time, deep under the ground of your second word, show us your hidden spirit, where mysteries swim. Live like you have never lived before. You are the living grace, the living voice, where the light has reached the earth.

3. Also in dark days, your heart is preserved. Greater than the love, sweeter than the voice, all the time it descends like oil of the clouds. Throne on earth with your second spirit, show us higher love, from your second word, bring the rope now, pull us up. Let the beard of your spirit like the beard of the mountain, living and being in love, to the hour of comfort. Your grace through the desert, lead the ones of bliss to the light, your words for them who tremble,

4. Like the gift of the eternal fountain. Lord, don't heal me, when the thorn has to lead me, Lord don't heal me, when the thorn has to hit me, because behind the mountains, there is the soulbinder standing, oh don't make me healthy, don't let me work in hell. With you at the cross is sometimes much better.

5. Lord, don't heal me, but don't hit me with disease, the thorn is large enough to protect me against sin. But lord bring me second healing, which protects my soul, Lord bring me second power which doesn't spoil my spirit. Lord I always wait for your second healing. healing after the cross, through the cross, like a tree rooted in your second blood. Brought forth by your second word, your health is my armor. Lord, healing by the old covenant, made me sick.

Coming Healing by the Second

1. Lord, my hands burn, lord, of second healing, a healing which binds up the soul, purifies it from sin, your heart which binds me at the cross, your second blood flowing through my veins. Vibrating light, warm love, mystical power, oh lead the hermits of your word, they who guard your mysteries, who let the birds fly around in freedom in your wood. Oh, punish those who created the canon, who built cages for the sick people.

2. Lord, don't keep away from me your second healing, your gifts to crown second kings. Lord, don't keep away second deliverance from me, the old covenant I do not know.

3. Remove all the old dripping filth, then the second Solomon will bring the fruits. The cobra will move on the paths, to let treasures not be lost.

4. Lord, let me honour the old, listen to the young, through your second Spirit. Lord, don't let them bind me again, your second deliverance is of more value to me than silver.
5. Lord, come to me, my hands burn, of second healing, of your spirit, Lord, your precious oil is flowing, love me with the herbs of heaven, release me, bring me to the second bliss. Lord I have suffered with them, I have fought at their side, for a new bliss.
6. Lord I have wept with them, I have talked with them, shared your words with them. I was in your love, I ask now for your second love. Lord, bring us continuously your hands which burn, your feet at the cross.
7. Lord, then we will comfort you, and burn our hands, our feet at the cross, the second cross. After forty days you rose up, after forty days in the desert. Lord, come to us, and bring us second love, and second fruits of bliss, to adorn your earth, to a new paradise, our hands burn Lord, to do your works.
8. Lord, equip us, with soft trumpets, with second songs, bring us to your Spirit. Lord, my hands burn, my shoulders burn, deep in your holiness, you open my second spirit, you gave me the second dove. Lord my neck burns everything to your honour, to your glory, please let me awaken in your holiness.
9. Please let the songs of your spirit stream through me. My lips quiver, your song is on my tongue, your apples carry me across the walls. Lord, my feet burn, your second cure and your gifts stream through me. Lord, you created the hermits, to release birds of the second cure to let them fly through your dark woods.
10. Oh, punish them who created the canon, oh, burn the cages away, and lead us all out. Oh, punish them who created the canon, oh punish them who hate the second. Shatter them in your big love.
11. Punish them in grace, and comfort them who mourn about your Spirit. Support the followers of the second, step forward in big power, the power of big love, make us one. Your word lets everything burn in me, your word, let me walk your truth.
12. You granted your second Spirit, and showed us your mighty big Love, in tenderness, your second tenderness. Your second fruits brought second gifts, from the second roots of the second cross. Your Word, your Truth made us one. Cure, second cure, through your second angels, you know them by name. Cure, second cure, in eternity, you took us to your hearth.
13. Second Cure, second deliverance, your second words set us free. Deliverance, second deliverance, you broke the second pharao and his sons. Hit the daughters of satan, the corn of hell.

14. You set us free, you gave us words to break the ties. You gave us second authority, your second anointing is on us. You led us through seas, you led us through drought, until your second sword found us, and now all is one, big love you brought us, through everything. Second abundance, second power, second almighty power you have brought us.

15. Through your love, your second love, men sunk with their ships, and dragons with their riders, you have split the seas. Lord, my hands burn, your gift of second cures rest on me, Your word is my guide, my leading man, my rescuer.

16. Lord, my second spirit burns, and streams of fire come forward, your ark starts to rise. Oh, speak your second word. Oh lord, you have granted gifts, of justice to punish those who torment you.

17. The second judgement is over them, by your second blood. Grant me love and second wisdom to know what you do. Through the second cross you nailed the second enemy to the ground, big love is our shelter, your second blood as walls around us.

18. Spirit of God, erupt, pour on us the second. Your name is anointed, you are the second. Let us not forget your gigantic love, knowing that we are always in the shelter in the second faith.

19. Your word drips of honey, my hands drip, grant me priests for your second tabernacle. In the second bethlehem I found you, and now we are together in the second Jerusalem. Lord, your second miracles and signs burn on my hands, to do big works.

20. Lord, your second tongues speak through me, as streaming fire, the holy lava of the second hour. Second grace is our power, you brought us the second reward, to open your second heavens.

21. You granted us the second keys, you granted us the second words, your second love broke through the doors.. Your mighty waves dragged us through deep valleys.

22. Thank you for your second serpents, thank you for your second oil, for your second wine. It brought us to second intoxication, in second drunkenness, oh, we worship the huge second of your Spirit.

23. Second Eminius, second Kabbernal, second Mura, pour on us your Spirit. My hands burn, my spirit erupts, the room where you speak, grows powerful through your Spirit.

24. The second blood has opened doors. Second miracles you brought us, to grant second rescue, your ark led us out when the flood came. Your second Noah spoke of the second faith.

25. Now His Spirit has come to us, to rescue us out of the claws of clouds and deserts. Punish them who have sacrificed animals on altars, and grant us their souls back. They belong to you, the animals of the fields.

26. Punish them in your wrath, all those slayers and murderers, and burn the old temples to the ground. Punish all those priests of calamity, who killed your animals. Punish them who eat of their flesh. The gift of second justice rests on my hands, to punish all those in high functions who commit crimes against animals.

27. The animals of heaven will eat their flesh, and my hands will burn in the holy temple. Lord, judge them after your word, don't forgive them, for they have turned themselves against your spirit. Lord, grant me the second sacraments and the holy oil of your second ark.

28. Lord, my stomach burns, grant me second nipples, of your holy second milk, and give me your second cup. Lord, your second candlestick, and second altar of odour, and second copper washer bowl, your second gift of prophesy. Let the veils tear down now.

29. Lord, support your Spirit. support my hands which burn, send the second Azazel to the desert. Let the second Enoch write your words. His mouth is holy, with coals of your Spirit.

30. Your second seraphs come to this hour, your second Karazure, and your second ukalien, oh holy Kabbernal. Lord, unholy folk have burnt your books, punish them in your wrath. Lord, I come before your second altars of prophesy.

31. My back is in fire, my second kidneys teach me. My second liver is full of ice, and my stomach can grant so much love.

32. Praise to the king, preserved by works, the tears which steer, a heart of bliss is nothing without works. Second Spirit of the cure, angels of the second cure, lead me, be a shelter to me, build my walls. Let no one make my heart weak.

33. Gifts of second cures, lead me with your wings, lighten my heart, and open my second spirit forever, baptize me. Give me the sword of the second cure, lead me softly, to the helmet of the second cure. The old has perished, the new has come. Give me your second wine, your bliss, and to all who have faith in you.

34. Bind me with second ropes of your Spirit, the second blood is the cure, the second blood is the rescue, let it be preserved for eternity, grant forgiveness and mercy.

35. That second blood streams through me, because I have given him my blood.

Guidance to the Bitter

1. The Lord has brought me to a bitter land, gave me bitter fruits to eat. Praised is the Lord for His Wisdom. 2. I learned to hear His Spirit, my wounds are bitter. 3. Have you already eaten from the bitter ? I have discovered that the ways of life and luck all lead to the death. But in bliss are those who die with the Lord. 4. And I found a grave more bitter than death, and I found her on a stone-cast distance away from the heaven. And her kisses were sweet, but she tasted bitter. 5. And I asked the Lord to lead me out, for it led to the hell. And the Lord gave me keys to new songs, and they were bitter and sweet. 6. And I was in fear of the rage, as it burned everything away, but the Lord gave me sweet rage. 7. And I saw volcanoes in a dry land, and they were sweet. 8. The Lord has brought me to a bitter land, gave me bitter fruits to eat, but in my stomach everything became sweet. 9. And the Lord gave me sweet revenge. He gave me a new song, to bind kings, and to bring noble ones to submission. 10. Yes, let all bow now before the lord, He thrones on the songs of the Second. 11. Yes, let all what has breath say : Amen Metensia Eminius. 12. The Lord led me to a bitter land, my wounds are bitter. Yes, bitter graves He gives, until the nightshift rises. 13. With my head in bee-nests my tongue touched the sweet, yes, to die in you for eternity, until the nightshift rises. 14. In bliss are those who see what the Spirit sees. 15. Lead me to a new land, oh Lord, I haven't forgotten the prescriptions of the fathers. 16. Lead me to a new land, oh Lord, make honey float down on your servants. The trees here are bitter, the sweet hangs here in the clouds, ready to float down. 17. You brought me to a bitter land. With a small flame you let me read Your books, and the nightshift went before me, and brought me new wings, to strike the heathens. 18. Yes, the Lord heavily chastises those who follow idols. 19. He gave me a new song, and let the waters descend. In his ark sounds the nightsong. 20. We are brittle dinnerware before the Lord, and He beats us again and again. We have been made of shatters, like riddles of the Lord. 21. And those who do not carry the shatters, don't let them in, for they are mockers destined for the outer darknesses, there where the dogs live. And there will be weeping and gnashing of teeth. 22. For in the heaven there is no place for mockers, those who defiled the suffering of the Lord and vomitted in His Holy wounds. 23. Yes, in foul places they will descend, and the Lord will be deaf for their beggings. 24. No, the Lord will not forgive them, those who tred down His second blood. 25. The Lord will not keep innocent those who mock. Yes, the judgment over them will be heavy. Amen Metensia Eminius. 26. For the Lord will gather the chaff from the four corners of the earth and He will burn it in the fiery oven. And the ashes will be persecuted by His winds. No, the Lord will show no compassion to those who mock. 27. See then that you will not raise yourself above another, for the Lords will strike down the proud chests. 28. What are you to be honored ? Man is as dust in the wind. 29. Yes, the Lords will destroy the jaw of those who laugh. Humble yourself then before the Lord, and wash your face, so that the Lord will have compassion with you on the Day of judgement. 30. Weep then about those who laugh. And be light as feathers in sweet revenge, so that they will not eat your flesh and not seeing your wounds stand naked. 31. Accept the suffering and the ice which they bring as a gift of the Lords, so that wine will flow from the wounds, and you will see the sweet.

The Lord is my shepherd

1 . I burn, for you have filled me with desire. I stand in your Love, for you have cherished me and supported me. Oh Metensia, Spirit of God, I have searched for you in Eminius. Many times I have waited for you as a watch-post in my tower, while Kabbernal roared and fizzed as a river in the distance. There where the Spirits of God come together, there I have heard your voice. 2. Let the choirs of your love led me like before. My God, I have gone astray. I was too young. 3. But now I have come to full growth, touch me, and give me the wings of the heavens and the keys of paradise. I will enter again, like I did before. 4. I have the keys of Your Word. Your servants have spoken mysteries. 5. The Lord is my shepherd, I have no lack. He will guide me to grassy pastures. He leads me very softly to waters of rest. 6. The Lord is my shepherd, I have no lack. He comforts my soul, and takes in those who fear Him. 7. I do not fear evil, for I fear the Lord. 8. Even if I go through a valley of deep darkness, I have no lack. I do not fear evil, for you are with me. 9. Your rod and your staff comfort me. 10. He will lead me to grassy pastures. The Lord is my shepherd. 11. Yes, salvation and mercy will follow me all the days of my life. 12. I will stay in God's House in all eternities.

God's Abandonment

12. Metensia, burning hearth, Metensia, Light of God. You have filled the earth with Your Love, you have filled the earth with Your Praise. 13. Children You keep at Your heart, when they follow you, but You destroy tyrants against the rocks. 14. Lightly burns the wrath of Your Spirit, Metensia, throne of God. 15. Metensia, lighting light, flaming to eternity, Your Name above all names, oh God, throne above the hymns of Your nation. 16. Return, Lord, to those who have gone astray. The life is hard, teach us to be in your Grace. 17. By giving grace we came closer. Now we have come, to the mountains of Eminijs. 18. But our prayer is still : My God, why have You abandoned me, My God, why are you never returning, My God, only in the distance we hear the burning, Your Love. 19. My God, far away from the deliverance, with the words of my complaining. 20. You have given me Your Spirit Eminijs, to be able to come closer to You, but You are so far away. 21. Why don't You let Yourself be known. But still You are the Holy, throning on the hymns of your nation. 22. Our fathers have built their lives on You, and you made them escape through narrow cracks. 23. To you they have called, and You have saved them. 24. You haven't put them ashamed on Your Holy Rock, for they trusted in You. 25. But I am an animal and not a man. They mock me, and throw their stones. They stick their lip out and shake the head. 26. Do they know that I speak with you then. With sadism they watch me. 27. Destroy them in your wrath, and make them afraid. I am surrounded by the dogs, and they pierce my hands and my feet. 28. I am then surrounded by thorns, and there is no love anymore. 29. They share my clothes among each other and brought the red scorn-robe to me. 30. The humble will feed themselves and get satisfied. The Lord sends them ravens. 31. My God, why have you forsaken me. Come then fast, the hours are so short. 32. Your roses are still to be cherished, but their thorns are so sharp. 33. I sing psalms to the Lord, to lure Him with my play. I know You want to see temples. They have born in your heart. 34. Please, let Yourself be known like it was. My youth has isolated me.

The Awakening of Eminijs

1. Eminijs, Your forests burn, flames of Your Spirit. To quench the hair, in light of fire.

2. It is dripping, I can't see it well, my eyes wander away all the time.

3. The grave of Your Love, they have quenched you by arrows. Wake up, oh Spirit of God.

4. Wake up , Emini^{us}, you Spirit before Gods Throne. You thunder, standing on the Rock. In Love united, I am with You. Grace took me deeper, because I had granted Grace.
5. Wake up, Emini^{us}, Spirit before Gods Throne. Metensia sent you to the forest of Love.
6. Why is the violent one so proud in his evil, Gods Longsuffering endures the whole day. God will pull him out of his tent and unroot him, to let Emini^{us} wake up by the sound of battle.
7. Yes, on chariots stands the Lord, until His Spirit hears it and fights at His side.
8. On the mountain they come together, all the Spirits of God. Metensia and her arrow, to break violent ones forever.
9. Then them who search for justice will watch it and fear. Emini^{us}, it is now morning. Lead us through the day. The evening waits for us.
10. Those who trust on riches fall. But the lovers of Metensia stand on the rock forever.
11. Day nor night they have rest. The Love is full of fire.
12. I fly high, on the wings of Metensia, driven by her love.
13. Emini^{us}, awake, for the days get worn off. Seven crowns stand before you today, taken away from kings, Spirit of God, rule to the night.
14. Spirit of God, leading me to a forest of flames, where my hair burns, where the quenching rests on me. 15. Spirit awake, so that I can sleep. The Lord gives it to His lovers in rest.
16. My hands come free, you wake up, Spirit of God. You call me pure and free, to do the things of Your Sleep.
17. The lights hit me in my eyes. There are holes in the air. The Spirit, He has awoken. Good morning, Emini^{us}.
18. Roses grow on your table, where your light is called wonderful.

19. The spiders of heaven speed to above. I am now in bed, please, don't let me turn and toss. Your night music plays slower, this melody I do not know. My ship goes sailing now.

20. My dreams go right through the sea. My body is burning from love. I am in good hands.

The keys of Metensia

1. At the door she knocks. The Love is her man. She has put on the fire-gem, and the fire-red. Yes, the red of the fire will lead you, and let you hear her songs. 2. God have grace on me, when you pass along my houses. Don't let me go under in dishonor. 3. Lord, You fathom me, You know my heart, Lord, you know my sitting and my standing. You see my thoughts from far. Where would I have to flee for your Spirit. 4. Lord, you know the ticking of my heart. Lord you research my walking and my laying down. Where would I go for you. With all my ways you are familiar. 5. There is no word in my mouth, Lord, which you do not know completely. You know my entries and my exits. 6. Lord, you know all my bloodlines. You have the keys of Metensia. You surround me from behind and the front. In you I am safe, the solid fortress. Yes, give bliss to those who trust in you for eternity. 7. Lay Your Hand on me. The understanding is too wonderful. I cannot reach your Spirit. 8. Only to sink away in your Love is what I am able to. 9. Lord, in all your books I am written down. You have produced and rooted me in the depths of the earth-realm, reaching to the heavens and the clouds. 10. Your eyes saw my formless beginning, they saw the days which would be formed, when none of them existed yet. 11. It is all too lofty, I cannot reach it. I took the wings of the red of the fire and the morningred, and I went to live at the ends of the sea. Also there Your hand would guide me. 12. Even if I would call : Let the darkness overwhelm me, then is the night like a light surrounding me. Even the darkness doesn't hide for You, but the night shines as a day, as a lighting light. So am I in You. 13. The darkness is as the light, where your right hands grasps me. Would I rise to heaven, You would be there. Would I make the netherworld as my bedside, You are there. Even if I would start a living at the very ends of the stars, the sun and the moon, and I would shatter my soul. You wrap me in gold and silver, and bring me the honor of the copper. 14. You have produced my kidneys and rooted them, in the lap of my mother, and in the lap of Metensia. You have given me her keys, and have formed the inner side of my stomach. 15. Yes, you formed my kidneys in her laps, there where the Spirits of God came together. U gave me the bone-marrow in my bones, and brought me to the thick honey of the heavens. 16. You have formed me and rooted me in the hidden, wrapped in your mysteries. 17. Where would I flee for you, and where would I go for your Spirit. You, who carries the keys of Metensia, and cherishes her ends. You know all her entries and exits. And they are with many. 18. The dragons of my soul you have submitted, and you have given me the silver of the heavens, and the silver of Metensia. 19. Yes, the golden scales you brought to me, and you set my spirit free. 20. Yes, always I will return to You. For me you are still the sweet and the wine. Where bees of the heavens watched you, you created me. 21. Too wonderful your works are to me. My soul knows that very well. 22. The number of your thoughts is big. You are a violent one, to overwhelm me with the number of your strings. 23. Would I count them, they are with more than the sands. When I awaken, you are still with me. Raise then now my soul to you, then I am free forever. 24. Yes, like a bird is my soul, longing for You. More precious than wine is your beard, and you honor those who do not let orphans starve. 25. I always stood on your holy mountains. Now then, reach to my soul, and take her in. 26. Heavy are the burdens when you do not save. Wake up now, Lord, to punish your enemies. Cherish my soul like before, then she will watch over you with her wings. 27. Oh God, you have destroyed the godless. You have destroyed all those men of blood. You surround me in grace. 28. Let your words and thoughts lead me. They are numerous, I can not count them. 29. You lead your nation out of Egypt, and you bring them to the pleasures of the coming Canaan. 30. Lord, on your way we are still. Watch then back, to defeat your enemies. They are with many, but they are not with as many as you. 31. They use your name as lie, as opponents. Would I not hate who hate you ? Yes, I despise those who stand up against you. 32. I hate them with a full hate, for they who do not hate those will not be able to come to you. As enemies they are to me, all those who despise your word. Do not give them grace, those who speak lies to your holy mountains, and who block the children. 33. Ban them out of your books of life, so that they will not defile you anymore. 34. They speak with cunning to you. Do not hear them. 35. Fathom me, oh God, and know my hearts, as if I am laid bare before you. Test me then, and know my thoughts. 36. Discover my graceless paths, and burn them away. Lead me to the eternal path. In Grace I am wrapped, for I have given You grace. 37. Thus you have given me rewards for my works, and am I not like an ensnarer in your temples. 38. I stand on the Rock, for I have kept your words. 39. Yes, your promises I know, and I do your commandments. Also my lips are pure and my heart follows you step by step. 40. Send then your Grace to me, always again, and let me come closer to Your Glory, which you have proven to thousands, for they kept and followed your commandments, like the moon follows the sun and the night follows the day. 41. We have found big light, in the darkneses of your temples. Yes, Your candlestick you sent to us, and brought us sevenfold light. 42. Give us grace, by your glory, for we have brought grace to you. 43. Bless then the works of our hands, so that we will bear multi-fold fruit for your face. Yes, let us be, like the Spirits of God who came to You, and raise our souls out of the net of the birdhunters. 44. They have laid many traps, even to trap Your Spirit. 45. In us You have a shelter. Your tears we bear. We have given what you gave, and we are full in his love. 46. Be then complete, all you followers of the Lords, so that He will not burn your lips away.

1. Proud is the man who does not see the Lord. Proud is he who does not live under Grace. The Lord will break him with His fist. 2. The proud are not known in the Lord. The Lord humiliates all the proud on His Day. Yes, a day there is for everything which is high. He will destroy the heights and raise his valleys like a volcano. 3. The Word of the Lords is enkindled. Lord, put your lights on. 4. At Babylon's streams we sat, those who followed Him. We also wept, for the Lord had beaten us. The memories of Sion hurted us. We hung our zithers on the willows. Our strings were broken. 5. But His songs were in our mouths, to lead us out in joy. 6. Proud is the man who does not see the Lord. Proud is he who does not live under Grace. The Lord will break him with His fist. 7. And the Lord will speak : I do not know you, you liars. At Babylon's streams we sat, those who followed Him. Also we wept, for the Lord had beaten us. 8. Sing a song for us, said those who terrorized us, yes, they longed of us to show joy. 9. But nothing but tears we brought, and those who wept sang for each other, so that the Lord would weep to them, and would lead them out in the joy of the tear. 10. Blame those of Edom by the days of the Lords. Break Assur's spears, and lead their pearls out. Assur will be of the Lords, and they will be called children of God. 11. To the Second Assur He brought them. And the Lord is the Lord of the Second. 12. See, the old is gone. The new has come. 13. You, daughter of Babylon, destined to destruction. Eternal Rest He will give, after the days of Gehenna. 14. The Lord will not be in wrath for eternity, but will burn the chaff to the Second Gehenna. They will be delivered to the destruction which leads to rest and to the fourth death. 15. If I will forget you, oh Jerusalem, I will forget my right hand. 16. My tongue sticks to the roof of my mouth, if I will not remember yours. 17. Jerusalem, still my highest joy, leading me to the sources of the Second. 18. The Second jerusalem and the fire-gem of Metensia, still above my highest joy. 19. Amen is in Metensia Eminius. 20. Let the Rock lead me, let the Rock beat me. I have rejoiced in the Lord, thousandfold, to watch his myriads. I travel from district to district, as a pilgrim in His heavens. 21. I knock on gates. Open for me. Don't let me alone in the cold. 22. Reach out to my fire, and let us go together, to the fire-gem of Metensia. 23. She is like the fiery oven. Let the Rock lead me, let the Rock beat me. I have been clear, hidden in God's Love. 24. Yes, the beatings of the whip is to salvation. To bleeding you have hit me. Now they are all clear. 25. You have wild horses for your carriages, but they are tamed in you. 26. They bring horses of Metensia to the hearts. Do it now. 27. Where forests open I have searched your Spirit. Not for closed doors. You have given me her keys, and the freedom is that which I cherish. Let then the gates open, and let the rock keep my foot. Let her fire not melt me that I will fall, but keep me in the freedom of your name. 28. I come to precious gates, where her horses stand before.

The doves

1. Ask the doves, they still miss you. Their children have never seen you. Only on pictures and in stories. 2. Ask the doves, they care for you, they also comfort you. They haven't seen you in a long time. 3. They are waiting for your arrival, then they will wake up, those who sleep for hundreds of years. 4. Ask the doves, those with the tall mind, to reach for tree-tops. They have built their houses there. 5. Aren't you proud of them, or doesn't it matter. Ask the doves, for they who sleep a lot are never tired. 6. Ask the doves, where all those ladders stand, where little toddlers play, where mothers tell about you to their children. 7. Mother, how was he ? Was he really not afraid of anyone, or did he just act like that, to reach the big gong. 8. When he struck, everything came back. 9. Will he then really return, or is he just acting like it. Does he really love us so much. 10. Ask the doves, but don't ask them why. Did he really have to suffer that much, there are so many things they weep about. 11. Ask the doves, but please, don't ask them why, just listen to their tales, then you will know why by itself. 12. Come to their windows, stand before their doors, then they will wrap their wings around you, and whisper : he has returned.

Psalm about that which goes away

1. Jewelry tinkles around their feet, so brittle, so fragile. They are like angels of the red tear, they dance around the big feather. 2. Angels of the red tear, they sit artful, opening their mouths like children, like orphans they write, when the wind lays down they stand up, and peer for hours through the windows. 3. They have seen you, sending their sparrows there, with messages of the wind, and they sleep deep, to reach your heart and to say everything will be well again. Those times professed by the angels. 4. With fire on their tongues, the sweet they do not know. They are from the red tear, and they only know much grief. 5. Jewelry tinkles around their feet, dancing like the titmice and the widows, through the streets of the sea, where waves awaken, and echoes of lost times. 6. The red tear falls, and the fire spreads itself, and they who follow her become fire-red. There is nothing to do anymore, violins are descending, and they get sifted. 7. I can not help it, there are doves on the Emelis Shatau. They reign there with fire and flame. It is too late, nothing to be quenched. 8. The ravens have found me, their lost child, their messenger sent out so long ago. 9. Tell me farewell. This is the last time, I haven't anything to tell anymore. The ravens take me with them, to the Emelis Shatau, where the doves reign. No one will tell you, where you have to go to find me. I have been there for long, now I am gone, to the land where the doves reign. 10. I don't know what I have to say, please, find your last words. It is over, the message slinks away. 11. Please, don't wait till I come back, but come yourself, and believe your dreams. If the jewelry I give you fits, then you are always with me, but if it doesn't fit, lay it aside for your children. Maybe that a small child will find it once. 12. Everything goes away, and all things get older, also nights go away, and things get colder. Always the sun rises again, and will lay down again, no, the day will never come back, and also the memory will fall away, into the bare night, into the morningdawn, a new bird flies, leaving it's newborn children. 13. Everything goes away, the colors will waste, also the echoes will fade, new days will come. The red tear falls, the fire spreads itself, and they who follow her become fire-red. There is nothing to do about it anymore, violins descend, and they get cleared. 15. I cannot help it, there are doves on the Emelis Shatau. They reign there with fire and flame. It is too late, nothing to be quenched anymore. 16. The ravens have found me, their lost child, their messenger sent out so long ago.

Everything will perish

1. Deepgoing experiences peer through the window. I am looking at you, you look at me, but this moment will once also quit. 2. Deepgoing memories between you and me, peering through the window, but they are disappearing soon, for the light of the lights consumes them all, they will have to pay the price for this tale. 3. between you and me there is nothing anymore, everything burned away. 4. Tomorrow there is ice, the price of the autumn, the winter comes. Stronger than fire, the claws let go. 5. The house of doctors, after the fight, no way back, a road to new coasts, new mornings, but they will also fall away, like shatters in the rain, reflecting strange faces, bakerman's faces between you and me. 6. No one will do business, there is nothing anymore, everything is gone. 7. The altar has paralyzed the cords, by which you kept me imprisoned. Nothing but a slave I was, but now I am free. Everything passes over, I peer through the window, to vague memories, I do not even know them by their name. 8. Like orphans they play there, they do not see me, they are too far away, when the morning comes, then I am gone forever. 9. The weights are heavy, but everything passes over, everything becomes lighter. 10. The sons of a new morning, they will also fade away. We can not carry anything forever, at the end of all things we are free. 11. I have gone to the altar, to encounter the animals of the forest, memories I carry with me, but they will perish. 12. On the altar I was, to hear trees, so far away, deep in the forest, but they also pass by. 13. What do I grasp at ? I feel so much spasm, I cannot reach anything. Everything passes by. Everything passes by. Everything passes by. 14. I can not hold anything. And when I do, it hurts. 15. No, I let go, before it will let me go. I am too afraid to fall again. 16. I am far away now, nothing can touch me anymore. I can not grasp anymore, I am paralyzed as a tree, but I am still standing stiff, to get broken in the morning, to go to the little of God, to Materos. 17. Shatters at the end of the day, shadows of the past and the future. I can not build a house. I can not hear anyone. I am as deaf and blind, everything will perish.

Under the Yellow

1. Houses of birds watch me, staring at me. They have worshipped the silence. I lose my consciousness all the time, and turn around in their waters, while I sleep, sleeping so deep.
2. Houses of squirrels let my tears fall, but where am I crying for ? I don't know who or where I am.
3. Rain of wasps, kingly battle, let me sing with the birds, let me go down into the rabbit bed. Rain of wasps, battle of mice, let me go down into the war bed.

4. Voices like waves through my head, now I am a pirate, give me battle in my hands.
5. Rain of wasps, prayer of mice, let me go down into the hunters' bed.
6. Rain of wasps, prayer of battle, let me descend into the hunters' bed.
7. To purify the yellow, thousand times thousand times, on the altar of the savages, to war meal.
8. Descended under the yellow I am, a future I don't have, only some old books to perish in. Rain of wasps, thunder-storm prayer, let me descend into the bed of red indians.
9. Rain of wasps, thunder-storm prayer, let me descend into the bed of sparrows.
- 21.

Psalm about the Birds of Metensia

1. A hundred vertigos, take me to the gates of Metensia. I see her birds standing there. The Karsuiks bring messages from her. In golden envelopes, with the purified white.
2. A hundred vertigos, a karsuik takes me up, and brings me to her tower, where sparrows live. Yes, a sparrow she is, a wonderful bird.
3. A hundred vertigos, let me descend into the bed of Metensia, where all the birds sleep, and her horses lie there, to tell stories.
4. Metensia, like a thousand vertigos, have then love for her, to wander through her forests. Call then the putses loud, her birds of the cure. They sit in the trees, drink of the ponds, to enchant the hearts. Enchant me, enchant me, quick, for something is after my heels.
5. I run through the wood, I am free, and I don't want to return anymore. Saturn wakes over me, the star in Metensia's hand.
7. Over mountains and valleys we fly, I feel a hand.
8. Please Putses, quick, enchant me, and take me where the nightingales sing, where the cuckoos stand at the beach, to direct to the pirateship of the Lord, where the Peter lives.
9. The eaten one is the pirate now, and I can dream about it. It has taken me away.
10. In tall garments it came to me, where Metensia soars over the waters, the beauty of the silence.
11. Words would hinder me , but they didn't say anything, and now I am here.

12. Quick, enchant me, or it is too late, and I lose this dream, and fall from my throne, to serve as slave again, and to be a prisoner.

13. The ravens have followed Peter, to the small house deep in the wood.

14. They have given him there, rabbit nutrition, now he is then a pirate and a red indian. Purified in sevenfold, descended to under the yellow. He is a toy king, please make a living in Him, this eaten child, for them is the kingdom of God.

15. A thousand vertigos, take me to the place where kings are the lovers of apples. A frog king is there, moving every snare

16. On Saturn they stand, in Metensia's Hand. Enchant me, quick, for reavers are there.

17. A thousand vertigos, I fall asleep every time again. Please, putses, quick, enchant me, or it is too late.

18. The cages of the canon are ready, to shake their heads, and then to lock the frog, as slave of their gospel.

19. But if they might understand it once, the frog has a baby, small enough to go through the hole, and then the song starts at the beginning.

20. A thousand vertigos, violins quiver, please God, take me away. My head feels heavy, I feel the arrows. They want to split me, pierce my heart.

21. Please putses, quick, enchant me, for under the yellow they play.

22. I am not their game anymore. I don't want to be it anymore. Please enchant me, and take me with you.

23. Oh king of frogs oh light of hares, oh crowning of bears, seal this love poetry, so that they who love me, can watch the message.

24. I cannot speak straight, for a dark stature stands beside me.

The frog-king

1. There was a crowning, and now he is king, of toys, he is frog-king. No one can stop him, his legs are too tall. 2. No one can quench his dreams, it already took much too long. Do you have something to say still, do it now. After this you can not anymore. 3. Soon he is king, and he makes everywhere his living, the throne that is the earth. Do you have something to say do it now. 4. Soon it can not be done anymore, then all mouths will be locked, and he will speak, the frog-king. 6. Please, let your clothes dry outside, for inside it can not be done anymore. Mouths are locked, the frog-king makes a living now. 7. Put your sirens on, for soon it can not be done anymore, and all doors will be locked, and no one will open. The frog-king has come. 8. Don't think that you will eat for eternity, for when the gong has been struck, the eaten one will eat. 9. The peter has risen, with his pirateship he is a cleared indian, he has been cleared sevenfold, to under the yellow he descended. 10. He is the frog-king, please, make a living in him, many rooms he has there, stirring each string. 11. Where violins tremble, there he shoots his arrows, sharp on the bow. He is the frog-king, making in everyone a living. They were at his crowning.

The Revelation of the Red Stone II

The Magiccup and the Little Magicplate

1. Once there were thirty princes who had been bewitched by a witch to turn them into guards on a high tower. 2. The tower was so high that the highest part could not be seen, and the tower was so wide that it filled the half of the country. 3. When someone wanted to go on the stairs, then balls of stone and balls of fire would come downstairs, to make the country unsafe for a long time. 4. That is why the king forbade anyone to go to the tower. 5. The king had much grief about the loss of his thirty sons. 6. The thirty princes were now dreadful guards who had to march on the top of the tower. 7. They had to guard the treasure of the witch : a magic-cup which would never run empty, and by which you could travel underground, and a magic-plate which was always full, and by which you could travel through the air. The king disliked the witch very much. 9. If he had been a bit nicer to her, then it wasn't as bad as it was now. 10. Yes, the king regretted what he had done to the witch. 11. And old little beggarwoman once came at the gate to ask for shelter, but the king sent her away. 12. How could he know it was a witch ? 13. And a witch you better give shelter, otherwise you will regret it your whole life. 14. That had become very clear to the king.

15. Since then the king was always good for beggars, and he had learned his lesson. 16. On a day one of the beggars came to the king. 17. 'King,' said the beggar, 'I have heard what had happened. I come from a foreign land, but I have lived underground for a long time, and once I saw the witch passing along with her magic-cup. 19. I followed her, and she came in a well of light, where she became invisible. 20. I also went to the well, and in a flare of lightning I stood on the tower where your sons are kept prison. 21. They had indeed become the most terrible guards, and they marched around dangerously. 22. But they couldn't see me, for I was invisible. 23. The magic-cup had disappeared, because the witch was with it underground, but the little magic-plate which is always full stood there, and I took from it, and I rose up in the air. 24. How far I came I do not know, but I was so high there where no human ever had come. 25. Here I was in a world with the most wonderful fairytale-figures. 26. They told me that your sons carried secret fairytales in them, which had never been told. 27. The spell would be broken when those fairytales would be told.'

28. The king let the best fairytale-tellers of the country come, to gather and tell as many fairytales as possible, but nothing happened. 29. Then the king let the beggar come back, and asked him where the light-well was underground. 30. The king sent ten footmen together with the beggar. 31. The king hoped that the footmen could deliver the princes. 32. But the witch was already waiting for them. 33. In a lightflare she bewitched the footmen to turn them into guards of stone who had to guard the light-well, but the beggar saw the magic-cup standing, grasped the cup and drank from it, while he could travel even deeper underground. 34. After a long time the beggar came in a fairytale-realm which was so deep underground, where no human had ever come. 35. How deep it was he did not know, but there were the most wonderful fairytale-figures here. 36. They told how they once lived together with the fairytale-realm above the air, but the witch had torn the realm apart. 37. In the light-well the witch hid the fairytales, and the two fairytale-realms would come together again when those hidden fairytales would be told. 38. Again the beggar went to the king, and again the king would let the best fairytale-tellers come, and also the best fairytale-tellers from other countries, but nothing happened. 39. Then the beggar got an idea. 40. He had now both the little magic-plate and the magic-cup. 41. With the little magic-plate he could bring the magic-cup to the realm above the air, and then they would be able to go with the magic-cup to the realm underground. 42. From that day there was much traveling back and forth, and they told each other the most wonderful fairytales. Not long after that the footmen of stone and the guards of the tower marched to the nearest city, and began to tell the fairytales. 43. Slowly but steadily the spell was breaking, and the king could take his thirty sons and his ten footmen in his arms again.

The Speaking Tower

1. There was once a speaking tower. 2. Whenever someone went on the stairs of the tower, then the tower shouted so hard that nobody could come really far. 3. But the king had heard that there were special things to be found in that high tower, which was this way high that actually nobody knew where the tower finished. 4. The king called for a deaf man to come and asked the man if he wanted to look for what was high in there to be found. 5. The deaf man agreed, and left immediately to go to the tower. 6. The man had of course no problems of the hard sound, and after awhile he had come this way high that he arrived in a small hall where all kinds of indian fruits lay. 7. The man started to eat of it, and started to laugh hard. 8. Then he went to the next staircase to come higher, but he got immediately stopped by dazzling lights. 9. The man returned to the hall, took with him as much as possible of the indian fruits, and returned to the king. 10. He told the king concerning the dazzling lights, but that he had found fruits by which you will laugh hard. 11. The king could use those fruits, and after not too much time the whole court suffered from unstoppable laughing. 12. But the king wasn't satisfied. 13. And for this reason he let a blind man come also. 14. The blind man had of course no chance to deal with the hard sound of the first part, and for this reason the deaf man had to go back to the small towerhall to send a rope through a small window, to lift the blind man up. 15. That went all good, and thus the blind man could go a the staircase higher, and had no problems of the dazzling lights. 16. After awhile the blind man came in a little hall where gleaming indian stones lay. 17. The man didn't see that of course, but he had found them very quickly, but then burst out weeping. 18. He wanted to go a staircase higher, but there it became hotter and hotter with each step, until the man could not hold it any longer, and returned to the little hall. 19. Here he took as many indian gems as possible, and returned to the staircase to the first small hall, where he could go down through the small window by the rope. 20. This way he returned to the king, and told what he had experienced. 21. Also he showed the indian gems, by which you would burst out weeping as soon as you touched them. 22. 'Now, let us not do that then, right,' said the king. 23. The king gave command to hide the gems away very well. 24. But on a day there was a robber in the castle, and found the gems there. 25. When he wanted to take them up he burst out weeping all of a sudden. 26. Weeping and full of regret he appeared to the king, and now the king knew how important those gems were. 27. They were good guards. 28. The robber got sentenced and had to climb the towerstairs, entirely to the top. 29. But of course the man could not come far. 30. First he became deaf of the sound. 31. Later he became blind of the light, and when he came higher it was so hot there that he started to burn. 32. Nobody saw him ever again. 33. The king had hoped that the robber would return with several mysteries, and for this reason the discouragement was large when that did not happen. 34. Now the king knew that they needed a man of stone to ascend in the hot staircase. 35.

Many years went by, but eventually the king found such a man. 36. The man of stone could also deal with the hard sound and bright light, and rapidly he came in a third hall, where he found indian flowers. 37. But the flowers immediately said : 'Do not touch us, because then you can no longer speak.' 38. The man immediately stepped back for this reason and walked to the next staircase upstairs. 39. But there it became always colder and colder each step, and at a certain moment the man got so cold that he ran downstairs while screaming. 40. Rapidly he arrived at the king, and told about the cold stairs. 41. He also told concerning the flowers. 42. But the king was very angry that the man of stone had not taken the flowers for him. 43. The king didn't care that the man of stone would not be able to talk anymore if he would take them with him. 44. Therefore the man had to go back. 45. The man of stone took as many flowers as possible, but could no longer speak since then. 46. The king commanded that the flowers had to be planted in his castle, at the end of the large hall. 47. The king commanded that a small river had to be built around it, and a small fence, so that nobody would touch the flowers. 48. The king was still terribly dissatisfied, because he wanted to know what was beyond the cold staircase. 49. And for that the king needed a stoveman. 50. After searching for many years the king found such a man who entirely had been made of small stoves. 51. He would deal with ease with that cold staircase. 52. And he would also easily deal with climbing the first few staircases, because he was invincible against everything. 53. But the cold stairs weren't so easy. 54. After awhile the man started to see that the stoves stopped their work, and eventually the man returned. 55. The king was furious. 56. The stoveman was his only hope. 57. The stoveman got sentenced to be thrown into the field of the indian flowers. 58. When he arrived at the flowers he could no longer speak. 59. The flowers had a lot much compassion with him, and on a day one of flowers said to him: 'Hear once. 60. I will bring forth a drop of wonder honey, and if you swallow that drop, then you will deal with ease concerning the cold staircase.' 61. And this way it happened. 62. The flower brought forth the honey drop, the stoveman swallowed it in, and the flowers brought him across the river and across the fence. 63. The stoveman returned to the tower, and went through the cold staircase with ease. 64. There above he found such a precious realm that he didn't want to return. 65. And why would he give that away to such a malicious and false king? 66. Since then the tower started to radiate more and more, and the indian flowers started to grow towards the tower. 67. They became wilder each day and started to bring forth sharp thorns, so that nobody could climb the tower anymore. 68. They grew this way high that they arrived entirely in the realm of the stoveman. 69. The stoveman was naturally very glad with that, but still he could not speak. 70. Each year the indian flowers brought forth precious blossom, and on a day one of the flowers said : 'Stoveman, as soon as the blossom brings forth a drop of wonder honey: swallow it. 71. Then you will speak again.' 72. The stoveman waited until the drop would come, and when he swallowed it he could not only speak, but also an indian princess stood before him. 73. She had been wrapped in blossom and the most marvellous flowers. 74. 'I am the flower princess,' she said. 75. And she led him to a staircase entirely made of flowers, and the staircase was very fragrant. 76. Entirely on top of the staircase there were small flames by which the stoves would work again. 77. And before the stoveman knew it he stood on top of that high tower and had a survey concerning the whole land. 78. 'Hello,' said the tower, 'never before someone has stood on my top, and it is such a delicious feeling. 79. For this reason I give you little wings now, so that you can come here always.' 80. And this way the stoveman flew away with his little indian princess, because now he had come this way high, he wanted to go only higher. 81. And flowers grew very fast with them, and followed them everywhere. 82. And each year the blossom brought forth new little indian princesses. 83. The stoveman never returned to the tower anymore, and since then the sound of the tower only became harder. 84. One says that that is because it calls the stoveman.

The Magic-rope

1. Once there lived many red indian fairies in a castle to guard there the most wonderful enchanting treasures of the land. 2. They wanted to share these enchanting treasures very much with the people, but they were afraid it would fall into the wrong hands. 3. Therefore they had decided together that those who would come to the castle would first have to overcome a wizard-rope, then a wizard-sword and as third a meat-eating metallic wizard-pig.

4. The wizard-rope was so terrible that it pulled many knights into the depth, and those who got taken away into the depths of the castle by the wizard-rope would never be seen back. 5. The wizard-rope was terribly strong and long, and actually no one could come against it. 6. This went on for centuries, until actually no one dared to enter the castle anymore.

7. But on one day there was a farmerson who wanted to make an attempt. 8. Working on the land he didn't like, and he couldn't learn. 9. When he saw the wizard-rope he asked : 'Say wizard-rope, can you tell me how I can be smarter than you ?' 10. The wizard-rope made himself extra tall and said : 'Who touches me, will burn himself, for I am fire-hot. 11. But those who wear the little glove of icecold will escape from me.'

12. 'And where can I find that little glove of icecold ?' asked the farmerson. 13. The wizard-rope pointed very high upwards where a small shelf hung with the glove on it. 14. The farmerson didn't know how to come there. 15. 'Say, how can I come there ?' asked the farmerson.

16. 'You can not come there,' said the wizardrope. 17. 'Just like all the others, you will be pulled into the depth by me.'

18. 'Oh, but I don't believe that you are so strong,' said the farmerson. 19. 'If you are so strong, prove it to me. 20. Take that big stone next to me up and throw it very high in the air. 21. 'Then I will believe you.' 22. the wizard-rope took the big stone and threw it high upwards, so high that the stone came on the shelf. 23. The shelf broke and the glove of icecold fell down. 24. Quickly the farmerson took the glove up, put it on his hand and grasped the wizard-rope. 25. Immediately the rope became weak, and the farmerson could take the rope easily with him. 26. But deeper in the castle he encountered the wizard-sword. 27. The wizard-sword was so fast that the farmerson would not be able to do anything, neither with the wizard-rope. 28. For as soon as the farmerboy wanted to grasp the handle the wizard-sword flew away, and the wizard-sword continuously cut the wizard-rope apart. 29. And all those parts started to grow again and made it very difficult for the farmerboy.

30. 'How can I grasp the handle ?' asked the farmerboy to the wizard-sword.

31. 'By the little glove of slow,' said the wizard-sword.

32. 'And where is that little glove of slow ?' the boy asked.

33. Then the wizard-sword pointed upwards, where a little shelf hung with the glove of slow on it. 34. 'But you can never come there,' said the wizard-sword. 35. 'You better give up your courage.'

36. The boy had heard that the wizard-sword cut off the heads of men who came here, and that no one ever could come along the wizard-sword. 37. 'Say, I do not believe that you are so strong,' said the farmerson. 38. 'Can you lift up that big stone next to me and to throw it upwards very high ?'

39. 'I'm not a fool,' said the wizard-sword, 'I do not want to hit the shelf.'

40. 'Now, can you cut that big stone into pieces ? 41. Then I will believe that you are so strong,' said the boy. 42. Full of pride the wizard-sword flew to the gigantic stone and cut it in many pieces with ease. 43. Quickly the boy grasped a piece of stone and threw it towards the shelf where the glove of slow was. 44. The stone hit the glove of slow, which fell down immediately. The farmerboy caught it up, put it on his other hand and grasped the handle of the wizard-sword. 46. Quickly he cut himself a way through all the rope.

47. Deeper in the castle he encountered the meat-eating metallic wizard-pig after a while. 48. The pig attacked him immediately, and immediately the farmerson got bit terribly, and he couldn't do much with the wizard-sword and the wizard-rope. 49. The pig was much too wild and too hard. 50. 'Little men like you I devour in seconds,' said the meat-eating metallic wizard-pig.

51. 'How can I escape from you ?' asked the farmerson.

52. 'Only through the little kettle of softness,' said the meat-eating metallic wizard-pig.

53. 'And where can I find that kettle ?' asked the farmerson.

54. It was silent for a while. 55. After that the pig pointed at the depth in a draw well close to them. 56. The boy saw something shining, but even the wizard-rope couldn't reach it, so deep the kettle was.

57. 'I eat everything either loose or stuck,' said the pig.

58. 'Oh yes ?' asked the boy. 59. 'Now, eat this big stone next to me.'

60. And in a few second the pig devoured the gigantic stone which lay next to the boy. 61. The pig was suddenly much bigger and heavier, and began to get thirst. 62. Quickly the pig went to the draw well and bowed completely over the edge to drink from the water. 63. Quickly the farmerson pushed him, while the pig crashed into the well. 64. The pig sank very fast because he was so heavy, and after a while he came into the kettle of softness where he disappeared. 65. The kettle floated up very slowly. 66. The farmerboy took the kettle on his back, and after a not so long time he came at the treasure room of the castle. 67. Here stood a red indian fairy waiting for him. 68. 'Brave man,' said the fairy. 69. 'You may choose what you want. 70. But the boy looked around a bit, and nothing, really nothing, was better than that what he already had gained : the glove of icecold with the wizard-rope, the glove of slow with the wizard-sword, and the kettle of softness. 71. 'That what I have is enough,' said the boy. 72. End he returned to where he came from.

The Pigwall

1. There was a very special bush with enchanting berries. 2. Everyone who ate from these berries could suddenly fly. 3. But you also got very sleepy and tired of it. 4. On a day a witch passed along the bush and she cut the bush by a golden axe. 5. She muttered some spells, and very soon all those who had eaten from the enchanting berries floated towards her as in trance. 6. The witch started to laugh very intense. 7. After awhile the beings started to feel so weak and so heavy that they could not fly anymore. 8. Again she spoke some spells, and a wall formed itself around the sleeping beings, a wall totally made of pigs. 9. 'Anyone who dares to come close to the pigwall will also change into a pig,' said the witch. 10. And since then the pigwall only started to grow and grow.

11. Where the bush of the enchanting berries was the witch let a high castle being built for herself. 12. But because she was so afraid of intruders she let a wall be made totally of sheep. 13. Anyone who would come close to that wall would sleep forever. 14. Since then there were a lot of sleepers around the sheepwall.

15. Of course the witch had to hide something : the golden magic-axe, her magic spear and a magic shield. 16. On a day a man heard the story about the pigwall and the sheepwall. 17. He knew that this was going on deep in the forest, but even though he searched everywhere he could not find a pigwall or sheepwall anywhere. 18. After long walking he came to a little house where red indian fairies lived. 19. The fairies also knew the story, and told him that he only could help the heavy beings behind the pigwall if he first would pick up the magic shield of the witch. 20. But to come safely across the sheepwall he first had to wear a magic armor, so that he would not fall asleep.

21. The red indian fairies also said that if he wanted to get the magic armor from them, he had to stay with them for three days. 22. The man didn't bother about that, for the fairies were very nice. 23. And who wouldn't want to stay with fairies for three days ? 24. The fairies gave him the most delightful and delicious food, and after three days the magic armor had grown on him. 25. With strong steps the man went further in his search for the sheepwall, with help from the fairies. 26. After a while he found it, and it was a small thing to get through the wall. 27. The skins were very soft, and the man fortunately didn't fall asleep. 28. After a long time he came to the castle of the witch. 29. The castle was covered with bats, and when the man watched through a small window he saw the witch standing there with a spotted raven.

30. The raven roared to the witch that he smelled human flesh. 31. 'Now go after it then !' shrieked the witch. 32. The man ran away, but the fairies brought him to the backside of the castle where he could enter through a kitchen-door. 33. Quickly he ran on the stairway, but suddenly the cook stood before him : 'Three days I haven't eaten,' said the cook, 'so you come in the right moment.' 34. But the fairies shouted : 'Push him away !' 35. The man ran further on the stairway. 36. There were a lot of stairways, but also the raven was after him. 37. 'Hundred long years I haven't eaten anything,' roared the raven, 'so you come in the right moment.' 38. But quickly the fairies threw magic powder over the raven, who immediately turned into a piece of meat, while the cook who ran after him took the piece and ate it immediately. 39. But then suddenly the witch herself stood before the man, and shouted : 'Thousands of years I haven't eaten anything, so you come in the right moment.' 40. Also the cook had come closer, and at the same moment the cook and the witch dived at the man. 41. But the red indian fairies grasped the man tightly and pulled him in the air, while the cook and the witch fell in each others arms. 42. Quickly the red indian fairies flew with the man to a room where they found the magic shield.

43. 'Oh oh,' spoke the magic shield, 'I have never eaten anything, while I am already millions of years old. 44. Take me with you, and give me something to eat.' 45. The man took the magic shield and ran quickly out of the castle. 46. After a while he was over the sheepwall. 47. The fairies told him that with the magic shield he wouldn't turn into a pig when he would come to the pigwall. 48. When they came to the pigwall the magic shield immediately began to eat from the pig-meat, which grew back afterwards, and by this they could come through the dense pighedge. 49. When they had come through the pigwall after a long, long time, they saw the heavy beings who were once bewitched by the witch, and who had once eaten from the enchanting berries. 50. 'Oh,' said the magic shield, 'never in my whole life I have given someone something to drink. 51. Let me give them something to drink.' And suddenly milk began to stream forth from the magic shield, and the heavy beings started to drink. 53. But there also came the cook and the witch through the pigwall. 54. They had the golden axe with them and the magic spear, and they looked very dangerous. 55. 'Oh,' said the magic shield, 'never in my life I have beaten someone well. Let me beat them.' 57. The man picked up the magic shield and threw it at the raging cook and the witch. 58. And the magic shield started to strike them so hard that they dropped the magic-axe and the magic shield in fear. 59. Where the magic-axe and the magic spear touched the ground they changed into beautiful bushes full of enchanting berries. 60. Also the cook and the witch changed in enchanting berry-bushes. 61. The heavy beings walked slowly and still a bit sleepy to the enchanting berries and while they began to eat the berries they felt themselves becoming lighter, and after a while they could fly again. 62. They all flew over the pigwall and the sheepwall and they all went to live in the castle of the witch, where they lived long and happy.

The Enchanted Bottle

1. Once there was a girl with a girl with a little odor-bottle which never ran empty. 2. As soon as she let a drop glide out of her bottle she disappeared. 3. But on a day the bottle was stolen, and the girl was very much in grief. 4. Another girl also had such an odor-bottle, but whenever she let a drop glide, everywhere wild animals appeared around her. 5. On a day the girl stole the bottle of the other girl, but later she regretted it very much, and she brought the little bottle back. 6. 'As long as you are with me, you can just use drops from my bottle,' said the girl of the little bottle. 7. Together they also went in search for the stolen bottle. 8. On their search they encountered a lot of girls with bottles which never ran empty, and every girl could do something else with it. 9. There was also a girl who had a bottle of which every drop would let weapons appear around her. 10. When the girls heard about the stolen bottle they got an idea. They would all give a drop of their bottle to the girl without bottle. 12. The girl could then do a lot of wonder things. 13. On a day the girl saw a bird flying with the stolen bottle. 14. It was for the girl who had a new enchanted bottle now very easy to follow the bird. 15. By letting a drop glide she could fly after the bird, and she came into a castle somewhere far away. 16. Here she saw a little man stirring a kettle. The little bottle was put next to him already by the bird. 17. 'Say, little man,' said the girl, 'that little bottle is mine. 18. Your bird has stolen it from me.'

19. But the little man said that all the odor-bottles were his, for he had made them once. 20. The little man asked the girl from who she got the odor-bottle. 21. 'From my mother,' said the girl.

22. 'Then she has stolen it once from me,' said the little man. 23. 'En also all the other odor-bottles have been stolen, and I want them back.'

24. The girl showed her new odor-bottle with the drops from all the odor-bottles, and said that if she would give him that bottle, then he would have all the odors back. 25. In exchange for that she asked him for her own little bottle. 27. She would give one drop of it to the little man, so that the little man would have everything complete. 27. The little man was very glad with that, for he didn't have to go to search for all the other bottles, and the girls would not be unhappy either. 28. The little girl got her own little bottle back, and also a drop from the bottle with the mixture. 29. The little man was so glad that he even gave a drop from the kettle with a totally new mixture. 30. The girl could disappear again, and lived long and happy with her little enchanted bottle.

The Enchanted Egg

1. Once in a far land there was a flood which threatened to drown everything. 2. The only safe place would be a red indian castle of elves. 3. A man knocked at the door to be able to enter, but the red indian elves said that if he wanted to have a place, then he would have to go to the castle of the witch to take an enchanted egg from there. 4. The enchanted egg was once stolen from the red indian elves by the witch, and they wanted it back very much. 5. From the enchanted egg the most wonderful animals would come forth.

6. It was very dangerous in the castle of the witch as the floors and the ceilings moved and could crash down, and the walls banged against each other dangerously. 7. No one ever survived a visit to that castle, that was why the red indian elves gave the man enchanted shoes and an enchanted helmet. 8. Like this it wasn't difficult for the man to get the enchanted egg. 9. As soon as the floor sunk away the enchanted shoes let the man float in the air, and when the ceiling came down, then the enchanted helmet made sure that the man would not be hit. 10. But he had to be very cautious with the banging walls. 11. After a not too long time he had the enchanted egg in his hands and ran back, but the water had already risen dreadfully high. 12. So high that the red indian elves didn't dare to open any window or door anymore. 13. The man rubbed the enchanted egg, and big fishes began to come forth from it. 14. For a little while he could sit on their back, but then the waves became so wild that he was thrown off the fishes all the time. 15. Again he rubbed the enchanted egg, and big birds came forth from it. 15. Quickly he climbed on the back of such a bird, but it was already storming so hard that he couldn't hold the enchanted egg anymore. 16. By a blast of wind the enchanted egg was thrown into the sea. 17. The man didn't think a moment and dived after the enchanted egg. 18. On the bottom of the sea he found the enchanted egg again. Again he rubbed it, and moles came forth from it who began to dig a hole. 20. The man with the enchanted egg followed the moles, and behind them the hole was locked very well again. 21. The moles dug all the way to under the castle of elves, and they could enter in a safe way.

22. 'Brave man,' said one of the red indian elves who saw them climbing upwards. 23. The man gave her the enchanted egg and since then he lived with the red indian elves.

The Revelation of the Red Stone IV

The Teakettleman

1. Once there was a man totally made of teakettles. 2. As soon as the kettles began to whistle the man could always fly. 3. Then he always flew high and far away. 4. But an a day he encountered a wasp, who tried to sting him, but the sting broke while it crashed at one of the kettles. 5. Then a raging hornet came after him, who aggressively spouted his poison towards him, but the poison was pushed away by the kettles. 6. Then a bird came, who gave the man such a slap by it's enormous wing, and the teakettleman lost his balance and fell.

7. After a long fall the teakettle-man came into a wasp-nest. 8. The wasps were mad and tried to fly into him throught the little holes. 9. But the kettles began to boil so much that they could not come far. 10. The teakettleman ran away, but ended in a hornet-nest. 11. They as well started to fly inside through the small holes, and they could stand the boiling heat. 12. Up in his nose there was a glowing cap by which everything could always boil. 13. That glowing cap they pushed it away from the inside, and then the teakettleman suddenly had a hole in his nose.

14. The hornets searched through the whole body of the teakettleman, in all kettles, if they could find something of use, but they didn't find anything. 15. The teakettleman had lost his nose, and he could not cook anymore, and neither fly. 16. But the hornets weren't the worst. 17. They said : 'You know what. 18. From now on we just stay to live in your kettles, then you will always be able to fly. 19. Your kettles are good nests for us. 20. And like this you don't have to wait for the whistle. 21. You can now just fly whenever you want.' 22. And the teakettleman found it a good idea. 23. The hornets could fly so good, and now they were always with him.

24. The teakettleman began to make trips through the air, but soon he encountered the bothering bird, and before he knew he lay on the ground again. 25. This time he was with the red indians. 26. The red indians stang him by their spears, but they couldn't come through his kettles, and soon enough they had the raging hornets after them.

27. The red indians were impressed by the poison of the hornets, and thought that they could use it for their weapons. 28. They made friends with the teakettleman and the hornets. 29. The hornets would from now on sit on their weapons and supply them with poison. 30. The hornets liked it very much, but later on the teakettleman hardly had hornets in his kettle, and couldn't fly anymore. 31. The hornets liked it too much with the indians.

32. The teakettleman went into conversation with a red indian girl who had a sleepmat made of bees. 33. With this she could fly, and that made it interesting for the teakettleman. 34. Soon the two made long trips on the bee-mat, but on a day they encountered the bothering bird who pecked them off of the bee-mat. 35. The girl fell into the river, but the teakettleman fell on a hard rock close to her. 36. All kettles had been broken off each other, and the girl had to search to bring all pieces together. 37. The mother of the girl made a huge tea cosy for the teakettle man which would keep all the kettles together. 38. She made the tea cosy from ants, and when the tea cosy was shoved over the kettles the kettles got so hot that they began to boil like never before. 39. The teakettleman could now fly again like the best. 40. When he saw the bothering bird again and it's wing touched the kettles the bird shrieked and got burnt immediately, while the girl below caught up the ashes. 41. With the ashes she went to a dry field, where she started to sow the ashes. 42. Not long after flowers grew there which looked like little teakettles. 43. The girl plucked them and made a vest of them for herself. 44. She could also fly.

45. Together they made long trips, until on a day they found a little house high in the air which was made of teakettles. 46. When they stepped into the little house they realized that when the kettles boiled, the little house ascended. 47. After a little while they came into a huge hall. 48. There a witch sat who was totally made of little furnaces. 49. The witch burst out in laughter. 50. 'So,' she shrieked, 'I see that my trap worked good.' 51. She pulled the teakettleman and the girl quickly out of the little house, and wanted to push the teakettleman in an oven. 52. In the oven the teakettles of the man were remelted into little furnaces. 53. 'So,' laughed the witch to the girl. 54. 'Now you will have to work the rest of your life behind the little furnaces.' 55. When the man came out of the oven he could hardly move himself. 56. The man had become so heavy that he couldn't fly anymore. 57. But on a day the lost little bee-mat appeared all of a sudden. 58. The little bee-mat moved over the floor, just before the feet of the witch. 59. Every time when the witch stepped around the bee-mat caught the foot and moved it a little bit. 60. After awhile the witch became so dizzy that she crashed down. 61. The little bee-mat flew to the man, wrapped itself around him like a robe so that he could fly again. 62. Together with the girl he flew away out of the witchcastle. 63. They came among the other red indians. 64. They could use the parts of the man very well for their weapons. 65. The field of teakettle-flowers had grown so full that the man could become a teakettleman.

Widowspider

1. Cords of poverty spun, dreams of the primeval woven, from Brannan salvation has come. To Lapsalvania she came, to Laprakod, the first feather. Widowspider, you did it, you pulled them all to the spindle, all those flown away years, they are the kingly costumes. Widowspider, I know your deeds, to under the grey you went, to encounter black and white, you have woven there for the queen. In Santra, in Santra, the days are long, and the children follow the spider. 2. Faithful as they are, foot for foot, all in line, to costly crowns, widowspider you did it. In Brannen it hurt, until she came to Laprakod. Esmeralda, third fairy, the fairyqueen, oh widowspider, know that I cherish her, I am the fairyprince.

3. Fairyking, make a living in her, a rabbithouse she is, she makes them all up for faithfulness, lady Holle waits in the frame of the eveningwindow, till the morning cherishes her face.

White Rose

1. In a deathbattle I was, everything which was sharp and hard crashed me, until tenderness found me, I had become red in love, after the strike of hate. White rose, tenderness after the sting, softness after death, in bitterness where I lost my life, from poverty to poverty I went, with clothes as a waspvest, in Brannan I found salvation. White rose, like a wasp-fire, stinging so deep where the soft streams, under the soft I am now, where a baby lives, a pink feather, hidden and gained in tenderness, everything hurts. 2. Who says the soft is without pain, doesn't know what we are working at. In the deep misfortune the soft is king, made a living in Brannan. White rose, tenderness after the sting, softness after the death, in bitterness where I lost my life, from poverty to poverty I went, to find deeper sorrow, oh softness hurts so much, and I only want more, I only want to quiver in this house of the white rose, where things happen which I could not make up. 3. Is this then the exit out of an over-inherited mind, is this the exit out of the hard feeling, a feather touched me, for the first time I feel my hands. White rose-spindle, why did I go through this, from primeval to primeval I come to the black and white floor, to the chessboard under the times, to profess that what you did to me. 4. White rose, tenderness after the sting, wounds stung many times, it mirrors in the wind, all those faces i had forgotten.

The Second Law

1. Let the cobra stand in the field, looking at the days of the old. He will not leave the old footsteps.

2. He is the second Christ with a second law.

3. Let then the second word ascend in you.

4. And the first commandment is to suffer with your father. The gift of the suffering is your unity with Him and the brothers.

5. And the second commandment is to battle at His side. The gift of battle is the unity with Him and the brothers.

6. And the third commandment is to die with Him, the fourth is to be happy with him, and the fifth is you will not steal. The sixth is you will hang on to the Spirit of God. The seventh is to learn and teach and the eighth is to make yourself holy and pure in ice. The ninth is to honor the old, and the tenth is to listen to the young. And you will fulfill the law by loving each other.

7. These are then the words of the cobra in the second temple.

8. Listen to his words, second church, to be filled by the second Spirit and to receive a second spirit in your innermost life.

9. The forces of the second cross are the forces coming from hunger, for the Lord has suffered in poor countries.

10. These are the words of the second Paul. Now the days of the second Christ have come.

11. Lay down your old authorities and become as a child.

12. Go through the deep hole to get to know the Christ in your hearts, the second Christ, for the first has passed away.

13. He forgives sin after contrition, repentance and good works. Yes, His forgiveness is as the reward of heaven.
14. And you will bow for Gods economy. These are the words of the second Paul, anfitate in the Name of the Lords, and fugitive of the Word, for I have no place to lay my head to rest.
15. Those who search for the cobra do not have rest, but they will have peace with the lord.
16. You will bow for Gods economy. He then has grasped me by the anointing of the second Samson. The sons of Lucifer have been thrown into paralysis.
17. Oh, come then to the gardens of Golgotha, Calvary, where the second blood blooms like burning wine. You are the veins of the Lords.
18. You who pours out from your blood, will be one with His Blood.
19. And you will be equipped to defeat the sons of Belial.
20. Yes, you will learn battle-arts, and the you will hang on to the Lord. Learn then to hear His second Spirit, and the second Metensia, for you have been made to stream.
21. Yes, you all will be a pilgrim of His Word, a fugitive in His Grace.
22. You then who has granted grace to our suffering Lord, drink of His mercy, as the precious reward of the dew and the morningred.
23. And he will send the angels of the second to the beard of Abraham which drips of honey. And you will find a shelter in the last of the days.
24. You will find the second Metensia as a cobra on her path. And you will know that this is the Lord.
25. Break yourself free then from your chains, and do this in the Name of the second Christ.

The New Covenant

1. Paul, servant of the Most High, the second Paul, anfitate of a new covenant.
2. The old is not far away from the removal, but the cobra will tred these paths, and won't let go the generations of the Word.
3. He will help the older ones, and will be called a shelter for orphan and fugitive. Yes, widows will hang on to him, and He will listen to the young.

4. He who is complete and who has fulfilled the law, but not to destroy the law, but to make her ripe.
5. Now then you can drink from the law to eternal life. Yes, there is a second salvation, so that your second spirit will be saved.
6. They who do not have a second spirit do not have any salvation.
7. Come therefore to a new covenant, for you have come closer to the times of the fifth Utmir.
8. You who have planted yourself on the tree of Christ, His second is now as a creation coming to size.
9. God has in His mystery created a new son, at Eminiis, an eternal son, the second Christ.
10. See then that you will not refuse Him who speaks, for He will bring the fallen ones to the second fire and the second hell, where Beuse burns with her angels.
11. Let then no one think that this hell is forever. This hell leads to the second Gehenna, where total destruction rules. The Lord will give wages for works, and these wages only rage until the measure and the times are full.
12. Let therefore no one have fear to suffer forever, but fear the Lord who hits harder in one Utmir than eternal suffering.
13. The Double Lord is a burning and devouring fire who has sent His second gospel, and this gospel is eternal.
14. These are the words of the second Paul, anfitate before the face of the Lords.
15. Now then, set the prisoners free, and those who suffer by false words. False apostles they are, who deceived the sheep.
16. But it has pleased the Double Lord to tell you of His Love, and then the false love is not far from removal.
17. The cobra will eat her, she who brought ruin on eternal mountains.
18. The Lord will remove false priests out of your midst. Hear then not when they call on the streets and preach false words on the squares.
19. Don't listen then to those who sing joyfull songs while you are shivering from fear.
20. They didn't care for orphans and widows, and therefore the Lord will hit them.
21. And some of them will find a small help from demonic servants, and they will find a cloak from the second satan.

22. See then that you will not despise him who speaks. For he has the powers to deliver you to the second satan.

23. Horrible it is to fall in the hands of the sons of Lucifer, for they are like mad dogs and wolves.

Opening of the Second

1. And the Lord will open your second spirit, to pour out His Second Spirit. Then there will be no betrayal anymore in His Holy temple.

2. And the cobra will unite young and old, and He will come to test the word.

3. Yes, holy testers he will establish around the altar, and they will bind the laws of the Lords around the head of the prophet.

4. And the second Elijah will rise up to do great things, and to prepare the way for the Second Christ.

5. Make then the gates free. These are the days that the Lord has given you a second spirit, deeper in your innermost being. There will be no disturbance on His Holy mountain, nor intrusion.

6. And you will know rest as the child of peace. Yes, for the Lord will create a new heaven and a new earth, when the angels of the second stand with their trumpets.

7. They will serve the Lord, but the Lord will not have pleasure in those who praise without doing his works.

8. Woe to such praisers, saith the Lord, I will remove them from my holy mountain and send them into the caverns of the second tartarus. They have been delivered to the sons of the Behemoth.

9. And the Son of the Word will hit them by the sledge-hammer.

10. But the Lord will send the second Word to those who wait for him, like a double-edged sword coming from his mouth and his stomach.

11. Yes, the lord will open the ear of your innermost being, and you will hear the Lord.

12. In these days many mockers have come, disobedient to their parents, and see, the Lord will hit them.

13. The Lord will not tolerate ridicule at his holy temples. Yes, the Lord will open the second temple, and he will show his second ark. In bliss are those who do not know ridicule, for they are equipped with the powers of the coming days.

14. The lord gives rest as reward, and will show His cobra, coming from the lost holy.
15. And in the days that the cobra speaks there will be silence on his holy mountain.
- 4.

Warnings

1. And me, the second Paul, has been hit by his Spirit, bound in my second spirit, to a holy mission. Yes, the Lord truly makes free , those who have bound themselves to the new covenant.
2. And his prophets are sensitive to times and seasons, and they know the orders of the Lords.
3. And they bear the gifts of suffering deep into their bodies, to release the anointings of the lords. Yes, they have laid the egg of the Spirit in the second ark to a most holy gift of faith.
4. Believe then in the second, and you will be rescued. His call goes out in the last days.
5. And to them who bear the gifts of judgement : See then that you will treat them most holy, for the fire can hit you as well.
6. And to the beaten ones : The Lord is with the defeated of heart, let yourself be punished, for it is the gift of unity with the Lord.
7. And to them with the creating gifts : Bear then them who suffer to the altar, to let the altar speak over them.
8. Cursed is the healing master who heals the body and lets the soul get lost.
9. And some of them I have delivered to the second satan so that they will learn not to deal in souls.
10. The desert is calling you, all who follow the Lord, and you will find an oasis in your second spirit, which God has destined from the beginning to ascend as a light in your innermost being in the last of the days.
11. And the Lord has called me to continue the work of the first Paul, and this work comes forth from it to seal it tight and well.
12. Put then on the armor of the second blood, poured out from the heavens.
13. And the Lord suffered in the hunger of Africa, but His church didn't want him.
14. That is why the Lord will erase the first church and he will preserve the second church.

15. And the Lord will take away his first christ to send his second christ with a new law.
16. And see that you do not throw away him who speaks, for the Double Lord is the ruiner of souls.
17. Put then on the armor of the second blood and hang on to the second Christ as the seed of a new Spirit.
18. Yes, the second church fights and overcomes, while the first church sinks away in deception and destruction.
19. The Lord has already sent a lying spirit to them who spare the murdering word.
20. Purify then your words, and then the Lord will see if He has mercy on you.
21. But many will be delivered to the lions of His judgement.
22. Not all martyrs die in the lord.

New Salvation

1. To them who have received the Second Spirit : Speak then much in second tongues, to preserve your souls.
2. The Lord will pour out new tongues over the bottom, and you will receive new gifts of discernment, to cast out evil spirits of the second in the name of the second Christ.
3. See then that you are grafted upon the second cross, for the hunger will lead you to abundance.
4. And make coverings by the second blood, so that the fellowship will see the angels of the second.
5. And the Lord will hit with blindness those who offered their eyes to the second satan.
6. All those who have come closer to the Lord : the Lord won't let himself being ridiculed. And the Lord hits those who he loves.
7. These are the words of the second Paul to them of the second Ephese. The Lord will make your blood holy on the altar, for you have the helmet of the second faith to do miracles and signs.
8. You are the veins of the Lord. In bliss are those who bear a yoke in their youth. Bliss to them who belong to the Lord and who have received the gift of his suffering.

9. You all know that the helmet of the second mercy has come forth from the second thorn crown.

10. The Lord loves those who suffer with him, and who bear His thoughts and feelings, those who live in deception and tribulation because of Him.

11. The Lord sees the heart. He is no Lord who would have wrath because of flesh. He has wrath about hearts.

12. The artworks of the Lords descend into your hearts, and His Blessing will protect you. Let us then look forward to meet each other in the last of the days, in the arch of the second ice, where the apostles will come to bliss.

13. Bliss to them who have come with pure and humble hearts to the fifth Utmir.

14. Bliss to them who doubt, but cursed are those who are confident in persecuting the weak.

15. When the strong is weak, then how weak will it be.

Serious Warnings

1. The Lord has given you doubt to escape from deception. Let it be counted as a gift then, and do not listen to those who ridicule. They will fall into the hands of the sons of Beelzebul.

2. Cursed are those who are confident in having authority over sheep to eat their flesh.

3. They are no herders but hirelings, working for the house of slaughter.

4. Cursed are those who eat flesh, for they will rot away in their innermost being.

5. See then that the cobra will not drag you away far from home, to show you horrible things without an escape.

6. You who still lives from the death : Cursed are you, oh human. The lord has shown you life, but you chose death, and that's why you live from the blood of your brothers.

7. You who cannot honour an animal, how can you honour the Lord, who is animal ?

8. You who hate an animal, how can you love the human, who came forth from an animal, which was the Lord ?

9. I will hit those slayers, and all their disciples. Fearfull it is to fall in the hands of the living Christ. He who is dead is not far from removal. Fearfull it is to fall into the hands of the second Christ, and to fall in the lake of the second blood.

10. Yes, you will shiver of your food, because it will come to life to eat your bowels. And the Lord will not answer your prayers, because they are an abomination to Him.

11. Cursed are those who say : Let us do evil on the holy mountains of the Lord, for to them evil will be done.

12. You who play with fire, take care that it will not devour you.

13. See then, the cobra is on it's way to you, with an eternal gospel, he who has the power to doom you in the second hell. And that hell will be worse than the first.

14. You all know that the second armor of righteousness is of the second justice, and therefore more righteous than the first.

15. You know that it has come forward from the second scornrobe. In bliss are those who have worn this cloth together with Him. Because they have brought comfort to the suffering of the Lord, and no one can rob them out of His Hand.

Opening

1. These are the words of the second Matthew in the last of the days. Take care then that you will not reject him who speaks.

2. Matthew, anfitate of the Most High, with the second gospel, revealed as eternal gospel, as a good fitting seal on the old.

3. Yes, the Lord loves the old, and therefore he won't break them off, but he will fulfill them into the new.

4. Bliss to those who know the mysteries of the second.

5. And there was a man coming on the clouds of the heaven who had the Name the second Christ. And in Him there was no sin nor stain.

6. And He was surrounded by lions who served him, and he himself was the cobra of the Lord.

7. And he came to punish the church by His Word.

8. And these are the words of the second Matthew for the last of the days. The Lord has given you the second Christ.

9. And his second angels came to Him to serve him on the earth. He died at the cross of hunger in the domains of Africa, ridiculed and rejected by the church.

10. And therefore the heritage will be for the second church, and the first won't be far from removal.

11. Yes, the Lord came to the earth as an animal, but he was slain and eaten by the church.
12. Cursed are those. Yes, amen, while the lions will watch they will burn for established times in the fire of the second hell.
13. And to His children : I will lead you out to the second heaven, and I will give you the fruits of the second. Take care that you do not stand still together with the first church to go down into destruction.
14. I have given you the second word, and fire is in your mouth and innermost being to consume the apostates.
15. But take care that you will not be consumed yourself, for the Lord doesn't tolerate sin before His face.
16. You will be held responsible before him who preserves your souls and before his holy cobra. Amen.
17. Bliss to those who have worn the second scornrobe, for they wear the armor of the second secret.
18. Bliss to them who wear the second thorncrown, for they will find the gates of heaven.
19. The Lord has put His call on their hearts, and they discern good from evil.
20. The Lord will then have no passion for them who let themselves be blinded to commit white murders.
21. They are like the harlots who wipe off their mouth and say : I have done nothing wrong.
22. Let then the second Christ judge you. He who has suffered hunger because of the Lords.
23. And I am an anfitate in chains, holy are they.
24. I have received the gift of suffering, to bring the word.

No selfrighteous explanation

1. You then who have come closer to the temple of the cobra : Have then lust to do the commandments of the Lords. They will lead to eternal life to bring eternal pleasure.
2. I have burnt my laws in your innermost being, sais the Lord. Now, live in the new temple then.

3. And the cobra will lead many to bliss, and will be close to those who doubt. Let yourself be delivered from the old covenant, for it was a covenant of death.
4. Yes, it has punished you and brought you wisdom, but it has also misled you and it let you be a part in the cross of prophets.
5. See then and make sure that you will accept the dove who speaks, standing on the back of the cobra, having the face of an eagle.
6. Let His Spirit mark you by fire to the second Metensia and the second Eminius, and you will be in bliss.
7. Search then for rest in holy words and let the old be gone.
8. The cobra will let you honour the old, but you will defeat death. The cobra will let you listen to small children, and you will receive the fear of the Lords.
9. Have then lust to do the commandments of the Lords, to speak justice in his temples. For wasn't the old justice unrighteous ? Now then, a new day has come.
10. The second shoes of peace is among them who love the Lords by deeds.
11. Cursed are those who love without deeds, for they are as hollow clouds without water, driven by the wind.
12. They will be barren like corn of the second hell. And this hell will be more terrible than the first.
13. See then that you will not reject the speaking cross, because he has also suffered for you, to show you what you had to suffer.
14. But you have distorted his words. See then that you will not further loose your way.
15. In bliss are those who doubt and test, and cursed are those who do not test, for they have been delivered to proud hearts, to the sons of satan.
16. See then to make sure that you will not fall in the same judgement as the sons of the leviathan by your boasting and false securities.
17. Do not be disciples of the second Cain and the second Jezebel who sleep in the same bed.
18. They are on the boat to the last judgement of the second. Their names will not be found in the second books of life.
19. See then carefully that you will not hang on to false prophets, for in the same judgement as them you will fall.

20. And the Lord will not keep unguilty those who have selfrighteous interpretations of the second word of the spirit.

21. From them their parts of paradise will be taken away and the treasures of the ministries.

22. The Lord will put shame on them on the holy mountains and they will not be allowed to serve before the altar anymore.

23. But the Lord is with them who shiver before His Word, and those who have the gift of doubt to test the word.

No Eternal Wrath

1. Yes, the Lord will send a slayer to drag the church to the altar.

2. And the Lord will test her fruit.

3. The Lord sees everything. They who sin have no rest, day nor night.

4. The Lord will put your hearts in a flame when you come closer to Him, and he will make holy those who are destined to the lasts of the days.

5. Fear then Him who knows your history and future. He who sees your thoughts coming from far.

6. And after the slaughter on the altar there will be no place anymore for contrition, but there will be a terrible survey upon the second fire of the Lord which will devour the opposers.

7. The Lord doesn't have wrath for eternity, but those who have blasphemed the second word will get their wages, and they will recognize the fruit of their fallen nature in their innermost being.

8. The monsters of their parties will devour them inside and will be their masters.

9. Yes, know then that the beasts who mislead you will change into wrath and second hell when they have you in their huts.

10. Then the sweet deception turns into a bitter grave. 11. And the sons of Lucifer will send plagues of fear, for you have left the lord.

12. Yes, fear you will have when you are in the darkness without the Lord.

13. Then the Lord will not be manipulated, but you will have to sit with the wages of sin until it is paid. The Lord has many prisoners.

14. And you will see that the Lord is truly justice. The Lord will grant sleep to everyone at the end of days, and those who have paid in full by their punishments will find rest in an eternal grave.
15. The Lord does not tolerate papal lies, and the Lord does not tolerate those of the canon, for they have built cages of eternal fear.
16. Give then space and freedom of the Lords to the nation of God, and lead them out to the second Word in their most holy travel.
17. For you are all pilgrims, and you will live in the second house of the lords.
18. The Spirit which the Lord gives then is the Spirit of Freedom, and the Lord will remove all their tears.
19. When you get older in the Lord then, the Lord will pay you free from all deception and his word will be released in you.
20. Then the seals of your heart will break and you will flee to your second spirit.
- 10.

The Spirit of Freedom

1. But there are many folk who will distort the second word like they did with the first word, and they will oppress the second church.
2. Yes, they will put themselves in your midst to mislead hearts, but hold on tight to your spirit which gets older, and to the Spirit who speaks in you of the pure second.
3. Let then the gospel not be stolen away from you which has been written to the bliss of your souls.
4. Yes, the trumpet of the lords pronounces new times, and they will bow for the lord.
5. The Lord will bring many to sleep, and to drunkenness.
6. Let it be no drunkenness without justice. For the lord has sealed you by His laws.
7. The Lord will guard the gates of your soul, and the second will get solid ground. The Lord leads His children out, also out of the oppressions of the fellowships.
8. Be then a member of the second body of Christ and hang on to the second Spirits.
9. They will lighten your head, and will lead your hearts to the second spirit, where wells of heaven wait to get opened.
10. Be then conscious that the words of the lords are powerful to separate good from evil and to bring the stubborn to the light.
11. For the word of the lords is like a lamp shining in dark places.

12. Yes, also the pits will take of the second word of the lords, and they will bow.
13. Then all the second pits will stand before the lord, and the lord will judge them after their deeds.
14. And the dragons of the second will be responsible for their deeds and powers of economy.
15. They will have to open their pacts with the merchants of the earth before the face of the Lords.
16. And the second fire will visit the second ice with devourings. And you will know the second Eminus.
17. For full of the second angels and the second Spirits of the Lords are the heavens.
18. And when the second thrones will rise in the destined hour then the first throne is not far away from removal.
19. These are the words of the second Matthew. In bliss is him who preaches the second gospel, and who sets the prisoners of the old free by it. For the Spirit of the Lords is freedom.

The Fifth Utmir

1. And I, the second Matthew have been given the keys of the fifth Utmir, to lead the second fellowship in. And their shoes will not be burnt, and they will go along cool waters.
2. But fire from the mouth of the Lord will fall on all of them who stay behind and who keep hanging on to the canon.
3. And there will only be breath in the second fellowship in the fifth of the Utmirs.
4. And I will stir up my prophets to prophesy until the doors have closed behind us.
5. Cursed are those whose spirits will stay behind on the previous earth. These are the holy words of the second Matthew, anfitate before the face of God.
6. Let then the second Christ buy you free from this evil generation, when you have bought him free by everything you had.
7. In bliss are those who have paid attention to the light of the poor, for they will see the Lord.
8. In bliss are those who know the second cross in their spirit, for they will find a shelter in the new spirit. And this spirit is eternal and will grow into all eternities as a tree of life.

9. Bliss and mystical are the treasures which the Lord has hidden and stored for those who follow Him and keep His footsteps.

10. In bliss are they who mourn when the Lord mourns. They will have the lights of the second cross as lamps in the second darkness. And this darkness is darker than the first.

11. And they will not suffer damage from the fourth death, for they are known by the Lord and his second angels in myriads and myriads.

12. And they bear the clocks of the Lords in their mouths and stomachs, whole their heads are bound with sweet ropes which lead them to the stretched out fields of freedom of the Spirit.

13. The Lord watches over their souls and they know his commandments.

14. They speak justice under high trees, and know the hymns of the birds.

15. They are as tender as they are hard, and as hard as they are tender. In their love they do not spare evil.

16. They have learned to know the spirit of acceptance in the rejecting of evil, and they are led from insight to insight.

17. They can discern the hearts of the Lords and of the small children, and they use his word in and to the freedom of the Spirit.

18. Their swords are soft in hardness and hard in softness.

1. And the Lord spoke then about the Word as about seed on a field, which had to be left alone so that the rain, the sun and the cold could make it stronger.

2. And the lord spoke that the Word would grow like a cobra to strike hearts by dread.

3. And this dread would be a second dread, bigger than the first.

4. And the Lord gave his disciples the mission to preach the Word, for He had touched their second spirit.

5. And they were in an upperroom together and the Lord gave them tongues of fire.

6. But their lips became cold like ice.

7. So was then the gospel like cold and ice. And the Lord made his wrd strong.

8. And to the disciples the sick were brought, but they didn't get healed, for it wasn't the time of the Lords. And the sick were brought to a lonely place where they heard the word of the Lords.

9. And after awhile there was a wind coming forth from the disciple who spoke and the sick were filled by the Spirit and stood up on their legs.

10. And the Lord added at that day hundred and twenty souls as those who got rescued.

11. And the disciples spoke : There is no rescue in a voice or a name, neither in a power. There is only rescue in a heart which looks for the Lord.

12. And the faces of the disciples were as those of the angels.

13. And there stood up a man named the second Peter, and he did great miracles before the face of the Lords, and lions of heaven appeared near him in white.

14. And a huge fear filled the crowd, for he let ice descend from the heaven, and the lions of heaven tore many. And he had the body as of a cobra.

1. And one brought many sick to the second peter, and he took them to lonely places, and taught that a child of God had to suffer much to enter in.

2. And his words had power and they brought many to light.

3. And in the days after the Lord added thousands to the group, and they learned about the suffering and the judgement.

4. And the second Peter called : 'Focus then on the second cross, where you learn to hunger before the Lord.' And oil and honey flew from his hands, and he brought foreign forces to them who stood around him, and they began to move in another manner.

5. And some of them got into drunkenness and some who passed along ridiculed them. But the second Peter became full of wrath and a cobra of heaven came to devour them.

6. And the second Peter called : Be careful that you will not reject the drunkenness of the Lords. And wine came from the heavens to anoint the disciples. And the group became bigger every day.

7. But the authorities were against them and made a plan, and Peter had to appear before a high council.

8. But the animals of heaven were with the second Peter and bolts of lightening came from his clothes to consume them.

9. And huge fear came over the nation, and they asked him if he wanted to be their leader. But the second Peter spoke : 'There is no leader than the heart which keeps itself hidden to search for the darkness.' And he drew back to the wood. And he wrote letters to them of the second fellowship, and the second fellowship got big and grew up.

10. And in those days the second wine was flowing, and the prophets got double vision by which they could watch through everything.

11. And transparent visions came to them, and the Lord granted great wisdom to the fellowship.

12. And the Lord opened a well of breath. And the Lord spoke : From now on healing streams from the darkness.

1. And several seals were removed from the Word and mysteries were revealed to the fellowship, and the Lord added more to them.

2. And the second fellowship became like the snakes of heaven, and great gift revealed themselves in their midst.

3. And the Lord spoke : From now on the gifts stream from the hidden.

4. And many went to the wood to live there, and they wrote mystical books. And many who had been imprisoned while they were innocent came free.

5. And the Lord gave the nation power over the oppressors of the body, and the Lord began to give the nation insight about the body of death and the body of life.

6. And the Lord spoke : 'See, I create a new body.' And the Lord sent his second angels to the earth to do great creative miracles in the body.

7. And they bore the glow of the morningred, and they began to appear at established times.

8. And the Lord created new seasons and new times, and the earth came into the fifth Utmir. And the Lord added to those who followed Him daily, and great wisdom and knowledge came to those who studied the powers of darkness.

9. The Lord gave them the arts of battle and took care that they wouldn't be ridiculed anymore.

10. And there was a place named the second Golgotha, the second Calvary, in Africa, and the Lord made this place huge.

11. And from all the corners of the earth they visited this place, but the apostles spoke : 'The mercy can not be found in a place or a person, but in a heart which keeps itself hidden.'

12. And the fellowship became a nation of individuals, and those who could not accept the powers of the ice fell away from the Lord.

13. And in those days familiar and social spirits blocked many from being rescued.

The eagles of the Word

1. And I saw a black eagle appearing in the midst of the second heaven, and a white eagle was sitting on a rock, and I saw stretched out seas in the distance.

2. And I saw the Lord appearing as a rider, bearing a trumpet. And his hair was like white flames.

3. And when He blew the trumpet a beast came forth from the seas, and the Lord spoke : Do not fear, for it is the second Matas, and He is the Beast of the Lord.

4. And the white eagle who was like the Word of the Lord rose up, to strike those who did not want to hear.

5. And I saw a huge crowd come up to follow the eagle, and they made themselves big against the black eagle. But then a tear came out of the eyes of the white eagle to consume them.

6. And the Lord spoke : Like this everyone will perish who does not accept the second Word. And the Lord was as a raiser of battle. And the Lord spoke : I have not come to bring peace, but the Sword.

7. Make yourself holy then before My Face. And like this the arrival of the second Christ would be.

The Second Peniel

8. In bliss are those who have the first and the second Word. But those who do not have the second Word, neither will they have the first.

9. And the saints wrestled with the second angels and with the Lord, and they got hit on a place called the second Peniel.

10. And they got sensitive for the second Word. And the Lord blessed them. In bliss are they who bear the wounds of the second Word.

11. In bliss are those who doubt, for they will have power to test, and the Lord will lead them to the second security.

12. And in the second pain there is hidden the hand of the Lords.

The Great Rome

13. And the second test was sweet in the eyes of the Lord, and He gave grace to them who had tested the spirits. And the Lord sent lights and rays of lightening to the earth, as signs of them who followed Him.

14. But also the second antichrist could let lights descend from the heavens. And the second dragon gave him great power, and anointed him with many gifts. And there were books opening, and them who were young had to suffer a lot.

15. And the Lord spoke : 'In bliss are those who puzzle, for they will be spared against pride.' And the second false prophet and the second whore came to the face of the Lords.

16. And they came from the second Sodom and the second Babylon. And them was given to test the nation for a certain time. And they brought great riches to those who had never felt the mud of the earth.

17. And they brought false doctrine to them who lived in the huts of the earth. But the Lord spared many of them, for they were orphans, and he led them to a rock which He called the rest of the anfitates.

18. And the Lord spoke there to them through an angel, saying : 'It is better to suffer with the disciples than to search for abundance and doctrine.

19. For by knowledge the head will boast, and the heart loses grip.' And the Lord established a second tree of knowledge in the garden where they came, and He forbade them to eat from the fruits.

20. Every day at established times there came an angel to teach them. The fruits of the second tree of knowledge were high now, and there was an eagle of the lords to guard the fruits. And the Lord gave to those who were in the garden a second heart.

21. And the Lord spoke to the children that they had to be ridiculed a lot. And in the night there came birds who wouldn't let them sleep, and in daytime there were dogs who would hunt. But it drove the children closer to each other, and the Lord saw that it was good.

22. And in the garden there were also trees of the second Sodom and the second Babylon, and the Lord cut them away for they didn't bear fruit. And then the children had to cross a sea called the Great Rome by swimming, and this sea was a shark at the same time.

23. And the children got mad at the Lord, for they were weakened, and they realised that the sea was devouring them. But a Wind of the Lords took them up, and they came on an island called the second Bethlehem. And those who lived there had huge eyes.

The Nightsight

1. And the Lord spoke : 'This mystery is big, and in bliss are those who understand it.' And the second tree of life could be found on the island, and everyone who ate of her fruits also got huge eyes.
2. And there were prophets of the Lords with double sight, and also with nightsight, and they taught them with many visions.
3. And them was told that further on the island, everything was dark, and that they would feel themselves like a blind.
4. But the Lord would lead them with nightvisions and would give nightsight at the end of the travel.

Not getting addicted to the wine

1. Women love your men. Take them by the hand, and teach them to understand. Don't get addicted to wine. True wine flows from the innermost being. Know then that when the Lord has granted you suffering to get drunk. And to get drunk by drinking wine, like this you have to drink from the suffering to get drunk. This then is the second suffering.
2. By drunkenness you can place yourself in the other. Thinking would stop this. This is why the Lord granted you suffering. Drink then from your hurt, and you will be in bliss. For like this you will get in touch with the hurt of an other, and his bliss. Let therefore the unity be as drunkenness, and follow the way of the lonely one.
3. Be not addicted to drugs and table-luxury, for these things the Lord your God has already given to you and they stream from the innermost being. Learn then to drink from the cup of the second Christ. For God has not given us an earthly cup for we are hunted from one corner to the other. But God has given you a heavenly cup.
4. Learn therefore to drink of His Word and the suffering. You cannot accept authority when you do not drink from the cross. And all authority is from God. But many have distorted this Word to their own downfall. You have to bow under every authority, so that you can root and rise up to break the authority at the destined time for that. Yes, also the Lord you will break, and you will go inside His streams of Living Water and be one with His Spirit.

5. And some have forgotten about the wrestling with God and their faith suffered shipwreck, but the Lord looks for them who conquer Him. Also under your authority the Spirit of God has suffered, but He has broken the yoke and has overcome you.
6. You then live on the earth and in the heavens. Know then that you have to be cunning when you are on the earth. Be then quick to suffer and slow to get the victory, so that no one will take you as a slave. Live then in the hidden as much as possible, so that no king sees you to crown you, while you miss the crown of heaven.
7. Do not care for those who receive earthly rewards to oppress you. They have received their rewards already, and the Lord won't give it to them in the heaven. Do not be too full of wrath at the house of doctors, for they have broken the chains of slavery, and have given you the heavenly cup. Don't fear their ice, for they are to you as a dark protection.
8. Have you forgotten that the Lord has said to you : 'You are slaves.' Some have ridiculed Him for that and have beaten him. The Lord has sent His angel Romarei, and the second Romarei, to lead the nation out of slavery. Yes, He brought you from exile to exile, but the Lord led to peace. Rest now, they who have entered the second sabbath. In bliss are those who have drunk from that cup.
9. Don't fight old fights, but grow up in the Lord, and fight to come to the gate of heaven. Don't let yourself be dragged down by old enemies, but cut into new fences. Don't search for the battle, and don't let yourself be led to old emotions. Put on the second human, for the old fight will always continue, until it has been solved in the second hell.
10. Yes, put on the riddles of the Lords, and be cunning.
11. You suffer until you see the riddle of the Lords.

Suffering injustice

1. And the riddles of the Lords are like a sea full of whales. And the big mystery runs to the Big Spain, where the black sharks are coming near her coasts. Watch then that you will not have part in her sins, for the Lords will destroy her in one day.
2. And that day will be like the sun and the moon coming together. The Lord will stain her, and taking the cup out of her hand by which she drank the blood of the saints and the martyrs. Yes, she traded with the merchants and butchers of the earth, but they will hate her and eat her flesh.

3. And then the whales will be the pillars of heaven and the bull of the heavens will pierce her followers. Fear then the Lord and keep yourself clean from her.
4. Don't return to old fights, for the Lord will change your enemies in His Hands. Do not have part in their sins, but search for the riddles of the Lords. Then He will send His angel Romarei and the second Romarei to break your chains.
5. Let man alone, as what is he to be regarded ? Focus on the animals of the heavens and you will see the second human.
6. You who still eats of the flesh, you are cursed. The soul of the animal will come alive in your bodies, to eat from your flesh. Do you not know that he who lives from death also will die of the death ? But the Lord has never prepared you to death, but to eternal life.
7. See then that those who still live from the flesh also eat and bite each other. Are you then a piece of flesh brought to be weighed, measured and sold ? That which you hate when it is done to you, don't do that to someone else. The Lord will indeed not keep innocent those who follow the Herder to eat the sheep.
8. You who still lives from the flesh, you are wolves inbetween the sheep. Don't limb over the thought that no one touches you. You have paralyzed the law. Do justice on holy mountains, and put away evil out of your midst, so that the Lord will watch over you.
9. You who speaks evil behind the back of your brother, make sure that the Lord will not take your truth away. You who slanders the truth of someone else, how can you stand in the truth yourself.
10. The wages over those who ate the innocent, and didn't see animals as their fellow-heirs will be called heavy. The Lord will not keep them innocent before his gates.
11. You who do not honour an animal, how can you honour the Lord who is animal ? You who do not have the animal as a friend, does not have the Lord either, and is delivered to His Wrath.
12. Stop making excuses and stop trying to justify yourself before the wolves. Suffer injustice for the will of the Lord, so that you will not trade with the enemy and seen as one of them. They will eat your flesh either way. Be uncompanionable and full of silence and let yourself be crucified like they once did to the Lord. Is it about your children ? Then you bear the same wounds as Metensia. Also your children will not be spared when it comes to suffering. In bliss are those who let their children be chastised, and cursed are they who keep them in sin.

13. Be then uncompanionable and full of silence before the wolves, like the Lord once was, so that grace will find you before the throne. Drink from the suffering in injustice, do not pick the sword without having drunk. They will eat your flesh either way. Make sure you drink well.

14. For good wine is better than speaking, and your justice streams from inside out. Let them who persecute you do not give you entry to their chambers. Do not give your heart to them. Do not take anything from them. But some will twist these words for their own destruction.

15. Learn in good times to handle the Word of the Lords, and focus on the riddles of God. Be like a good attendant before the face of the Lords, so that you receive might through the sword to command care. The Lord opens your eyes and will be with you all the days of your life. Amen Metensia Eminius.

Comfort and warning

1. These are the words of the second Peter, given by God. To my beloved brothers and sisters in the tribulation. Let those who persecute you fade away by the cross. They are not important, and they are wraiths of the netherworld.
2. Those who search for earthly estate, cursed are you, for earthly chains will bind them, and they will not have the might to escape.
3. Those who search the things of the heaven are in bliss, for they are bound by eternal chains who lead them to the fields of rest and freedom.
4. Do not trust your mind, for this one has been fire-marked by the liar. Your mind is cursed and darkened by sin, and pierced by the sword of the world. You haven't drunk enough yet from your inside, for the mind the Lord gives there is eternal. Put then on the second mind, and drink a lot of wine of the Lords.
5. Don't let yourself get stuck in your mind, for then you come from reasoning to reasoning and from deception to deception to let yourself be bound deeper. Come to the holy trees of the Lords and eat of her fruits. But they who sin do not have entry into the garden of the Lords.
6. Don't stain yourself with the knowledge of the world, for she is like the forbidden fruit.

The Forest of the Lords

1. The Second Paul, apostle of the Lords and anfitate, to the saints of the Second Laodicea. The Lord blesses your hearts.
2. The Lord knows your hearts, and you know that you are full of his fire and ice. Yes, you are established as the mixers of the Lords in the Second Covenant and the holy eternal gospel. Know then, that you are lovers of the Lords.
3. But some among you are halfhearted, and the Lord will soon spit them out when they won't turn away from their evil ways.
4. You know I have been persecuted because of the wounds of the lords I bear, and that you also are familiar with these wounds.
5. Bear them deep in your bodies to clearing, for the Lord has established you to serve Him and know His mysteries.
6. Yes, the Lord will give you the two eagle-wings, and you will have outlooks. You will see the riches and wildernesses of the Lord who is lush, and Him with the Golden Sword you will know.
7. You also heard of Him with the Bleeding Sword, and you have mingled your blood with Him.
8. Yes, you have taken part in the wines of the Lords and in his seed. Let then the herbs of the Lords heal your hearts, and search the things inside.
9. You have some among you who live in deep sins, but the Lord hasn't revealed it yet.
10. Wait then for the Word of the Lords, and see what He will do. Greet those who live in tribulation, and cling to them, so that you will be in bliss.
11. The Lord knows and sees what you have done to the older ones, and which a heart you have for them. And the Lord also knows how you hate the works of a mocking youth.
12. Yes, the Lord has established you before His face as sifters, and soon He will send you to separate the chaff from the corn.
13. Yes, also in this you know how to bear the suffering and the ice, and you do not stumble to the outer darknesses.
14. Yes, the Lord sees the perfections among you and is very glad about it. Don't return to the first Laodicea, for then the Lord will strike you soon.

The Language of the Lords

1. The Second Paul to those who live in tribulation, in the Second Laodicea : Keep then good courage, for you have received the garland. 2. You have words of love deep in your heart, stretching out with desire to be revealed. 3. Be glad therefore, you who is tested by many tribulations. The Lord has measured a new heart for you to receive, and soon it will jump up to bliss. 4. You who wear the helmet of the lords, you also know of His thorn-crown. 5. When I was with you I have read for you many pieces about that. Daily read the pieces which I have left behind for you. 6. The Lord sees your times of suffering and knows their ends. The Lord has measured a lock on it, on their ends. 7. Rejoice in the books which you receive in such post scripts. See them as presents of the Lords. 8. You who knows the thundering of Sarsia, her rain is sweet. Know that the Love talks the problems out to the end, but there where talking has become impossible she will turn into justice. The lord has touched you in His Love. 9. With those who lie you cannot talk. Remove them out of your midst. Some among you have been tested by such folks for a while, to test their hearts. Search those who speak of Truth and who have a soft heart to older people. 10. Separate yourself from those who live recklessly. You have received a small help in this, and you will rejoice in that. Separate yourself also from those who are busy with language to rule others. 11. the Lord has given you the language of the Lords, and this is the language of the freedom. Let no one bring you back to books of grammar and spelling, which are an abomination to the Lord. Learn the language of the Lords. See, the old has gone. 12. The new has come. Do not harden the hearts of your children by making them sour with endless numbers and registers of ancestors, for on this the curse of the Lords rest. 13. Satisfy their hearts with the laws of the Lords, and teach them the love and the altar which connection is unbreakable. Like this you will be blissful.

Prescriptions about the teaching of the children

1. Teach your children the spiritual battle and the suffering. For some has become disobedient to this commandments, selling their children to Belial and those of Orion. 2. Teach them of fire and ice, so that they will not be mockers. 3. But the Lord gave up hope and heart with some among you, and they are waiting on the fire of Gehenna, bringing them to eternal rest. 4. yes, for some can not handle the demand of life, and the Lord will grant them small grace. 5. There is justice for all. Everyone will receive a flower of justice as a reward for the works they did. 6. You will not scare your children with an everlasting hell, but you will teach them about the threatening destruction leading to eternal rest. 7. Not everyone wil enter the Kingdom of the Heavens, for those who are there do not have rest day nor night for they cherish and love the Lord. 8. Several sluggards will therefore choose the eternal rest which Gehenna grants. Yes, also several among you, oh Laodicea. 9. The Lord knows the hardness of the life, and the Lord knows all hearts. Never will the Lord hit a human for eternity, but He will carry such a human to a worthy grave where everlasting rest will reign. 10. This is a mystery of the lords, for many are nothing but scaffolds. When the house is built, then the scaffolds will be burned, because they are not of use anymore. 11. Yet the justice will temporary hit harder than what was taught, for the Lord demands payback, until everything is divided in fair manner. 12. Some of you have forgotten about that, and their faith has shipwrecked. 13. Search the lord, and be faithful to His commandment, so that He shows faithfulness to you. 14. Teach you children early to care for young and old, so that they will not be grasped away by mockery and the sweet devouring their heart. 15. Also you have there some who gave them selves over to borderless praise and thanksgiving which don't give track. Let them know that they worship Belial instead of God. 16. I warn you, oh elders of Laodicea, that if you do not chastise these, you will come under the same judgement as those who do these things, of which the lord has said that Sodom will not be punished as much as the pharisees. 17. Put then the pharisees out of your midst, and those who are addicted to pious sounds and let their children starve. They are not better than the dogs, for they have crucified the Second Christ. 18. Hit then those who move their hips, oh prophets of Laodicea, hit then those who block the cobra at the gates, so that I will not hit you all together. 19. You followers of the second Eli, listen, for you have let your sons eat from the sweet of the temples, and despised the chastise. Lift then up the chastise of the Lords, otherwise you will fall backwards and break your neck. 20. Learn then to mingle the good, and imprint the Word of the Lords in your hearts, so that you won't be brought to fall. 21. Hit the followers of Hofni and Pinechas, oh you apostles of Laodicea, and burn their books, so that you will not be burned yourself. 22. but I fear that I have made an effort for nothing for some of you. The judgement of the Lord will be called heavy on the churches which do not teach chastise. 23. The Lord will steal your children out of your laps, the Lord will deliver you to the sweet of the bees and destroy your stomachs. Yes, for in your stomach a snake will stand up, coming to judge the heatens. 24. And then you will stand there, all you hiprockers, with soot and rust, because you have blocked the Word of the Lords. 25. Oh, you who have despised the silence, become wise so that the Lord will not strike you. 26. For heavy and hard the Lord strikes those who despise the silence. They want to quench the voice of the lords by roaring loud. They want to hinder the movements of the lords by rocking their own hips. 27. Yes, an abomination it is in the eyes of the Lords. Cursed is anyone who gives them a shelter. Give then up those who you keep hidden, otherwise the Lord will give you up. 28. Who do you think you are to think that you can hide something for the Lord. 29. Cursed is anyone who thinks he can keep his sin hidden behind expensive clothes and material dragging. 30. They are followers of Mammon. Remember the soberness, so that you will be lush in the Lord who is Spirit.

About clothes

1. Yes, have you forgotten about the tearing of clothes. Do you not know that this will lead to clearing ? You are now wrapped by the spirits of time, and you have forgotten about the lush of nature. 2. You have delivered yourself to tight suits and ties made by the devil. 3. Yes, some of you live in slavery of a worldly regime, and they have those clothes as marks. The Lord will deliver you on his time. They are the spies of the Lords, and live under a prophetic covenant. 4. But cursed is anyone who lusts after such foreign clothes, for these have been made by the satan to stretch out might. 5. You are webs of the Lords, and you will wear clothes of the Spirits. 6. Do not despise the tearing of clothes, for the vegetations for these products were used by nature-theft. 7. Can you not use that which the Lord gives you ? Let your materials with which you work then be clear Do not let living beings die for your second skin, for they are your breath. 8. Go back to the nature, oh saints, for your houses are constructions of Belial and his sons. 9. But if you still live there as a prisoner of the Lords, blissful you are. Live therefore soberly and tear your clothes, so that you will not come under the judgement of nature-theft. Do not eat of flesh either. 10. To those who eat of the flesh as prisoners, I say : The Lord will heal your bodies and deliver you on his time, as well as the animals. 11. Do not be guilty of nature-theft, for you will long for soberness, but it will flee from you. 12. You will long for the lush of the spirits but it will flee from you. 13. Your clothes will be like chains, and you will not have the might to tear the yoke. 14. Besides no one bothers me, for I carry the scars of the Second Christ and His Word in my body. 15. He comes soon to hit the heatens. Amen Metensia Eminius.

You are empowered to eat vegetables and fruits, and the fruits of the earth. You will have insight in what you can use and what not. For the Lord has established his angels yo lead you in that. 19. You will gather and pick up, and taking what the Lord has given you. You will not kill that which lives. 20. Let no one of you twist these words. Let the Spirit enlighten you. Let wise folks under you stand up to reveal these words. 21. Yes, also to you the Lord has given prophets. Search for them, knowing that they sometimes live in darkness and far off. 22. Yes, let the old wise which speaks then speak, so that your ears are blissful. Like this you will build the shelter of the Lords. 23. Let also the young wise speak, and give heed to their words. For they are the revealed wells of the Lords. 24. Handle them as brittle dinnerware, and take them in protection. 25. Offer them a living and food, so that you will be blissful. 26. Do all this for the Lord. Do not despise the old of days, for they can be mouthpieces of the lords. Do not despise the sick, for they have the keys of the animals of the heavens and their fields. 27. Do not despise the slaves and the prophets, but deliver them. Those who carry the yoke of the lords are blissful, and they are blissful to encounter.

28. Be as a faithful servant of God, and do not despise the second. See, the lions of God are already outside, waiting to devour you. 29. But you who know the Lord, you will not be devoured, only in love. 30. Do not be like the thieves, for they do not grant each other rest. Focus on God's economy, and become a clear anfitate of the lords. Many have kept his commandments in this and became blissful. 31. Yes, the lord has prepared His Blissful Spirit already for those who follow Him in this, 32. Wait for the Lord, and do not walk out before Him, for His fire might consume you. 33. You have come closer to the sharks of Spricht. Shiver then before him who speaks. For you do not know yet what his words will cause to be in the end. 34. Do not make noise in your hearts but be silent and clear before the Lord, to catch up the butterflies of His Word. Lightly inflames His Word already, be then ready. 35. His Inflammations will be like volcanoes, and the Lord speaks to bind His lovers in His Spirit. Yes, they will ride clearly over glowing coals, and find the inner chambers of the heavens. 36. Cursed is any house which doesn't know an altar, and cursed is any house which has an unclean altar. Clear your hearts before the Lord. 37. You are greeted. Let Baarlen and Tanzan not rule your house. Come fast, Second Lord Jesus, come fast, to build Your Second Maranatha as a tight seal on the first. 38. And when the second has come, the first is not far from removal. 39. Let your hearts be delivered, you who still lives under the old covenant and suffers tribulation under that. Has God not come to strike the second pharao ? Come to the second promised land, the second canaan of God, you who have overcome, for He will sit on a white throne to guard the heathens. 40. Yes, from all wind-directions they will come, and they will serve the Lord. 41. Rejoice in the day of deliverance, which has been written down to make your souls blissful. 42. Those who are of the Second halleluja and of Spricht greet you, especially yhose in the big tribulation. Amen Metensia Eminius. 43. A greeting to the seven churches in the big tribulation, by my own hand, from the Second paul, servant of God and anfitate. 44. I am also a prisoner of the lords, waiting for the unification of the most holy souls. 45. Grant each other grace, like God does that also. 46. Do not be too hard for each other, for the lord hates the hardness without the softness. 47. His Softness always decreases the Wrath. Greet each other in the second tribulation, being aware of each others bindings and weaknesses. 48. Do not lay heavy burdens on each other for the Lord is not in these. Do not establish an oath, for the Lord is the Soul of freedom. 49. Do not let yourselves be bound, and focus on the slowness which is of the Lords. You know other cords. He who will bind is the lord. 50. The Lord has sent the angel of the wind-directions to you. Let those who glide away from grace not come in anymore, so that they will not stain the church. The Lord hates those who are whimsical and serving two lords. 51. Do not let them in for they will betray you. For many have already been sent to you with twisted plans. 52. I have warned you already and you have been delivered to these words as to the Lord. The Lord does with you what is good. His Blessing is with you. Amen Metensia Emini. 53. I will not stop wrestling and praying for you before His face. See then my love for you. 54. Let not any apostle preach another gospel than this, for they are cursed. Even if an angel would lead you away from the sober and clear teaching, do not take it in. For he who speaks then is cursed, and you come under the curse when you follow him. 55. Wash the dust from your feet when the one with you stay or who talks to you doesn't listen to these words, keep him as a liar and leave. 56. Those who live under a yoke of the lords : The lord will deliver you under his time. Your chains will lead you to bliss. 57. Yes, the Lord has an eye for the weakness of your hearts. This is to Him to power. You have several strings of Spricht in your soul. Blissful are those who have lust to the chains of the lord. For His weaknesses are stronger than that which will come. 58. And the fool in Him is wiser than the wisdom of the ages and the old and their days. 59. Watch that you will not reject Him who speaks, for his days come as in roaring waves in which the powers of the heavens will waver and fall. Yes, new heavens He creates, and cursed are those who hold on to the old. Lay the old on the altar, and bring her there, so that your souls will be blissful. 60. The lord loves the old and will sift her as gold. 62. Regard His mysteries as gold, and long fiery that you may enter in. 63. The Lord hates those who steal. Be like a child in His forecourts, and you will be picked up to his altars. 64. You will know the joys of God, all those who come closer to Him. 65. Do not despise the Second, so that you will not miss the prepared Word for you. 66. Didn't He speak to make your souls blissful ? 67. Let the man who doesn't give heed to this be cursed in all eternities and till the coming aeon. 68. Let the mouse of your hand lead you to the buttons of the temples, to clear your hearts with it. 69. God doesn't let himself be mocked, and will not keep innocent those who hinder little children on His mountains. 70. The lord came for these little ones, and no one will be able to steal them out of the Hand and the Wisdom of the lord. 71. They will be the pearls and the gates of the new city. And several among them will stumble for a certain time, to bring clearing among them. 72. Not all small children are of the lord, for also the cunning of satans have planted fruits in your womb. This is a mystery of the Lord, waiting with outstretching desire to be revealed. 73. And that day will be called blissful. To those who suffer from panick attacks : You are blissful in the Lord, and the Lord will send you a small comfort and enlightenment. You have come closer to the heart of God, who is as a volcano. 74. For in the volcanoes of the Lord you will be bound in His Spirit and his inflammations are holy, leading to the thistles in the heaven. 75. You who shivers, you are not less, but you have seen the blissfulnesses of God.

Who would not shiver. It is to your eternal ecstasy of God. 76. Cursed are those who do not shiver, for while living they are already dead. Do not give heed to them, for they are only wraiths of beyond Gehenna, and they are guarded by the fourth death.

Words of blissfulness and prescriptions

1. Blissful are those who sleep in the Lord, and blissful are those who wake up in the Lord. Blissful are those who have many visions because of the Lord. 2. Blissful are the paralyzed, for they will walk in the heavens of God. 3. Blissful are the soft of heart, for they will crash the mockers. 4. Blissful are the humble of heart and the skittish, for they will be animals of the heaven. 5. Blissful are the poor of spirit, for they will see the Lord. 6. Blissful are those without a soul, for they have the angels of God as their fathers. 7. Blissful are those with cold hands, for they have hearts of fire. 8. Blissful are the wise in the Lord, for they live in the bones of God. 9. Blissful are those who are poor and hunger, for they will guard the lushes in the heavens of God. 10. Blissful are those who are thirsty for justice, for they will be called judges. 11. Blissful are those who hate evil, for they will walk with the Lord. 12. Blissful are those with cold feet, for they have stomachs as lions, and they know the ecstasies of the Lord. 13. Blissful are those with warm hearts, for they will have enough corn for the winter. Yes, they will be able to go forward seven years, and they can build the palace of the Lord. 14. Blissful are those who can say no, for they will stand on the rock, and the sea will not flood them. 15. The Lord is building heaven and earth, the Lord builds His lights. He makes His grace and peace coming over you as the lighting of a lantern in dark regions. He will guard you and lead you step by step, and He will lead you who know Him to His Forest. 16. Let the trees of peace speak to you, and let them guard your head like a helmet. And you who do not know the night : The Lord will put a watcher for your mouth. 17. Do not bite each other out, but lift each other up with words from his altar. Read good books and guides but do not despise the sleep and the rest, for the Lord gives it there to the ones he cherishes. 19. Strive after visions and words of the Lord, but do not forget that the sleep and the rest is a farmfield for that. Let them be widespread and do not terrorize each other and do not terrorize each other with words, so that the Lord will not take His voice away from you so that you will be delivered to the voices of wolves. 21. You only find out about the devourings later on the day. Therefore : Let the sleep guard you, and those who are slaves of the night : The Lord will deliver you in dignified manner on the destined day for that. 22. Do not terrorize the sisters, for the Lord doesn't bother about gender. 23. The Lord determines what is weakness and what is power. 24. You who have many dreams and nightvisions : You are workers of the Lord. 25. The nightspider has paralyzed some among you, but the juices of his sting are big mysteries of the Lord, and you will rise up at the last days. See, you are cherished by the holy angels and the Second of God. 26. You will know the Lord in His suffering and dying, and you will honour the nightspider. 27. The Lord will give you a new mind, and take away the old. Honour His anesthasias as being the sides of His Hand, which strikes you, leads, guards and breaks. 28. Yes, He is raising you up, and let you fall again, but you have to take root. Oh, you who do not know the earth, how can you know the heaven which is of earth ? You who walks on such an earth are holy, whose feet have grown into the ground. 29. You are trees in the fields. Focus on all your branches and do not despise your roots, so that the Lord will not take you away. 30. Those who work without rooting : You do not know the second human yet, who is made in God. For he roots himself with everything he does, and his works are eternal. 31. Give heed to His Words like precious sacrednesses, like golden instruments in his temple. 32. Learn to see upon the butterfly, so that he will take you to a new life. All the old will go away. 33. You who hold on to the present heavens and words. Watch while they will burn you, for the coming times be like a burning oven, and there will be a Day of the lords. 34. A day against everything which is big. Amen Metensia Eminus. 35. While angels do not dare to speak about the new covenant, the more you will have to watch over the lips of your mouth. But you have received the spirit of the lord, and you will speak like the prophets spoke. 36. There is no one who can stop the Word of the Lord, and the Word of the Lord will glide to dark places. Open your chambers, so that the wind of the Lord will clear it. 37. This wind is burning, going from fire to fire. The Lord will make you blissful, and grant you grace, to go from ice to ice. You will know the Lord.

The yardstick of the Lord

1. You have been measured to do service in the house of the lord. And some among you will receive the gifts of measuring and weighing, but they have to be pure of heart. 2. Strive after the anfitate gifts, so that you can buy the house of the Lord. 3. The Lord is favorable to those who build His house in rest and silence, and who measure purely. 4. The Lord will coma against those who measure not purely, they are cursed and will suffer outside with the dogs. They will lick their wounds and will not find the entry of the lord anymore. Yes, the judgement over them is well-measured, and you will not complain about them.

5. The lord will put a post and a watch at his gates, and they will know the mystery of Izu, the seed of Emini. 6. Only those who are holy may come to the Lord. The rest is already cursed. 7. Build his house in trembling and shivering, so that his spirit will bless the work and you will not see it being consumed when you return from your trip. 8. For the day of the lord will come like roaring waves, to test all works. 9. Blissful are those who build in Spricht, for they will see the thick of the Lord, and play the strings of the lord. 10. Spricht will come to the gates of the temples, and root out all those temples which are not sealed with the Second Blood of the lord at their doorsides. 11. Spricht will become the Holy Entry and Exit of the lord. 12. See this mystery is big, and reaches to the pillars of the Emelis Shatau. 13. You will do pure architecture and engineering before the face of the lord, and you will bear the blessing of His gates. 14. You who are still young : You will have to suffer for the building of the temple of the Lord. 15. Embrace the cross, and cherish her, so that she will love you and her hate will not deceive you. Come with ice before her altars so that she will not devour you in her bitterness. 16. The Lord has favor in those who bring ice to His Wounds, and they will eat from the sweet of the Lord. 17. See, the Lord Lord is a wild animal.

About the pope

1. Those who still hold on to papal lies : The Lord has nothing against popes, but the Lord will root out the false doctrine of the canon and other heresy. 2. You who still hold on to unholy councils : Let yourself be chastised, so that the lord will not mingle you with the work of a whore. 3. You will attach yourself to the martyrs and most of all those who were burned because of their faith and their love for the wilderness. 4. For the Lord's praise is wilderness. Learn to know the order of the Lord which is not the order of the world. Let go of the works of satan and his agents. 5. For the Lord has established the governments and their times to test your hearts. See : many hearts are evil, and this is a big mystery. 6. You are lost in a pit of hearts, and you have become foolish in it. But you will know the Lord by your suffering, and the Lord will find you. 7. Yes, He will give you the heart of an apostle and make you learn to understand, that everything was already established before the foundation of the heaven and earth, and that these are the demand of life and law. 8. Yes, the demand of the law has many turned many hearts pale, and the Lord has seen this. 9. Not all too heavy He will punish his children, concerning the demand of life and death. 10. No one can escape from this demand, and let no one think that he is alone in that. You have brothers and sisters in hidden places. 11. Let the suffering not surprise you as something strange, and don't think that your situation is unique, for even your thoughts are owned by the lord, and the unity and the measures of the lines and heavens are big. Manyfolded are the reflections of your spirit, yes, even of your body. 12. You have come closer to the thick of God, where you see the paths and the cords. 13. Blissful are those who have entered through Spricht, for there is no other gate. 14. Let the demand of the law make you blissful, not thinking that something strange has overwhelmed you, for all these things lay bare and revealed before the throne of God, before Him knowing all things. 15. And He is familiar with every voice and movement, yes, with every feint. He knows them all by name, and they thrill before Him. 16. Let then the demand of the law lead you to the good, as the demand of the altar. Amen Eminius Matas. 17. Blessed He who comes, and will come. Maranatha, Second Christ, come soon. You have come closer to the Second Maranatha of the lord, and the first is not far away from removal. Blissful are those who bring the first to the altar. 18. And some among you thought that the first would be destroyed. This is only a partial truth. The Lord has come to fulfil the first and to change it into a pure image of God. 19. Let those who are qualified for it remove and root out the devilverses with care, so that the church of God will be saved. 20. Do not believe that the pope is infallible. Only the Lord is infallible. 21. Give honour to those who deserve honour. Give the emperor which belongs to the emperor, and that which belongs to the pope, give it to the pope. 22. Again : the Lord doesn't have anything against emperors and popes, but the Lord will root uit every heresy in the destined time. 23. Let those who are with the pope receive the Second Word with joy, and blissful is every pope who walks in the ways of the lord. 24. Yes, close to the heart of the lord is that pope who proclaims His Word, and who hates evil. 25. Let no prophet, apostle, pope, emperor or anfitate mislead you. Test all things and keep the good, and the good and true which they gave you, to sanctify your hearts further. 26. Let the pope be a worthy successor of Peter, as the rock of the church. 27. But see that you do not depart from the commandments of the lord, for the Lord is the wing which hits the hearts. 28. Let all who follow the pope keep their leader in sight, which is the Second Christ, your upperlord. 29. For if you are either catholic or protestant, you have the Second Christ as your upperlord. And He will guard your souls, and lead you to a grassy land. 30. You will sanctify the animal, and separate yourself from the sinful Spain, so that the Lord will not come to hit your heart. 31. A Spaniard who is in the Lord will have nothing to fear. 32. The Lord will give you a new Spain. Blissful are those who support animals, for they will have part in the second Spain. 33. The Lord blesses all holy women of Spain and Portugal who walk in the footsteps of Mary Magdalene, for see, Your Christ is animal. 34. And he who does not honour the animal, doesn't have the Christ, who is animal. 35. Well, all you folks who keep yourselves in the second Laodicea. Greeted are you, again, you who love animals like your fellow-humans. For how can you love your fellow-humans if you do not love the animal ? The human is animal. 36. Let those who hate the animal so much that they devour their flesh between their teeth not complain when those who love animals don't want to touch them. 37. They follow the footsteps of the second Pazzia and the second Assisi. Blissful they are. 38. Let the pope sanctify and bless the animal. He has been called for that. And let the pope use his knife to protect the animal, and if not, then the Lord will come with His knife in destined time. 39. Fear the altar of the Lord, and leave the animal alone. Establish yourself as the knight of the animal. You will be called blissful. 40. Is the animal not made for your protection ? You do not know the breath in your mouth. Stay away from things, and humble yourself in fear and trembling. 41. To those who live in the second Laodicea I say : Correct the bad habits of those who mock the animal by uniformly delivering them to the dens and wounds of the second satan and his seed. Teach the nations the meanings of the animals, for they are the signs of heaven to lead those who hang on to the Lord through the big tribulations of the second. 42. Be fire-marked with the animals of God, so that you will be able to breath on the day of judgement.

The Eyes of the Lord

43. Yes, for big mysteries are the animals of God, and cursed is he who touches them even with one finger. Separate yourselves from those who eat the flesh, so that you will not become one with them under the judgement. 44. They go to a fire which burns for eternity for destruction in the second hell. 45. Yes, by this fire God created the animal, and by this fire God will recreate the animal. Yes, a big mystery is she, and you have to give heed to that, as to the signs of heaven to lead you through the last of days. 46. You cannot serve Moloch and the Lord. The Lord watches over my soul now, for I am sick now I have written these things. 47. Let those of the second Laodicea be with me in the spirit, for the Lord is with me, and reveals Himself to me day by day. 48. My heart glorifies in the Lord and in the Word of the Second Christ. My heart glorifies in His altar, and his sickness will be measured to me as health, for the cords of Spricht become visible, to weave the eternal kingship of the lord. 49. Let the animals of God graze in kabbernal, and let the second Santra weave the words, for they are eternal and they are sprayers in the bones, to heal the souls. 50. Attach my soul to the Lord, so that I will not die. I will die in the Lord, like I die every day for you. 51. I rejoice in the suffering which I have for you, to add to the Kingdom of God. 52. Aren't we all builders of the altar by giving our own blood ? 53. Therefore my heart is not heavy. I have battled the good battle, and my soul looks out on the forests of the second to the forest of the lord. 54. Amen Metensia Matas, Maranatha, Second Christ come. To the Second Maranatha we have come closer, and the revelations of the Lord will come forth as roaring waves. 55. We receive visions through the suffering, not through strong drink. The wounds of the lord have become eyes. I am full of eyes, having no rest, for day and night I say with my soul : Holy is the Lord, Holy is His Name, let the Second Kingdom come, the first has gone away. Big Blessing the Lord has laid apart for those who keep His Second commandments. 56. And this blissfulness is bigger than the first. Would the coming of God be less than that which has already happened ? The Lord keeps the best for last. 57. Would the inside of God be less blissful than the outer ? You have come closer to the inside of God. He who makes Himself up to speak soon. I will stay in the House of the lord for the rest of My days, to research the second. 58. I will come upstairs, to watch the monsters of below. I will serve the Lord. 59. I will be of one tongue with those who speak with me. We all are of one goal and one might. 60. Nothing will separate us from the might of God. These are the words of the Most High by His apostle and anfitate the second Paul. Blissful are those who keep, give and do these words. Amen Metensia Kabbernal. He comes soon. See He stand at the door and knocks. Come into the Second Maranatha of the lord, so that He has meal with you and show you the corn of heaven. 61. Daily bread He has given you, of the hidden manna. You have overcome, you who stays in Him.

End

1. The Lord has given me the sword to separate the pure from the impure, to separate the fleeces of the heart. The angels of the second Laodicea are with me, to speak words to these days. 2. God doesn't let himself be changed by prayer of those who do unholy things. Do not fool yourself. 3. God is no whore who attaches himself to those who just pass by. He only cherishes eternal things 4. Let no one be insecure about this. You who are popes of evil. The Lord will give you fogs before the eyes, and you will lose yourself. What is winning and what is losing will be determined by God, you who follows the mouse. The Second Karazure has already descended to you to eat your flesh, all you unholy ones who think to deceive the lord. The Lord sees everything, and you who sins has no rest, day nor night. And if you have rest committing these things, how dead you are. I fear that you have already been taken to the place beyond Gehenna, where the fourth death dwells in the fields to let her children rest in all eternities. They do not exist anymore, but they are only wraiths of a dark past, and mirrorings from that which has passed away. Until the Second Gehenna makes it's entrance.

The Stone of the Karsuiks

1. Now the Word has come to pass, the death has understood it, fourteen black roses, gave me a wide path. To the water it has come, the swan is standing here, and the wind is blowing. Now everything has come to pass, across the hedge, to the free world, no barricades today. To live forever tomorrow, they chose me, the death has come here. A heavy voice, across the hedge, to a free world, no barricades today. The moment of eternal life, they chose me, and made of me a slave.

2. Again and again I'm thinking back about all those white roses I chose, leading me to the white death. Everything is black now, there across the hedge, because fourteen black roses chose me then. A slave I was, and still I am a slave. Push the senses through, in the nights I come to the grey choir, no strength to give up, no strength to go on. Everything is trembling in me, everything has passed away. Chaos has invaded here, I do not know where I should go. Push the senses through, don't expect anything of me.

3. All those black roses, came to the white, to make all my days grey, to awaken the kingly in me. Seven widowspiders, they will always win from me, because this is their domain, I do not know them, and I don't know their grief. Always thought that I suffered the most, but in that they became king over me, until the kingly awakens in me, to speak to the land. My voice they will understand. When the lily stings, we have been there, when the lily stings, we got lost, in a deeper death, we have been to a deeper Christ.

4. He suffered far away in the distance, he suffered there behind the horizon, and unreached mountains, generation by generation his voices quenched, hidden in a deeper death, have come to a deeper cross, they have hit him by the staff of the fourth death. His tongue been pulled out, his beard has perished, like of a young boy, nobody can understand him.

1. In the fire of wasps gold is much too expensive, and the salve of eyes is there a crowning, but she is for who wears rags, their clothes torn many times, and sewn again by widowspiders, sown again in the fields of roses, the enchantment goes on, what to you have to say.

2. In the fire of wasps everything so expensive, and the salve of eyes is there a crowning, kings make a living in rags, searching for the houses of poverty, what the heaven granted them, they came to the poor grave, where the purest roses bloomed, taking their memories to under the soft, to seas of roses in the fire. Father, father, your roses so expensive. Isn't there then a flight in this hour. No money to move, the morning will give it. In the fire of wasps, gold struck through the hair, and everything so expensive, we come to the rags who can speak, about a fire of roses, isn't there grace for those who sunk under the soft, everything so expensive, we only take what heaven grants us, in the fire of roses, looking for some grace, the pain has taken us to the grave, it led us to clothes of wasp, so old and so worn off.

3. In rags we go, to the wasps of our hearts, everything gets more expensive, we take what heaven grants us, the riches of the greatest poverty, leading us to the primeval, where wasps preserve our hearts, in the fire of roses, in the fire of roses. Now then everything will be silent, now then everything will be in delay, now then everything will be silent, now then everything will be silent. In a fire of roses she climbed, in a tender game she lost her sting, but this wealth got more expensive all the time, she screamed for poverty, but couldn't hear her. She flew away from her.

4. Now I am alone, in this hour of roses, deep in the fire of roses, left alone by wasps, hated by the cold and poverty, they don't want to speak to me, and to the silence I sank, was this my only friend. From primeval to primeval I climbed, from silence to silence, I was deserted from everything, to sink away in emptiness. No one holds me tight, no one to speak to.

1. Too often stung in my wounds, now I have sunk to under the soft, to deep under the pink, in the depths of a poor existence, no power to come up, no will to come up, I am almost descended under the heatness, to a king of wasps, he made a living in me, a crown of poverty he gave me, to put the rich ashamed. Look at me now, and dare no more, I went through the big crack. No power to awake anymore, no will to awake anymore, sunk too deep under the brown, the hot mirror didn't have a needle, but pain is there in tenderness, where Brannan grants mercy to the poor, led to primeval, oh, don't give up on me now, for then they will stop their work. A cloak of wasps is what I got, with weapons of the primeval. Under the cold I have come, a king of wasps was touching me, you cannot accuse me, you can not even hear me. The soft hand, a big pain, as lightning coming to you.

2. There are feathers growing inside, where I was stung too often, feathers within me where I gave up courage. They ate me from inside out, am I now just like them ? Am I one of them, since they made a living in me, feathers growing towards each other, deep within, while they stare at me. The needle has become a feather. Always when she stings, she becomes some softer. Big feather, please, make a loving in me, a soft hand, a big hurt, as lightning coming to you, like the milk of purity. In a death battle, sunk under the soft, a new hurt delivered me, to awaken in soft fire, between the foam of roses, and the foam of the lilies, where a dark night gave it up, sunk to under the dark, where dark lights are groaling, here I have waited for so long, where paintings are burning, sunk under the heat, I found my power again, to sink away through my mirror, a king of wasps took me. Is this the book where I can live ? Safe after all these years, it costs me everything, from feather to feather I go.

3. When the nose was a nipple, a blue nipple, a blue mast, in the mouths of angels and arxels, of spirits of a flown away past. Above the mouth, above the gate, a blue nipple, the Ravalon Madok, important in speech, to speak by wisdom, found through poverty. It is the nipple of the Maser, naked and poor like fire. A crown of poverty rules over Narzia, like the Ravalon Madok, the blue nipple. To seven fires we came, to lead us to the primeval. From wildness to wildness we went, to look for the poverty, the treasures of history. To Narzia we came. On the Ravalon Madok we found deliverance, to the innermost being we came, to that which was deeply hidden, like a message of history, the memory as our clock. Don't you know the poverty anymore. See then, you don't have a memory. See then, you don't have a foundation, and when the storms will come, then you will fly away so far. Build your house then in Maser, the Rock, and drink from the mysteries of the blue nipple. Where pure air dwells you will live. The blue mast brings you from history to history, to open old books, and to drink from the mysteries of eternal life. Proud like the karsuiks you will be, and you will know the pride of poverty.

4. And when the nipple of Metensia, the pink one, will rise up to the Ravalon Madok, then it will be like the blue pink road of the wilderness, like the purifying poverty. Yes, for the Lord has granted his messengers poverty in all it's riches as a purifying staff. Death is like the explosion, the radio like the Matadok, a deaf place where everything sinks under the soft, touching the hurt of tenderness. From wilderness to wilderness, until the abundance explodes, commanding, not listening, dying for comfort. When the late death touches you, then everyone hears your voice again. When the ear was a radio once, like the matadok, a nipple of death, you were the commander, where voices had quenched you. To the death we have come, behind glass it's streaming now, the eternal herb. She is the nipple of the Herm-An, under the stomach she lives, like a door to the eternity, where the radio speaks again and again, where the radio keeps breaking. The Word of the Lord, eternal herbs, the deaf can read it. From silence to silence we will delay everything, until everything has been turned upside down, a platform for our Lord. And so is then the holy deaf ear like a nipple of the Lord, to the Matadok, under the stomach, from where the snakes of heaven come. Yes, like a door of eternity she is, she only hears her own voice, she is then in double death, like a coffin of glass she is commander, to open wild doors, doors to the eternity. Drink of her breath, and live in eternity. They have searched for the smallest again and again, they have searched for the darkest again and again. Let us now begin at the beginning.

5. When the coccyx, the root of the spine, was still a nipple, she was a television, in the heart of those who loved the Lord. See, they were all blind, Izu, no one gave you what you deserved. Izu, no one gave you what you needed, Izu, you were the seed of another generation, of flown away ages long ago, who would still weep for you. Found by Dezer, your wounds got bound up, reaching out to the depths of the primeval. Through the old worn off we could watch again. By the discoloured and the torn we could feel the distance again, we could feel, feel again. And what can we do with Matas and Marion. They are rowlockers, to an enchanted bridge, back to the fairyworld.

Spear of Intoxications

1. Through the high trees of the forest of the Spirit, the herder carries a golden spear to intoxicate hearts, to love divinities. He bears the spear of sweet sleep, to quench every hurt. Sprinkle heart to his honour, His Love fills mouths.

2. In dew and tender encounters, wanders the Spirit of Love, as through the wood of the night, he looks for His loved ones. Like a deer he springs through the high grass, until the moonlight lets the autumn sail away alone, to the deepest rooms of the earth, and the burning winter takes her fruits.

3. Spear of God, of intoxications, shooting from the harp of destiny, searching for the fruits of the game of birds, to pierce the hearts who let the gold stream. Spear of God of lovewine, makes the hearts drunk in the hour of tenderness, to sleep in the soft moss, before the gates of Marion's house.

4. Marion sends Emily, sends breads with witnesses, those who witness of a love so deep and true. Marion sends Emily, to the Love of the houses, to dark caves where they sleep, but still being awake in their wounds, and lead them with the golden Ropes, to the eternities of Metensia.

5. And I sleep, I sail to the nipple of Metensia, where the milk of love overflows, and dew leads to the applegardens. And I sleep, sailing to the nipple of Emily, where trees are watering very softly in a valley of tears of love.

6. And I sleep, I sail to the nipple of Metensia, where the milk of applestreams, raises up the light of the morning to glory, sunk away in morningred, I swim back to the night, which lasts forever in the heart of Metensia, to let her flame burn there in glowing red, to the hearts who are fading away.

7. And I sleep, to the nipple of Metensia, to the nipple of love I slide with my ship, I build the earth, in seas of the arch of heaven.

8. Feed the moon, all who sleep, with the milkings of Metensia, feed the earth and his wings, let her nipple rise, to the ends of love. Let the tidings bear her fruits to the tree of the spirits.

9. Feed the path, feed the roads, her love won't get lost, the veins of the spirit are with many, like sheep in the pasture, they lead those who hunger to the paths of sleep and the milk of lost woods.

Coolness of Sleep

1. And it touches my soul, the sweetness at the top of the pain, the lights in the night, I am alone. And it leads me to lonely waters, I feel so cold, where the cool sleep wraps me. But small love comes in the hour of intoxication.

2. The wine spoke to my heart, let us go together into the field, but I chose the loneliness, there my heart searched the rest.

3. The wine spoke to my heart, I can't promise you anything, but I needed security, a tight path took my heart.

4. But sadness was silent on the road, the reaver came near, but God gave me the doubt of His Spirit.

5. Would He take me in, with the sweetness of insecurity. Would He come inside with me.

6. Let the power of the night not take this away from me, the bliss of ignorance.

7. In boats without worries, let the night be what it is, we ascend to the cool waters of the great missing.

8. Deep eyes of glass of the deer of turning around, drive me away to a careless existence.

9. We can't begin anything, when the songs turn around, the winds will show the way, to the cool caves of sleep.

10. It doesn't go away, the memory, it is only watering in the golden beginning of a fragile green forest of the blades of grass.

11. In the hay of old fields, where the birds build their nests, let my eyes not watch it, the lakes of the old earth.

12. Don't unite my head on the path of the autumn with the bread of history.

13. Don't let the old hell be full of speech, but lead our bells to the watery tide, where the waves do not age, nor sliding away to the turnings of the earth. It has passed away.

Lullaby about the Spirit of Santra

1. Spirit of Santra, queen of the morning, let your love rise like the webs, to catch the kings, their words belong to your Spirit.

2. Spirit of Santra, great love, make your name red in fire and silence. Spirit of Santra, silent love, through the high trees you search for silver in the hearts of the kings in your webs.

3. Motherspider of God, you wove all what we wove by your Spirit. Motherspider of God, through the trees we look for your Spirit. Great Love, second love, great name, it has been holy, and now the most holy.

4. Spirit of Santra, queen of the morning, you wove all which is love, second Santra, second name above all name. I have woven love in your hair, you came to me, through the thorns you reached the rose in me.

5. Spiderwebs of your Spirit have caught kings, their words belong to your mistresses. I saw a house today, standing behind trees, and the rose brought tender stings, full of fire and deep silence, your hair full of ice and morningdew, second Santra, you created the deerchild, driven by your love.

6. I am searching for your well, deeply descending, the cold catches me and brings me to your deep snow, to webs of your Spirit, through the power of your breath I rise up again to the windows of the old house, filled by the second cross.

7. This house is full of your Spirit, oh Spirit of Santra, queen of the morning and the dew. This house is full of your Spirit, oh Spirit of Santra, take me up in your wisdom. Drips of your Being have filled me, have shown me the road, the footsteps of a new day. Come to all who search for you, I stay above, I stay under your cloak.

Second Lullaby about the Spirit of Santra

1. Second Santra, second love, have grace in this hour. Ships have sunk, the seas are dark and silver, waves as white hair.
2. Second Santra, second love, have grace in this hour. So many ships have sunk, you caught them in your web, have mercy, so many souls are missing.
3. I do not know where they are. In your hand I have searched, for great mysteries, stay silent, I search for you, with great power you have driven us away from each other. You had to have me for yourself, I gave you everything.
4. You had to have me for yourself, through this path of darkness. Now the second house is so full of your second cross, where the dew climbs against the roofs, oh your morning which loves me. Second Santra, grace and love, through your hair we find the wild forests.
5. Every time your house, the words are written on the cross, by a flame you brought light in dark hearts, by a flame you led us through deep waters of grace, every time you brought us to the sages of the night.
6. And to flee is not possible, your Spirit is always there, your hand like thick walls, the walls of the white house, in silvergrey nights, the roofs which wait for us, where walls come alive, spiders who let us dream.
7. Oh Spider of God, have mercy in this dark fate. Every time I thought God has left me, no breath, no lust to live, always tired and weak, but strength like a silvercross, like thin ropes in my soul.
8. No giant could get me, I kept hoping for you. Every time I thought God has left me, the morning made me so depressed, with slow steps the dark hand came and broke me.
9. Thin ropes in my soul, silver watchers standing in the distance, thin ropes, no power to fight, dark songs have the upper tone here, on the ship of spiderwebs, through the wood of deep rivers. Second Santra, every time again I think God has left me behind.

10. Am I delivered to your great wrath, oh motherspider. Spiders of heaven eat me, day by day, silver trees bow deep in silent mourning. Lord you are the silence, you make me so insecure, let your love stream full force again.

11. You take me with you to dark waters, every time again other laws rule. Is this what I deserve, all that darkness, the complaining makes my eye so tired. I have no force, I only know your cross, only your wounds.

12. Lord, don't give me up. Be close to me. be my force and my shield, my armor. Spiderwebs have surrounded me. Lord, come home in this second house. Let me sleep, close my eyes for eternity, I can't believe it anymore, I can't bear it anymore, close my soul. Your creation is in deep panic, where hands break her, she can't go on anymore, she glides away, the night has wrapped her.

13. Let your child not get lost. Give her now new dreams, and make her like a deerchild loved by the morning. In silvergrey nights, she swims through dark canals, deprived of her powers, she sinks to unknown depths.

14. Fishes of heaven take her with them, to the land behind the big sea. Watch the one who rescued you, don't forget it, in the spiderweb she found a road in her grief. Spider of life, the death left behind, roses of grace after a bitter night.

The Sleep of the Lord

1. There goes my soul, she is a beautiful bird.

2. There goes my soul, she flutters and looks behind all the time.

3. Bubbles come out of her mouth, she spreads so many flowers. And blossom grows on her back.

4. She is on her way, but I don't know where to go. She keeps turning around, and I don't know what she is looking at.

5. It goes too fast. Her lips move so fast, I don't know what she is saying. There goes my soul, where does she come from.

6. Under whose enchantment is she, and why does she turn so fast. Her body dances on fast music but I don't hear anything.

7. Only some waterbubbles, and on the background a soft wood. What would she say if she would see me here.

8. Would she take me away to her paradise. My soul is like a bird of the lord, and my spirit chases her. Will she ever find rest.

9. She says holy holy is the Lord, and I embrace her in a tight embrace. She is of the Lord.

10. And rivers stream from her eyes, and wine comes forth from her mouth. She shines. I have lost her again, there she runs in the distance, there where the sun touches the wood. And small birds fly around her.

11. And so it is the Sleep of the Lord, and she grasps dreams. She calls something but I can't hear her.

12. She is like a feather guarding my soul. In my knowledge I cannot understand her. I need sleep, but how do I get there.

13. I am too fit to lie down now. Or would she strike me down ?

14. And so it is the Sleep of the Lord. She grows like a tree, I can't understand her. And I can't flee from her. I watch her running all the time.

15. And she brings me down every time again. How can I get used to this, it is the Sleep of the Lord.

16. Greater she becomes in His Spirit. I can hardly watch her anymore, but she descend in love upon me all the time, like the dove of the Lord. Don't be afraid of the decision of the Lord, where He interferes in our heart and in our soul, where he circumsizes our spirit. Don't be afraid when He hits right on target, we all suffer under the pressure of His Spirit. The Lord has interfered again. We can hardly stand on our legs. Hardly we can move forward, and are enemies are many. Yes, they are enemies of our souls, but the heritages are at our side. And when his icelions open their mouths, the ice streams across our arms and legs, to open and to shut, to announce new tides.

Lullaby of Doubt

1. I can't take it anymore. I can't see your clouds anymore. I feel fragile, unrescued, rude and without love, without a spark of grace.

2. Has the Lord really left me, will I then see his love, now I have behaved myself so foolish. Where do I have to go, will He be of grace to me.

3. I have heard He doesn't want me anymore. But who spoke these words to me. It was a human, and what is he to esteem.

4. But I am afraid, I don't dare to approach Him anymore. His temple is holy, ready to consume the unholy.

5. I feel like dead and unpure, like I have ridiculed Him. Did I deny Him, I don't know who I am.
6. Is this my fate, I am so hurt, and I long for His voice so much. So sweet it was in the past, I don't know where U am.
7. Have I sworn Him off, my heart couldn't bear it anymore. I would never want to hurt Him, the sweetness belongs to Him.
8. Have I sworn him off, I'm in doubt and I have so much sadness. People can ridicule me, saying : she is not his friend anymore.
9. What's that for a God, what do those two have in common.
10. What is a human to esteem. I don't want to believe their words, but give heed to my loved one, He rescues me again and again.
11. Even now in all my doubts, I don't see the heaven no more. His eyes who search me. Oh life hurts.
12. I love you my friend, please tell me where you are.
13. I don't dare to come anymore, and I don't know where to go.
14. My friend, My God, I am so afraid, what did I do to you. I feel my wounds, is it my sin, or is it a tear of your face.
15. I don't dare to hope in you, afraid to get betrayed. I let my head hang again, and I slide down again. My good friend, where are you.
16. Nothing I dare to ask him. I go now in black, my hair painted blue, we walk apart now. The sweetness of your kisses, it's not for me anymore. I bet you have someone else now. It was always like that. Spirit of God, this it will be.
17. Life like this, I will rest in it. Bring others into bliss, I set you free again. Spirit of God, my good friend, I have loved you all days.
18. Maybe that the tears will still stream from me to you, like beautiful dreams, I feel you sometimes, that can't be broken, the years are much too deep.
19. Spirit of God, I go in silence, I don't dare to speak to you. Slowly I drive my words into other directions, but I still have the hope that you can hear me.
20. I feel so tired, my thoughts go astray, to a new morning. Where do I have to go without you.
21. My life is so empty now, and sleep fills me.
22. Can my slow words of fear still reach you. I don't know. It makes me so insecure, so sad and so hopeless. It has passed by.

Little Bluetail

1. Little Bluetail was a little fish in a very deep ocean. The little fishes called him little bluetail because he was almost completely white, but only with a blue little tail. On the fishes-school they were taught by an old big blue fish. Whenever the fish got mad then you better had to hide, for then he blew with all his strength the water towards you, and then he started to flap with his fin and tail. Little bluetail was always a bit scared of that big blue fish, but the other fishes thought he was a coward.
2. They also got taught by a sea-snake with blue and white stripes, and as last by the blue sea-star. Little Bluetail didn't like any of the teachers. They were all three very strict. But the fishes in his class thought he shouldn't complain about it.
3. On a day there was a party at school, and they made a school-trip altogether to the surface of the ocean. Little Bluetail had never been here, and he was all eyes. In the distance he saw a ship with people on it. Little Bluetail would like to be a human, for they had legs. Little Bluetail would want to live on land, but the teacher had always said that on the solid land they made war. One day the old blue sea-star told a story about a girl of the solid land who wanted to become a fish. Little Bluetail thought it was a sad story. The girl often went to the sea, because she couldn't stand the fighting between humans. One day she had enough of it so much that she went into the sea, but a big wave took her and she drowned.
4. Little Bluetail always had to weep when he heard the story. Little Bluetail longed to be a human with legs. Then he could maybe do something about the fightings between humans, and then no one would have to walk away and drown. One day Little Bluetail told the sea-snake with blue and white stripes after the lesson that he longed to be a human. He asked the sea-snake for advice, for he didn't know how to become that.
5. 'Boy, don't be so foolish, for humans always fight,' said the sea-snake. 'And besides that I do not know how you would have to become a human. If you ask me it is impossible. You just have to do your best here on school, to become a decent neat fish. Take all those stories of you out of your head. That is much better.'
6. But then Little Bluetail went to the blue sea-star, and told him the same, that he wanted to be a human so much. The blue sea-star started to growl a bit, and said that he actually didn't have time for such nonsense. 'You aren't a fish for nothing,' said the sea-star. 'You have to stay being what you are, and besides that, I would not know how you can become a human. I think it is a foolish

- wish. Humans are evil and they are born to make war. Put it out of your head as soon as possible, for your plans will never succeed.'
7. Disappointed Little Bluetail went at last to the big blue fish, but he immediately got so mad that Little Bluetail quickly left again. The next day the blue fish told in the lesson what had happened, and started to mock Little Bluetail. Also the little fishes of the class began to mock Little Bluetail. After the lesson Little Bluetail went to house quickly, because he didn't want to be mocked further, but the fishes of his class followed him fast and began to swim around his little house. 'Ha ha ha,' they laughed, 'what a dumbhead. He want to become human !' But after awhile they left again.
 8. Also Little Bluetail's mother, a big pink fish, heard what happened, and wanted to talk with her little son in depth. 'Say, I have heard what your wish is,' said the mother, 'and I think it is very dumb of you. You already know that humans do nothing but making war, right ?'
 9. 'Yes, but mother,' said Little Bluetail, I want to make an end to that, and I want to stand on legs.'
 10. 'Yes boy,' said the big pink fish, 'humans have wonderful legs, but we have just a tail and that is what we have to live with.' When father came home and heard the story he got compassion with him. 'Boy, I had the same wish in the past, but unfortunately it never worked out,' said father.
 11. 'But how can I become human,' said the little fish.
 12. Father looked at mother, and mother looked at father. 'Tell it to him,' said mother. Then father spoke : 'Boy, you will have to search for the blue stones of the ray.'
 13. Then mother said : 'Father is right, but you can not come there so easy. No one has ever found it.'
 14. 'But where can I find it ?' asked Little Bluetail.
 15. But that his father and mother couldn't tell. Deep in the night Little Bluetail went out of the house, and went to search. After long swimming he finally encountered a ray and he asked for the blue stones. 'Oh a bit further,' said the ray. After a while Little Bluetail encountered another ray and asked the same, and again he got the same answer. But after days of swimming Little Bluetail still had not found anything. He was very exhausted and decided to go to the surface of the ocean again, to watch the humans with their ships. Maybe he would come to an idea then.
 16. When he came up it was very busy on sea. Everywhere Little Bluetail saw little boats. No one had ever told Little Bluetail about fishers, and that was why he did not know the danger of nets. But on one of the ships Little Bluetail saw something glowing. It looked like the blue stones about which his father and mother had spoken. Suddenly he was grasped by a net. Little Bluetail scared up terribly, and he was thrown into a vat soon. Soon Little Bluetail realized that he could not breathe very well. In the distance on the deck he saw the blue stones glow and shine. It was wonderful, but Little Bluetail couldn't reach it. He didn't have legs, and he couldn't swim here. Little Bluetail tried to get some breath, but he didn't succeed. Two men came to the vat and saw Little Bluetail there. 'Look at that, what a splendid fish, almost totally white with only a blue little tail,' said one of the men, and grasped Little Bluetail out of the vat.

17. 'Yes,' said the other man, 'he is almost as splendid as the blue stones there,' and pointed at the shining, almost glowing stones.

18. 'Well, I find the fish much more splendid than your sea-stones,' said the man who had grasped Little Bluetail. 'You can keep your gems, I have the fish. I saw him first.'

19. But then the other man walked towards the blue gems and brought it to the man with the fish. 'Now, we will put them together to see who is the most splendid.'

20. Then the man held the fish against the sea-stones, and suddenly a small boy with a beautiful blue costume stood in between them. But where was the fish now? Also the gems had disappeared.

21. 'Say, boy,' said one of the men astonished. 'Did you take the bluetail with the stones away?'

22. But the little boy couldn't talk. The men stood before a mystery. 'Say, how did this boy come here actually? Maybe it is a stowaway,' said the other man. 'Let us bring him to the captain.'

23. The two fishers brought the boy to the captain. The captain was very nice, and took the boy under his care. No one spoke further about the bluetail and the blue stones. The captain taught the boy to talk and how to navigate the ship. But that didn't go so easy. The boy couldn't speak out the sounds.

24. When the ship reached coast the captain took the boy home, and his wife was very loving towards the boy. The woman always would want to have children, but that wish was never fulfilled. But on school the boy was mocked because he could not speak well. More and more the boy started to long back to the sea, and on a day the captain took the boy with him. They would make a big trip with the ship. But on a day the boy had a strong desire to jump over the rail, and when he touched the water he immediately changed into a fish again. The little fish was very excited about what he had experienced and swam back to the little house of his parents as fast as he could. But father and mother were not glad at all when the little fish told the story. His father and mother had made up that story about the blue stones of the ray back then just not to

- disappoint him. Now they heard that the little fish really had become a human by the blue seas-stones they didn't know what to do.
25. But on the fishes-school they didn't believe him, and laughed at him. The great blue fish who taught them even became very mad at the little fish, and locked him up in the cellar of the school as a punishment. In the cellar also another little fish had been locked up, a little fish from another class.
26. How have you come here ? Bluetail asked. But the other little fish didn't say anything, and was very silent. 'Now, if you don't want to talk, that is also good,' said Bluetail. Then Little Bluetail started to tell about what he had experienced. The other little fish started to laugh a bit after a while, even though it was in Little Bluetail's eyes just a smile.
27. After a while the old blue sea-star came to open the cellar-door. 'Your punishment has ended,' he said. The other little fish swam away as fast as she could, and Little Bluetail stayed behind, while being a bit disappointed. He had hoped that they could have become friends. Slowly he swam up the stairway, and went to the lesson again. Bluetail decided to keep his mouth shut from now on. Now they were in the lesson with the sea-snake. But the seasnake said that he had heard the whole story, and he told it again. Bluetail despised it, for again the little fishes of his class started to laugh at him. After the lesson he encountered the little fish of the other class with who he was in the cellar in the school-passageway. She smiled a little while, but she didn't say anything further.
28. Strangely enough Bluetail started to long for the solid land again. Would he have to find the blue sea-stones of the ray again, or would he become a boy immediately when he would come out of the water ? Excited and curious as he was about what would happen, Bluetail swam as fast as he could towards the surface of the ocean. But here he was grasped by a big fish, and wounded terribly. While bleeding he swam to the side, and came on a beach, where he immediately changed into a boy with a blue costume. Still he was bleeding heavily. The boy stood up and ran to the house of the captain. The captain wasn't there, but the wife of the captain treated the wound lovingly. When the captain came home he was glad to see the boy. 'We thought you had drowned,' said the captain. 'What happened ?'
29. And then the boy told the whole story, but the captain started to laugh heartily about it, and couldn't believe it. The woman didn't say anything.
30. A while later the captain took the boy to the water to look if it was really true. But when the boy jumped into the water nothing happened. The boy was still a boy. Bluetail realized then that he could never return anymore to the depths of the ocean. 'See boy, you just dreamt it,' said the captain, and laid his arm around the boy, and together they walked home. But they always kept calling the boy Bluetail.

The Toadqueen

1. Once there lived a girl with a poor family. They once found the girl in the forest, and took her under their care, but they were very poor. They called the girl Grunpuhlster, because she had eyes like green pools. One day they had so much hunger that they sold the girl to a hunter on stopover. He took the girl to his foresthouse where she had to work in the household. She could clean it all so good, that everything got a gleaming layer, and therefore also the hunter called her Grunpuhlster, and of course because she had such splendid eyes like green pools.
2. On a day the hunter had to go on a trip for a long time. Not long after, a beggar knocked on the door. Grunpuhlster opened, and took the man lovingly in. She gave him good food and a place to sleep.
3. Then the next morning the man came downstairs and he looked at Grunpuhlster very gratefully. 'Because you have been so caring and loving to me,' said the man, 'with anything that you will speak a green gem will fall out of your mouth.' The girl was in shock, because she didn't expect such a present. She didn't dare to open her mouth, but she nodded gratefully and lovingly to the man, who suddenly disappeared in the nothing.
4. When the hunter came home she didn't dare to speak, but when the hunter took notice of that, and started to ask many questions, she finally opened her mouth, and green gems fell on the ground. The hunter was very ecstatic. The girl told him everything. The hunter was very proud of her, and since then she didn't have to work in the household anymore.
5. On a day the hunter took her to the king of the land. The king was so impressed that he wanted her to marry with his son, but she was not happy. She still thought about the poor family where she came from. After several years she went with her prince to the poor family, and she spoke to much, and so many green gems rolled out of mouth, that they never had to be poor again.
6. But on a day the girl got lost again in the forest. After walking a long time she came to a little house where a gnome stood in front. 'Really, you don't have to work here, but you can stay here for a night, for it will storm high as houses, hoei.' The girl listened to the foreign little man, for she didn't want to be taken away by the storm.

7. When she woke up the next day the little man was nowhere to be found. She couldn't help it but making the little house a bit clean, for it was so dusty. And everything she cleaned got a green gleaming layer. When the little man came home that evening he was very impressed. 'Stay another night,' said the little man, 'for this night it will storm again.'
8. The next day a beggar came at the door. The girl opened immediately and gave the poor man something to eat. She also gave him a bed. After awhile the man came downstairs, and the girl spoke a lot with him, while green gems fell out of her mouth. The man filled his pockets with them and said : Pikkel, taddel, tad, everytime you will speak out of your mouth will come a toad.' The girl was in a shock, while the man left fast with his pockets full of green gems.
9. When the gnome came home that night the girl spoke to him while toads rolled out of her mouth. The little man was very shocked and shouted : 'Have you let sorcerors in ? The forest is full of evil sorcerors. As a punishment you will have to sleep outside this night.'
10. The girl began to cry very hard, but the little man didn't change his mind, even though the girl begged him. That night she wandered through the forests and there came a big storm who took her. After a long time she woke up in a big pool. She was all under the mud, and that morning she made a long walk through the forest in the hope to find the way back. After a long time she found the way back. When she came at the castle of the prince no one wanted to let her in, because she was under the mud, and whenever she spoke, toads came out of her mouth.
11. And again she slept outside that night, and a big storm took her, further away than ever. She was thrown all the way over the pool. Behind the pool there was an old and poor little house, where an old woman was hanging the laundry which was splendidly white. The laundry gleamed in the moonlight. 'Come in, poor child,' said the woman, 'for when the storm gets you, he will take you with him. The winds can blow hard here.' The girl didn't dare to open her mouth, and went inside with the woman. Inside it was very dusty, and when the woman went outside, the girl decided to clean things a bit, and everything got gleaming green. When the woman came inside and saw the gleaming green she began to laugh and said : 'Pikkel, taddel, tuid, everything which you touch will turn into the skin of a toad.' The girl ran outside while crying, and was taken by the storm.

12.The storm brought her to the land of the giant-toads. The giant-toads took her and brought her to their king. The toadking told her that soon everything would get flooded by the pool. The girl wanted to go home, but the toadking didn't let her go. She had to work in the palace, and everything she touched turned into toadskin. Also with everything she spoke toads came out of her mouth. The girl didn't know what to do anymore. On a day the toadking asked her if she wanted to become his queen, but the girl told that she was already the princess of another kingdom, and that she would become a queen there. The toadking got very mad, and wanted to visit that kingdom. The girl told him that it was the land behind the storm.

13.And on a day the toadking and his soldiers went to the land where the girl came from, but they didn't return. The giant-toads left behind crowned the girl then as their queen. But on a day all pools got loose, and they began to flood everything away. The queen ran to her highest tower, and saw how the pool dragged giant-paths to the land where she was coming from. The pools began to rise higher and from the highest little towerwindow the queen climbed to the roof of the tower, to it's top. Help, help, cried the queen. In the distance she saw a little boat coming near with the gnome who had sent her away. The gnome saw her also, but didn't want to take her with him. Later she saw a little boat coming with the old woman who laughed at her and had bewitched her. Also the old woman passed her by. The little top had also turned into toadskin now. As her last hope she started to talk and talk, while so many toads came out of her mouth that they began to form a boat in which the girl could step. The girl kept talking and talking like she had never talked before, and a while later she was in a strong boat on the high raging waves. Never before she had seen such a wild sea.

14.After a little while a giant hand appeared from dark air which took her up like a flare of lightning. In a high tower in the clouds, totally made of toadskin, she arrived, and she came eye to eye with the beggar who once gave her the present that everything she spoke would turn into gems. The beggar looked at her very friendly. 'You have seen now how a present can put you into problems,' the beggar spoke. 'But since you have been so faithful : be my queen.' And the beggar brought her to a kingdom totally built of green gems, and these gems were the most splendid she ever had seen. And they lived long and happy after.

The Little Roseweaver

1. Once upon a time a little roseweaver lived in the forest with her three sons. She had an enchanted spinning-wheel by which she could weave roses. These roses were very special, and the richest of the country often came to her to buy the roses. But still the family was very poor, because all the pieces of gold and silver which they got for it she threw it away in the forest river behind the little house. In this river froglike beasts lived who guarded an old gate. No one could ever cross the river, for anyone making an attempt got eaten by the froglike beasts. The froglike beasts had made known to the little roseweaver that she had to give them all her money, or else they would come to devour her and her sons. They ate the money.

2. The old gate which they guarded would lead to a mysterious land which no one knew. Once in the many years a watchman, a ferry-man, would come, who would come across the river with a boat to see if he could take someone behind the gate. When it was almost time the little roseweaver told it to her sons. She spoke that the watchman would come by moonlight. She took one of her sons, and said that if he would hear the sound of a zooming storm in the night, then he had to go outside with the enchanted spinning-wheel, and he had to be covered by some of the roses, to say to the ferry-man : 'Take me, I am a man of dignity,' and then he had to give him the enchanted spinning-wheel as a gift.

3. When it was time the first son went outside, after he had covered himself with several roses, and had taken the enchanted spinning-wheel. The ferryman watched him and said : 'Step in. You are indeed a man of dignity. I will take you to the mysterious land behind the old gate.'

4. The next morning the little roseweaver asked her three sons what had happened. The first son spoke : 'I have indeed given the enchanted spinningwheel to the watchman, like you asked. When I came into the mysterious land, there was a field with enchanted flowers. But I couldn't come far. I fell asleep, and when I had awoken I was back in my own bed.' The little roseweaver was very disappointed, and again several years passed by. She didn't have the enchanted spinningwheel anymore. When the arrival of the ferryman came near again she took her second son apart, and spoke that when the ferryman would come he had to go with him. The second son did what was asked, and in the night by moonlight, when there was zooming like of a storm the boy stood up and went outside. But the ferryman spoke : 'But a man of dignity you are not. Where are the roses by which you had to cover yourself, and where is my present ? Go then first to the castles of kings to take some special roses and moreover steal their greatest treasure. Then I will come the next night again.'

5. The next day the boy did what was asked, but in the castle of the king he got caught, and was thrown into a dungeon. From now on he had to work underground, like every thief who got caught. Every day he was taken out of his dungeon, to make long trips underground. The thieves had to go searching for special stones.

6. The little roseweaver was very disappointed that her son didn't come back, and then she spoke to her third son : 'Wait now until the ferryman returns to get your brother, and make sure that you wear some of my clothes, and give him our golden clock.' The third son did what was asked of him.

7. The next day the little roseweaver asked her third son what had happened. The boy spoke that the ferryman took him to the mysterious land. He went through a field of enchanted flowers, but he got unwell and fell asleep. Awhile later he woke up again, and went deeper into the field of enchanted flowers, and he came to a river of spiderthreads. The boy didn't see a ferryman here, but there was swimming a huge fish, who spoke : first bring me some pearl-shell, from your rich brother, who works for the king, then I can take you to the other side of the river. Then the boy got stung by a spider, and fell into a deep. The next morning he was back in his own bed.

8. 'Now,' said the little roseweaver, 'you know what you have to do. Go to the castle of the king, and ask there for your brother, for some pearl-shell.' The boy did what was asked of him, and he left to go to the castle. When he came at his brother's dungeon he saw the most miraculous stones, and some pearl-shell. His brother wasn't there, for he had to work underground. The boy took one stone with him, for the ferryman, and some pearl-shell for the fish, and left again to go home. But the ferryman didn't come anymore. They had to wait until he would come again after several years. The little roseweaver was deeply disappointed, and also the boy. But there was no other choice than just to wait.

9. But on a night the boy woke up from splashing sounds. The boy stood up and went outside. There at the river he saw the fish of the spiderthreads river. 'Have you found the pearl-shell ?' the fish asked. The boy nodded happy, and ran inside to get the pearl-shell. The fish took him across the river to the old gate. Now the boy had to carry the fish to the spiderthreads river. Fortunately the boy didn't fall asleep. Then the fish took the boy across the spiderthreads river.

10. The next day the little roseweaver wanted to wake her sons, but she had only one son with her. The pearl-shell had disappeared, and now also her last son went to the dungeon of his brother to get some pearl-shell. Again several years passed by, until the ferryman came back. The boy wore some of the clothes of his mother and gave the ferryman a stone from the dungeon of his brother. When he came at the spiderthreads river and saw the fish, he gave some pearl-shell to the fish and the fish took him to the other side. Near a tree he finally found the enchanted spinning-wheel of his mother back, and the spinningwheel spoke : 'I am finally back in the land where I came from, but still I am bewitched. Quick, take me up, and carry me further into this land.' The boy took the enchanted spinningwheel up and asked where his brother was. 'There, behind a river deeper in the land,' the enchanted spinningwheel spoke. After walking awhile they came at a next river. This river was totally made of rose-threads. 'How do I come across this river ?' the boy asked.

11. 'Throw me into it,' the enchanted spinningwheel of his mother said. The boy did what was asked of him, and a golden bridge appeared over the river, like a rainbow. By this the boy came across the river. When the boy had reached the other side the bridge disappeared, and a shining pink stature came up from the river. But the stature was like a statue, and couldn't move well. 'Quick,' the stature said, 'the bewitchment hasn't been broken yet. Search for your brother now.' Then the stature sank back into the river.

12. Because none of her sons had returned the little roseweaver decided to go with the ferryman herself the next time. She got some pearl-shell and a stone from the dungeon of her son, but even after many years the ferryman didn't show up, and the little roseweaver was desperate. She wasn't allowed to speak to her son in the dungeon, but when she told the king that she used to weave roses for him in the past she was allowed to see her son for awhile. The son was very glad to see her, and told her that he found a bridge somewhere deep under the ground leading to an enchanted world. He told her that he could never come far for in a field of enchanted flowers he continuously fell asleep. But once he encountered a shining pink stature who spoke to him that when he would take his mother with him, then the stature would be able to bring him through the field. And thus it happened. The little roseweaver went with her son, and when they came at the field of enchanted flowers the stature took them through it. 'Quick,' the stature said, 'jump into the river of spiderthreads.' The little roseweaver and her son did what was told to them.

13. In the depths of the river everything seemed to flow into rose-threads, and suddenly there was also another woman swimming beside them. 'Come,' the woman said, 'in the depths there is a place where all your pieces of money have been gathered which you had to throw into the river in the past.' And they came to a cellar in the depths of the river, which was full of treasures. Here the little roseweaver also found her other sons back, and they lived in riches for the rest of their lives.

The Prophetic Anointing

1. And I will give you the fire of the second trust, so that your heart will attach to the Lord.
2. For there is no faith without trust. But in bliss are those who doubt, for they will see the Lord. And the Lord had to teach the nation that his children had to go through much doubt to form their souls.
3. The Lord knows what He does. All what He does has been done by angels. His hand is upon you.
4. And I saw a door opening in heaven, and the second trust made the yoke soft and sweet. And those who received the trust became deeply healed in their soul.
5. And the Lord gave a second hope, because the first hope made hungry. And the lord spoke : In bliss are them who reached the second.
6. And the second hope made the walls of the second spirit thick. And the Lord gave the prophets before his face double hearing, and their ears began to zoom, and they heard the waters of the second heaven and the heavens.
7. And their second spirit broke open and got space, and the voice of the Lord filled the temple. And they got a new armor and their walk became slower and stiffer. And they directed their eyes high.
8. And they could break spirits and powers by their double hearing, and they spoke with the angels of the second.
9. And a heavy prophetic anointing began to stream through their bodies, and they felt like they lost their balance. And they began to find a new balance in the Lord, and they were sick for a certain time.
10. And they who receive double hearing will be plagued by fears for a certain time, but they will find a solid and eternal rock below their feet.
11. And only they will be able to bear the gift of the second judgement, and the Lord will split their second spirit.
12. Yes, for only those who have a broken second spirit will see the waters of heaven flow, and they will come forth from the second Getsemaneh.
13. They bear the suffering of their Lord deep in their souls, and they know the honey and the dew of His beard.
14. And in the last of days the Lord will conjure the cobra, and He will give them a new body. And the Lord threw the second spirit to the ground like a bottle of stone, and it got broken, while the cobras of the heaven came forward.

15. And they bore the seals to seal the old times. Seek then earnestly for the double hearing, for it will rescue your soul.

16. In bliss are those whose spirits are bound in Him. And they are bound in double ropes, so that they will keep standing on the holy mountains, and not cast out of His temples.

17. For the Lord is full of wrath in His vehicles of fire, and His wrath arises fast. Kiss then the cobra so that He won't devour you in His wrath. You have approached the blue fire of a shark.

18. And the second Eminius will be without compassion, for his power and law have to punish the sin merciless.

The Second Conscience

1. And the Lord gave double feeling to the most holy, and they had a pure discernment. Yes, the Word had broken them like a predator sent out to them, and they drank of the sweet wine of the Lords.

2. And the Lord made them big on the earth, for they had power over the predators of man.

3. And they invaded the places of the kings, for they had the breath of the cobra.

4. And they could go out of their body to do great works, and they could tear the heavens.

5. And they weren't accused by the first conscience anymore, for it had perished. They had a second conscience now, and they were protected by the Spirits of God and the second angels.

6. And the cobra went forth from them, and they bore bowls of the most holy.

7. Yes, they had the mission to purify the most holy and they had heavy contractions of the muscles, for they bore the double spirit in the depth of their innermost being.

8. And they were set apart to do most holy works, and to make the double altar holy. And they were healed by heavy muscle contractions, for they had suffered great tribulations for a long time. And they were like the predators of heaven.

1. You then have drawn the suffering to you, before the face of the Lords. You don't bear it beyond your ability. The Lord has also given the sweetness with the suffering.

2. Come then to the holes of the cross, where the frog of the cross plays.
3. Come then to the birds of the thorn-crown, and to the rabbit-hole, where rabbits are king. They then are the kings of the cross, cards of a new rain. They have descended beyond and under the pink.
4. The bakery of the cross, where rats mill the corn into meal, where mice play. These are bakerman's faces between you and me, past times come up again.
5. So we can dream, about the animals of the cross.
6. Only them pierced by sharp thorns, are taken by the soft, descending beyond and under the pink.
7. And them of the sixth dermension, they all know, when the leaves are falling. They know the times of the suffering, of the flapping and smacking of the doors.
8. They are the kings of the autumn, deep in sweet dreams, where the passions come from.
9. They carried her to the pit and threw her in. And she came to the sixth dermension. Where the ovens are and the sweet bakers.
10. These are bakerman's faces between you and me, between the gates of the past. Know then the ovens and the pits of the cross, and be in bliss, all who know the mystic of the Lords.
11. Know then all holes and nests. You then have felt the thorn of the ice.
12. You have heard from the butchereries of the cross, leading you to the sixth dermension.
13. The objects of the cross are then, the kapruns. So there are then karbulines and kapruns, seen in the times of the Lord. And see then, the king of the kapruns is a mouse. So there are seven mice of the cross, who guard the teeth.
14. Yes, for without teeth there would be no cross. You had to see the dents then, for otherwise you would never learn to know Christ.
15. Come then to the dents of the cross, for without it she wouldn't be there.
16. See, the mystery of the kapruns is in their dents.
- 4.

The Rabbithouse

1. The odors of the cross, when the spider has reached the heart, to sting there, and to break there, to turn it into a house of rabbits.

2. There where rabbits live, with the perfumes of the cross, full of sweet dreams.
Love, I'm home again.
3. They have spat me until i became stiff, but now I carry the flowers of the cross.
Like a tree of the field I am now, where rabbits dwell in, where ravens land.
4. Yes, they stang me until I became stiff with stings, Love, but now I carry the honey of the cross, streaming towards you.
5. Let us play together, war is over. You have the kapruns in your hair, karbulines around your fingers, like jewelry of the heavens.
6. On the altar of odors, so many sacrifices for one odor.
7. They have stung me, those bees of the heavens, and now I am honey of the cross, broken three times, three times stung at the same place.
8. They created there a wound in a wound, a watering trauma, no power anymore to rise up.
9. And the third sting was to kill, to open my eyes. She stang me deep, the sweet spider, and now wine full of odor is streaming.
10. The cake of centuries cannot be trusted anymore. Sting me now, before it is too late.
11. See the blood has become flesh, where winds gather together, where hearts understand each other, stung so deep.
12. Fly with me now, to rabbits in waters of odors, where fishes rejoice, for every cross there is a flower.
13. Wait then what the cross will become, it is only seed of a farmer on his field.
14. For every cross there is a spider, we have so many arms.
15. See, the needle has become a sting, three times stung, three times broken, these are the insects of the cross. They all know the rabbits house.
16. She stang the bread in me, now I have stale bread, with radish and karmozines, and the topaz is my hedge. She mixed wine through the flour, strange wine, of a rabbitcastle.
17. The king will know it now. But I have forgotten about it all. I live again as the old day. Complaining about the suffering, I can't see her flag. I am the prisoner of the canon, a cross-canon, that's what I got.
18. Go on with mocking me, it doesn't matter to me anymore.
19. The rabbitking is looking for me, and when he finds me, then your play is over.
Then your play is over.
- 20 Go walk around then, and say I have gone mad. I am rather mad than your slave. I had to work too much in your canon, without a salary, without a boss.

21. You let me die in the cold, you made of me a piece of paper, to serve in your strange books, and you were full of joy because of my suffering. Full of joy because of my suffering.

22. Your animal-canon had shot the rabbit, I found it there deep in cold ditches. You took everything away from me. Say, what else do you want ?

1. Come to me now, my darling, I have seen it all. They have locked you up in a canon.

2. Come here now, my darling. Come to me, quick. They have locked you up in a canon, but I loved you so much.

3. Say, believe me, darling, you are my breath. You are my bliss, where the day weeps so much, I give you everything, come then, darling.

4. I have said everything then, you are with me again. I bring you softly to your bed. Go to sleep very well, and forget all those who yawn without interest. Believe me, darling, they will regret everything. They have shot the rabbit, ate his friends, and attacked each other.

5. Come then, dear darling, I bring you softly to your bath. Everything is good now, you are not lost anymore. That hell didn't last forever, it was a lie of a false canon.

6. Now everything we have to do is to establish an open canon. Our canon to be clear, where all animals live in peace. The rabbitking has done it.

7. The rabbitking has seen it. We all have one language now.

8. They stang me deep in the bread, she devoured me until I was barren, but she gave me one language. She stang my small treasure of fire, she gave me everything, but now she is dead.

9. Mother if I could bring you back. I understand now what you did. I have seen your love now in the things around me. But now it is too late.

10. The grave stays closed, you are not there anymore. I rain all my tears down on you. I still weep after all those years. I missed you only after you passed away.

11. Were my eyes closed then, did I have no love for the cross. You have been good for me always.

1. Dear darling, yes, you also belong here. You thought I had forgotten about you. You are free now, the canon has been pierced, but don't come too close.

2. The beasts roar, the rabbitking is mad. We have to be careful, it's better to flee into the forest.

3. That what they see, it may not be there. They hate the rabbit.

4. Beasts are roaring, the rabbit is mad. For so long locked up in a small box. Now, after all those years he comes out of it, please run for your life, as long as it is possible.
 5. He will go to search for those who have wounded him, he will eat them like they found him once. They haven't been good parents, they fed him to the beast.
 6. That which was your animal had to be your child. But I just speak to a tree. Please, flee, the rabbit is dreaming now, and when he stand up everything is too late.
 7. The beasts are roaring, the rabbit is mad, madder than the night, for so long locked up in your hands. Please, flee, otherwise they will start to burn. He wants all those years back, will build his cage, and fill it with those who hates him. Please run, I can't tell you it another way, or it will be your last day.
 8. But for all those who love the rabbit so much, he will prepare for you, sweet rest, letting you eat the meat of all those who hate him, no, he will not spare them.
 9. Now then, all wolves of heaven, the rabbit has prepared a meal, with wine and sweet worries, soft grief after all the years of deep hurt.
 10. Your wounds will get softer, your clothes will be torn, and he will sew them again, in a new manner.
 11. Know then darling, this is the last time I will speak to you, they will murder me now. Please, visit my grave, there where the roses bloom. One day we will see each other again.
 12. Don't grieve, rather grieve about them. Weep about those who laugh. I am safe again in the death, here I came from and I will return to, there where the bread is stale.
 13. Where the ravens descend. Where the rabbitking has his shelter.
- 7.
1. Don't come too close. They have carried him off, a rabbit behind glass.
 2. The years have passed by, I often think about the past. We have to follow all those graves, all those pits through history, where all our friends died.
 3. Please, you have to go through it. Otherwise death will call you once, but they will avoid you.
 4. The canon of the life, has sworn off death. Behind spiderwebs they came, who loved us once upon a time.
 5. Speak to the death, not in the flesh, but by the spirit.
 6. Speak to those who died, they are still there. But don't speak to them in the second death. Speak to your loved ones, let the dawn touch them. They are still there, they are awake, but some of them sleep.

7. Remove your life-cans, away from the eyes of God, and let all those who know, make themselves up to rise upon the mountain of death, it's only a doorway to the other dermension.
8. Don't call the dead then in your flesh, but come to them in the spirit, like Christ once did.
9. Lay down all your christ-cans and animal-cans, for they are a abomination in Gods eyes. Please, listen to his voice. The fence is open now, please, open the cage, and let the bird fly again. Do not eat meat, so that they won't eat your meat and soul.
10. Be holy, when you come to the dead, and do not speak to them of the third death.
11. Be holy, when you appear before his face, on the emelis shatau, experience it with him, and come to the matadok, where the ravens descend upon.
12. Do not speak to those in the fourth death, see, they rest.
13. Let the dead sleep then, and give them rest, but speak to those who want to talk to you.
14. They are there for you, and you are there for them. Come to them in the cages and do not despise them, so that they will also come to your cage.
15. The rabbitking has been there, stang the bread three times, now the honey streams three times from the cross.
16. Follow him, don't despise the story anymore, so that you will not stay in your canon.
17. For all cans lead to the death, but in bliss are they who have an open canon, and in double bliss are they who have their canon in the Lord.

The king of mice

1. You eat then the honey of death, after you have been stung three times. Take them to the fields and make them wise. Don't shoot the rabbits, and take them out of their cages. Give them a good shelter, for they are of the Lords.
2. Oh, if I could take you back. You aren't there anymore, in the death I find your feather. Love of my, you aren't lost. Maybe I am, who is in a cage.
3. Is the death a cage or just the life. The death is just a bridge, an open door.
4. We go from cage to cage, but who bears the key ?
5. The king of rabbits came here. He was here. He has done some things, and now he has died. They have shot him. Now the new king is there.
6. They who follow the mouse, they know that he sits there. But there are also mice of heaven, and they love the rabbit-king. They visit him three times in death, and then the end has come.

7. Three times they sting into the earth, and then all the cages are open, new cages, new keys, new dreams, new freedom, new fear, and a new rabbitking, with the knowledge of a mouse.

8. He has a crown of mice, the other was too tight, the other made him pious. Time for a new religion, the ties of tradition were too tight, established by fools, who drunk with their harems in their caves.

9. It has been beautiful now, it all has ended now. The king of mice has been here, to lay the new crown, on the head of him who bore, the crown of thorns.

10. Yes, Christ has known it well, all that beautiful music, sinking in the soap, until he recreated it under the pink. She would want to walk with him so much, to watch all the beautiful beaches there.

11. The pigs there are naked and fire red, they have seen the harem of Christ.

12. All the women who followed Him there. And He gives women to those who follow Him.

13. But oh, do not distort these words, in your unclean brains, for these women are kaprun, the Spirits of God who he created in the bottles.

14. Christ comes in the nakedness of the new covering, hair in the sun, He turns everything around.

15. The candlesticks of the body-canon and the love-canon are now blown out. The king of mice was here. Tomorrow in the early morning he will die. They won't accept him.

16. But those who will follow him, bliss and pleasure is waiting for them. Hear then, all you fools, and distort the words of of God for your own destruction.

17. God spoke in foolishness to the wise, but you have not heard it.

1. You king of the mice, where have you been then ? I had so much to say to you, so much to discuss.

2. Oh king of mice, don't leave me alone, among those who hate the Lord, who come to Him to leave Him.

3. You king of mice, the air is black, the pearls have been milked. You come to all in great hurt, stung four times.

4. I am now of stone, I am now old and wise. I am now of stone, climbed to the old paths. In pits I fell, in fires I burnt, cut in halves, eaten by those who battled against me.

5. Four times you stung me, but now you are dead.

6. I wait for the evening now, to resurrect you, you were my last hope.

7. Do we have power over death, when we have been stung four times, when blood becomes wine. The blood has become flesh, it has lived among us, but we didn't know, we had forgotten everything, in the fourth death.

8. I come to the morningred, to turn everything back, but I cannot turn the time.

9. I wait to be stung a fifth time. In all this misery I turn myself around, we encounter each other side by side.

10. The king of rabbits makes a living again. After the mouse he comes at the cross again. This you have with two holes, who battle against each other for the crown of thorns.

11. That you have with so many birds, who love the battle theaters.

12. They spin there and embroider there, the new clothes of the rabbitking, first they tear, then they sew, they make a living in him. And they sing, all his words to a crowning, but silence is the most sweetest of his house.

13. Did you ever think of that, they switch with each other, the mouse and the rabbitking.

14. They help each other, they also push each other, to the last breath, they have taken notice of each other.

1. She has stung me five times, she has broken me five times.

2. Everything hurt, but of the cross she sings, as of sweet dreams.

3. We know not which animals we touch, we know not which snares we touch, those who are hit by the cross.

4. We know not which bottles of odour we open after being sting five times. After the fifth time, everything is over.

5. After the fifth time, everything one language again, after the fifth second, everything bound up again. It seemed like a thousand years, but it was just a second.

6. When you have been stung so deep, then you experience everything different.

7. I am Golgotha, I am Golgotha, I am Golgotha, I am Golgo - Golgo-tha, oh Lord, I am Golgo - Golgo-tha.

8. I am Golgotha, I am Golgotha, I am Golgo - Golgotha, I am Golgotha, I am Golgotha, I am Golgotha, oh Lord, I am Golgo - Golgotha.

9. Right through the love, the True Word was streaming, separating the mountains and the valleys, and the silence was sweeter than the word.

11. On Golgotha she stayed, her friends were in the row, to be shot, but she, only she, got rescued.

12. They are then the karmozines. They who serve the soup, these bakerman's faces I recognize out of thousands.
13. If Pontius Pilaty would still live, he would stand there also to watch with them.
14. Bring me then the fifth Pilaty, they thought he was a karmozine.
15. I don't know that he has done to me. Torn on Golgotha Calvary, together with my friends, where only Rahab was rescued.
16. I am not amorous, these are only some faces where we have to get through.
17. I am not amorous, don't forget it. They are of the second death.
18. I broke the cross there on the hill, no, I wasn't amorous.
19. I brought it to the karmozine, those who are of Golgotha Calvary. They stand around it and just watch and watch.
20. The door is miles away, brought to the karmozines who are in a distance.
21. They wear hats with points, I have been gone to Golgotha.
21. I am Golgotha, the cock crows, but I sleep on quietly.
22. These are bakerman's faces. Let them all come to me then, Golgotha, and come free.
23. Is this but a dream, or is it someone's sin ? The fifth Pilaty they brought to me.
24. The morning I will not experience again, I will die in this night. Don't wait for me, for I will not return. This is the last time that I will speak to you. With these words you have to do it, for after it they will canonize me.
25. I'm just a rabbit behind glass. You cannot come here, it's my coffin.
26. This is what I have done here, this they will canonize, and they will distort my words step by step, by their books and their preachings.
27. But follow me to the death, and die with me, then you will experience something.
28. Also you and your words they will canonize. What do you choose ? You cannot dominate them.
29. Die with me, and descend into this pit, then we will be together for eternity.
30. They have doomed us forever, only a rose they gave.
31. Now we stand stiff in the glass, in their canon. Their tubes of speech we are.
32. Oh, those who distort everything, they will be distorted themselves, and no one will count with you, those who are on their way to the fourth death.
33. They have forgotten everything there, and your name they do not know.
- 11.

1. How many Golgotha's do we need - how many karmozines - to come to the house of the lords. Would He battle for us, who put everything aside ?
2. Where the rabbit then fights with the mouse, see, they are just karmozines. Forgetting everything, tredding on the fourth death.
3. The bakerman's faces, strange butterflies they are.
4. See how I run with pains under my arms, they want to make bread of it, those karmozines. With their brocades they stand there.
5. And Spricht has the highest word there, with pits under his claws.
6. How many karmozines do you have on your back ? And you ?
7. How many rabbitholes on Golgotha Calvary, and how many holes of snakes ? And where do they lead to ?
8. They burn bakers there like candles, those with the most karmozines.
9. The baker has the highest word, the popes are under there. They have hats with points.
10. Even the foxes have holes on Golgotha Calvary. I haven't been there. They threw the dice for his clothes.
11. That die, that has been a miserable thing, a door to the karmozines.
12. Who can break that door ? Red Hood or paradise ? I saw them weeping there, for no one could break it. For a long time they stood there.
13. Behind that door, there the baker lives, with his karmozines he bakes bread.
14. He is the big karmozine, the baker of Golgotha Calvary. Spricht always has the highest word, the baker speaks his blessing.
15. In a rabbithole he grew up, he has always stayed there.
16. No one has ever shown him the way. No one has ever heard him.
17. The baker of Calvary Golgotha, living behind high doors. Never did anyone understand him.
18. My time is up, I have to go. I have no sense in discussions, no sense in staying to watch, when the big boys will start to beat.
19. When you want to know me, follow me, I have broken the door of the die open. I have created the baker, I am the tailor, the great brocade. I am the crusade, the way to Calvary Golgotha.
20. I have strung my karmozines to a piece of jewelry. I am the road of suffering, with the keys to existance.

Uninvited

1. They stand far away, side by side, four on a square. Four bottles with narrow necks. I am there and I am here. I miss a piece of myself.
2. They stand far away, four on a square, pointed caps like four fairies, with foaming wine. I do not know them, I haven't ever seen them before, but those fairies know my heart, and they are mad.
3. I have never invited them for my parties, but how could I ? I didn't know them.

Unreachable

4. I couldn't reach them, they are mad, and they feel rejected. They are like rabbits behind glass, like the king of frogs.
5. In a red stripe they came, and in a red stripe they left again. They stand on the high square, to block the road to the cathedral.
6. In a red stripe they came, these rabbitkings. And a king of pigs brought us hunger, and a king of cows forbade our name, in this strange totempole.
7. So many animals piled up upon each other. They didn't speak of honey. Their words hunt after us.

Behind glass

8. It is a strange butchery, the cages piled up. Please, deliver me from slavery. We wanted a king, but it has led to this crowning. It made a living in us. Behind glass they are, a house of glass.
9. I am here and I am there. I miss myself, can't believe it, the rabbitking spoke my name. The hystery is sweet. I have done it to myself. Show then the cross, this strange totempole. Never have we invited them.
10. They had to stay in their houses of the kings, and our hysterias were like castles, like sirens, forbidding to speak their names. Crucify him, that king, then he can be king, from the heavens, behind glass.
11. Then he won't hinder us, and then we can go to sleep. Sleeping behind glass, like the snow white deserted of her dreams.

Animalfaces

12. It is a strange butchery, the cages piled up. A strange totempole they brought me, far away from others, deserted of others.
13. Come here then, I said, you may be my rabbitking, when I can be king as well. I became a prince, I saw their foaming wines, appearing like soft lights.
14. No one has ever heard me, no one has ever understood. See, we don't have your language, we talk in fragments.
15. Please, make the puzzle, puzzle, it is good. We have never been believed, all what we speak gets distorted.

16. A king of frogs made a living in us, like rabbits behind glass, he has visited them already.

17. They could not bear us, he spoke a different language, like a strange foreign totempole.

18. I am a strange totempole, a strange fuse, the heat of Spricht, a red stripe that is my name, a snake who connects the intestines to the womb, and the womb to the arse.

19. I am a strange totempole, so many animalfaces behind a window.

Under a Pink Covenant

20. They stand far away, four on a square, four bottles foaming of wine, of rabbitwine, a king of frogs had sung for it, his tongue reaches for the morning, breaking the bottle of stone, breaking the cares, wrapping the shames, of those who had worn the red stripe. They don't get born, they lived their long already, all behind glass.

21. I am a strange foreign totempole, please deliver me from slavery. They wanted a king, it led to this crowning, so many years behind glass. Like the red of Spricht, you don't have to be ashamed of your tongue.

22. A king he was, as a red rag he was, this red stripe. Under the pink covenant he became big, like the heat of Spricht, the fuse. All sulphurmatches are our pains, when we get struck we burn. Our hair burns in all colours, they are purified sevenfold.

23. I am a strange foreign totempole, a strange sulphurmatch. My head is in fire, a strange animal, with so many animalfaces, behind glass. And the smoke, from strange rabbitlegs. I am the girl with the sulphurmatches. Visions they give me, I am the red stripe, under a soft pink union, a soft pink connection, I burn, as a fuse.

24. Rapunzel is my name. Please take yourself up by my hair. You will see my head burn, and then the tower and the glass will be in explosion. Under the Pink Connection floats my Name.

Don't Strike Us

26. A frogking on a square, a moon and a sun as king, they search for them on a high house. Children have often avoided them, the softness hasn't caressed them, too afraid to see the fuse starting to burn, the match struck. Don't strike me, I have gone under the soft burning fruits. There where it is cold, and everything in a distance. Everything might explode one time.

27. Don't strike me, I don't wait for a war. But listen on a distance. My words you can reach. Don't touch me, for I have hurt. A strange foreign totempole am I, with strange fuses, head of an army of sulphurmatches. Don't strike us, please, don't do that to us. We march in the cold, afraid of the fire which will devastate us. Please, do not touch us, strange totempoles we are.

28. We will not die, but we will burn on that day, when the bottles will open themselves. Please, do not touch us. Please, do not strike us, for we will get struck, by someone who knows how to do it.

29. Someone who has learned how to touch, someone who has learned how to do it in love. Then our hair will burn of soft love, in all colors, purified in sevenfold, with all those pale lights in the wind.

The Rescue

30. A kingly son, a thief of hearts, one who can speak our language. A red tongue, a mysterious story, waiting to be revealed. From a bottle he will come, to a bottle he will go, and the foaming wine will stream. It burns under the green, purified a thousand times, Rapunzel is my name.

31. Please, don't touch me. I am afraid, I am a red stripe. The rag will cover the shame, the red rag, while them under the red hood have sung, while them of the green hood have heard. They speak our language, and let the fruits softly burn.

1. Fairies, angels of God, in old times, can you tell me, where I have to go with all those tears. Everything is in fire and flame, everything is in fire and flame, fables can talk, animals can talk. You have taken the dive, farewell. Animals can hate, time to talk it out. Total power in fire, where the fairies have descended, where the fairies have descended. Deeper salve of the eyes, always worn, in many layers of wild knowledge. Fairies, angels of God, tearing tears have left me, to distort the overdue guilt. They are dressed in lace. Don't tear those fairies, don't leave them, all is grief, all is grief. Wrestle with them, so that their wrath doesn't burn you. Locked up for so long, in bottles of no mercy. Please, say your prayers now. I have wrestled with them myself, to the death.

2. Fairies, angels of God, dangers in the layers beyond, out for revenge, a beautiful revenge, songs strung together. Fairies, but don't let yourself get blinded, they are up to anything, they are angels from years flown away, quenched too often, grieved, banned from the books. Wear your torn clothes now, otherwise they will come to ban all those dreams of this time. Angels of death and poverty, please, don't grieve the fairies, you have just ridiculed a poor one, and laughed at a sick one. Like a sin of death it is. Fairies, the poverty of God, approached the primeval, drunk from strange foreign bottles. Fairies, the tears of God, sweet as water from the wounds, they stream. Fairies, the old of God, but so young that no one can hear, they cry again and again.

3. In time they will take everything over, for times they have battled for this. Wait then for their apocalypse, a new revelation, so old, a new vision, so old. Wait then for their prophesy, their miracles and their signs of which you never wanted to know anything. I have seen everything.

The Three-forked Road

1. Once in the forest a man and a woman with their little daughter lived. The man and the woman fought a lot and often the girl couldn't sleep of it. On a night she fled, for the noise made her scared a lot. She wandered through the forest for a long time, until she had finally lost her way, and didn't know where she was anymore. Exhausted she rested against a tree, but then she fell in a hole. She fell very deep, and lost her consciousness by the fall.
2. When she woke up she saw little rabbits all around her, but when she moved all rabbits fled away from her. Slowly the girl stood up and asked herself where she had arrived. She saw little houses with little lights everywhere and very high trees. So high she had never seen them. When she watched the air she only saw darkness and some shining little stars. Suddenly she saw one of these little stars falling, and further between the trees there was later a shining light. Carefully the girl waded towards the light.
3. But the closer she came the more everything got dark again. There were no little houses with little lights here, and soon she didn't dare to go further. She wanted to turn back, but behind her it was suddenly very dark as well. 'Hello, !' cried the girl. 'Is someone there ?'
4. But nothing and no one answered. The girl was very tired and a while later she fell on the ground and came into a deep sleep. So tired she had never been. A while later she looked around her dreamily. She saw some little lights surrounding her, with very little things. Little chairs, little vacuum-cleaners, little boots, and some other little things. She also saw very small, very tiny candles. 'Where am I ?' she asked. Slowly the girl stood up, and looked upwards where everything was dark. She could only see some wide paintings in the dark. Quickly she found out that she was in a sort of hall. On a high throne in the dark a rabbit sat. The rabbit didn't say nothing, and the girl stepped closer, and then everything was gone again, and everything was very dark.
5. 'I know that you are there !' shouted the girl. But nothing and no one answered. 'I do not want to be difficult, said the girl, 'but this is not the way you receive guests.'
6. 'Guests, guests ?' said a voice. 'You come in unasked, and you call yourself a guest. I call you an intruder.'
7. The girl looked down and saw a little rabbit at her foot. The little rabbit kicked against her leg.
8. 'Say, stop that,' said the girl, 'this is not how you behave yourself to a lady.'
9. 'Now, I do not call you a lady,' said the little rabbit. 'you don't have manners. You just come in unasked, and you think you are the queen. But good, I will let you in, and then you will encounter a real queen for a change.'

10. The little rabbit pulled at the dress of the girl, and led the girl to a small chamber where a little rabbit sat on a throne.
11. 'We have intruders, queen,' said the rabbit.
12. 'I know it, Eagle,' said the rabbitqueen, 'let them stay here.' Then the little rabbit left.
13. The rabbitqueen looked at the girl very deeply. 'So ... you come from the big humanworld,' said the queen.
14. 'Eh, yes, majesty,' said the girl, 'but I am still small myself.'
15. 'Oh but you will become also so big most likely,' said the queen. 'But before it is that far, you can stay here. Here behind me is a door, and when you go through it, then ... Well yes, you will see that yourself. You just have to follow the path.'
16. The girl thanked the queen, and went through the door, and came on a path. Very tiny birds sat in the bushes at the sides of the path. The path shone and gleamed by a mysterious light. The girl started her journey. After a while she came in an open place where rabbits were playing some games. A few little rabbits were hopping. Behind the little rabbits there were three paths.
17. 'Where do I have to go now ?' asked the girl.
18. 'Where do you come from ?' asked the little rabbits.
19. From the queen, said the girl.
20. 'From the queen ?' asked the little rabbits 'didn't she say then where you had to go to.'
21. The girl shook her head. 'She only said that I had to follow the path.'
22. 'If I were you I wouldn't choose the first path,' said a little rabbit, 'for then you will come to a witch. The second path leads to the white castle, and the third path no one knows. Everyone falls asleep there.'
23. 'Well,' said the girl, 'I have slept long enough. I choose for the second path.' The girl went to the white castle.
24. The white castle was full of living pawns. 'I have never seen you here,' said a black pawn. 'I have never seen you either,' said the girl.
25. 'Where are you coming from ?' asked a red pawn.
26. 'The queen has sent me,' said the girl.
27. 'The queen ?' asked all the pawns in wonder.
28. 'Jump on my back,' said the green pawn. When the girl climbed on the green pawn the pawn began to prance, and ran on a stairway of the castle, and came on a balcony, and ran then to the next stairway. The green pawn brought the

- girl all the way to a tower. 'Look outside,' shouted the pawn, 'you can see the whole land from there.'
- 29.'Which land ?' asked the girl. Through the window she saw grassfields everywhere which looked like playboards. These were wonderful gardens. 'You see it, right,' said the pawn. 'We have still a lot to do.'
- 30.'Yes, but the queen told me to follow the path,' said the girl.
- 31.'The path ?' asked the green pawn. 'Oh, how stupid of me, I should have known better.'
- 32.Then the green pawn jumped downstairs all the way with the girl on his back, and then he went into the backgarden through the kitchen. 'Do you see, there in the distance,' said the green pawn while he pointed at some bushes behind a great grassfield, 'there the path continues. A good journey.'
- 33.And then the girl continued her journey, after she said goodbye to the pawn. Between the bushes behind the grassfield the path continued. The path shone and gleamed again as through a mysterious light. But after a time of walking the girl came to the little rabbits again who were playing games. 'Here I have been already,' said the girl.
- 34.'Then you just have to take another path,' said one of the little rabbits.
- 35.'But which path ?' asked the girl.
- 36.'Well, the first or the third path,' said the little rabbit.
- 37.'Yes, but then I come to the witch, or I fall asleep,' said the girl.
- 38.'I can not help that, just choose one,' said the little rabbit.
- 39.'Now, then I choose the third path, for I already start to become a bit tired,' said the girl.
- 40.Along the third path there were enchanted flowers, and soon the girl became so tired that she couldn't stand on her legs anymore, and she fell in a deep sleep.
- 41.'Ehm, my name is spider,' said a dreamy, mysterious voice, 'do you know that I always win ?'
- 42.'No, I don't know that,' said the girl dreamy.
- 43.'Well, then you know it now,' said the voice.
- 44.'Where am I ?' asked the girl.
- 45.When she opened her eyes she saw flowers, so many flowers. Everywhere there were flowers, and so many wonderful smells, so enchanting.
- 46.'I told you I always win,' said the voice sleepy, 'I have enchanted you.'

47. 'Yes, but I don't have time for that actually,' said the girl, 'the queen told me that I had to follow the path.'
48. 'The queen ?' said the voice. 'That changes the case, come with me.' And suddenly the girl stood between the flowers, while she had woken up very well. In the distance she saw a river, while downwards at her foot a little spider stood. 'If the queen has sent you, then it is all in order,' said the little spider, 'then we don't have to play games.' Then the little spider went before her to the river. Over the river there was a bridge under which there were all sorts of little boats with little lamps coming through. They were small.
49. 'There in the distance a witch lives,' said the little spider.
50. 'Oh, but I thought that the witch lived on the first path,' said the girl. After a while they come in the kitchen of a great castle. A servant walks towards the girl. 'Hello, I am Andrew,' said the butler. 'I already expected you. Let me show you around in this castle.'
51. 'How did you know I would come,' asked the girl, and the girl also asked herself where the little spider was. 'The little spider said that a witch lived here,' said the girl.
52. 'Ah, don't believe everything and everyone,' said Andrew. 'Here the rabbitqueen lives.'
53. 'But I just come from there,' said the girl, 'and she told me to follow the path.'
54. 'Oh, come then with me,' said Andrew, and led her to the back of the castle. Here the path went further. Again the girl saw the little spider here, but the little spider was very far away. 'Little spider ?' shouted the girl. But the little spider didn't hear her. And the path went into another direction. The girl decided to follow the path.
55. After awhile she saw some iron cups on the ground, and when she came closer a little rabbit jumped forwards. 'Guess what is in these cups ?' asked the rabbit. 'In one is the sea, in another is the forest, and when you drink from the third you get lost.'
56. 'Yes, but I do not want to drink from it at all,' said the girl. 'Let me go.'
57. Choose one, choose one, and wherever you come, you will always get out of it again, sang the little rabbit a few times. And do you get lost, you will always come free again, and do you come to the sea, then it will always be okay.
58. But the girl didn't want to hear anything of it, and tramped on the ground. 'Now it is enough with this silliness. I have to go now, for the queen ...' but further she could not come.
59. 'The queen ? The queen ?' said the little rabbit. And quickly the little rabbit had disappeared with his cups, and the girl could continue. After a while the girl came in the dunes, and not long after she saw the splendid ocean in which the - deep bright sun shone. The girl saw the path went all the way into the sea. 'But that is not possible,' said the girl.

60. 'Yes, it is,' said a voice. A dark stature suddenly stood next to the girl. It looked a bit like a black pawn on a horse. 'I bring you through it,' said the pawn.
61. 'Yes, but how ?' asked the girl. Suddenly the stature took a die from under the saddle. The stature threw the die from the dune on the beach. On the upper surface of the die there was the figure of a red pawn. The figure was winged, and soon stood next to the girl. 'Jump on my back,' said the red stature. When the girl sat on his back the stature rose up. The black stature had already disappeared. The red stature had a rifle with bullets as dice, and when they got harrassed by bothering birds he shot then down by the rifle. After a while they came on a hill where the path continued. The red pawn pointed at the distance. 'See, there, where it shines, there you have to be, there the rabbitqueen lives.'
62. 'But I just come from there,' said the girl. 'The queen said I had to follow the path.'
63. 'That should have been an error,' said the red pawn, and left.
64. 'Wait a minute,' shouted the girl. 'You have to explain it. I don't understand it anymore.' But the red pawn was already gone. Then she decided to follow the path to the shining places in the distance, but soon it began to become very dark and cold. 'I have to find somewhere here where I can have a shelter,' said the girl. The wind also began to blow harder and harder.
65. 'Come here !' a voice shouted, 'come here,' almost shrieking. The voice looked like the sound of when her parents were fighting. A rabbit on a houseboat was shouting to another rabbit. It was a houseboat on the ground. There was no water anywhere, only some drops of a beginning rain. 'Come in now !' shouted the voice, 'do you want to drown ?' The girl saw a younger rabbit tramping on the ground while he went inside the houseboat. The other rabbit hit his ears. Then the door closed. Soon it began to become wetter under the feet of the girl, and she was almost blown away by the wind. When she looked into the distance she got the shock of her life. High roaring waves came towards her, as if the ocean wanted to swallow up the land. As fast as she could she ran to the houseboat, but while she was knocking on the little door very hard, no one opened it.
66. 'Help me, help me !' The girl shouted. The water had already risen to her knees, and the raging waves had come much closer, and grew higher. Soon the water had come to her hips, and she looked straight into a wave of miles high which could swallow her any moment now. The girl shrieked. A little window next to the little door opened, and a hand grasped the girl and took her inside suddenly.
67. 'That was in the nick of time,' said a little rabbit. The girl sighed deeply.
68. 'This always happens when the queen gets mad,' said the little rabbit.

69.'Why is she becoming mad ?' asked the girl

70.'She cannot stand losing when she plays a game,' said the little rabbit.

71.'With who is she playing games then ?' asked the girl.

72.'With a spider,' said the little rabbit.

73.'Oh, but I know that little spider,' said the girl. 'I have encountered that little spider also, and he said that he always wins.'

74.'How do you know that ?' asked the rabbit suddenly. 'No one knows that, so why would you know that ?'

75.'Well,' explained the girl, 'there were three paths. First I came on the second path where the white castle was, and then I came on the third path where everyone feel asleep. There I encountered him.'

76.'But that can not happen,' said the rabbit, 'that is absolutely impossible. No one who comes on the third path wakes up again. Those who come there will sleep for eternity and always.'

77.'Oh, but I said to the little spider that I had heard from the queen that i had to follow the path,' said the girl, 'and he let me go further.'

78.'The queen ?' asked the little rabbit while his face became green and yellow at the same time. 'Human almighty, has the queen said that to you ?'

79.The girl nodded. 'Oh, but then we are in very great danger,' said the little rabbit. 'If the queen has said that, then she is up to something. Then she challenges you for a duel.'

80.'A duel ?' asked the girl.

81.'Yes, a duel, a fight,' said the rabbit. 'and then we have to be fast. We have to go immediately to the castle, for there she is waiting for you for the game.'

82.Immediately the rabbit ran to another room, and started the motor. On full power the boat went towards the shinging castle in the distance. After a while the boat went inside. Next to a long pole deep in the castle there was a quay where they could step out. The rabbit grasped the hand of the girl and together they ran to a big stairs of stone next to a wall. 'Majesty, majesty,' shouted the rabbit, and then he encountered the queen on the stairs, he said it quiet : 'Majesty, I know we are a bit late.'

83.'What, late ?' said the queen, 'not late at all. Way too early. You are here way too early.'

84.'But why did you become so mad then ?' asked the rabbit.

85.'Oh, nothing special,' said the queen, 'just a little accident.'

86.'A little accident ?' asked the rabbit.

87.Yes, said the queen, I dropped a pawn, and he flew away.

- 88.'Maybe a red pawn ?' the rabbit asked.
- 89.Yes, how do you know this now, the queen asked a bit vicious.
- 90.Well, I saw a red star falling, but later I thought : it might be a pawn of the queen again, said the rabbit.
- 91.Yes, laughed the queen, jaha, you have seen that very well, boy, and now quickly leave, for it is no time yet.
- 92.Then the rabbit ran away. Now the girl stood eye to eye with the queen.
- 93.And who are you ? The queen asked.
- 94.'Eh, I am the girl to who you told to follow the path,' said the girl.
- 95.Oh yes ? Said the queen viciously, now really, I do not know you.
- 96.Look then a bit better. You really don't know me ? asked the girl.
- 97.Then the queen put some little glasses on, and came closer. Let me look, said the queen. There are so many girls who follow the path, you said ?
- 98.The girl nodded.
- 99.Wait a second, said the queen. Have you been along the three paths ?
100. Only the second and the third. I haven't been to the witch on the first path yet.
101. What are you standing here then ! The queen roared. Go back, now !
102. And then the girl started to run, for the queen started to roar terribly. It was like her parents were fighting again, worse than ever before, and the girl started to cry very loud.
103. Run ! Roared the queen, run for your life, for I explode, and then you will see the dice roll.
- 104.The girl was soon surrounded by a whole army of dice. There came fire out of their mouths, and the red ones were the worst. The girl started to cry even louder. Please, rabbit, help me then ! The girl cried hard. But the rabbit was nowhere to be found. In the distance she saw the houseboat, but it floated away further. Oh, if I only would have gone along the first path, said the girl. The dice looked so dreadful.
105. What did you say, shrieked the queen, no that can not be true, did you say you have been on the third path ?
106. Yes, majesty, said the girl.
107. Everyone sleeps there, and no one ever gets up again, said the queen.
108. Yes, but the little spider ... said the girl.
109. The little spider ? shrieked the queen Did the little spider let you through ? And then the queen got even madder.

110. But when I told him what you told to me that I had to follow the path, then he let me through, said the girl.

111. Oh, sighed the queen in rage, I can not stand that little spider ... What else did he say ?

112. 'That he always wins,' said the girl.

113. And then the queen became so at rage that she didn't want to have anything to do with the dice anymore. 'Out of my eyes !' she shrieked to the dice. 'Nothing I want to have to do with games anymore. Then she walked away mad, leaving the girl alone.

114. A while later she came back again. 'Say, where do you actually come from ?' she asked the girl. 'Not from the big humanworld, right ?'

115. Yes, said the girl, that's where I come from. My father and mother are always fighting, and

116. You don't have to tell me anything anymore, said the queen, I understand it already. Then you come indeed from the first path.

117. No, I haven't been there yet, there with that witch, said the girl.

118. Come with me, said the queen, I will show you.

119. In a high tower-room the queen poured tea in for the girl, and asked the girl if she liked it in the big humanworld.

120. No, said the girl, for no one understands me, and they always fight.

121. 'And what did you do about it ?' asked the queen.

122. 'I ran away,' said the girl.

123. That is the best you could do, said the queen, by that you could defeat the witch.

124. But I haven't encountered a witch yet, said the girl.

125. If that is true, then you will have to go back to the first path, and then you will have to follow the path until you have encountered her. Or shall we just play a game.

126. I have followed the paths, said the girl. Let us play a game then.

127. And that happened. Till deep in the evening the girl played games with the queen, and they had a good time together for the queen didn't get mad when she lost a game. The girl had many adventures more with the queen, but that you will hear in another story.

The Sleeping Princess

1. Once there was a red indian princess who always slept. In the night she always awoke only for a little while just to drink something and to eat. Often that was some tea with fruits, and then she slept again. Sometimes she was sleepwalking through the passageways of the castle where she lived. Her father and mother were very much in sorrow, but the princess had always been like this. They would want to speak with their daughter, even if it would only be for a very short time.

2. On a night the princess was sleepwalking again, and she walked very deep into the forest. She always walked barefooted with a nightdress or pyamas. Suddenly she stepped on an enchanted ring and woke up immediately. She was very astonished and put the ring on her finger. For a very long time she was looking at it, and she just stayed awake. The princess was very glad, and ran back to the castle. But when it became morning and she encountered the others they immediately fell asleep. The princess thought it was because of the enchanted ring which she wore. And like this the princess was very lonely, and because she didn't want to see more of them spin into sleep, she left again to the forest. After a while walking she came to a little house where gnomes lived. Joyfully the gnomes stepped outside, as if they knew her already. 'We thought that you would never come,' said one of the gnomes. 'Yes,' said another gnome, 'and, say, we have made this enchanted ring for you, from the rarest stones. The stones you have on your ring are the only ones of their sort, so keep a good watch on it, girl. You don't want to sleep again that long, right ? The princess was very shy. She was glad that the gnomes didn't fall asleep.
3. The princess could live with the gnomes, and she took good care of their little house when the gnomes were gone to work in the mines. But on a day there came a man with only one eye to the house. He knocked on the door, and the princess opened a little window.
4. 'Say, girl,' said the man with only one eye, 'you have a splendid ring. If you give it to me, then I give you my horse in exchange.'
5. 'But then I fall asleep again,' said the princess.
6. Then the man showed her a ring as well. 'If you wear this ring, it will both keep you awake and you can also fly and doing enchantments.' Well, that was what the girl wanted, for then she could also do something about the sleeping people in her land. It was a quick exchange, but suddenly the man began to laugh and ran away, and the princess fell like dead on the ground. When the gnomes came back they were very sad. And they couldn't make another ring with the same powers, for such stones they would never be able to find anymore. But they had a magic flute by which they could wake the princess to life to dance. Then it would be a celebration again, only for a very short while. On a day when they came home also the magic flute had been stolen. Then they decided to carry the princess in a coffin to the mines between the gems, so that they would have her with them when they were at work. And they found that the princess was safe here. If they would leave her behind in the little house then they were too afraid that the princess would be stolen as well one day. No, their gnome-hearts would not be able to bear that. It looked splendid to see the princess between the gems. The animals would keep watch over her. In the middle of the night when the gnomes went home again several gems started to shine. She stood up and went back to the little gnome-house. The gnomes were very astonished and glad. They went back to the mines soon to take the shining gems with them. 7. With the gems they adorned their little house, and since then everyone who wanted to harm the princess fell asleep. And all the gnomes sang : 'So do not come too close when you want to steal something here, do not come too close when you want to do evil works, for your eyes will get locked, and no one will ever put on the light again.'

The Nineth Wish

1. Once there lived a greedy prince in a poor land. The prince was so greedy that he didn't grant anything to anyone else, and took everything for himself. Then on a day a girl from his region disappeared without trace, and he went to search for her just because her parents were very rich and would give a high reward to the one who would find their daughter back.
2. On his journey through the forest he came to a little house late in the night. When he knocked on the door he heard a vicious voice saying : I am Spiderthread. Who is there so late ?'
3. 'Oh little mother,' said the prince. 'I would want to come in to look if there is a girl of our region. She has disappeared without trace.'
4. 'I have seven daughters,' said the old woman. 'If you want to take a look. Come further.' The prince stepped inside, and got something to eat. He could also make a wish from every daughter. When he stood before the first daughter he said : 'I want that the kingdom is surrounded by a hedge of red bloodberries, venomous as the sun, to make sure that no one can disappear without trace.' As second wish, when he stood before the second daughter, he wished that his kingdom was full of gold, but all the other wishes were greedy, and he forgot about the disappeared girl.
5. 'Because you have been so greedy in almost all your wishes,' said the old woman, 'you will turn into a toad.' And immediately the prince was not a prince anymore, but a toad. In shame the toad left. Soon he realized that he could not return to his kingdom anymore because of the dense hedge with the venomous bloodberries. But once in a night he saw a girl bathing in a forestlake. He swam to her immediately, and told her what had happened. It appeared to be the lost girl. But she looked almost the same like one of the daughters of the old woman.
6. 'I have fled,' said the girl, 'because of the hard work I had to do in your kingdom. I came to the old woman and I became as one of her daughters. She let me do soft work and I could make wishes come true.'
7. 'But why didn't you stay there then ?' asked the toad.

8. 'Because the old woman at the end of the wishes speaks her own wish always,' said the girl. 'Since I have fled, I am the only one who can break her evil wishes. I was always the eighth wish, and she was always the last, the nineth.'

9. Then the toad made his wish to the girl, wishing he would become a prince again.

The establishment of the second Moses

1. And the Lord sat in the heaven with his pythons and snakes of heaven. And the Lord spoke to the second staff of Moses, and spoke justice. And the Lord opened with this staff the netherworlds of the first three utmirs, the times of the lord, and there was a great harvest. 2. And the Lord brought the second cross to the second ark. And the Lord wanted that the second spirit was on the human by this. And there was force coming from the second cross, and the Lord established his economy. You who have eaten from the hunger, together with the Lord, will be able to do business in the heavens. And the second blood of the Lord came free to stream through spacious veins, and the pythons served Him. 3. And the Lord saw that it was good, the garden which he gave to man. And the Lord spoke these words : Let second angels and the cherubs of the second guard the garden and irrigate it. and they carried a heavenly sword of the second, a mystical sword full of mysteries. 4. And no one could enter the garden but those who had been established by the Lord. 5. And they were in the blue while holy winds blew.

6. And warmth came over the garden, and the Lord blessed it. 7. And the second Moses came to present himself to the Lord. And when he stood before the face of the Lord, the Lord roared like a lion. And the anointing fell upon the second Moses, an anointing greater than of the old covenant. And the Lord established the second Moses to reign over the districts of the second hell. And this hell was so terrible, that angels trembled and came into a shock.

The calling of the second Samson

8. And the Lord called the second Samson to Him and gave him a purple garment. The Lord gave him also a cup which was full of the second wrath. And the lord sent the second Samson as an eagle to the earth to judge her. 9. And his angels were many, and the slaughters they did on the earth were great. 10. And the angels wept about the forces which were released. 11. And then the Lord spoke to the second Samson : 'I give you might over the second netherworld, and the authorities of hell will not be able to break her gates.' And the authority of the second netherworld was great, and in her dwelled the second sjeool and the second hades, and prayers could not hinder her workings. 12. And the Lord spoke with loud voice : And this covenant with the death is great as the death of the second Christ. 13. And a second grave came up as a sound of bee-storms buzzing to the heaven and the darkneses, and this grave was greater than the first. 14. And the lord spoke : See then the curse of hunger, where honey grows inside guarded by the bees of heaven. 15. And it was the lord who sent the second Christ to the cross of hunger, and after several days there was great bliss. 16. And the Lord brought the honey in a jug to the second ark and spoke : Like this I want the second spirit to be. 17. And the Lord broke the bread to divide it over the corners of the earth, but an angel of the second satan stood before Him suddenly. And the Lord spoke : Long have the workings of the spirit been hindered.

The judgement over the dancers

18. And the Lord spoke to his angels : Bring now the second David before My face. And then the lord spoke : His Body will be my temple. 19. And he sent the second David to the earth to build his temple. And the Lord established him to guard the saints. 20. And they were called the second christians. And he sang psalms to the heaven, with the second word in his hand. 21. And the dancers of the first covenant were brought before the lord, and they got a curse on their head, because they had hindered the cobra of the Lord. And they had led many saints to uncleannesses and abominations. 23. And the Lord struck them, saying that they would not have part in the second Christ, for their sins had heaped up to the heavens, and they had hindered many children from entering in. 24. And there came fire out of the mouth and the face of the second David to devour them, and their followers hid in the second sodom and the second babylon.

The Battle about the body of the Second Christ

25. And the angel Sarsia came in a fight about the body of the second Christ which had been raped by the dancers and their followers. And she had against her the second satan, the second snake and their sons. And the second Metensia came to her help, and together with the snakes of heaven they brought the body to the second grave. 26. And his disciples wept for forty days and nights at his grave, and their tears became them to jewelry. And after these forty days he rose up and wept. 27. And holy women of the earth followed him, while he proclaimed the second gospel. 28. Know then the forces of the second grave and have part in his body. 29. And the second holy supper was established to make blissful those who wept. 30. And the second Solomon appeared to Him to bring him treasures. And the Lord saw that it was good, and gave His Blessing. 31. Let the second pharao not hinder your bodies in the kettle of the Lord, and call upon the holy plagues to become free totally from the sword of tyranny. 32. Let then your bodies not lead you to uncleannesses, but flee to the second spirit from where a new clean body will come forth, made to serve in the temple of the second word. 33. And the Lord brought authority to the apostles of the second church, and the second word started to sing in their heads.

Old religions and the Great Spain

1. You are not for sale, for the Lord has freed you from slavery. The heart of sin beats in the buying and selling. You have received holy prescriptions about the prescriptions about the economy of the Lord.
2. You also know that the whales of heaven will come to judge the great Spain. Let this comfort your soul, those who work in the tribulation. The Lord has seen your tears.
3. The Lord attaches Himself with His Spirit to your mind to guard it. The Lord wants you to know the mysteries. The Lord created the animals and the trees to show the several parts of the body. You who harms any of these creatures, watch your body falling apart.
4. The Lord will not be mocked. These are the last of days. Give strict heed to his words, so that they will not devour you.
5. Well then, you mockers, you who have been disobedient to your parents, the Lord will drive you to the Great Spain, the gathering place of spirits, and there the Lord will hit you.
6. These are the words of the second Luther, to a second reformation. This reformation will be : the destruction of the spirit-market, to bring under judgement those who eat of the flesh, and to bring the Second Word to an Eternal Gospel, like the prophet John saw this on Patmos.
7. These days have come now. Those who do not weep about the sins will not have a part in the sign of God which will guard the hearts in the tribulation. Those who have the mark of the beasts have already been delivered to the wilderness of the times.
8. We will open the temples of Metensia, and those of the other Spirits of God and the second Spirits of God. You will know the Lord. The second altar will be restored, and it is not allowed to sacrifice the innocent. The Lord will put a curse on the words of those who have sacrificed animals and human children.
9. These religions came forth from a dark age where the times were young and confused, where wildernesses came to the temples of God, and where mountains had their homes.

No earthly altar

1. The Lord has brought it to here, and will open His temples, so that the winds of the second Word will blow over the earthground.
2. You who lays at chains, you are free in your inside. You who don't have an inside, how much grief is there about you.
3. You who have reached the altars of ice, sacrifice your family and relationships, so that you can enter through the gates of Zetdonia.

4. Let there be discernment between the altars of heaven, and let the altar be to purgation and transfer.

5. The Lord will raise seven most holy times to restore the altar, and the Lord will root out the altars of the earth.

6. The Chhrist had to die at the wood, but cursed is anyone by which it happened. The earthly altar has gathered priests to sin against Christ, and that is why that covenant is not far from removal.

7. Do not attach yourself to the dark shadows of a temple which is coming. They existed to pass over, and to direct your heads upwards.

8. Deal then with your dark past and a dark ancestry and defeat it.

Acceptance of the Ice

1. You have heard of the burned witches and martyrs for their faith or love for nature. Know then that I have their scars in my body and soul. 2. You mean you can call your brother a heretic without hitting and judging yourself ? Cursed are you, oh despicable human. 3. Do you not think that God will denounce you. 4. Those who love nature, have love for God, and have fulfilled the whole law. 5. You call those a witch who love nature ? Much to ridicule you are. 6. The Word of God will come like ice to open there graves. 7. Accept then the ice in your life.

About childlikeness

Blissful are those with great collections, those who are like an ark full of the animals and beasts of heaven. 2. Touch the blissful, yes, it is for you, all who search the Lord. 3. You have picked up great luck, and the waves of Kabbernal are over you. You were in the golden forests of the Lord and you saw His thistles there in the bitter land. Now you are full of Glory. 4. You all know that speaking is as swimming in the forest-rivers of the Lord. 5. You have come to a fertile land. The Lord is in ecstasy over your softheartedness, and you have indeed comforted and amplified his heart. 6. Yes, you have encouraged Him as a knight, you who eats and shares the rose-cakes of the Lord. 7. Great power will come to you in the fortress of Kabbernal. And you will feel yourself like someone who finds his old friends back. 8. Come then to the caves of the lord and listen to his voice, He who has sent His angel Torio. 9. And He will establish new words to your heart, and they will be like signs and reliefs on the road you go. 10. Blissful are those who have come to Spricht and stand in the templegates of the Lord. 11. The lord has brought you tears of healing, yes, you have legs of light to heal each other. And these lights are soft and watery. 12. Blissful are those who have entered to the mysteries of Spricht. 13. The Lord shows here his splendor, the Lord shows here his might, rooted in his grounds and produced in his heaven. 14. His face woven through soft lines, coming from the mirrorings of the second cross. In which you are all so deeply bonded to tears. 15. Mash then each others tears together and you will see the tears of the Lord, the blissful baths of healing, to which his angel Torio descends all the time. 16. And you drink of the tear, and you can breath. The Lord has given you life, to recognize soft animals. 17. Yes He mashed the light and the darkness together, and now it is soft before your eyes. 18. The Word of the lord is strong. 19. Blissful are those who have come closer to Gods fields through Spricht, who have seen His throne there, the crown of the Second Salvation. 20. Strive then after the Second Spricht, and hold them close, all who live there. Church of God, so deeply living in the wilderness, with the breath of God. 21. To those who stand in the gates : Now new days will catch up, so much wine in tears, God's smile is sweet and just. 22. To the children He would come, those who have saved their little candles till in the nights. 23. They have a virginal mind, and their feeling is chaste. They have taken ice from the waterwells of the Lord by spades. 24. The Lord will lighten His Face over you. Peace and Mercy are with you. Rest fine.

The roots of the spirit

1. Greeted are those in the second Korinth. When then the removal of the first Korinth comes near, then the Lord will only save Rahab. 2. Greet those who are in the tribulation. The Second Paul and the second Sostenes, both apostles and anifitates of the second Christ to make your souls blissful, and to all those who are in the second Korinth. 3. Grace be with you and peace of God our Father, and the Second Christ sent by Him for these times. Let yourself be made blissful in Him. 4. Blissful are those who have come to the second, greet then also your brothers and sisters in the second, who the Lord has bonded in His Wisdom through the Second Spirit. 5. Make then sure that you will not despise the Second, and pray then also for all churches in the second, for the first ones are not far from the removal. 6. Are we then as dogs returning to their vomit ? Surely not. You have become grown in the Lord, and the presentations of the first have passed. 7. Know then that the wildernesses of the Lord are more in order than the order of the world. 8. You have heard then of the second presents and fruits of the Spirit. You have also learn to love Eminius, the Name of the Spirit. 9. Learn to know all names then. 10. You also have heard of the roots of the Spirit and the shells. Let everyone be in their own shell, measured to you and weighed by the Lord. 11. I thank God all times about you, for you have let the root of ice grow, for like this you have become rich in any way in Him. 12. You have also let your root of silence be cleared, about which I had spoken when I was with you that those who wouldn't do that would come under judgement. 13. You have also listened by sanctifying the root of suffering.

Comfort and Thanksgiving

14. You have laid the shells of the services richly over the church, and therefore you are blissful. Yes, you have truly supplied the sons of God with instruments, and have furnished your houses very well. 15. Therefore no one has to suffer lack. And if there are lacks, then we will fill it up by God's Spirit. 16. You have taken us in as true apostles, after you have tested us sevenfolded. Therefore the blessing of God rests on you. 17. You have truly provided the temple of God and the altar with gear, and equipped the saints well. Also in this I thank the Lord for you. 18. The Lord will intensify your presents of fire and ice, for you carry his roots, and you haven't despised the shells. 19. Yes, you have brought your sons to Spricht, and they have become truly sons of the Lord. 20. You have brought your daughters to Zetdonia, and gave them clothes of salvation. 21. You have been virginal on his holy mountains, and haven't become as a curse to the Lord. You have truly brought comfort to the heart of the lord, by walking tenfolded and to deal in his law. 22. Yes, you have bound the laws of the Second around your pulses, and you have chastised your children heavily with it. By this you have saved your souls in the Wrath of the Lord. 23. Let then no one judge you, for you have dealt in love, oh persecuted church of God. 24. The Lord has put His hand on you. Blissful are those who make you blissful, and cursed are those who curse you. Yes, they will perish by the tenfolded sword, those who hate you. 25. For they hate you because you have kept the commandments of the Lord in fear and trembling. 26. They will perish in Spricht, those who have laughed about you. But blissful are those who have wept with you. And they will be counted to salvation by Spricht. And they will all be under the guard of His angel Torio.

1. Yes, the Lord will give you presents in the night, you who cherishes his roots. You know then the lusts of the Lord, and you have been bestowed with it in your inside. 2. You who have gone through the gates of the second spirit : You have seen an eternal gospel, and you are holy. Your bones will not be broken by the lions. 3. Come then to the cupboard, and the Lord will give you new gear to equip His saints. 4. Yes, like a smith of the Lord He has established you, those who cherish his heart. 5. The Lord has let you live in second fear, and see, you have become blissful, having the lusts of the Lord. 6. You have had the second conscience for long and the Lord has blessed it. 7. Now then, you are virginal, and you belong to the ecstasies of God. Be then a part in the jaguars of heaven. 8. You have been a master without arrowheads, and you have kept yourself separated. Yes, u have been made holy. Yes, you are different. You have been foreigners in this world, but known by God. 9. Search therefore comfort with each other and teach each other about the ice of the Lord and the second ice. 10. Like this you will fulfil the law. 11. Let then no one regard you as small because of coming together, for the Lord is patient. 12. When you come together in ice : See then, you are servants of the Second. 13. Preach then the gospel of the Second to the whole universe, so that you will take ice from the heavens by spades. Like this you will break the great tribulations. Three times the Lord will break you, and blissful are those who regard these breakings as bliss. You are not far then from the Second Lusts of the Lord. You have then braided His thorn crown into a king crown. You have made of his scorn robe a king robe. Yes, blissful are those who tear, for they will be called spaders and pourers of wine. 16. You drink then the wine of the Lord.

The mystical of the Lord

1. You who are in the second Rome, and clinging to the church of God : The Lord led you to the Emelis Shatau, Grace are with you. 2. Make sure you won't fall, you who believes to stand, for the lions of God are with many, sent out to test the saints. 3. Many will stumble, so that there will be a clearing among them. And this is a great mystery of the Lord. 4. be then truly like second Romans, for the Lord calls you. 5. He has shown you the canals of His Spirit. 6. Let your heart then not be focussed too much on dogmatics and a chaos of wise words, but focus yourselves on the mystical of the Lord, and let your heart be in the hidden. Then you will keep yourself clean in the Day of judgement. 7. But many among you are boasters, and I fear that I have made an effort for nothing when it comes to some of you. 8. Let then no one among you go astray. There is no end in the Wisdom of the Lord, but His Folly is much stronger. 9. Oh unwise ones, who has enchanted you that you think you can be saved by tight registers and borderless education ? You have despised the Sleep of the Lord and you have laid millstones on your children. 10. But they will get blissful under the yoke, for they carry the yoke of the lord. 11. Make then sure that the Lord will not destroy you together with the yoke. 12. Make then your sons as prophets of the Lord, and let them sleep. Chastise them in the Lord, for the Lord hates a reckless heart without chastise. 13. And who thinks then to have good education, let the Lord educate you. 15. Lay then off the heavy clothes and come in bareness to the hidden place of the lord, where you will be purely covered by His waters. Those who do not have passion in the hidden and the mysteries of God will perish in the coming fire. They had no ice in their lanterns. 17. Preserve then your ice, so that the Lord will not come to you with the ban. 18. For quickly his wrath flames up to those who do not hang out with ice. The ice is then the jealousy of God. 19. And who thinks to have eaten true food. Let him come to the altar and eats the food of the Lord. 20. Ordain your huts then in the fear of the Lord.

About bareness and covering

1. Everything comes on his time. The Lord is good. Let your wisdom then not destroy your heart, but give heed to the times of the Lord. Learn then to know the seasons and do not despise the balances. 2. Otherwise the Lord will come to you and say that you have eaten His Spirit. 3. Measure with good measure, and weigh with pure weights, otherwise the Lord will take the gear back, and you will be as naked in full city. 4. Blissful are those who are naked in the hidden, for they have the Spirit of the Lord as their covering. 5. You have also then several among you who claim to be Jewish, but they are not. Repent then of your works, and cling to the Lord. 6. Grumble and sulk not against each other, over which the judgement of the Lord falls. Who rages, rage in the Lord. 7. Do not judge each other, but put up with each others weaknesses. Do not let your tenacity be weak, but hang on to the Lord, who defines weakness and strength. 10. Those who have kept their eyes clean : The Lord will give you another eye, and plant it as a pearl of the Lord on your forehead. 11. Blissful are those who are full of eyes, for they watch over your soul. 12. To all who dwell in Rome : Feed the birds of heaven, for they have brought you food. 13. Feed those who hunger, for they might hunger about you. By doing this you will save your souls. 14. The Lord hate those who eat for themselves. Did the Lord not bring you food to send it to another ? Do not spoil your food to the world, for then the Lord will hit you with the ban for sure. 15. See then, the Judge of heaven stands at the door and knocks.

The angel Troy

1. Holy, holy is the Lord who carries the saints, to the seas of Metensia. He gives her what is hers. He who thrones of the cherubs of the second, where seraphs go to His ark. 2. And no thrones, no authorities, no voices and no songs can separate you from the Lord who is Eternal. 3. He thrones on the Emelis Shatau, the nipple of grace, to all who gave Him grace. 4. Who has quenched His Spirit is not allowed to come to His throne. Stay then on the Emelis Shatau. 5. Stay solid and tight in His work, build His temple on the salvation and glory. His enormous grace is with those who gave grace. 6. But those who spoiled grace, are not allowed to come to His Holy mountain, for sin there is no grace. Virginal grace has been built on His work. 7. Grace is only a confirmation, as seals of the Emelis Shatau. Those who do not work have no part in the grace. They do not know it. 8. Those who twist grace, crash down from the mountains, from the Emelis Shatau. 9. Know then His angel Troy, with so many songs, on the Emelis Shatau. 10. The voices of lions, of kings and eagles come through her mouth, for God has built His violin and flute in her. 11. She who established the world through His Spirit, from the Emelis Shatau, as a catching net for the fishes who lived in darkness, she dragged them to the heaven, on the Emelis Shatau. 12. She who established the earth ground, the earth realm with all their kings. Their times were recorded in books, of the Emelis Shatau.

11.

The wisdom in the old

1. Oh Emelis Shatau, makes sinners quiet. You show Love to those who fear. 2. Places move under Your hand. Fishes bring the earth realm to understanding. 3. The folly of God is mystical, as seals on His wisdom and wilderness. 4. Oh Emelis Shatau, through which sinners get panicked. Her words quiver in the mouth of poets. No one holds her tight without trembling, only after times they become restful, when prayers have reached the depths of the Lord. 5. The mind is then in old books. Glory is still in old jars. Grace in the kettles of past times. 6. Know your road, on the Emelis Shatau, only those who are holy as pilgrim reach her clouds and her fogs. 7. The fog speaks in the thunder, fishes fall on the mind, to burn their ways through. The Lord catches them in snares of His land. 8. Where the earth is under mud, on the Emelis Shatau. 9. Violins weave the voices, on the Emelis Shatau. 10. Show grace to your sons. Tenderly their voices are quivering after, lightly their wrath flames up, on the Emelis Shatau. 11. Love goes on wings, leaving the Second Rome behind, with Greece under His feet, on the Emelis Shatau. 12. The moon as a hairy sack, the sun black and under copper, where golden chains buy them, who stand on the sledge of emerald. The purchasing power is of the Lord. Deal with Him. Buy eyesalve of pure stars, on the altar of your song of life. 13. He breaks the sun and the moon, and gives His prophets double sight. Let then your grace be doubles. Those who work will also reap. 14. yes, God will cast the sluggards in the outer darknesses, but cursed are those who burden those who are tired. 15. Are you tired, be then tired in the Lord.

About complaining

1. Those who drink from the tea of Marion, and knowing the bonemarrow of the Lord. She made the bones stiff, on the Emelis Shatau. 2. Enter then in to His Grace and Love, all you workers of the Lord. Yes, also those who have worked in their sleep. The Lord cherishes sleepworkers. 3. Let no one regard small those who dream, for they will be called builders of the heavens and eternities. 4. Yes, the Lord will hit all those who despise the sleepworkers, and will not keep them innocent before his temples. 5. But blissful are those who offered a shelter to those who dreamt, for they will be called weavers of the Lord. 6. You who dreams are a child of Metensia. But when you dream, dream then in the Lord. 7. He who guards all hearts, will let you develop. 8. Those who drink from the tea of Marion, they go from strength to strength. The tiredness is as a friend to them, they made the bones of the Lord stiff. 9. Blissful are those who do not move, for they are builders of the Lord. 10. Let no one regard these children as small and blocking them from coming to the Lord, as for those is the paradise of the Lord. 11. Rest then from all your books, and focus your eye on the Lord, and He will give you the wings of paradise. 12. His eagles will educate you in your sleep, do not regard the tiredness as small, as she is a guard of the Lord, established at the gates of your soul. 13. She is then the sleep of the Lord, the second soul. Those who do not sleep make sure that you will not lose her. 14. Do not mock those who sleep, and do not steal from them either, as then the Lord will take your soul away and give it to the wolves. 15. Those who can not sleep : You are blissful when you wake in the Lord. You are then as the flames who guard the grave of the lord. 16. The Lord will give you the eyes of eagles, and you have nothing to fear. 17. Keep then courage, you who can not sleep, for you are the candlesticks of the second church. 18. And you will be called wakers of the lord, guards of paradise. 19. You will go from rest to rest, and the Lord will reveal high words to you in the night. 20. Yes, the birds of heaven will come to you to educate you, and they will satisfy your soul and bring it to rest. 21. Do not despise the visions of the Lord then, and focus on His drunkenness. 22. For the Spirit of the Lord is drunkenness. And you will find drunkenness in old books, and not in strong drink. 23. You who are sick : Drink then from the tea of Marion. For the Lord has lended you special grace. 24. And when you are sick : Be sick in the Lord, so that you will not be counted among the sick of the world. 25. Carry your cross as a Holy artwork of the Lord, and do not let it be taken off before His time. You will then go from cross to cross, and from glory to glory. 26. carry also the cross of others, so that you form your artworks and letting them having part in the Pink Covenant. 27. This is then the mystery of Metensia and Her Second Word. 28. Let no one despise the Second Covenant, so that their part will not be taken away. For there is no other digestion but the Pink Covenant, and here the times of the Lord have been stored up, as treasures of fire. 29. And you already have her waves as the glue of the Lord in the depths and mysteries of your body. 30. Let those who are sick in the Lord and drink the tea of Marion rejoice themselves, for they are the fire of the Lord, bonding the hearts of the Kingdom. 31. Yes, they are the cords of paradise and her forecourts, to let children enter hand in hand. 32. Yes, they are the wings of the Lord, and the source of all His mysteries. 33. Don't grieve and lament then too much over your sickness, for they bring you to a hidden place of the Lord. And you will be of the Lord. 34. And to those who lament : When you lament, lament in the Lord, and you will be the sweeteners of children.

God's being near to those who are sick

1. Do not think that the Lord has rejected you in your sickness. The Lord has sent His Word to you. And see, the Word of the Lord has become flesh among you. 2. Those who trust on the Lord Lord will not be put ashamed. 3. Put your trust then on Him, for He is softhearted of Spirit. 4. Find comfort in old books, and do not let yourself become frightened. Those who are in fear, are of the Lord. 5. The Lord Lord will awaken you in the youngest days, and you will be called children of God. 6. The Lord is graceful and softhearted to those who are sick. 7. You carry the yoke of the Lord, and you have no one to fear. 8. Keep then good courage, for you will be called prophets of the Lord. The Lord is with those who are depressed and without courage. 9. For the Lord knows all, for he is the man of sorrows and sicknesses. 10. You follow then Jesus the Crucified, who knows all sicknesses. 11. Let those who are healthy ask themselves if they carry the cross of the lord. For the Lord defines what is sickness and and health. The health of the world is sicker than the sickness of God. 13. Those who carry the cross, have a doctor in house. 14. Blissful are those who are sick in the Lord, for they will see the Forest of the Lord, and the swans of heaven. 15. Blissful are those who go their death-road in the Lord, for they will see the artworks of heaven. 16. Double blissful are you who have come closer to the far forecoyrts of the Emelis Shatau, but when you come closer, come closer in the Lord, so that you will not be devoured by a fire. 17. Double blissful are you who know the treasures of Marion's house. Know then that not any mocker will inherit these things. They will receive the wages and judgement of pharisees. 18. If you want to be a pharisee or a mocker, be such things then in the Lord. 19. If you want to be a liar and a sorceror, a sluggard or a scrooge, be such things then in the Lord, so that He will give you small grace on the day of Judgement. But make sure that you will not fall in the fate of hypocrits, for it was better for them that they had not been born. 20. But also them, and you all, are instruments of the Lord.

Nothing outside the cross

21. Let your words then often be mystical, as when you speak to lovers between thousands of thistles. Because many among you have forgotten about this their faith has been shipwrecked. 22. Hang on to the ice and the silence. And do not defend yourself, beloved, for the Lord your God is your defense. 23. For all hate, disdain, and all false humility comes forth from defense. And the defense hates ice and the silence. Yes, such things do not have anything in common with the cross of Christ and the Second. 24. Learn then to hang on to the ice without the defense, and leave the defense to the Lord. The Lord will give you eagle-eyes to break the heathens down without fire. 25. Let no one think that there is any breaking outside the cross. 26. Lay then your thoughts silent in God.

14.

Do not be terrified

1. You who are terrified by humans and pharisees, and by those who preached the word : Let yourself not be terrified, for the Lord will give you His Fear, and this will be healing for your bones, for this is the leafage and herb of heaven. 2. Fear then not humans and their words, do not fear those who prophesy through the flesh, for the Lord Lord has bound their foreheads. 3. Let those who fear fear in the Lord. 4. Can you expect Godspeech from flesh ? Fear not those who are of the flesh, for you know where they will go. 5. And let those who do work not expect thanksgiving and honour from humans, for they are working among an evil generation. Your wages if of the lord. Do then your work as for the Lord, and you will save your souls and bring it to blissfulness. 6. Do not hope on humans, for that is making your bones dry. Hope on God, for He will let Himself be known. You know then that the Lord Lord lets Himself be known in ice. Blissful are those who love the ice and the silence. 7. Come closer to the Ravalon Madok, where the house of the Lord is. And in His house there are many chambers, for the Father has prepared it. 8. Blissful are those who have the inflammations of the Lord. They are like the volcanoes of heaven and have many souls hidden. 9. You know that His nipples have come forth from inflammations, as sensitive places of the Lord. Very lightly His wrath flames up, and this has brought forth the Second Karazure. 10. See then, in the last of the days the white panther will mingle with the white tiger. And he will be the army-chief of the karazures.

About justice and injustice

1. Call then, those who stand on holy mountains. Call and blow the trumpets. For the Lord Lord has descended to you, He and His tenthousands. 2. And he will lead you to a place named the second Armageddon, where the Lord and those who are His, battle on the Ravalon Madok. 3. Yes, there is battle-seed in copper helmets, and the Lord moves Himself as a chariot. 4. He will bind kings, and flames will be ignited in those who have the white robes. 5. He will lead you to the second Peniel and you will battle with the Lord. See then, the Lord Lord is one. 6. Know Him on all your roads, and wrestle with Him in prayer, so that you are one with the Lord. Only who carry His yoke and be hit by Him are of the Lord. 7. You will hate divorce, for the Lord hates it. Let then the bonds ravel out before the face of the Lord, for the Lord is who separates the positions. 8. Have you bonded before the state : Give the state what is of the state, and don't let yourself get separated again by the state. Why would you double the curse ? 9. The Lord carries the sword, and you shiver before the face of Eminius. 10. You who search justice at the judges of the world : Cursed are you, for you have made the hearts of your children bitter. The Lord is the One who carries justice. 11. Those who search justice at the judges of the world and those who hang on to divorce are not allowed to come in the church of the Lord. 12. A fire is waiting for them, burning in the second hell, which will be more terrible than the first. 13. Warn your children then and chastise them early, and know that this is a commandment of the Lord. 14. Those who suffer under the justice of the world : The injustice of the Lord is more just than the judges of the world. 15. And you will give heed to these words as to a lamp burning in the darkness, so that your souls will develop. 16. The Lord Lord mocks the deficient worldspirits, and makes them perish like flowers in burning storm. 17. Isn't it the Lord who lets kingdoms come up and lets them perish again ? Fear Him who carries the right to bend the earth and the heavens and everything which is there in. 18. Do you not know the difference between justice and injustice ? Let then go those who do not even know the difference between their left and right hand. 19. Those who search justice, search justice in the Lord. But rather let yourself be beaten, for the chastisements of the Lord lead to bliss. 20. Are you then already without sin that you do not have to be beaten anymore ? Let then go all the selfpity and the false worries which destroy your soul and let you sit on the chair of Eli. 20. Search then for a good judge who will not spare your flesh, so that you will be delivered from yourselves. 22. Become then a second human, and let your mind become enlightened. 23. Grow then up before the Lord, to grow out of the reasonings of the young. Lay your thoughts silent in God. 24. You will laugh about the many wildernesses of youth, for they are like the winds of the demand. 25. And you know this demand as a child of the Lord, opening her mouth to the playing of the game. 26. Many winds you can not avoid, but the Lord will show you holes in His Forest, through which you can escape.

The suffering of the young

1. By many tears you see the bottles of the Lord, and you who carry these bottles are older. 2. You who are young you have to suffer a lot, but watch yourself that you do not despise the suffering, so that it will not flee from you and you will starve. 3. Yes, for in the last of days many will search the death, that which they have mocked and despised so much, and they will not find her. 4. And then they will search the darkness, but it will flee from them in fear. 5. Yes, then you who were healthy beg to the Cross of Christ the Wild, but she will not let herself be known. 6. In those days the heavens will stay closed, and there will be a time of hunger. 7. And they will eat each other and persecute, those who have not eaten from the cross. 8. Be then as a disciple of the Second Christ, so that you will keep yourself virginal about these things. 9. The Lord will send the Karazure of the Second to you to guard your gates, and there will be light at your entry and exit. 10. Those who are disciples of the Second have received authority to become children of God. 11. Don't let yourself be devoured by the wildernesses of the first. You have grown after all. 12. Don't let yourself then be led to reasonings and battle about the baptisms, for the Second does not know any other baptism but the baptism of the Spirit. 13. If anyone wants to baptize his child for his conscience, do it then as in the Lord. If someone does not want to let his child be baptized, let it be, as in the Lord. 14. Let no one judge you about it. But those who have become grown they do not hang on to waterbaptisms anymore. 15. Know then that you cannot come to full growth when you still hang on to the waterbaptisms. Baptize yourself every day in the Spirit. 16. For these things are just shadows of the things which come. Come then to the waters of heaven and baptize yourself there over and over again, so that you will live for eternity in it and receive authority to find entry to the Forest of Heaven. 17. You who have been sprinkled as a child, let yourself be delivered. You who have been baptized as a grown-up, this was just the fear and demand of the times. You do not need a human to let yourself be baptized, for the Lord baptized in Spirit, ice and fire. 18. You know that in earlier times they let their children and animals getting baptized in the fire of the earth, and later in the water of the earth. You will then baptize in the ice of the spirit. 19. Let those who still terrorize each other with the baptisms of the flesh know that over such things the wrath of the lord will come. 20. You who are young : Honour those who are older and use the altar in fear and trembling. 17.

Prescriptions and roads of life

1. The Lord loves the softhearted. Be then slow to judge, so that the Lord will not digest your soul. 2. The Lord hates the gatherings of mockers. They will be mocked themselves and the dogs will eat their flesh. 3. For you have to know very well that no mocker or adulterer will inherit the Kingdom of Heaven. Separate yourself from those who mock, so that you will not fall under the same judgement they are under. 4. Cursed are you who has a shelter for an adulterer, for they will be devoured together with the adulterer. 5. The Lord will not keep innocent him who takes an adulterer in house. 6. The Lord will make him into a mockery in open city, and will make him bare among the wolves. And his flesh will be eaten a threefold. 7. Blissful are those whose eyes are in the Lord, for they will close like ebb and flow. 8. Blissful are those who have given a cup of cold water to the prophets of God, and double blissful are those who have poured wine for the prophets of God. 8. For they will receive the wages of a prophet. Cursed are those who do not care about the prophets of God. 9. They will receive the wages of the second Izebel and Jom. 10. And those who complain : complain in the Lord. And some of you have been as angels in this. 11. Blissful are those who read from the scriptures of the Lord. Do then the Word of the Lord, so that He will not take you away and deliver you to deception. 12. Blissful are those who hunger for justice. They will not suffer damage from the fourth death. 13. Blissful are those who ponder for they will be saved from many sins. 14. Yes, they will come close to the forecourts of paradise, and the house of Marion. 15. Cursed are those who terrorize the prophets of God, for they will carry the yoke of the prophet. 16. The softhearted then will inherit the earth and guard her fruits. 17. They will lead the youth to insight and they will not die till in length of days. 18. Yes, for them is the region of peace. They will be called singers of lullabies. 19. Cursed are those women who take the insight of their men away, for their fruits will be eaten by dogs. 20. And see, they are then like the trees of satan, such women, and not far from being rooted out. 21. Let your lives then be like the Word of the Lord and the Second. 22. Cursed are those who cut off their beards without borderless. For this is known to the Lord as the slaying of an animal. 23. Yes, unholy priests they are, and the Lord will not count with them. 24. The beard is then the jewelry of the man, full of the cords of the animals of heaven. Cursed is then a prophet without beard, unless the Lord keeps him in a time of clearing. 25. Men, do not shave your chesthair, unless the Lord has commanded that. Who lets hair grow and who shaves, do it in the Lord. Who then despises a man for his hair or baldness, the Lord will punish you. You are equal to one who eats flesh. 27. Who then a woman despises for her baldness, it is better that a millstone be tied around the neck of such a mocker. 28. Who are you to judge someone's hairgrowth or baldness ? Is that not up to the Lord ? The Lord then sees the heart. 29. You will chastise heavily a child who mocks an old man, for this wound reaches to his soul. 30. You will isolate this child for a while and not allowing him to enter gatherings of his age. 31. Yes, you will mock this child with the double measure, so that his bad habit of mocking will be corrected. 32. Parents who do not chastise their mocking children will come under a strict judgement of the Lord. 33. Those who condemn chastising parents, the fire of the second hell waits for them. 34. Ongraceful will be the judgement on such. 35. Do not mock those who are thick or thin, tall or short, for such mockers are not allowed in the church of the Lord. 36. Do not hinder each other to enter the gates of the spirit. 37. You do not have any idea what thick or thin is, for your eyes are blinded. Search then for the eye of the Lord. 38. For the thick of God is thicker than that which is in the world, and the thin of God is thinner than the reed of the rivers. 39. He who does not count with these things, with them will not be counted. 40. You then who are in the Lord, you have come closer to the thick of God by Spricht. 41. Those then who use their eyes to abuse others, the Lord will pull out such eyes.

Be then like the animals

1. Dress soberly before the face of the Lord, equal to nature, with an eye on the poor. Unless you have gotten other prescriptions from the Lord about it. 2. The Lord has given his prophets spirits of freedom. Do not let yourself be bound. 3. Whatever way you dress yourself : Do it in the Lord. 4. The Lord loves the clothings of foreigners for they are preparing the way of the lord. 5. The Lord doesn't care about clothing, for it turns the senses away from the Second Christ. 6. See then the bareness of nature and it's coverings, and separate yourselves. 7. Do not boast with your bodies, for they are bodies of death under the old and first covenant. Put then on the second, and the lord will change your flesh. When you glorify, glorify in the Lord. 8. Didn't nature then give you enough lusts ? Be like the animals and keep yourself pure. 9. Learn to know the animals of God, so that you will fulfil the law. 10. When you are either bare or dressed, do it in the Lord. The Lord Lord is a digesting fire. 11. Search your coverings in the Lord and do not be impure. Read in old books to know the mysteries of the Lord. 12. The Lord has hidden much in old treasures. Do not waste your time with impurity. 13. Let your wounds satisfy you, so that you will receive tender, delicate wings of the Lord. 14. You who knows the Lord, you will be bare for awhile, but these days are like the coverings of the Lord. 15. Learn then to know his secrets. What is bareness and covering is defined by the Lord. 16. The bare of God is your covering. The feathers of the Lord are then his bareness. Blissful are those who carry these.

The angel Rumah

1. You have not laid down yet the sin which stand so lightly in the way. 2. And these sins are like sons of an old time. Put then on the Spirit of the Lord and cling to the spirits of god, so that you receive the sons of joy and holiness. 3. There are then no fruits without the bareness of the lord. 4. And you have to strive after it as after gold cleared in light. 5. The impure of the Lord is then purer than the humans. But the Lord of your souls did not destine you to impurity, but to clear purity. 6. And you have to give heed to it as to the snow of the lord, which has made some of those who were in darkness whiter than the white of the sun. 7. You then who do not know the ice of the Lord, how can you know the snow ? 8. Let those who adorn themselves, adorn themselves in the Lord. 9. And only those who are prophets of the Lord are allowed to adorn themselves. Either to destroy or to build up. 10. Let your jewelry then be inside. The silence of a woman is her jewelry, and those who have tears and with that having the tears of the prophets, have the snow of God as jewelry. 11. Yes, they are like the second Pazzia before the Lord, as the holy Magdalene. 12. Yes, over such waked the angel Sarsia with her tenthousands. 13. They are educated and instructed by the angel Rumah, who carries the fear of the prophets. 14. Holy women they are, and the creation of the lord waits in great intense pains of childbirth and an oustretching longing for the revelation and manifestation of the daughters of God. But those who do not know the ice of the Lord do not have part in any way in this case and her races. 16. Know then the tree of God burning in heaven, for her fruits fall on the earth to scorch the fallen. 17. And their ashes will be like oil and foam in the jewelry of the prophets. This speaks he who has the face as of a fire flame.

The Wild of God and the Freedom

1. Know then that at the end of times there will come mockers, to mock the holiness. And those of the inquisition will stand up in the last of days and they will have many martyrs. 2. Take then good care for they are having the second mark of the beast. 3. But the Lord will guard your heads, you who have come closer to Him. 4. Do not fight too much against the stones of the Lord, but you do this because of your youngness. 5. When you become older you will rest in these things. 6. Know then that the angel Rumah leads and guards the children and she holds the times of the Lord in her hand. Yes, she is an engel of the Lord. 7. She is who guided the planets in their orbits, and she will let you go from year to year. 8. Yes, she is the guard of the seasons of the Lord, and she blesses and brings to rest those who are older. 9. Yes, you are also on your way to the shelters of rest, for the youth is hard and wild. 10. But you also know that the wild of God is wilder than the world, and the hard of God is harder. 11. So is He then the stone of bliss, and He also sent you his goat of bliss. 12. And He has hit milk out of the rock, to overflowing. 13. The Lord Lord has not left you alone as orphans, but He led you from milk to milk. 14. Now, with the years, you have come to the Matadok, in which he has prepared rest. 15. Battle then to enter in, but do now work with the elbows, and do not despise the nestling. 16. Be then as birds of heaven, giving heed to the seasons of the Lord. Teach each other there in and let each other free. This is also bonded to the ice of the Lord and His commandment. 17. Let then the chains run, so that you will not be under pressure. 18. The Lord has given you the force to forget things and to revise things. So there are then many languages of the Lord. 19. You do well to learn the languages of the humans and the languages of angels. Do not cling too much to one thing, but learn to understand the hearts. The Lord has many cords. 22. Serve then the Lord in the Spirit of Freedom, and serve each other there in. 23. The Word knows then many provinces.

About young and old prophets

1. Give much time to translating, so that you will fulfil the commandments of the apostles and quench the fights. 2. You have then received a flame of the lord before his face, to hear him. 3. Do not despise the wild and the folly of the young prophet, but bring them to rest so that they will save you. 4. Do not keep away insight from them, and translate their words as Word of the Lord. 5. Release them from their chains, but teach them also about the yoke. They then carry the yoke of the prophets and the animals. 6. Give them ice and fire, but do not leave the fire out of it, so that they will not get bitter to you. 7. Do not humiliate them and do not put them to shame, so that they will not harvest irritations about you and leave you in your older days. 8. The Lord Lord is a digesting fire. The Lord is also revengeful to those who have harmed the prophets in their younger years. 9. Let then old prophets be familiar with wounds and carefulness, and those who search the things of the spirit, let them guard the young prophets. 10. Know then that this is a commandment of the Lord. 11. Blissful are then the older prophets who are wild and folly, for they will be called servants of the Lord, and carry His feathers. 12. Yes, for the wildness and folly of the prophets are their jewelry, if they come from the hidden and return there. They will be like ebb and flow of the Lord. 13. And with this jewelry they have great force over the demons of the second, and the force to know the Lord in all things. 14. Yes, and the karazure will roar to these and serve them. Let then the ice and the silence be as your jewelry, so that the shells of the spirit can come and you won't be gnawed at, for the Lord Lord is as a predator. 15. You then all who live in purity have the Second Blood as your covering, so that the Lord will not wrath against you. 16. Revise then your old thoughts, and let them become grown so that the Lord will not come to take the Second away from you. 17. Do not complain about those in ice. If they are either in fire or ice, that is up to the Lord. 18. His coldness is then hotter than the fire of man, and His heat is colder than the icycles of the earth. 19. There is no end to the number of laws, but a spiritual fighter with guile reaches till the Karazure. 20. You may know the saying : Roses blacked till the Aakse are indestructible. But not all roses have been blacked till the Aakse, and they are already lost.

Stone of the Hermitates

Hermitates

Rapunzel

1. Burning blackberry bushes are in the land of the Lords. Let me sleep, let me glide away. I don't want to speak, my words hurt me.
2. Please do not touch me anymore, it burns me and cuts me. Burning blackberries are in the land of the Lords.
3. Let me sleep, don't let them take me away. I can't handle life. It comes over me like death. They have sent the beasts of life to me, and I do not want to be dead as well. I prefer Golgotha Calvary. Where the doors are small, to the fields of Spricht.
4. They ride the sharks there. They feed me to the nightlatin, to the mystical of the Lords. I want to know His name, where do I come from ? Who are then Gods fathers, or doesn't He have them, and who are then his mothers to who he came with his hurt.
5. He gave to his son the crown of thorns , as a heritage of His mother. Like a lighting child I was. Now I am heavy and tired. I am on a travel, a mystical journey, to the birds who created Him.

6. Or did He create himself. Where did He come from ? There are so many questions in love.

7. Please, show me the road, show me a cord. The old roads are blocked here, forbidden by some. Lord, punish them who established the canon, who made cages for your sheep.

8. Those who followed the herder for the meat, punish them, don't let them get away with it. They hid your name. They have created the fence of ages. They who still eat flesh try to block these histories in their fears.

9. You who eat the cow, you eat the motherheaven. Don't you know that animals preach Gods mysteries ? His mother was like the cow. Why would you close those heavens ? You who eat the pig, you eat the fatherheaven.

10. Why would you follow the woman of the catlikes and her sons ?

11. Seven sons I gave to you, seven sons I brought as the growth of love, because you have loved me. Seven sons I have given you, seven sons I brought as the fruit of the embrace, which you have to me.

12. Come, let us dance in the pastures, where a lost road will lead us.

13. Come let us dance in the fields, in the wildernesses, don't let your thorns block you. Don't let your thorns block you to taste the bliss.

14. They sting me deep to open wells of honey. Seven sons I gave to you.

15. At the old window I stand, cracks in the walls. Could I just reach to the moon and the stars like the birds of heaven. And under this fire, it burns me away.

16. Through ditches I have stumbled to find your hand. Come let us go away now, or I can't anymore.

17. Come let us go, we have been here for too long. Now it's time to embrace, and to fly away together.

18. Over the fence of ages, over the doghedge, there where Moses still suffers, and the nation is still in slavery.

19. We are free now, let those who can follow follow me. Rapunzel, locked up in the tower for so long.

20. Your hair now long enough, to touch the bottom. I pull myself up on you. But when I came above, you had died already.

21. Your hair was grey, and depraved. Now I stood there alone, there in that high tower, my beard started to grow, and I had to wait like an age. Those who will pull themselves up on my beard, will find me dead.

22. The story of two lovers, we only find each other in death. You were the one who found my beard there, Rapunzel, that was you.

23. I have been stung by thousand roses, they brought me to a pasture of love, where cows bloomed at the trees, in Brannan they were. I can't eat anymore, nor sleep, they intoxicated me.

24. Oh roots of grace, they reach deep to put sinners ashame. Grace is only for the pure of heart, those who have purified their hearts.

25. Oh, roots of grace, they reach deep to ashame liars. They are only for those who are just.

The Cure of Izu

1. And I saw a statue falling from the heavens, and the statue crept slowly up as against a mountain. And the statue stood up and got great power. And the statue had toes made of different sorts of gems and metals.

2. And I saw books opening in the heaven and the toes of stones and metals began to break off one by one.

3. And when the first toe of stone and metal had broken off I saw a door opening in the heaven, and on this door it was written : Brannan.

4. And the flies of heaven came to the earth to sting those who ate cows. And big bumps appeared on those who did not repent.

5. And when the second toe of stones and metals had broken off I saw another door opening in the heaven, and on this door it was written : Lapondria.

6. And the Lord spoke : Now the Karazure will come to the earth, the wasps of heaven. And I saw those who ate pigs becoming fire red, and those who didn't repent got big inflammations everywhere.

7. And the Lord spoke : the light has now come to the earth. Woe them who still eat of the flesh when the third door will open.

8. And I saw the third toe of stones and metal break off, and this toe was very huge, and began to roar to the heavens.

9. And the saints in these days had to bear many tribulations because of the roaring.

10. And the Lord sent his angel and spoke : let then now the third door be opened. And I saw a huge door getting opened, and her light shone to the deepest of the earth. And I saw a book of ice appearing before the gate, and the light was like the silver.

11. And the Lord spoke : Now is the moment Izu will get cured. And He spoke about the nipple of the Lord. And milk began to stream and this milk was sweet.

12. And on the door it was written : The Great Canaan. And the Lord directed Himself to the Small Canaan, and they wore high purple hats. And the Lord spoke : See, you have become one with the merchants of the earth. And I saw a fourth toe breaking off, and this toe was like flesh, and she had many weapons. And the Lord spoke : See, she has brought damage to the plantlife.

13. And the toe started to burn and began to scream against the saints and the prophets.

14. And the Lord sent an apostle of heaven, and his power was great. And see, the toe was like a woman, and the apostle began to speak to her, thousand and sixtythree days.

15. And under the covenant of Hosea he came to her and she gave birth to a book of intoxication and ice. And from the book wine began to stream and many came to rest and intoxication.

16. And the Lord cured many hearts.

Izu becoming Big

17. And the Lord brought up an army of prophets in great pains of childbirth and made them big, and He gave birth, saying : Let then the male principle be fertile.

18. And the Lord began to sift the army of prophets, for those who didn't want to be like the children were not allowed to enter the fellowship with the Lord.

19. And the Lord started to lay punishments on those who ate chickens, and a fourth door was opened in the heaven.

20. And those of the Karazure began to devour those who had not repented from the eating of chickens.

21. And these were the days of Lapsalvania, and these days were big. In these days the flies of hell rose in revolt at the spiders of heaven, but Izu began to become big.

22. And in those days there was a shelter in Izu, and the disciples of the Lord began to bear His nipples to supply the nation with milk of the heaven. And this milk was sweet.

23. And Izu got a heavy cup which could only be carried by him, and a staff which only he could carry. And he began to feed the nations and to beat them.
24. And the chickens of the heavens came to the earth, and they spoke : 'Yes, Eminius is truly great.'
25. And the Lord blessed Izu, while the fifth toe of the statue began to break off. And cold came to the earth, in sevenfold, and the toe became as a woman.
26. And again the Lord sent an apostle of the heaven, to come to her in the covenant of Hosea.
27. And great tribulations came to the earth. And many went into captivity, but Kabbernal began to guard the saints, and became flesh.
28. And a fifth door got opened in th heaven, named the blue fire, and this fire was as the burning ice, and become as a sun.
29. And the seals of the dogs were broken, threehundred and sixty in number.
30. And a statue appeared in the heaven, and she bore a beak as the toe of birds, and the head of the statue looked like a spider.
31. And the Lord spoke : 'This is the sixth toe, and this toe is holy.'
32. And I saw the statue which had fallen out of the heavens and had rissen again, and it was stumbling. And the name of the holy toe of the birds was Perlottia, and she led a crowd of winged insects who began to eat the statue of the earth, while it started to crash down.
33. And the meal took seven full days.
- 3.

The Ships of the World

1. Let the large Metensia lead you then to the ship of the love. Then you will reach the heavengates of Kabbernal through sailing the waters of flowers.
2. Oh you, who reached the world ships, and the ship of Metensia, let her guide your winds.
3. Fear not the storms of the districts, because they will leave your jewels burning as candlesticks in the night.
4. Beg then passionately for gods tears, as honey for your boats.
5. And her hair will flame of anaesthesia, and you will see her sealed tears. Let her tears make you drunk, so that you bring comfort to her heart.

6. Don't quench her flame then, but break the seals of the waters.
7. And always higher her voice sounds, as she ascends on the mount, and her nightdress covers the waters, for the quiet nightlatin.
8. Her lullabies bring anaesthesia to the hearts, and brings the waters to silence.
9. In her tears the holy seed trembles, cloaked by her love.
10. Sharp arrows are on her bow, by wounds they find their way, to make paths in darkness.
11. Glorious are those who have approached her tears, her seven spirits.
12. And the lights of Spricht radiate in her tears.
13. Her mouths have been sealed. Let them speak. She brings sweet words and sweet wine, to bring anaesthesia to the hearts, to bring healing to those who are intoxicated.
14. Let her knowledge be your jewel, and let her wisdom wrap you. She has lightning in her eyes, with the snow as her mantle.

Metensia, Spirit of God

1. And let her voices be high, like the voices of the ukalien, the spirits and arxels of Kabbernal.
2. And let the ukalien bring her praise and wrap her.
3. Oh, let Metensia rise to the last heavens to fulfil her work.
4. Let her knowledge be intoxication, and her transparent dresses lead foreigners.
5. Let them bring her to the most holy as burning soft oil.
6. The most holy be like silver to you, purifying the hidden corners of the heart.
7. And in the flame of the lamp of oil ukalien come forward to fill the most holy and to purify it, as a present of the Lord.
8. And you will put the instruments of the Lord apart, to purify it in fire.
9. And Metensia will be His Spirit.
10. Let her words purify you then, so that you will be led by the flames of the ukalien to the new tabernacle.
11. And you will discover a void in you, and there you will see the Lord.
12. And the void will speak to you as to sons, and you will see the new heart, with the tables of Kabbernal.

13. You have come then to a purifying fire. Make yourself up then to receive the Eternal Spirit, with the ice that which burns for eternity.

14. You haven't battle against the sin to bleeding. You also don't bear Metensia's wounds in your heart yet.

15. Separate yourself from the generation of evul, so that you will not fade away under her hammerstrikes like a rose.

16. Make yourself up then to come to her holy mountain, and to see the light of her heart.

17. In pure warfare you will receive her Spirit. Battle then to flee from her wrath, then you will stand with her at the kettle of her wrath.

The Eternal Spirit

1. In words of fire we have loved her, and with precious stones we have clothed her.

2. The hearts of the ukalien have wrapped her in the hour of death.

3. They have lightened her heart in her motherscream.

4. Be then like the ukalien. Oh sons of Kabbernal, make then your hearts ready.

5. Let then the Word of the Spirit come to size in you and become as flesh.

6. For in the beginning when the Spirits of God came together, the mystery of the Lord was revealed, and he was like a child to silence older ones.

7. Recognize then the wisdom of the Lord, for He is the Soul of the Spirit.

8. And recognize then that He has poured out His Holy Spirit, to the end of times.

9. Watch the wisdom of the Lord, for his mystery is big.

10. A tight and pure part He will create in your innermost being.

11. In the beginning the Eternal Spirit soared above the waters and the directions of the wind of heaven.

12. Like a hen he has brooded you.

13. And where ukalien worship him, oh sons of Kabbernal, you will also be filled by His Spirit.

14. And they have no rest day nor night, for their eyes are focussed on His Face for eternity.

15. They are the visions of God who will become flesh at the end of the days.

16. Let then no one make you miss the prize by endless honourings and praises, but become like the Statue of God and like his holy ukalien.

17. Be then like the angels of heaven and walk with them. Then you will fulfil the law, and you will be a child of the Lord.

18. In the hour of death you have loved your queen. Be then of courage and repeat her laws many times, to all eternities, to receive her eternal spirit.

19. Don't lose courage, you small children, for they who hold tight will be like the trees of heaven.

20. Believe then that the Eternal Spirit has come to you, and it will be done.

21. Believe then that he will purify you, and it will be like your faith.

22. And who believes then that the Eternal Spirit has rescued and preserved him to all eternities, will not suffer damage from the fourth death.

23. And the Spirits of God gave birth to the Eternal Spirit of the Lord on His day.

24. Let then no one go away from his destiny anymore.

25. And the voids have brought the cure.

6. The Soul of the Lord

1. And the eternal word came to me, and the eternal soul, and in me there was poured out an eternal spirit.

2. And the Lord confirmed his Spirit.

3. And in the evening coolness He came to me and showed me the Spirit of all Eternities.

4. And a torrent as of fire started to clothe my chestframe and flashes of lightening served me.

5. And the Spirit was like a tree full of eyes, having no rest day nor night, and the Lord spoke these words : 'Blessed are those who live in the temple.' And I saw a tree of nipples coming forth from the moss to devour the tree of eyes. And the Lord spoke : 'Now it is the time that the Spirit battles against the eternities, and He will overcome.'

6. And the Lord spoke about the throne who was established over all eternities, and this was the Soul of the Lord. 7. Let then the Soul of the Lord fill you, and you will be called anfitate.

8. Let then the army of anfitates rejoice as with a birth.

9. And as a burning heart-oven and the zooming of heaven the day will come, that the Soul of the Lord will fill the bottom and the surfaces of the earth.
10. And the holy flesh will burn like the nipple and she will watch a new day.
11. Yes, the Double Lord will put a heart of holy flesh in your innermost being.
12. And her eyes will come to rest, to watch holy days.
13. See then, the days of Metensia are near.
14. Her temple-brooks will stream and they will fill the land.
15. Let the trees rise up then in your hearts, then you will fulfil the law.
16. Your eye will watch a new day. Let she who guards the hearts be your guide.
17. And a new morning will lighten your heart, and the iron ties around your heads will be taken off.
18. So it will be that the Soul of the Lord is as rider on his horse, to lead the saints to the wells of all eternities.
19. And they will find rest in eternal fields, where all tears will be removed.
- 7.

The Second Hell

1. Second Metensia, mighty love, wide jaw, flaming roses throught the dark wood. Second Metensia, hair full of Love, hair full of gold, wearing an apron full of pink fragilities, full of tenderness.
2. Windows where clouds are behind, the dark hand takes me away to a bitter land. There is no escape possible, life has taken it, where kings stand they can do nothing. She has bound hands.
3. Dark metensia, dark song, searching for us in huge sadness, waving hair, dreams of gold, deep thirst in the depth of the wood. Metensia, my powers have run out, Spirit of God, is this my fate. Who then has hurt me so.
4. A dark hand took my love away. Who has done it. Or is it you Lord, with unintelligible water through my tears, taking my last pearl with you.
5. I have lost everything, please, wash me quickly, then it is over. Spirit of Metensia, Spirit of second Love, I do not pray anymore, my tears hurt me. I am like muted, like a blind person I walk on the road, no breath, bound, and almost deaf.

6. I do not pray anymore, I can't anymore, my words are stuck, my head cut off, my beard worn off. I can't call anymore for a long time, and thinking is a too big task. I sink down deeper and deeper, to be in fire, everything is unpure.

7. Let me sail away, let me perish. I have lost courage, I can't handle it anymore. Butterflies of heaven, too far gone, I cannot touch them, and they don't touch me, I do not believe in love anymore.

8. There above they have it all fine, I think in my pain and rejection. Everything hurts, even that which is still around.

9. I can't bear any voice anymore, the lights hurt my eyes. I am like blind and almost deaf, I cannot bear anything, no voice, no soft hand, everything is unpure, and everything hurts.

10. Second Metensia, where do I live for, I have lost all hope, everything is in vain, ending in battle. We receive to lose it again, where does this end, is this the second hell.

Without hope, still rescued

1. Second Metensia, we all go through the second hell, left alone by you, oh Spirit of God, you purify us in your fire. Everything is unpure, everything is depraved, how blind we are, You see it every morning. Oh, Spirit of Metensia, have mercy with us. We tread your creation down, we created the memory as a trauma in the forest.

2. Spirit of Metensia, there is no hope for us anymore. We have sinned, You Spirit has left us.

3. Eternal ruins you have left to us. From the book of heritages you have erased us, and still You love us, still you hold us dear.

4. Spirit of Metensia, grace be with you, through thorns you watch roses, you still keep on believing in us, for weren't we like orphans, in ignorance we sinned against You.

5. That's why You have forgiven us, and you have woven pure clothes for us, in the sweet wood you gave us a place.

6. Deception on deception came to us, and we haven't heard Your voice, delivered to the caverns of the second hell, our souls unlightened, you broke our strings one by one, you punished in your love, we didn't dare to move.

7. After great grief, we bathed then in your love, forever in the fountain of loving, you flew over forests to prepare a place for those whose hearts had gone astray, you didn't forget anyone, you let them return. Tender wine, sweet apple, grace is with you.

9. Pure Heart

1. Cool love, moonshine, I can't go anywhere. Your Spirit has surrounded me, the second Metensia. Father found me in his love, I didn't know where I had to go.

2. His Hands carried me, to very close to Your heart, soft flame, shining fire.

3. Everything woven through your love, also my sins, you brought them into your work. You know how to forgive, you know how to weave. Nothing is then impossible for you.

4. You can use everything, also my fallen nature to You, Lord, how many tears did I bring You, and where have you brought me to.

5. Second Metensia, heart of sweet love, source of tenderness, how much have I hurt you.

6. I don't want to live with it, my conscience devours me, return to me. Lord, I lived in ignorance, my sin I didn't mean it, my dark heart let me think something totally different. Now you have broken it, the line between you and me, and I can only hope.

7. Where do I have to go without Your Spirit, I have always been pure. Never I have sworn you off, please don't leave me alone.

8. The sin I did in ignorance, not knowing that your Spirit was in wrath about it. I was young, not knowing the difference between right and wrong.

9. I thought I served you, but I served the darkness. That cloak I have thrown off, I have always been pure, You who knows all hearts, you have to know this as well.

10. Do you not know my tears, there is still so much time for You and me together. Let us forget about everything and make a new beginning.

11. I was too young to understand everything well. Now I am old enough to hear well. Please, never let me go again.

To take nothing away

1. Let the things stay here, in this house of silence. We don't have the need, that someone takes them away. Look at those wounds, and those sins, revealing the wisdoms of God, look at those loves, look at that glory, they hold everything tight what we need.

2. Let the things stay here then, we will stumble with it. No, don't deliver us, these are the thorns in the flesh. That what you call sin, isn't that the right thing ?
3. And that right thing of you, isn't that a sin ? Let the things stay then, we don't have the need that a human helps us.
4. We have the Lord, and we are of the Lord, make therefore some space free. We want some space to talk, some space to live, more we do not ask. We have no need for vain speeches, for fables and piety, we just follow the Lord, like you do. Believe what you believe, we believe this.
5. We don't want to battle about it. We take the right in our hands for ourselves, you do that for yourself. Here our roads separate. Never come back.
6. Encounter is only in the Lord. Farewell for now. I can't believe you. I won't dream of you, nor think of you, give us our knowledge back. You have hurt us too much, would you add something more to it ?
7. Under the Karazure we are. Will you strike again, like you have done, you will regret it. When you long for your conscience to prick you, rise up then. We won't battle for it, the Karazure is enough for us.

The Karazure

8. And when you battle, battle in the Karazure. And when you rejoice, rejoice in the Karazure. They won't give you ever too much to suffer. Let the things stand here, in this house of silence. Take your cross upon you, and come to the next room.
9. You really cannot take anything with you but your cross. But at the entrance of the next room, you will have to deliver it back again as well, and your new house is ready when you have entered through the door, you of the Karazure. The new house, is also a new cross.
10. Everything is inside already. Believe me, don't come too close, for then you will regret it. The Double Lord is a consuming fire. Bear in your ability, and stay away from things. Learn to pray, don't break bones, have faith and love each other again.
11. And when you battle, battle in the Karazure, and when you leave things alone, stay in the Karazure. There is nothing which can stop you now, when you live in the Karazure, and you don't have to complain then, experience it, in this holy hour.
12. Children defeated in their hearts, through the barren dust of the past. Children here full of tears, often avoided by their age. They had rest nowhere, they found love nowhere. Friends betrayed them, but now they are with the Karazure.

13. Here is Love, here is attention. It doesn't have to be every time, when they sleep, others are the guardians on their post, there where silence rules, the second silence. Let the things stand there in the second house of silence, let the wet be dried, under her sun.

14. Have love among each other, and dry each others tears, like the sun of Metensia, at the hearts of the Karazure. Believe in each other, she has chosen you. Let the ropes lead you then, to the new city.

15. Don't fear the darkness, but fear the Lord. See, the Karazure has come to you, bearing the Sword of the new hour.

1. Book to open the sealed thunderstrikes. You have then heard of the thunderstrikes already, but you have not understood it. There are seven mysteries before God's Throne, about which should not be spoken, and that was why the Lord sealed those till the endtime. 2. For in the last of days the books are opened, and you will see the light of doves float down. 3. And He spoke then : Open now the seal of the first thunderstrike seen by John. And I saw a bird floating down from heaven, and the bird became very great. And she carried the first thunderstrike in a bowl as the appearance of an angel. 4. And I was hit down by a fist of wind, and I got a vision of the Lord about the three crosses of Golgotha. 5. And one of the reavers had comforted Jesus there, and Jesus spoke to him the words that he would be in paradise with him at present. And this is then the greatest mystery of the lord, that he had sent his angel to comfort the Lord at the cross. 6. And this angel became flesh, stole of the rich and brought it to the poor, and committed crimes to those who did massive injustice and terrorized many. And so this had to stay hidden to the last of days. 7. The Christ always had a hidden comfort, and that name was great, for Renok was as the angel of the Lord, as the hidden of God and the hidden Son. 8. So he was like a brother of Christ, to comfort and make blissful those who came to the hidden. And so he was then the soft rage of God, and His hidden rage, as the heart of God. 9. And Renok wasn't raised, for he had to stay hidden till the end of times. Blissful are those who have come to Renok and to His cross.

10. And the Lord spoke then : Open now for me the second thunderstrike by breaking it's seal. And I saw a lion descending from heaven, and his power was great. 11. And this lion carried the mystical of the Lord as clothes and rags around him. And these clothes had been torn and sewn again. And the lion started to roar and many fell dead on earth. 12. And I saw a goat appearing in open heavens, and he carried the dead, and his appearance was very terrible. And the Lord spoke : Renok will be the second Christ, who was hidden till this day. 13. And the goat started to move wildly and spin, and his eyes were white. And the Lord spoke : Now I will reveal, those angels and spirits, those heavens and hidden places, which have always been hidden in Renok to stay secret till this day. 14. And I saw another angel who was called Sarsia, but wasn't the Sarsia I knew. And she had many hidden places in her, and she was as the waters of the hidden and dark heavens. 15. And then the Lord spoke : Open now for me the third seal of the third thunderstrike and speak what you see in it. And fiery stings came to my head which turned into water. 16. And this water was hard and white and began to fizz. And I saw the staff of Renok rise up and he pointed at the lands of the red indians. 17. And the staff spoke : 'Blissful are those who come to Brannan.' And I saw Brannan becoming big for the Lord, and the lands of the red indians were torn. 18. And I heard weeping in heaven, for many days long, and the weeping was like the weeping of cats. And the staff spoke : Sevenfolded I will have to tear the lands of the red indians, so that it becomes pure before the Lord. And I saw Renok spitting on the torn lands, and a new tribe came forward. And they did not know the works of the old, but they were full of the Spirit. And they came to Renok, and brought him his beard back. And many other things they brought to restoration. 20. And Renok spoke : This is my holy tribe, and they will be of the Lord. And to Renok many comfort was brought, for He had brought so much comfort to the Lord. And from that day Renok was called the Comforter, of which the Lord had prophesied, and promised to all those who loved Him. 21. And to Renok much honour was brought, for he had hidden himself so long as a hidden guard of the Lord, who was crucified together with His Lord. So it is that they who have let themselves be crucified with the Lord brought Him much honour. 12.

1. And then the Lord opened the seal of the fourth thunderstrike, and there was a silence in heaven for a long time. If this silence took days or hours I did not know, as I had lost my sense of time. 2. And insects came out of the mouth of Renok, and they flew to the torn lands of the red indians and the new tribe, and they divided the tribe into ten tribes. And again Renok spat over them. 3. And there came a big rest to the ten tribes. And they carried the teeth of the Lord. And the first tribe of Renok was called Sinsabeine, and she was as the child of the horned snakes. And she was the daughter of Renok, carrying the cleared ice and the sweet. And the second tribe was called Abdal, and this was as the child of monkeys and oxes. 4. And Abdal became big before the eye of the lord, and brought much comfort. And he was called the child of comfort. And with Maasdo he went to restore Kabbernal. And like this Abdal, Maasdo and Kabbernal were big jewelry for the Lord, and they brought forth the worldships. 5. And the third tribe was called Tamille, and she was as the rat-child, and she became big for the eye of the Lord, and brought healing to many hearts. And the fourth tribe was called Tabulle, and she was as the child of the ravens. And she was bestowed with big wisdom and the force to clear the sweet and making it holy before the Lord. 6. And to her the Marion was given as a treasure, and with that she led her brothers and sisters in peace before the face of the Lord, and she was the joy of Renok. And the fifth tribe was called Sartarus, wearing many crowns. 7. To these many brocades and nightlatins came as the jewelry of heaven, and of the Lord. And the sixth tribe was called Akra, and she got much force over the stars, and was established to clear the soft. And she became big in the name of the Lord, and was like the fruit of Renok. 8. And Zoekru grew up before the face of the Lord, the seventh tribe, and she reigned over the thin and the thick, and had power to clear it. yes, she also had big force over fire, and could let it come down whenever she wanted, to do her works. 9. And so was then Sartarus Akra Zoekru as the Lord of darkness, established as jewelry of Sarsia of Renok. And the eighth tribe was like the Vatex of the Lord, and it was white, like a big white fire, and she was called Lakus, and carried the keys of the mysteries. 10. And to her the Esmeralda was given like a flowerdress, transparent of gleam, and she had many collars and openings. Yes, she the force over the locks of the Lord which were like lullabies in the night. 11. And Lakus became big for the Lord, and followed her father. And she was called the Imitator of Her Father. And she was the closest to her father's heart of all. 12. And the ninth tribe of Renok was named Oko, and he was like the rivers in their force. He was called the roaring lion of his father. And the tenth tribe was called Elma, and she guarded the animals of her father. 13. She was good for the orphans and widows and brought rest to her father, clearing his fires. 14. And then the Lord roared to open the seal of the fifth thunderstrike. And the flower-seas opened, and stories of the past were fished up, and they adorned each other with it. The animals of heaven began to appear, and Renok opened His temple. 15. And like this He became an Eternal Gospel, for He was the Comforter of the Lord, and the Hidden Son. And he gave force to all who accepted Him to become children of God. And like this the Gospel of Renok was preached to the whole earth. And His disciples spoke as the panther. And ice flew forth from the second Word, for it was the Word of Renok.

1. And the Lord took the seal of the sixth thunderstrike and she was like the burning lokogame. And the Lord bowed his head and told to his disciples about the judaskiss as about the heaviest suffering of Christ. He also told about the blindfold of Christ, the rag over his head, after which he was hit in the face and he was forced to prophesy who had hit Him. And the Lord told about the three scornrobes : the imperial scornrobe which He got at Herodus, and the scarlet scornrobe and the pupure scornrobe which he got at Pilaty. And this place was called Gabbatha. And the imperial scornrobe which Herodus put on Him made Him full of warlust when he descended in the netherworld. Yes, as a rebel he came to the underworld, to deliver prisoners, and to take captives of war with him. But this he did by the weapons of suffering, and by the wheel. Like this he descended in the netherworld as a resistance force through his suffering. So he was thrown into the depths of the netherworld and the underworld by his martyrship, and became manyfolded king of the underworld by this martyrship. Yes, by the scornrobe which Herodes gave, the shining garment, Christ came to the prisons of the underworld, where Korach's children were imprisoned, and those of the flood. 2. But also by the shining garment which Herod gave him as scornrobe he came to the prisons of Atlantis, of the first and the second earth. And here he freed many from the prisons of the underworld, those who had perished in earlier floods, and those who had perished by fire or ice. Also by the shining robe Herod wrapped around him He took many captives of war with him to the height. And He came to the place where Barabbas, the resistance soldier, came from. He was a rebel and a barbarian as a soldier against the Roman conqueror and the Greek heritage. So, by descending in the underworld manyfolded Christ took the place of Barabbas. Barabbas took by his deliverance the place of Christ. So Barabbas was the hidden mirror of glory, and the sixth sealed thunderstrike.

3. And like this Barabbas, the notorious prisoner, had opened the gate for Christ, by his deliverance, and he was the only one who could break the Greek foundation and it's seal. This is then God's mystery saved up throughout the ages. Yes, the Lord has built his heavens with these stones, and it wasn't revealed to his children.

4. Then the Lord opened the seal of the seventh and last thunderstrike, the heritage of John, and looked at his disciples. And snakes began to come forth from the seal, and the snakes came to the earth to open the old gates of the previous earths and creations. And the Lord smiled. And the Lord spoke with thundering voice, very loud : 'So it is that the seventh and last seal of the thunderstrikes has been broken, and the seventh thunderstrike will speak what has been hidden for centuries. Only several have carried the seed for this.' And a cloud of poison came to the earth, a very moisty cloud of the poison of snakes, and there was weeping on the earth. And the weeping rose to the heavens, because God had opened the last great secret of the thunderstrikes. And the secret came up like a snake, and began to speak, while times were spinning and fell apart. And the snake began to speak about the poison of the underworld, and the gallcup of Christ. Also the snake spoke about the mysteries of the judaskiss, and about the hidden scornclothes of the underworld Christ wore when he descended in it. And for a long time the snake spoke in ununderstandable languages, the languages of the underworld, and the languages of the old creations. And snake-tongues of fire began to come on the heads of the disciples, and they also spoke in other languages. And the snake spoke : So is then Barabbas the cornerstone of the Eternal Gospel. And the snake opened a gate, and that gate led entirely to the first earth. And the first earth existed in two ages : the age of the Dorga, and the age of Atlantis and the Troiade. And the seventh thunderstrike of John led them inside a hall of visions and dreams. 5. And the Lord guarded them, for he had sealed their hearts, and the Lord spoke as a wind. And the hall divided itself in two parts. And in the first part there were windblows, and in the other part there was fire. And the fire started to move itself to the other part, but the disciples stayed unharmed, for the Lord was with them, and guarded them. And again the fire started to move, and suddenly both parts were in fire. And the dreams and visions began to come to the disciples, and with the Lord they descended in the underworld. And the lord spoke to them with loud voice, and they were not caught by fear. And the Lord gave them rest and insight. And again they came to a hall, and this hall was divided in three parts. And here they also saw the later age of Atlantis on the second earth. And the lord showed them Barabbas, and the disciples were astonished. And they asked the Lord : How can a man who had already lived live again, and called by the same name. And the Lord said that it was a riddle and a mystery. The Lord had taken care of the fact that Barabbas would also be called Barabbas for the second time. And the disciples were in wonder. And Barabbas was a great man in the second Atlantis, and he led a great nation and a religion. And the god he served was Sorg Sorba. He took care that the orders of the Troiade in the second Atlantis would be raised up again, but many abused it, and Barabbas became like a wilderness. And they took him to a high rock, and threw him in a ravine. And like this Barabbas descended to the underworld, to the first Atlantis and the Dorga and her ages. And here he got chained to a rock, and birds ate of his soul.

6. So is then Barabbas the mirror and the paradox of Christ. And the seventh thunderstrike spoke : Like Barabbas represents the second Atlantis, Samson represents the first Atlantis. For Samson also lived in the first Atlantis, and see, he served the god Sorg Sorba. And he was also a great man, and led a great nation and a religion. And he was against the then reigning empire, for it was cruel. And samson had great philosophy and was intelligent, while Sorg Sorba had given him supernatural forces on earth. And in these days the angels Roda, Jonatras and Ramses were on earth, and see, they were called arxels, and god was called in these days Sorg Sorba. And Samson built a city, and after that a land, and let great cities fall. And Samson made the name of Sorg Sorba big, and of the python. And the Troiade grew up in those days and there were signs of fire at the heaven. And samson built a tower and that tower was very high. And Samson warned the people that there would come a flood. And he brought the people in sheltercellars of the tower. And like this God ended the then reigning empire. But later several disciples of Samson turned against him, and they deceived many of the people to rebuild the empire. Also several of the old empire had shelters underground, where they had hidden many. And the rage of God began to blaze and come over Samson, now even his own people were going astray. And Samson became hungry like a devouring animal when the Spirits of God came over him. And he caught fire and flame, and let lava descend from the heavens. And Samson devoured and tore down many by the fire of the Lord. And from that moment Samson drew back into the wilderness. And at the end of his days when he had become old, his forces went away from him. On a day they found him and hanged him. And the Lord took the body of Samson off the earth.

7. And also in the old Dorga ages there were prophets of the Lord on earth. So it was that the first age of the Dorga was of David, the second of Jakob, the third of Joseph, the fourth of Noah, the fifth of Solomon, the sixth of Isaiah, the seventh of jeremiah, the eighth of Habakuk, the nineth of Nahum, the tenth of Hosea, the eleventh of Jona, the twelveth of Haggai. And the thirteenth of of Solomon, who had built the biggest temple of the earth, to deep underground and high into the air as a tower. And the perimetyer of that temple was as countries put together, and of such a size there would never again be a temple. And Solomon brought judgement over the earth, and even over his own temple, for his priests were corrupted. And so it was that he was the last king of the Dorga. And his temples and mines were legendary, but see, they were devoured by fire. And Solomon walked through the fire and had authority over the fire, for the Lord was with him. And Solomon spoke with the Lord in languages of fire. And God led Solomon to an eternal temple.

1. And there were then many women who followed Christ. And among them was Mary Magdalene, from who seven evil spirits had been cast out, and whose deliverance had been written down in the book of Magdala. And among them there were also Johanna, the wife of Chussas, the steward of Herodes, Susanna, Mary, mother of Jacob, Joses and Salome, the mother of the sons of Zebedeus, and many others who served Him. 2. And one of them was weeping and went to stand behind him, at his feet, and began to make his feet wet by her tears and dried them by her hair. This woman was known as a sinner. And she kissed his feet and anointed them with myrrh. 3. And the Christ was accused by the pharisees, for she was a sinner. And she doubted him if he was really a prophet. And the Lord said : Cursed are those who are judging while they are doubting. Let those who doubt fear the Lord. 5. And the pharisee who had invited Him said : If such is a prophet, then he should know what and who this woman is who has touched him. She is a sinner. 5. And the Christ directed himself to Simon , while He pointed at the weeping woman and said : Do you see this woman ? I have come in your house. Water for my feet you have not given, but this woman has made my feet wet with tears, and dried them with her hair. 6. A kiss you have not given me, but this woman has not stopped kissing my feet since I have come in. 7. With oil you have not anointed my head, but this woman has anointed my feet with precious nardusmyrrh. 8. And the disciples were shocked, and one of them would betray him for thirty pieces of silver.

1. Once the sadducees came to Him, who claim that there is no resurrection. And they argued with Christ and asked questions to trick him. 2. And they put before him the question that when a widow marries again, with who does she have to marry in heaven. 3. And the Christ spoke : You fool yourself because you do not know the scriptures, neither the force of God. When someone rises from the dead they will be like the angels, and these don't marry. 4. But He spoke as in a mystery, as in the prophets there is marriage. 5. Only the Spirits of God marry then. 6. And the Christ educated and spoke in mysteries and riddles, for He was mystical. 7. And many twisted his words. And He spoke that the Christ has to suffer a lot, that He was the Truth, but that they all had to look forward to the Full Truth which would come. And with this He spoke about the Holy Spirit and the Spirits of God. 8. And He spoke : Cursed are those who look through the eyes of the lie, and deliver each other to the judges of hell. 9. It is better that their eyes will be pulled out, so that they will not see in eternity. 10. If your eye deceives you to sin, pull it out. For it is better not to have eyes, than to be cast in hell with both eyes. 11. If your foot deceives you to sin, cut it off. For it is better to live without feet than to be cast in hell with both feet. 12. Those who then take the gold and despise the silver : Cursed are you. Those who then take the silver and despise the gold : Cursed are you. 13. And the Christ did many great works, and began to speak about the greater works which would happen after Him.

1. And a door was opened in heaven. And I saw the Lord sitting in a cloud. And He spoke : Those who are on earth have registered their histories overwhelmingly and overboldly in the Word of God and they have stained many holy things by this. 2. Let them put these businesses in their history-books, and purify and clear the Word of God. 3. And the cloud came through the opened door outside and lifted me up. 4. And the Lord took many prophecies from the stained Word and brought them to the history-books of the prophets and prophetic books. 5. And He didn't allow them again to stain His Word. 6. And the Lord spoke : Preserve then the ancestral treasures and clear them. Stay away from My Word with unclean hands and keep My Word holy. 7. And many Spirits of God came free, for they had been quenched by powerless words. 8. And many prophets came to Glory. And the Lord added to their midst. And many angels who were blocked for a long time by rulers of hell broke through. 9. And the Lord spoke : Clear My Word, so that you will receive the Second Word richly. 10. Those who do not clear My Word will not have My Second Word either. 11. Open then the shaft of Eminius and the purple. 12. Know then the Holy Shaft in His Temple. You have then established your words by those who were no prophets, and those who had fleshly traditions. 13. Would you let those who were no prophets wake and guard over your souls ? You were in the hands of merchants. But the Lord has bought you free, 14. Let yourself then not be blinded again. Hold tight to what you have, and let yourself be cleared in fear and trembling.

1. The Christ came to hit the evil eye. If you still have the eye of humans, make sure it will not fall out. 2. Do not hang on to the eye, so that you will not fall in deception. Did the Christ not give you an eye ? 3. You live earthly, and you will also perish by the earth. 4. Blissful are those who cling to Christ, for they go from day to day, and the Lord saves them. 5. They then hope on a new covenant, and they cling to His Spirit, to atonement with the Spirits of God. 6. Let yourself then not be bound again. The Christ has led you out as being a foundation of your precious faith. Build then forth on this foundation. 7. You do good to cling to the Spirit of God as to a lamp, leading you to the Spirits of God. 8. For many hidden things the Lord has for those who serve Him. 9.

Would you then not build forth on this foundation, then you are open and bare for the storm. 10. The Lord then has given you apostles to establish the roofs. Be then all as apostles in the Lord. 11. You are then the burning silver before the Face of God, and soon the gold will come forth from this well. 12. Do not be attached to earthly gold but to the gold of the Lord.

18. By your pain you will see the Christ. By your pain you will see the roses, and their divine smells. 2. Yes, they are the kings of pain. And the Christ is full with them. 3. Do not despise the thorns in your flesh. And let them not be taken away before their time. 4. For such an apostle who does such things is an abomination before the Lord. 5. You will then separate yourself from such, so that the Lord will not separate you with them. 6. For such are a stench in the eyes of the Lord, and they will be counted to the excrements of cows. 7. Yes, and abomination before the Lord are these prophets who do not know His times. 8. Let the chains which are called protection grow to roses, and let the thorns grow to weapons, instead of throwing the seed of the Lord away. 9. The cross is then for those who serve the Lord to jewelry, but to those who sin it is to the excrements of pigs. 10. And the thornycrown is to a lovely odor of those who have his tears, but to the godless it is an odor of death. 11. If you suffer, suffer in the Lord, so that you will see the seed of healing. 12. The Lord leads you to the cross of Golgotha, so that you will see even greater grace. 13.

Preserve then as holy the nine books of the spirit in your hearts, as the Pure Word, so that you will see the silver of the Lord. The Second Word is then the gold of the Lord. You will become pure in the silver of the Lord, when you will keep the Words He gave to you. 15. They who stained the Word, have stained their spirit and soul. 16. And fizzing waters of the silver will guide you to Getsemane, where you will see the face of the Lord. 17. See then, for He spits fire and waters. Who spits, spit in the Lord. 18. He then, who brought the Word and His spit, to open the eyes of the blind, stands before you. 19. And He, and His Spirit and the spirits of God knock on your door. See then, they will be your judges.

1. Great Love has been shown in the plan of God, from the foundation of the heavens and the earth it has been kept hidden. 2. Who was then able to fathom His works ? Let those who open their mouth come with Wisdom of the Lords. 3. The fools will speak, and they will not hear, neither understand, each other, for the Lord has shattered them. 4. And so you were as a flower in the desert, reaching to the gates of heavens. If the Lord would take the desert away before it's time, see, you would have descended to hell. 6. Let your reasonings then not mock you, but know the Lord, whose words are pure. 7. You are then made holy in silver. The Lord will defend you and cherish your ends. The ends of the cross are like the white satin of the heavens. Does the nature itself not give you the solution ? 6. Let then the trees and bushes of your suffering grow, so that they will bring forth the blossom of the heavens. 9. Those who have cut off the suffering before it's time, they often suffer remorse and dryness. Yes, their only celebrations are now in scorn. 10. That the Lord sprays your hearts and showing you the treasures of the heavens. Come then higher, so that the Spirits of God will speak with you. 11. Do not have mercy with the sin which lives in you, and chastise your children, so that they will later reap in praise. 12. Some have worked hard, and the foundations laid by their parents are now of blessing to them. 13. Celebrate the feasts of the Lord, so that you will not sell your hearts to the world. They have nothing to eat, and they eat therefore each other. 14. You who have hunger, hunger as in the Lord, so that the Lord satisfy your heart.

1. There is no end to the singing of songs, and you pull with that many predators to you. 2. And some among you haven't counted with silence and therefore their faith was shipwrecked. 3. But some of you were slaves. The Lord has bought you free. 4. When you sing, sing in the Lord, and let your words be few. For the few of God is more than the many of man. 6. Try to be silent then, so that you will find a greater jewelry. 7. Practise yourself in silence, so that Wisdom and Rest will find you. 8. The Peace of the Lord comes on those who fear Him. 9. The Word then is as a Sword. How can you then win the war if your sword is not pure ? Make then sure that your sword will not turn against you. 10. You then have pure breath, all who have cleared the Word of God. 11. But several disciples among you will twist it to their own destruction. 12. Not all disciples are disciples of God, like not all apostles are apostles of the Lord. 13. Do not judge those who are in the deception, for the Lord sees their hearts. You could get deceived yourself. 14. Cling to the shafts of the Lord, forged in your hearts and soul, as an artful construction, by which you are bonded with the Spirits of God.

1. In the end, you will not care anymore, what others have said. In the end, the lord will tell you, what He has prepared for you all those times. 2. He has carried many sins with you, but the guilt will have to be solved in the works of the spirit. 3. With a horse you reach less as with a human. Aren't humans the most terrible slaves ? 4. Who broke them ? Who gave them what they deserved ? 5. When you carry, carry in the Lord, and let those who want to sin perish. Do not carry their diseases and their heavy burdens. 6. Only forgive those who forgive, for this is what the Lord does as well. 7. When you forgive, forgive in the Lord, so that you are not a hypocrit, or one who throws pearls before the swines. 8. For precious is the forgiveness of the Lord, only given as wages to those who work hard. 9. With a horse you reach less than with a human. Are humans not the most terrible slaves. 10. So is then forgiveness to those who fear Him, so that they will fear Him even more. 11. By giving forgiveness as expensive presents, he bound the hearts of those who feared Him. 12. Blissful are those who have been bound by the Lord, for they have been made free from the bondages of the world. 13. And the ties of the Lord lead to freedom. 14. Now the wages of the Lord are precious, and abundance with presents, as a lovely odor in His holiness. 15. He who calls you, comes closer to you. He has not forgotten about you. He has counted your deeds. 16. Yes, they attract his forgiveness, for they have covered His tears with comfort, and his wounds with herbs. 17. Blissful are those who do the works of the Lord, for they will receive forgiveness. 18. The wages of the Lord is great over those who search Him. 19. As precious oil poured over their heads. 20. The Lord speaks in grace, to those who gave grace. 21. In precious presents we have lived, for we were of the Lord. 22. I then Paul, speak manyfolded to you, for my soul is with the lord, and your soul is there also. 23. Three times are known to the Lord, to fulfil the borders of His Word. 24. The Lord makes His borders known. He also established times, seasons and their borders in the snow. Make then sure that you will give heed to Him as to a lamp. 25. Have I come to let you become dry ? Surely not. Let the dry ones make each other dry. 25. I have come to speak words of life, as apostle and servant of the Lords. 27. See, the weak has come to the garden of the Lords, as seed of tenacity. 28. I have then the wounds of the Lord in me as shields.

1. Disciples of the pure Word, have then love for each other, so that the seed come to the Eternal Gospel. 2. I have brought to you this gospel from the beginning. Therefore I was a persecuter of the church. 3. The Lord has brought me grace, for I did it because I did not know. My hands are therefore clean, and I will keep them clean. 4. Those in Ephesus I urge to put on the spiritual armor. Do not battle against each other, but against the workings of the flesh and the evil powers. Lay then down all the impurity which stands so lightly in the way. 5. Put on the helmet of salvation, so that you will grow in your faith. 6. And to those who the Lord has given the sword : Stay in His Love, and do not be sharp of tongue. Who rages, rage in the Lord. 7. Stay then on the road of faith, knowing that you have an opponent. 8. Do not run, but use guile. Hasn't the Lord given you boots of the peace of the gospel ? See then, the gospel is guile.

9. The Christ overcame the darkness then in his weakness, not in his strength. Every weakness in the Lord is guile. 10. Raise then your shields up as the wounds of the Lords, to ensnare the arrows of satan. 11. For his wounds speak in thunder of the coming judgement. 12. You have then seen lights in many colors, which form the pallet of deliverance. 13. And when you have received the eternal Gospel in your hearts, then you have a double sword. 14. Therefore strive after such presents of the Lord very seriously. Blissful are those who walk such paths, for those have been given authority to come to the Spirits of God. 15. Do not hinder them to the entry, so that your own entrances stay blessed. 16. And make sure that you will not accuse any of these little ones, for the Lord has stored them up to comfort. 17. Let then the lamp which flames not be quenched.

1. The young has to suffer a lot, until he sees God's Glory. The Splendor of the Lord waits on the young under a tree to jump on him. 2. The youngling is pulled to the center in the years of slavery, until the bow of the spirit pierces him, and he is pulled to the darkness, where the nightsong sets him free. 3. The dream comes as a deliverer to high towers, to bring them to the reed. 4. The youngling waits for things which will never come, but the Lord will give him ships which will never perish. 5. The youngling learns to sleep, to go to the nighttrouper. 6. They do not despise him because he is young, they see his silent tear. 7. The youngling learns to know the trees, and the mysteries of the forest.

7. The birds which give him lessons, after his fall. The spirit has pierced his heart. 8. His wounds let birds speak, and his cross guides animals of the forest. 9. It is enough for him to live in pain, and to drink of this wine. 10. He never wants to go back, the silver speaks to him from the air. 11. The ice brought him here and made the strings stiff. 12. Beware, his heart is as a young lion, devouring those who despise the poverty. 13. The poverty was a key here, and he learned to cherish her. 14. The ravens crowned him as king, and his rags made him wise. 14. He knelt before her, and gave her the key of the old riches.

1. They found each other in nakedness, then they let everything fall, and covered each other with that which the forest dropped for them. 2. They fought with lions and lost their grief. They were kings of the wilderness. 3. They found the cross in primeval old times, covered in snow, that which the heaven dropped for them.

1. And I saw a snake named Leviticus, and his skin was grey and of hard bony growth. And he had done horrible things. He had come from the sea to deceive the saints and to terrorize them for a long time. 2. and many became bitter to God, and others began to call God for help. But the Lord kept His gates closed. 4. And Leviticus carried a holy sword which He had stolen from the temple of the Lord. 4. But an angel of the Lord came floating from heaven, to hit the snake and throw it in a nearby pit. 5. And she closed the pit above the head of the snake, and brought the key to a most holy temple. 6. And Leviticus began to call loud, and his sound was so hard, that he could still deceive many saints. 7. But those who kept serving the Lord he terrified in the night. 8. After a while the Lord sent a fire to the pit, and called the pit the Second Gehenna.

And I saw another beast coming out of the sea like a panther, and he was called Deuteronomium. And he had devoured many holy things, and went out to deceive the children. And he gave them terrors in the night. And the Lord spoke : It is time now to clear my word. And an angel rose up from the heavens to hit the panther and his followers with the ban. And the Lord then, who is Spirit, said this : Much bloodguilt sticks to this beast, and He sent the beast to the Second Gehenna, where the beast got torn by wild lambs. And the dread of these predators was so great, that the heavens and the earths trembled.

And the Lord poured out a bowl full of blood, to clear the Word. And he established apostles to bring the cleared word to the nations of the earth. 26.

1. And a lion named Numeri made himself great to the heavens, and he who guarded the book Joshua brought a vat full of ice to the gates of heaven. And this vat was almost as large as the earth itself. And the Lord rose from His throne and sent His angel, but he was hindered for thirty-nine days. 3. And the angel could only speak : 'The Lord will punish you.' So large was the terror of these spirits. 4. And if they could they would push the Lord from His throne. 5. But the Lord had already defined their times and perimeter. And the Lord spoke to His apostles : Bring to the holiness now the book of genesis and the book exodus, and cut in it with the Sword of the Spirit. 6. And see, the first book of Revelation had passed, and her verses were divided among the predators of heaven and the holy books. 7. And the Lord brought a slaughter in the book of psalms, which was like his own flesh. And the Lord put pencils in their rear ends of these spirits and blessed it. 8. Like this there was added and taken off in the book psalms, like the Lord had commanded. 9. Then the Lord directed himself to the gospels, and turned it into the book Christ. 10. And the Lord ordered the verses, added to it and took off, like the Spirit wanted it. 11. Like this nine books of the Lord were made holy and formed the cleared Word of the Lord. 12. And the silver descended on the earth, and the silver became ice. 13. And the Lord spoke : Open then the gates of the new Word, for see, the old has passed. 14. And I saw a black horseman sitting on a black horse, and the gates turned into fire and the earth and the heavens began to burn. 15. So is then the coming of Eminiús, and His Seed will be called Izu. 16. And the second Christ appeared in the clouds to guard the nations. And He has a heavy staff which only He could carry. And His feet stood in the Second Jerusalem, and were as Michai. And His armed reached till The Second Babylon. 17. And He tore it off the earth. And His legs started moving, and spoke as Michai. 18. And his hands were as the Marion, and he had a nipple as the round sun on the chestplate of his plate armor. 19. And He had a helmet and legs as Zurastael, and He began to speak great words. 20. And the trees of Sodom began to fall, and the Seed of Izu began to come out of the mouth of the Second Christ. 21. And so these were the days of Eminiús. And the Lord was as a wáger of war. 22. And so there are then twohundred and twenty days established for the clearing of His Word. And after these days the lightning will be pure. And she was then as the Coming of the Lord.

1. And those who are of the Second Reformation : Do know that this is a commandment of the Lord. I am then the Second Luther, and I carry the fire of Zurastael. You apostles will clear the word and make it holy till the ends of the wind-directions. 2. Yes, you will bring the cleared word to the nations of the earth, and then the end will have come. 3. Do not go on terrorizing the nations with the impure word, for then the Lord will come with the ban, and hit you. 4. See, the Lord and the Second Christ stand before the door, and they knock. Open then, so that they will not let you perish together with the impure Word. 5. Greet those who are in Spain. If they are of the Second they will have nothing to fear. 6. Let them then also count with these words, otherwise there will not be counted with them. 7. You have cleared your souls in Zurastael after all. 8. Fear then not the Large Spain. God is greater. 7. Even the little of God is greater than the pompuous largeness of man. 9. Do not fear them, for what are they to be honored ? The Lord has established their ages after all, and knows when they will perish again. 10. Does the Lord not carry their breath in His womb ?

1. See then, the Lord is just. He is the Lord of Lords, and he gives the good to the wise. You then have brought your children to the second Spain. 2. And to those in the second Spain I say : You ponder on high mountains, so that the Lord saves you, so that you will not become big on the plains of Babylon. The thick of the lords is then thinner than the thin of humans. 3. The thin of the lords is then thicker than the thick of humans, and this mystery is great. You have then given heed to the word of the lords and measured with pure measures. Yes, you are measurers before his face, and the lord your God has made you holy from the beginning. 4. You who are living like prisoners : Be like prisoners in the Lord. The Lord will deliver you on His time. But what is lack of freedom and what is freedom, that is what the lord defines. You have baked the bread of the Lords high. 5. Yes, you were like bakers of the holy tabernacle. You have been faithful to the Lord. By this you have deceived predators. Wonderful is the guile of the Lord. Come then, and approach His Spirit, you of the second Spain. 6. The brothers have prepared the bread and they have been good to your children. You have preserved the mysteries of the Lord as feathers in brittle jars at the altar. Yes, you have given heed as to a lighting light in dark days. You know then that the darkness of the lords is lighter than the light of man. You have also given heed to His light that came from the darkness, and rose up as the holy star. His darkness is then glory. See then, the Lords have wrapped Themselves in clouds and His Helmet is Bliss. 8. Come closer to His justice, so that He will give you more justice. The Lord has put you as lamps on a dark place, and you know very well how to deal with it. That is why I do not stop to give the Lord thanks before His face. 9. He is a good leader, and the tubes of his altar are light. You have not despised the Words of Metensia either. But you were as those who cherished the word. 10. Yes, the Lord has truly put angels under you, and they carry the mysteries of God about the angels becoming flesh. You who carries the feather, you will carry more feathers. So the coming of the Lords will be like the coming of a human son. 11. See, the Lord Lord has become flesh, and His Spirit. Wake then, for you do not know in which stature He will come to you.

1. See, the Lord then is the justice of orphans and widows. Do you still stare at each other ? Some among you are the watchers of the Lord, but the Lord wakes in justice. 2. See then, He has given you of the bread of heaven and the hidden manna. 3. Know then the many jugs of His ark. The Lord will then fill your mouth with laughing and you will proclaim holy things. 4. Also you have not despised the wine of the Lords, and you haven't avoided your French brothers in the tribulation. Those who are from the Second France greet you. 5. I also greet you then in ice. You do well to bless each other in ice. 6. Bless each other, so that you will be blessed. Do not curse each other, and pray for your enemies. 7. If you can forgive your enemy, you are blissful. For the Lords know many forgivenesses, and his blissfulnesses are not with few. 8. The Lords can not use foul mouths, and those who have stained their lips walk in front to the judgement. 9. You Spaniards of the second, the Lord saves you. But those who are of the first are already lost. 10. The Lord Lord has sent his flood, and the second ark has been prepared for you as a holy testament. 11. Do not cling to the old, so that the Lord will not let you perish together with the old. 12. So the day of the Lords will be then as a Ship, and His flame will lead her. 13. Blissful are those who are in the ship, and bake the bread of the Lords. You have many bakers among you. End several among you wanted to visit the older people, but the Lord has stopped them. Sometimes the ice is better than the encounter. 14. And you have not regarded each other as less, as it is a commandment of the Lord. 15. So the Lord sometimes brings you in tribulation, and sometimes it is Him who closes those doors. 16. Cling then to the scriptures of Kabernal which I have given you, for they are like the testaments of the spirit. 17. You have also spaded wine from the vats of heaven, and heard the voice of the Lord.

Staff of Spricht

1. Getsemane, water streams against the walls. I drown in high dreams. I push myself against the wall, but there is no escape here. Getsemane, the doors have been locked. There is nothing left to do but stay here, and to walk with God. Someone's tears, these dreams, a present from heart to heart. 3. I do not much strength to carry and it penetrates my skin. Finally I fall on the ground, and everything around me becomes greater. 4. I do not dare to open my eyes anymore. Someone wraps his arms around me. 5. Then I learn to drink the tears, and sinking deep in these arms. My chamberdoor is open. The heavens have been opened, but Golgotha called me. After humiliation is death, it is the path of our Lord. 7. To walk in His footsteps, He comes so close. The cross is but a flame of Love, to become one with Him. 8. The Tear is but a cup, to drink from His cloud, and to walk with Him to rise up, to the paradise. 9. That what the roses are clothed with, so divine and kingly, that is our robe.

10. Golgotha, as a shark which has grasped us. Breaking our bones to the cross of the Lord. We do not have to be afraid, we get a new body. 11. Golgotha, the staff of Spricht, to let us go through the thin doors. Let then the treasures be shattered, otherwise it can not come along with.

1. We are not weak enough to enter in. We still stand on both legs, waiting for the brokenness, to stand like trees in paradise, seed died twentyfolded. 2. We haven't wept enough tears, to stand high on the seas, to walk on water like the Christ, to hear and understand storms, the thunder and the waves. 3. We haven't have burdens heavy enough, to be like rocks in the heavens. 4. Golgotha hasn't grasped us yet, the Lord suffers there alone. 5. We sleep, our thorns are not yet deep enough, to awaken our spirit to unity with our Lord. 6. Our blood still streaming in our own body. Oh no, there is still no guidance from our Lord. 7. No protection, no angels, we let him stand there alone, hanging at a cursed cross-wood, we have let him perish. 8. Animals were sacrificed to our mouths, to be forgotten in our stomachs. We have inflicted this to Christ.

The Autumn

1. I am poor, are you afraid of your nakedness ? You have indeed something to hide. 2. I am poor. There is no life in riches. That what you hold tight will devour you. 3. I am the autumn, and have entered through Spricht. The door of Golgotha is thin. 4. Here the songs quiver of sleep. In poverty we have seen His face. 5. Those who are not poor, are blind. 6. Those who do not have hunger are deaf. I am here in chains, until I have become a chain myself, thin as Spricht. 7. I am poor, not afraid of nakedness, as the darkness covers her. 9. I am poor, there is no life in riches. It is a light making everything nude. 10. I am the autumn, having entered through Spricht. I have covered the nudes in my fall. The autumn is to a covering, for those who fear Him. 11. Golgotha is that which heaven dropped for those who come to heaven.

Come to the poor

1. You who are rich, how dare you coming to the Lord, without going to the poor first ? 2. Do you not know that the poor is the Lord ? 3. How dare you come to the Word, without feeding the poor first ? 4. You who have left your husband, how do you dare to come to the Lord ? Your man is the Lord. 5. You will be hit by the staff of Spricht as the lightning.

The Mirror inside

1. The sight is as a mirror. The white spider has stung, to bring the cherished to the mystical of the lords. As white snow the Lord knows you, those who have His pearls. The foam of roses they had as the foam of the wine of roses. 2. Precious crafts of the Spirits, as pictures in his book, have woven the webs, the mirroring sight. 3. He who created the hearts, has given you his thorn-crown, as mirroring sight woven in your heads. They wore the helmet, these men of silver. Now you wear it also, now does death not terrify anymore, it only mirrors the precious things inside. 4. It does not touch you anymore. You have the ice as your master after all, after long days of snow. 5. The mirroring sight, cherished by your heart. You do not have to fear anything anymore. Everything is there already, it just has to be discovered yet. 6. Is there a world outside myself ? I am always inside, right. 7. I do not come outside, it is only the mirroring. To follow the echo of my heart, bends and splits up in the wind. I can only come to Him who cherishes me. 8. I am in chains, I go bended through life. I do not mourn about it anymore, it's only for a while, a mirroring inside. When I have found it, it has finished. 9. The wound keeps gnawing, until it has been treated.

Don't Mourn

1. I have stung someone like a spider. I was someone I cherished. So rich, pearls at the pulses, so poor, feet bleeding in the snow. 2. I have stung someone like a spider. I spouted my poison so deep, I do not know if it will ever come to the surface again. 3. It was someone who I cherished so deep. I was accused of hate. I do not have long to live anymore. Do not grieve about me, my end has come. Arrival in the grave of Christ. Where snakes of heaven mourn in the cold. The fire of hate he was accused of. 5. But He only opened doors, leading the children out. 6. He stang them like a spider, those who blocked the door. Gracefully He asked to get through. 7. In the grave of Christ I have arrived. It is here dying for a key, getting crucified to reach a child's hand. 8. Softly I lead them to safer paths. But the past still calls : Crucify him. 9. It is dying after death here, as a fire of poison and love. Do not mourn about me, when the needle of the king has reached my heart, I am free forever. 10. Do not Mourn about me. Rather mourn about yourselves, you are tied up. I free the children. 11. The foam of wines I drink, in the foam of roses I swim, why would you mourn then ? I have seen the grave of Christ, I have stung someone like a spider, someone I cherished. 12. Do not mourn about me, but sting those who keep the gates locked, who deceive children. Do not mourn about me, but open the gates and free them.

36.

The small and great of God

1. These are the words of the Eaten One : I have been eaten by wolves, I have reached the center of the forest, the open place of the Lords, sprinkled in the light of the sun. Holy are you who let the rows move.i have established my pauls to flood the world with the New words of the lords. 3. They will bring you then a new rage, so that your bodies will be healed. 4. Blissful you are who do not sit in the gathering of laughers or the gathering of mockers, but who have been grasped by the wrath of the lords to be saved up till the last days. The Michai burns in my hands, and see, there will come many Michais. 6. Blissful are those who have the nipple of the Lords, for they will have abundant entry to Spricht, and blissful are those who have the boots of the Lords, for they have abundant entry to the thick of God. Do not despise the small among you. 7. For what is great and small is defined by the Lord. The Lord lets Himself be found in the small. 8. The small of God is greater than the greatness of the world, and His Greatness is smaller than the smallest of the earth. Let those who have been eaten then come to Brannan. Amen Metensia Eminius.

Words of bliss

10. Blissful are those who have been eaten by tigers, for they will approach Spricht and have entry to the small of God. Those who say not to believe in the small, they do not believe in God, who is the small after all. 11. Let everyone then know that no one of such unbelievers will inherit the gates of heaven. 12. Your greatness perishes together with you. But blissful are those who love the Lord. The sweet of heaven is for them, and they eat from the thick dripping honey of the Lords. Blissful are those who have been eaten by lions, for they will find comfort. 13. Blissful are those who have been eaten by sharks and crocodiles, for they will inherit the forces of the crocodiles and the dripping fizzing glue of the Lords will flow from their inside. 14. And they will be tormented for several times by headaches, but the flue of the lord will free them step by step and cover them. 15. Yes, they will flow through the New Helmet of the lords and you will be called blissful. Do not laugh at those who get eaten, and do not eat from their flesh, for the wrath of God will flame up against you. 16. Do not flee to old lies either, for you might be eaten yourself. Blissful are those who are eaten in the Lord.

About sin

17. Those who have come to the bear and the insects ; You will be eaten, for all gates have teeth. Those who have come then to the fields of the wild cats : You have to know that the Lord Lord is the Greatest Eater, as He is the Eaten One. 18. Those who tear up lambs have been delivered to Him already. For it is a great sin to eat a young animal, for it hasn't have a life yet. Those who make such meals have become ripe to become a meal. 19. The Lord Lord will not let Himself be mocked. The Lord counts such a sin to scorn, for young animals are not destined to it. Who eats an old or weak animal takes sickness in. 20. These are the words of the Eaten One : You have to love each other. Those who will not love, will be eaten, without someone resurrecting them. Those who hate the eaters of flesh : You are in your right, and you do good to hate such, for the Lord Lord hates them.

The wages of sin

21. So is then the eating of the living creation like mocking the Creator and such will not escape. To the teeth of heel they have come and they will not be resurrected again. 22. To netherworlds and the realms of the wraiths they will descend, and the Lord will let them sleep for eternity on the destined times. Do not think you can sin against each other, without getting the punishment for it. 23. You will sit in your punishments until it is fulfilled. You will then work until you have paid back everything you have done to your brother and making his house in order. So you will be the slave and servant of the one you sinned against. 24. Do not destroy soul by quick judgements or backbiting, but guard your head and mouth with double security, for you might speak once or discuss with your soul about your brother, and bind yourself to the resurrection of his house. 25. Those who bring wounds of a life time will become slaves for a life time. Blissful are those who see the small as great and the great as small, for they have the eyes of the Lord.

About silence and poverty

26. Blissful are those who have found the house of silence, for they have come free from much slave-work. They can then build their own house and cherish the Lord. Blissful are those who have found the pearl of poverty, for they will be cherished by her, and they will go from Assisi to Assisi. 27. The Lord touches your spine, so that the nipples of the Lords will open themselves, and you drink the milks of glory. You then who has the words of the mouse inside : Come then to the Foul of God. 28. For the Foul of God is cleaner than the cleanest of man. You have then a well of the Foul of God in the nature, to clear yourself and your house. Do know that the clean of man awakens disease, and they are on their way to the house of the rats.

Words of bliss and comfort

29. Those who eat flesh will become the building-stones of the kingdom of animals, and see, they will sleep. Blissful are the eaten ones, as they have succeeded in the test and have entered through the gates of the kingdom of God. 30. They will find the forest back and cling to the trees of heaven. Yes, the earth and all what is in it will be of them. Yes, the whole world and all which lives on it will be of them, for see, they are the breath of the Lords. 31. You who are young have to suffer a lot, but keep good courage, for the Lord has seen your pain. 32. The eye of the Lords is on you, and you are safe. Nothing happens which is without meaning, and even the smallest memory is a symbol of the Lords, to lead you through the savageries of the future. 33. You who are young, do not cry too much, for the Lord is with you, the Lord is at you, and is your Guide and leader. The wildernesses are great, and the dangers are many, but from those all the Lord saves.

Prescriptions and Truths

34. Do you not know that the Lord is in silence, and that the Lord is in pain ? Do not complain then when you have been isolated by him as if something strange came over you, for He guards you against many dangers and much slave-work. You will cherish the Lord and not the whores of the world. 35. Is your eye then clean that you know what happens ? Direct your eye then to the eaten ones of the world, and be enlightened. 36. You who are sick, be sick in the Lord. For the Sick of the Lords is healthier than the healthiest of humans. See then, the health of humans is sickness. You who are old, be old in the Lord, for the old of God is younger than the youngest of the earth. 37. Those who are in prison : Do not grieve, but be like prisoners in the Lord. The chained of God is more free than the most free among the humans. 38. Those who are slaves : Be like slaves in the Lord, for you are all builders of the Kingdom of the Lords. Now there is then nothing without use, and these all are the riddles of the Lords, which have to be hung around your neck like holy jewelry. 39. By these you can speak to the Lord, and the Lord Lord will listen to you. You have not been delivered like orphans, but the angels of the Lords guard you. 40. And to the widows I say : You have the Lord as man. You do not have a lack. In the Lord there is no dead, and see, everything lives.

About cords and chains

41. You who worries about the past : The Lord will change the past in His Hands and it will be like an instrument to you. 42. Men, direct yourselves to your beards, which are the cords of the animals of heaven, and they are the jewelry of Lords. Women, direct yourself to the hair of your bodies, to be bonded with the trees of the fields. 43. You do not have a need for jewelry, unless the Lord has commanded you to wear something. Strive then all to enter into the Tear of the lords, who lets all pain flow away, and this will be your hidden jewelry. Do not throw pearls before the swines. 44. Those who serve the Lord will observe your jewelry and have the keys to your heart. You do not have a need for honour or status quo, for the Lord honours you, and those who serve Him. 45. You have to become smaller to enter the gates of eternal salvation and the eternal of heaven. 46. The treasures are hidden there, but not for those who serve the Lord and love Him. 47. They have his tear after all and see everything. Those who are young and live in many insecurities, for they do not see the things of the Lord. 48. They are then wild and have pain, for they haven't found the chains of the Lords yet. 49. Let then the chains of the Lord bring you to rest. You who are young have many fights, but the chains of the Lords will finish these.

The suffering as an instrument

50. You are then pirates of the Lords, for you reave for Him and plunder hell. Accept therefore the suffering as instruments to do your work. 51. You who have kept your life, there is then no place for the silver of God. 52. Those who have not made themselves foul in the Lord, they do not have part in the Gold of the Lords. 53. The worthy pirates of the Lords will be cherished by those who have His tears in their inside. And their heads are serene as trasparant glass filled with glue. 54. They laugh when you laugh, and they weep when you weep. Those who then live on the earth are surrounded by predators, but the pirates of heaven have the heavens in their possession, and they are cherished by lights. 55. Yes, they have part in the dripping and fizzing glue of the lords. 37.

About the Christ

1. You then are pirates of the Lords, carrying His mysteries. But these have become open for those who have the tears of the Lords. 2. Do not weep when the Lord takes something away from you, for the Lord brings you in balance. 3. The Lord forms you and molds you in His Hand. Do not get panicked when He takes something away, for then the Lords have something better for you. 4. Would the Lords then neglect Their creations. The Lord will bless those who bless you and curse those who curse you. 5. The Lord will bring honour to those who bring you honour, and bring down those who bring you down. 6. Know then that everything is in the Hand of the lords, for He molds you and no one else. Everything is an instrument of Him. 7. The Lord surveys all things. Do not mourn when you should not mourn. You will then know the times of the Lords. 8. Be then like a pirate of the Lords and search the things which are in heaven, so that you will not be deceived on the earth. 9. Hold on tight then to the Word of the Lords, so that you will not fall into all sorts of traps of lies. Avoid those who spin a wheel before your eyes. 10. The Lord doesn't love those who make noise, for they quench the Voice of the Lords. Kidnappers of souls he calls them. 11. You then go from silence to silence, until you see what it is all about. 12. The Lord guards your heart in intoxication, so that you are not pulled away by the thoughts of the earth. 13. You then are pirates coming close to the tears of the Lords, as the Tear of the Eaten One. And see then, He is the Eaten One, as the Perfect Soul of the Spirits, as a torn cloth sewn again. 14. The more you have been torn the more place there is for the things of heaven. See the kingdom of heaven exists in shatters. 15. Those who go from ashes to ashes have eternal life and will receive the wings of the Lords. Always free they are. 16. Those who stand on the coasts of the second Colosse : Accept then the pirates of the Lords and let them drink from the tears which are in Colosse. 17. Like this you cherish the spirit and soul so that the waters and the fishes stream, and also in the second of the Lords. 18. And so is then the second spirit the mother of the cherishments and the mother of the Herman, he who stands between the ice and the fire as a hidden bridge of the Lords, under the Christ. And so He had to stand under the Christ for a while, to become the cape of Christ. And see then, he is the blue cape. 19. And see then, He is the wild Christ. 20. Also you have come to Maser, who is the Poor Christ. See then, they are all the Second Christ who is of Christ. 21. And He will come forth from the Christ and He will return to the Christ. Learn then to know all His Names. 22. For the Spirit and the Lord have many names, and so Christ has also many names. 23. And so Renok will awaken the Herman again, and He will come to Maser. Now you have also come closer to Dezer, the Christ of the Primeval, and to Jezel, the Christ who had been prisoned, and enslaved. 24. And so Jezel and Christ were one when they came to Joseph, who was a herald of the Christ. 25. And let no one then deceive you, for when the dream spoke about powers of heaven which had to bow before him, so the dream spoke of a far future. 26. For Joseph became king over Egypt, so he will be king over those who learn to know the hidden things of God. Well see then, He was the Lord who came in the hidden and in guile to the earth, to reach the way of Christ. 27. And so is then Joseph Christ the Slave, by which He walked on the path of freedom. 28. Yes, for like Christ came free and become king, we also who are in Him reign as free and kings. 29. And so then Renok, Herman, Maser, Dezer, Jezel and Joseph are one to the Second Christ, who is of the Christ. And they will come forth from the Christ and will return to the Christ. 30. So there are many karbulines, but they are all one. And they go from flesh to flesh, until the New Creation of the Second has come. 31. Let him who is wild know the fire and the ice. They who then know the blue cape will come to the Peter, to see the mysteries of the forest. See, He is then the eaten Christ. 32. And He has a chariot of wolves to lead all pirates in the Lord. 33. Cling yourself then to Christ who has seven heads. And see, He then is the Second Christ and the Beast of the Lords. 34. And He represents then the New Body, while God the Father represents the Soul, and His Spirit the second spirit and the spirit of man. 35. Be then like humans of the Second, and come closer to Metensia who is your candlestick. 36. And so the Second will be like the First, and she will return to the Second, as the clock of the Lords and the Second Spirit. 37. She will then be as a mother who feeds her children, and so the nipples of the Spirits will rise, and then the Karazure will come to the earth. 38. Woe then those who are still on the earth in those days. 39. And so Marion will become a Spirit of the Lords, and she will come forth from Peter. And she will be like a dove and a raven, knowing the mysteries of the forest. And see, these mysteries are great. 40. For we have all been destined to become as the Spirits of God, and formed in their image, and so also the Christ-figures of the Utmirs. And so also Christ will be as the Spirit of God. 41. You will then not again tie Christ to your canons, for these the white dove has made for freedom, to carry many names and to become many names. 42. All you who have made up Christ-canons, be tied. 43. And so then the canons of the Lords will appear, and see, they are open and they are free. And they come forth from the Second and return to the Second. 44. And then all disciples will be clothed and chained by His canons, and they will be led to the eternal fields of freedom, and they will not have the need that anyone ties them. 45. And they will be like the Spirits of God, flying around the Clock of the Lords. And then the Soul of the Lords will stand up, and his names, and they will be led to the Wild Spirits of the Lords. 46. And they will be like wild geese searching for the eternities of the Second. And when the Spirits of God and the Souls of God have come together, then a new soul will come forth, and a new spirit, with a new body as the new flesh of the Spirits. 47. For those who don't want to be like the Soul of the Lords, will not have a soul, and they will not have new flesh. 48. How can you then expect to receive new bodies when you don't want to be like Christ ? He is then the new flesh. 49. You suffer because you do not know about these things, but when you receive the knowledge of God about it you will be blissful, and everything will fall in cans and jugs. 50. The Second Spirit will cling itself to the Second Soul and will be like the Clock of the Lords. And her sweet music will bring forth new flesh.

Comfort and Rest

1. You have then been faithful, and you have seen the kapruns as bonds between the spirit and the soul and these bonds are fragile. 2. you also have learned to know the tears as the blood of the Spirits, but this then is holy seed for you in the Lord. 3. You know then also that the big Spain is as the big Easter, for the nightlatins are the times of the cross. You know that you will overcome this all as true servants before the face of God. 4. The animal is then your breath and the thermostat of your body and that of your most holy souls. 5. They then represent the holy objects in the temple of the Lord and will be as your kapruns. 6. The Lord then roots by His Spirit and by His cross. Without the kapruns you would not be able to come to victory. 7. You also know then that the crowing of the cocks didn't happen without reason, for they proclaim the times of the cross, and the times of the Lords. 8. They then spread the fire-reds, which are the songs of the cross, and the beatings of His heart and veins. 9. The fire-red is then the blood of the souls, but this is also holy seed and herbs for you, streaming from the fire-gem of Metensia. 10. She then carries the keys of healing, prepared in holy sacraments. 11. Learn then to know the sacraments of the second, to serve in the temples and by that saving your souls. 12. You have then learned to work with the clearing salt of the lords to clear the sweet sevenfolded. That's why you have held on before the Holy Face of the lords which is as a digesting fire. 13. You have brought comfort to God, and you will be comforted. 14. Encourage each other then with these words, for the times are evil. 14. Search help from each other, and avoid those who twist your words and deeds. 15. How lovely it is when brothers and sisters of the second word live together. 16. Know then that there will come intruders and false folks who try to stir up fights in the second church, to stain your name. 17. Separate yourselves from such folks. But these things have to happen to see who will succeed in the test. 19. You have then learned to know the Names of Christ and the Second Christ, and you have loved them all. 20. You have then held on to the stories of the cross, and you have not let them go lost, for you are servants of the Lords. 21. You have learned to know the races of the judges and predictates, and you have let none of their tears get lost, for it is holy seed of the Lords. 22. You then have offered homes to the hermitates and have let them drink from the wine of the Lords. You have not let the sun go down over the wines of the Spirits. 23. Now the Lord will also give you the keys to learn to know the races of the hermitates. 24. They then watch over the Souls of the Lords. You have been faithful anfitates before Gods face. 25. The Lord has seen you, and has given you a sign. The Lord has opened your jugs. Let then the spirits of the prophets come to the souls of the prophets so that their hearts become satisfied. 26. Bring then the ferocities to rest, and translate the often difficult messages which they receive, as worthy apostles in the Lord. 27. The Lord has established you to reign their houses. Do not despise the prophets, neither those who are depressed, for they have to go through hard times. They are turned by the Lord into predators, and they are to a great help. 28. Take then care of the church, and of those who have less, for the Lord has called you for that. 29. Educate them about the manyfolds of God, and do not be one-sided. You will not lay chains around their hearts. 30. Let those who are tired sleep, so that the wrath of God will not come over you. Those who are tired have done work of the lords. 31. Now the lord lord will define what is work and what is not. The rest of the lord is a heavier work than the labor of the world. 32. And the work of the Lords is a bigger rest than the rest of the earth. 33. The Lord then defines what is work and what is rest. You are not there to chain each other. Do not lay heavy burdens on each other, for the Lord hates these. 3. Isn't the yoke the Lord gave you already heavy enough ? Do not be meddlesome about each other. If some one works or rests that is up to the Lord. 34. Give then rest so that you will receive rest in manyfold. 35. Blissful are those who bring others to rest, for they will enter into the abundant rest of the lords. Blissful are those who bring others to comfort, for they will fly on the wings of the eagles. 36. The Lord has established you as Comforters and beacons of rest. Make sure that you will fulfil your mission. 37. Learn then to know Renok the Comforter who the Lord has given you as a key to deliverance, for he was close to the heart of the Lord while there was the crucifixion and brought Him comfort. 38. Be then grafted into his tree, so that you will have part in the holy and hidden juices of the Lords. 39. Those who have cleared the sweet, have entry to the Sarhah of the lords.

The Breath of the Lords

1. And like this the kapruns are also the bonds between the first and second spirit, and they are like holy altars. 2. And they will clean your spirit and letting it stretch to Spricht, in which you will receive the nipples of the Lords. 3. In bliss are those whose spines have been cleaned, for they have entry to the small of God, and to the thick. 4. And see then, they are like kapruns, as the altars of the Lords. 5. Yes, they will ascend as ravens and bring many to wisdom. 6. And then you will breath from the thin and thick of God, and you will find small openings in it, to escape from many enemies. 7. And the snakes of heaven will be as lungs in you, and you breath deeply and see that they are as the intestines of the second. 8. And then you will come to the Second Soul of the Lords, which is as the licorice of heaven. 9. And you will breath deeply and see the roots of heaven. On many altars you will lie down and you will be consecrated. 10. Those then who love the animals of heaven will go from breath to breath, but those who do not love them will sleep for eternity. 11. And the thin and thick will be cleared sevenfolded in the Hand of the Lords. Let yourself be cleared so that you can breath. 13. And that breath will be as the licorice of heaven. 14. And in the Pink Covenant the altars of the Lords will be restored, and there will come a New Creation, the Creation of the Second. 15. And from then there will be only breathed through the altars of the Lords and the clearing. 16. And those who do not want to let themselves be cleared will be eaten by the snakes of heaven. And they will then come to the eternal soulsleep, and their spirit will sleep and go to complete destruction. 17. And on that day the Lord will gather the shatters and He will make them as altars, but also these altars will perish. 18. So there will be a day against all altars, and among them there will be a big clearing. Let yourself then go from the small to the small, so that you will escape from a terrible judgement. 19. The Lords have then a day against everything which is high, and will establish a slaughter so that the low will rise. 20. So will then everyone who have come closer to Spricht not be ashamed, and they will see many visions, and their own mirrorings as precious jewelry. 21. And they will approach the manyfolded cleared blue, to see the white of the lords. 22. And the Lord will wipe off all their tears. You have come closer to an alldestroying fire. Let yourselves be cleared then. 23. And in those days Acha, the Altar of the Lords, will become big, and Kabbernal will come forth from Him, and He will be like the bison of the lords.

The Cups

1. And in those days the Christs became as the kapruns, and they were reborn in Acha. 2. And they then became as the karazure against everything which was high. 3. And also the Spirits of God and the Souls of God became as the karazure, and they were led through Acha. And he had big authority. 4. And Eminius got big and came to Materos, the little of God, and there came a big war in heaven. 5. And the Second Karazure came to the earth, and they were like the wolves, serving the Herm-An. 6. And they had as leader Redeye, the wolf of Sarsia of Renok. 7. And the Herm-An got big on earth, and also Renok. And they became as the Second Karazure. 8. And the altar of the karazures devoured the arks and the thrones, and the tears of the Peter came over the earth burning of fire and sulphur. 9. And this was as the tear of the altar and also the Peter became as the Second Karazure. 10. And the trees of heaven came to the earth and started to educate. 11. And those who went from altar to altar became blissful, but those who stopped were torn by the tear. 12. And the tear of the altar became big and began to laugh and also fire came from the altar called Fire of Eminius. 13. And the Spirits of God wrestled against each other, for also the Lord clears and tests Himself. 14. And also the Christs and the capruns began to clean each other. 15. And they came to a place called the second Armageddon , where many came to enlightenment. 16. And so these are then holy places of the angels. And the Second Altar of the Lords carried many names. And there was thunder and lightning and a boa constrictor came forth from the Second Altar. 17. And the Second Altar splitted up into many altars and one of these altars was called Brannan. 18. And Brannan was given a cup, and this cup was full of blood. And the blood changed into tears, and became seed. 19. And also to Acha was given a cup, and this cup was full of death. And the nations drank of this cup and they became as drowning men, so that a cleaning was among them. 20. And in these days the sharks of the Herm-An were in the seas of the earth, and many names got erased from the temples. 21. And also to Metensia was given a cup, which was full of whoring and snakes, and she gave the nations to drink so that there would be a cleaning among them. 22. And the pure became purer, for they were left out by the cup, and the unclean became uncleaner, and they were delivered to their lusts.

Talgamen

1. You have then heard of the cup of the Christ, and this cup is named Talgamen. 2. You who want to come to Him, you also have to drink from this cup. 3. Wash your spirit then in this cup, and use this name at the end of your most holy prayers. 4. The Lord then doesn't listen to names, but to hearts. 5. Names are given for use, but not for necessity. 6. The Kingdom of God is not in Names, but in Holiness and Cleanness. 7. Let this cup pass around and drink from Him. Talgamen. You use then his most holy name as a confirmation. 8. Every Name is on itself dead, both in heaven and on earth, but is used and fulfilled by Love. 9. And see then : the cup is more than the drinker. And you have established your trinity, which is only partly true, but not as canon. 10. For the fourth divinity is the cup, and His Name is Talgamen. 11. You do well to speak about a four-unity, more than about a trinity. 12. You who have come to the Christ drinks then all from the same cup, and this name is Talgamen. 13. Know then that it is a commandment of the Lords to speak about the four-unity, for the trinity is only partly true, and in the canon completely not. 14. So there are then many Unities of heaven, and you will find them all and use them, you who know the Lord. 15. Drink then from Talgamen, for you have come to the most holy. 16. And the Cup of the Lords is for cleaning of the blood and the insides.

42.

The Lokogames

1. And so there is then in the New Temple the table of cups, and you so well to come to this table, for they contain the cups of the prophets. 2. And so are then the Lokogames the jewelry of the cross, but they will flee from everyone who did not love the cross. 3. They are then the sharpnesses of the Lords, and wage war against the unholy and those who are of the world. 4. The cross had nothing to do with the world. You can then not love the cross when you are a friend of the world. 5. The Lord hates then all who are a friend of the world, for they are enemies of God and of the cross. 6. The Lokogames cherish all those who cherish the cross and have become formed in their image. 7. Do not mock the Lokogames, for they are revengeful and take the time for it. 8. Those who try to imitate the Lokogames unjustly and unlawfully will become prey to bitter cruelty, but all cruelty leads to sleep and destruction. 9. Unjust will be the judgement of the Lokogames over those who have been unjust. 10. The Lokogames are near the orphans and the widows. 11. And when you worship them, use this name at the end of your silent praises, so that you will be holy and clean before the face of the Lords. 12. The Lord hates then all thanskgiving and praise outside the cross. These utterances are an abomination to the Lord. 13. True praise is in silence, coming from the cross and returning to the cross, to drink from the cup of the Lords. Lokogamen. 14. Let then your cup be filled by the Lokogames, and drink from the wines of the cross. 15. And come then to the grave of the Lords, whose name is Belcanov. 16. When you glorify, glorify in the cross, and in the grave of the Lords.

The works of the Lokogames

17. And they, the Lokogames, will feed the savage animals, and the Karazure, for they are the jewelry of Metensia. 18. And they are also the jewelry of the Peter, the Eaten Christ, and they cherish him as lighting waterfalls in a forest-river. 19. yes, before the caves of Belcanov, the grave of the Lords, they lie down. And lighting fishes ascend along them and descend. 20. And they will lead many to the darkneses and the cool waters, and many will be saved. 21. Make then sure that you will not despise the darkness of the Lords, for you might get grasped by it once.

43.

The Clocks of the Lord

1. And all unities are then surrounded by the Lokogames, and they have entrance to the most holies. 2. So is then the Emelis Shatau full of the Lokogames of the Lords, and so also the Pink Covenant. 3. And see then, they come forth from Brannan and return to Brannan. 4. And they have also lushfully clothed the clocks of the Lords. They have then drunk from the sweet of the Lord and the sweet of the cross, from the wells of Sarhah. 5. See then, they come forth from the clock of the cross to bring hunger and satisfaction/ Yes, for all clocks exist in hunger and finally bring satisfaction. 6. No one will suffer hunger forever, the Lokogames will closely take care of that. 7. Those who are of the all-atonement : you are partly right. You will all be satisfied, and you will all sleep, but one to eternal life, and the other to destruction. 8. That which is time is defined by the Lord, and what is a second for one, is thousand year for another. 9. The Lord then builds with hunger and satisfaction. 10. See then, all jewelry of the Lords is as clocks, and they brew the wines of the cross. 11. They create the distances and the horizons.

Mice and rabbits

1. You then who are in Tyatira, you live close to Materos. Those who live in the second Tyatira know the Lokogames abundantly. 2. You are then full of the nostalgia of the Lord, and you have come close to the buildings of the mice of heaven. 3. You also know the buildings of the rabbits of heaven, established by the Father. 4. You have had then a warm hand for those who love rabbits and the rabbits themselves, and you are like one of them. 5. The Lords have then so much love for you for He himself is partly rabbit, for it represents a special part of Him. 6. Watch then that those who hate the rabbit will be shot by Him, for the Lords are hunters. 7. And so is then Sarhem the district of rabbits in heaven. 8. You then have come close to Sarhem, and you are ready for His mysteries, you all who live in the second Tyatira and those who come close to her. 9. You haven't then put beggars aside, but you received them as rabbits of the Lords. 10. Mokmos then is the district of the mice in heaven. And these two districts are holy for the Lord. 11. The mice then reign over the tears. The Lord then is partly mouse. 12. The tears then live in their bottles.

The Riddler

1. And the tears then will be cleaned sevenfolded, and they will be drunk, for they are the wine of the Spirits. 2. And also the glues of the Lords will be cleaned sevenfolded and they will be like ebb and flow. 3. You then let also the grey be cleaned sevenfold, so that it will be silver, and you can do it for you have descended to under the pink. 4. Let yourself be delivered sevenfold by the Lord. And let yourself realize well that the nipples of the Lord are established to clean Spricht. The Lord then cleans the heavens and the districts, for He is a Cleaner. So He is then also a Riddler. 5. And the Riddler will come at the end of times to clean the white sevenfolded. 6. Now the seared of the Lords is then cleaned ninetyfolded. 7. Those who are under the red are grey, but they are cleaned to silver. 8. Those of the red tear are cleaned hundredfold and they have made a building for you. They lived always close to your heart and they haven't left you. 9. Therefore they are not guilty, and they will forever carry God's Blessing. 10. They have comforted you in times of need and encouraged you and given you their clothes. 11. Yes, they have taken care of you thousandfolded, and carried your pains with you, and taken them over wherever they could. 12. Yes, manyfolded they have died for you.

46.

Honorable Company

1. Those who suffer often feel lonely, but when you become older you recognize the personalities of the suffering, and you learn to view them as honorably company, for they guard you against many sins, and keep you out of slavery. 2. The Lord has given you then honorably company, and they will become visible when you become older. 3. Learn then to know the ecstasies of getting older. 4. You have then learned to express your love to the birds of the Lords, and you often realize that they are the personifications of the suffering. 5. So then you can speak to the suffering as to the Lord. 6. Know then that those who love the birds of heaven have a deep place with God, for God is partly bird, for it represents a part of Him. 7. He created the animals then in His image, and those who hurt the animals, hurt the image of God, and are counted to the mockers. 8. Do not mock God's Creation, for it is His image. 9. Those who suffer have a flame to forge with. The smith of God has come to your home. 10. See then, the shark is the flame of the Soul of God which has become flesh, and you have come closer to the digesting fire. Be then Holy. 11. And so the First Word has called for holiness, the Second Word even more. 12. And therefore the Second Word is holier than the first, and even more you are called to lay down the sin.

About the woman

1. The shark is then the smith of the Lords, and he will build the homes of the Second. He will therefore forge the metals together, and use for it the Candlestick of Metensia. 2. Yes, the shark will then use the tiger and the lion to burn loose and to forge together, and he will become like the burning ice. 3. And the orcas of the Lords will come to your homes to make many junctions in balls, and you will have the electricity of the Lords. 4. And the orcas of heaven will be like the electricians, and they will be called God's robots. 5. And the electricity is then like the fire of the spirits. 6. And all fire only exists then in ice. And the deaf sharks will be like the radios of God, and the black sharks will be like the telephones of God. 7. The white sharks will then be like the televisions. 8. You will then regard the entry of the woman as holy after the cleaning, for she will bring forth the snakes of the heavens. 9. And she will do this in many labor pains, and her clothes will be torn. 10. Then you will see the woman not as a lust-object anymore, but as an instrument of the Lords. 11. You will then give the woman her value back, but the Lord will deliver unholy women to their sins, and they will give passage to the snakes of the heavens. 12. Yes, the Second Word is then very woman-friendly, but will proclaim a bigger judgement over the mocking woman. 13. For scorn doesn't fit a woman, unless she mocks in the Lord. You are allowed to mock injustice and this is even a commandment of the Lord. 14. You will not judge the woman for her lusts, but you do not have to tolerate misplaced scorn. 15. The Lord then knows all lusts, where they come from and where they go to. 16. Let no one harrass the other with their lusts, but rather heal each other and bring each other to rest. A mocker and a hypocrit you will not heal in any way, for you would load shame on yourself. 17. A woman is not allowed to cling to mocking and hypocrit women. Those will have to be delivered to the sharks by the qualified apostles for that. 18. When a woman has lusts for material things and clothes outside the necessity, and these stand free from the commandment of the Lords, then they will have to resist themselves against it by making the vow to poverty. 19. And she will cling to the poverty as to the lord, and the poverty will be her man. 20. Let it be known to you very well, that those who do not desire the poverty, do not have the Lord either. 21. For deeply hurt is the Lord when a servant or a handmaid despises the poverty. As they have despised the Lord himself. 22. Do not fight each others sobriety and simplicity, so that the Lord will not leave you and wrath against you. 23. Those who mock the poor will be erased from the book of life by the Lord. 24. Those who mock the sick are already lost.

About doubting and testing

1. Do not mock the Second Word of the Lord, and do not despise it, for those will get a heavier judgement over them than those who have mocked and despised the First Word of the Lord. 2. If then the judgement over those who have rejected the impure Word is so big, then how will those who reject the Second Word escape ? Unbearable will be the judgement over those. 3. Do not think that the Second Word is lighter than the First, for you will go from judgement to judgement. 4. The Lord Lord will not let Himself be mocked, and terrible it will be for a sinner to fall in the living hands of the Lords. 5. Those who accept the First and not the Second, are like pharisees and the judgement over them will be heavier than over the pharisees in the time of Jesus the Christ. 6. For they rejected the impure, and would be punished more heavily than those of Sodom and Gomorrah. How heavy will be the judgement over those who have rejected the pure ? 7. Work your salvation then in fear and trembling, for the Lords are an all-digesting fire. 8. Those who have accepted the First Christ and rejected the Second Christ will fall prey to the sharks. Unmerciful will be the judgement over such. 9. But when it is for you to do about winning an argument, the Lord is not in that. Blissful are those who doubt, but cursed are those who do not doubt the First, for that word, although it contains much truth, is impure. 10. Test then the Second Word, for those who not test already live under the curse. 11. The Lord is not impressed by those who accept the Second Word without testing. The Lord despises such, as they are not to be trusted themselves. 12. Blissful are those who doubt and test. Do not trust too fast, for you might once get deceived. 13. Watch an animal always in it's mouth. Do not stop the Second Word, for the Lord will use you as gangway, and you will be tread over.

the Herman

1. And this is how it will be, the opening of the first nipple of the Lords. And the races of the apostles will come to this nipple, for it is the nipple of the apostles. 2. And you will understand the things, and the mysteries of God will come to you. 3. Yes, between Jupiter and Saturn is the garden of the Lords, for there He has produced his roots. 4. And then you will hear and understand each other as in the paradise, and you will know the things of God. 5. And when you have encountered the deaf shark and the black shark, you will feel as if you have the radio and the telephone of the Lords in your hands, and their horns are of gold. 6. And you will be able to hold those who are far away while the milk of the lords streams, and this milk will be sweet. 7. And when you swallow it will be bitter, for the horns are piercing your stomach. Yes, for it is the Lords who apply the wounds. 8. And you will feel the fires of the Lords in your mouths to be able to forge the house of the Lords. 9. And the apostles of the burning ice will come forth from the glorified Herman, the Wild Christ, for He is the bridge between the fire and the ice, for He has been in the deepest dens of the ice till the dark. 10. Make then sure that you will not reject Christ the Wild, for then you do not have a Christ at all. 11. Those who have mocked the Herman about his wildness will not live in the house of the Lords. 12. Do you then not know that the Christ has come forth from the Herm-An ? 13. Those who do not have received the Herm-An have denied Christ therefore by that and in those the Light of God is not there. 14. Learn then to know your Christ, so that He will know you at the entry till His Glory. 15. Those who do not have the Herm-An, do not have the Christ either. Learn then to know the herm-an, by hearing these Words and by doing much research, so that you will not receive another herm-an. 16. For many herm-ans will come to deceive the earthglobe, but you have to put on the True Herm-An on then. 17. Not all who claim to be of the Herm-An, are of the Herm-An. 18. The Herm-An then will come forth from the ice, and return to the ice and he will not despise the fire of the Lords. And so He will be like the burning ice, and He will come to open the nipples. 19. Yes, as a father He will be to those who are wild, and who have searched seclusion. And wildly they will drink of His milk. 20. The Herm-An is then a part of Christ, the part which brought Him to the desert and the wilderness and which separated Him all the time. 21. So is then the Herm-An the Ice of Christ, burning in the night. Those who have despised the ice of Christ have never come to the cross, and without the ice Christ would never have ascended to the heaven. 23. Without the ice you would never have a shelter in him, and you would never be able to receive His Spirit. 24. Without the ice the fire would never have existed.

Maser and Herm-An

1. Without the Herm-An the Christ would never have descended to the netherworlds, and He would never have come to Glory and Resurrection. 2. Know therefore to who you speak, so that all those things will not pass you by. 3. All things are then cleaned in ice, and become rich in Maser, who is Christ the Poor. 4. See then the lush, the abundance and the riches which Poverty gives. Those who do not have an eye for that, it is better their eye is pulled out. 5. You have completely left out the beauty and the bareness of nature. 6. In Maser all who have laid down their lives and who cherish the poverty become rich. 7. For the rich it will be very difficult to enter the Kingdom of God, for they have been bound by the Mammon, but in Maser they can be delivered, for He is the power of Christ the Poor. 8. You have then a Name you can call upon, to come to the cloisters of the Herm-An. For the Herm-An has come forth from Maser, and you who calls upon the Name of Maser will be saved double in all eternities, also till the Second. 9. But those who curse Maser have already gone lost. Now the kingdom of heaven does not exist in money or names, but in poverty and ferocity. 10. So you will serve the Maser and the Herman, so that they serve you and bring you to the fulness of Christ. 11. Do not keep standing on one leg, and do not keep on caging Christ in your hearts, neither binding him to your canons, for Maser and Herm-An are as the wings of the eagle which hit to open and to kill. 12. So the Christ has come to this world in his poverty, and to the crib, and his heart was with the animals. 13. So you are bonded in Maser to the hidden treasures of God, and you can come to the Herm-An. 14. Do not despise these Words, My beloved, so that they will not despise you. 15. The Lords will not let Themselves be mocked, and are like an assimilating fire. Those who do not have the Maser, do not have the Herm-An either, and are slaves of the Mammon. 16. You can not come to the Herm-An without clinging to the Maser, for then you will come to the false ice, which turns the dead into slaves. 17. For foul and full of lies are those who say they have the Herm-An while they have despised the Maser. They carry the lights of hell and of Orion. 18. Blissful are those who kiss the feet of Christ like Mary Magdalene, for they also have the Maser. 19. And the sisters of the Magdalene have brought thousandfolded comfort to Maser and the Christ, and they will receive the Herm-An. 20. Let then no one of you forget that wildness is a higher order of God. 21. The savages know then the treasures of fire and ice, and bring them to the hidden and the darkness. 22. Keep then your hearts in God, so that you will find grace before His throne. 23. You will know the Christ then in Maser and Herm-An.

The races of the apostles

1. Let then the races of the apostles be lined up on the Emelis Shatau so that you can hear and understand each other. So you can receive manyfolded the present of translation, so that the Peace of the lords will be manifested. 2. And so there will be fourteen races of apostles. 3. And the first race is the pleiades, and they are as the sons of thunder, the boanerges. 4. And the second race is the red pleiades for they prepare the wine of the lords. 5. And the third race is the black pleiades or dark pleiades who carry or bring the lame to Christ, and to the Second Christ. 6. And the fourth race are the yellow pleiades, and they descend to under the yellow to bring those with deep pains to Christ, and to the Second. 7. And the fifth race is the blue and white pleiades. 8. And the sixth race is the pink pleiades. 9. The seventh race of apostles are those with the red cape, and the eighth race is the hermanite apostles, those who are of the Herman. 10. The ninth race is the apostles of Metensia and the tenth race is the apostles of the Emelis Shatau, and they are holy and clean, for they carry the commandments of the Lords in the Second. 11. The eleventh race of the apostles is the apostles of the aslanted shaft and the twelfth race is the apostles of the Second Metensia, and they carry the holy screws full of the burning ice. And they are like the forge of the Lords. 12. The thirteenth race is the apostles of the burning fruits, and the fourteenth race is then the apostles of the burning stings. And they are like the wasps of heaven, descending on the roofs. 13. And they are all then sons of the lightning of the Lords, and see then, it is like holy milk.

The Pink Covenant

1. And when you will then hear and understand each other, then the second nipple of the lords is not far from opening. And she will lay down and come up from the stomach and the inside. 2. And so the words and cords will be cleaned, and they will become to a new body and bring a new creation. 3. And her name will be the pink covenant, and she will be holy before the Lord. 4. And she will be like the mouse and the rabbit of the lords and she will become big between Mokmos and Sarhem. 5. And her ponds will burn like the ice and her fishes will be like lighting bows and garlands, coming from her womb and from between her hands. Yes, she will carry the balls of the Lords, burning of ice and silver. 6. And she will carry the races of the prophets and the races of the judges as a holy jewelry before the Lord. 7. And they will come forth from her womb, formed in the foul of the Lords. 8. And then the intestines and snakes reach till the womb, and she will give birth through her arse. 9. And then the arse will use to give birth, and not to get rid of excrements. 10. And the men will give birth to the snakes of heaven by their legs. 11. And those who do not know the new body of the Second will have to suffer much.

Jacob and Esau

1. Second Gad, you are as a flame in the night. On the Emelis Shatau you sit. Second Aser, to the prophetic races you belong, as a feather in the wind. You are the shadow of the bat. All your spidermen are there. 3. Those then who open Brannan sit on the gates as the ravens of the Lords. 4. Those who then carry the holy belt-apron are as the rats of heaven. They come from the Second and have suffered in the First, and see, they are clean and holy. 5. Second Naphtali, you are then as a rat of the Lords, and you have not despised the pirates of the Lords, but you have caressed your hand across their backs, and led them through the night in tears. 6. You have let them drink from the secret jugs of fizzing tears, and you have not kept away the bread of tears from them. 7. You were there in the night for them. You were a worthy soldier. 8. You have then shown them the caves of Esau, and the songs of Jacob. See then, they are both wild. 8. Yes, for also Esau will be saved, for they have been atoned with each other, after a long war. 9. Yes, for in the womb they fought against each other, but they found each other before the death. 10. So there will be many who have fought against Christ finding Him before the grave, and He will be like the Cleaned and the Holy Second. 11. For also the Lord wrestles, hits and admits then, like with Jacob on Pniel. 12. The Lord then loves the wrestlers, and His Holy Hate does not always lead man to destruction. 13. The Lord has then hated Esau in the fight, for also Esau had to become broken, but the Lord loved His heart, for it was a wild heart. 14. And so is then the Hate of the Lords a stronger love than the love on earth, for the Lord Lord, your God, hates in guile. 15. So there are many who came to the hate of the Lords and they have tasted it and intoxicated by it, atoned with many enemies. 16. You are then also all soldiers of love, working with guile, but not to destroy, but to build up.

The Hate of the Lord

1. And all who have come to Brannan, wear the belt of the Lords, and the light of Lapondria will rise to their chest. They will open their mouth and laugh, for the Big Canaan is in their mouths. 2. The Lord opens then the prophetic races as soft flames, for the red juice has separated Jacob from Esau, but this same red juice has also brought them together. And this is the mystery of the Lords, for the Lord spoke about His Second Blood. 3. And see then, they are both wild. Big Grace the Lord gives to those who have come to the Second Issaschat, and they will become like the waves of the sea. Yes, many times the sea-red has been sifted, and his flames rise continuously to Brannan. 4. The Lord loves then those of the race of the Second Simeon and the race of the Second Judah, for they are prophetic races, and they are wild and work with guile. 5. Yes, the Lord hates them also, for by hate he proves his love. 6. And so the sea-yellow has been sifted many times by hate. 7. You who do not have the hate of the Lords, and not tasted the bitter of the sea, how can you be in his love ? The Love of the Lords comes forth from His Hate after all. 8. So then no one can come closer to the Lord, without hating sin and the old nature. Yes, who then doesn't hate his own life, cannot enter the Kingdom of God. 9. And he who doesn't hate his own son, and his own woman and possession, cannot enter the Kingdom of God. 10. The Lord now is hate, for the hate cleans and tests. Like this you can build each other up in love. But when you hate, hate in the Lord, for the hate of the world leads to destruction, and they don't have the Christ. 11. Let then no one mislead you with pious and hollow sounds of love, for the law of the Lords is hate. 12. You then have taken away many weapons from the church and from the Second, when you say that the hate of the devil is and not of the Lord. The Lord has weapons of hate, and you have to give heed to them like light in the darkness. 13. You have already been delivered to the world and those of the Mammon, when you love without clinging to the Hate of the Lords. 14. The lord then wraths against his enemies, and also against his children. Cursed are those who hate the chastisement of the Lords, and despise the hate of the Lords. They are not allowed to come in the church of the lords, for they have even despised the First. 15. Read then of the hate of the First, and learn to purify her, for when you hate to hate, then you are cursed. 16. But when you hate in order to love, see, you are blissful. 17. And you have to give heed to these words as the trees of life with burning fruits, as to the soft of Metensia. 18. Let then no one take your salvation away, for many seducers will come to you to try taking you away from the Lord with guile. 19. Therefore it is sometimes better to live far away from humans, to be close to God, as when humans are close it brings you far away from God. 20. Test each other then with these words.

The Holy Soul

1. And Naphtali is as a burning hind before the Lord, lighting in the fire of God, and the Lord will sift it thousandfolded. 2. Yes, also all other tribes of Israel are cleaned in His Fire. 3. And the smoke will rise to the Emelis Shatau for a new day. A new day of the lords has come. Let then the gates of Brannan be opened wide, and remove then those who do not wear the holy belt-apron, for she has been given as a sign of the Lords. 4. And Naphtali is as a fiery hind before the Lord, full of the fire-red, singing the songs of the cross. 5. And Naphtali will be like the hind of Maser, wrapped in poverty, to bring forth the riches of the Lords. 6. Bring then all the priests to the Lord, and let them be cleaned by the fire and the eye of Eminius. 7. The Lord knows then all priestly races, and the races of kings, and they will not terrorize the prophetic races anymore. 8. The Lord knows then all their names, all their exits and entries. 9. And in the eye of Eminius is then the bond with Spricht, for he suffers and battles for him. And Eminius carries the sword of Spricht, and brings all to His staff, those who have come through Golgotha. 10. You then are all on your way to the Emelis Shatau, but many will stumble on their way, so that there will be cleaning among you. 11. And then you will travel from Brannan to the Emelis Shatau and back, so that the licorice of heaven will grow in your hearts and your souls will be in ecstasy about it. 12. Yes, for the roots of the Lords have many juices which will serve those who have come to these roots. 13. Blissful are those who have rooted themselves in the Emelis Shatau, and blissful are those who are deeply rooted in Brannan, for they will know the licorice of the Lords. 14. And there will rise a man named Licorice and He will be the fruit and the son of the cross to lead the nation in the times that the lungs will be squeezed to be locked, and there will be a small source of breath for the most holy. 15. But they will also go through times of no breath, so that there will be cleaning among them. 16. And the man named licorice will be as the Holy Soul, and the Second Soul of the Lords, and thos will be poured out over the studios to educate many. 17. Yes, the hair will burn, when the Holy Soul will be poured out, and he will become as a big jewelry in the middle of the cross, carrying the mysteries and the fizzing of God. 18. So there will be then much syrope streaming from the middle of the cross to bring a few to healing.

The Light of the Cross

1. And in the last of days Licorice will burn and spit fire, and the light will lead the saints. And they will have to go through many wildernesses, and become equal to these wildernesses. 2. For also the Christ had to become identically to the suffering and the dying, to enter into eternal life. 3. And Eminius and Licorice will become one in the last of the days as a lighting ship, and the helicopters of heaven will go out from them. 4. And the purple gnat will go out from then as the light of the cross, and this light will be mystical, and they will build a new creation. 5. Yes, till the seventh dimension their light will reach, to the glues of God. And the purple gnat will become big, and will blind many hearts, for they have sinned to the most high. And his coming will be terrible, as the secret thunder of the Lords, spared up to the last of days. 6. And He will lead the holy attendants and anointed ones to the secret mountain, and they will clean the latins and the fire-red, till the sea-red. 7. And then the star Sirius will be cleaned, and the dogstar, and they will be cleaned till the latins and till the fire-red ship. 8. Yes, the red tear will clean them, and those who are under the yellow, for it will be a day on which the Lord will consecrate Sirius. 9. Yes, Sirius will burn before the Lord, and also her harvest will be cleaned, sevenfold. 10. And then there will come voices to the Lord, to accuse the purple gnat, but the Lord will cast them into the pit of thunderstorm. 11. And for three days they will be without breath, and these days will be as months. 12. And they will be found guilty as kidnappers, yes, kidnappers of wine, and they will sit in the fate of a kidnapper, till sevenfold, for they have severely sinned against the Lord, and have eaten from the harvest of the kidnap. 13. And then the boat of Sirius will rise, and she will carry the light of the cross. And see, it is a boat of dogs. 14. And the Lord will clean the dogs. Blissful are then the Dogs of the Lords, for they have carried healing to those whose hearts have been stolen. 15. The lord has then stolen back the hearts as a holy thief, and was followed by dogs. 16. Woe then those to which the Herman has descended to steal back, for He will break into their houses in the night, while they sleep. And there will come a fear over the world, like has never been before, and they will think that they are the only ones left, while there is no one who saves. 17. Yes, they will be delivered to the fears of eternal damnation. For Eminius has come to bring fear, to strike them as by lightning. 18. And they will forget the Second, and will be grasped by the First again, while there is no one who saves. 19. So the Lord will do to everyone who has sinned against Him. The Lord will not let Himself be mocked. 20. Blissful are those who have been pulled out of the First, and who do not carry the seed which made them believe in the First anymore. 21. let yourself be saved by the Herman out of the horrors of the First, for He comes to many in the middle of the night to lead them to the Second by sleep and dreams. 22. Search then for grip in Him, for He lets Himself be changed by prayer.

The spine of heaven

1. You have come close to the purple gnat, who warms your hearts. Do not sin against Him, for He is the light of the cross. 2. For He went out from Golgotha where our Lord died, and was as the lightening at the horizon to let the veil of the temple be torn, and by which they all said : Yes, He is truly the Lord. 3. He was the light paralyzing the soldiers at the cross. 4. He strikes to blindness and strikes to open eyes. 5. He has come then, Eminius Metensia Matas. He comes then to open the Big and Second Canaan, and they will have a small well of breath which will lead them. And He will lead them to fiery wells, and then they will open their mouths wide and not being able to speal, for He longs for sacrifices of silence. 6. And so is the the light of the crosses. And He will come to strike the First and Small Canaan, for it has been built on bloodshed and the flesh of animals. 7. And He will lead the souls of the animals who died innocently to Sinsabeine and the wild. 8. Yes, to under the yellow He will bring them where they will be comforted thousandfolded, and they will see the mystery of centuries. 9. And Sinsabeine will attach itself in their coccyxes, as a tooth and roof of the Lords, and they will have many outlooks. 10. Yes, blissful will be those who have received the outlooks of heaven, for they go as on wings. 11. And then Abdal will attach itself to the lowest of the spine as a tooth and roof of the Lords, and the economic power will be of the Lords. 12. And then Tamille will attach itself as a tooth and roof of the Lords above Abdal on the spine, and she will release the rats in the gutters, and they will come to the windows in the destined hour for that. 13. And then Tabulle will come to the attic-windows, and she will be the glory of the birds. 14. And then I saw bats coming to the roofs, and their authority was big. 15. And they came from under the purple, and had cleaned the purple many times till seventy thousand times. And their glories came to the stars. 16. And there was a battle named Lapsalvania in heaven, and her juice was the juice of the wasps, and she came to the spine of heaven and ascended along it. 17. And the roots of orion were laid bare, and I saw stars falling out of the heavens. And they fell on the earth and made noise. 18. And the saints had lookouts on the matadok, as on the holy mountain of the lords, and they saw the paradoxes of the lords sitting as birds on the roofs. 19. And they stood there as the Marion, burning as torches of the Lords, spreading their light. 20. And they had been torn from inside, and they had wild eyes as the Herman.

1. And you have come to Maser : Know then the lush of the poverty, and see, it will be as your robe. 2. Be then like the Assisi who was the prophet of Maser, of Christ the Poor, and had the Poverty as companion. Yes, he worshipped then the poverty. 3. You will then have to defeat Ingridtel, the tree of cats, she with the many thorns. Don't let it be about honor, but about the primeval. 4. Then you will receive yourselves in the light of Dezer, the Christ of the Primeval. You know then that Maser is a lush vulture-raven, waiting for you. 5. Blissful are those who have stilled his hunger, and given his rabbit-beggars to drink. 6. Those who have begged for poverty, and received it richly, till lush clothes of the wilderness. 7. return then to the French schoolbooks of the Lord, and learn from Him. They are given to you as counsel of glory and guide. 8. Make then many vows to the Poverty, and you will win her for you. You will then have to swim in her seas till Narzia, and the develish sea-cats you will overcome. The Jaguar waits for you at the coasts of Narzia. 9. Creep then through the wildernesses to the mountain of Dezer in the open field. You do good to take the primeval to you, and not the honor, for the honor deceived those who do not live in poverty and gives them illusions. 10. And because Maser went the road of Dezer, he became lush as a wonderful bird of the lords and as the black panther. 11. You will then go from Assisi to Assisi to come to the primeval. Accept then Dezer in the field, so that you will be counted to his sons and not getting lost with false hope. 12. learn then to know your Christ in the darkness and ice so that you will not spoil one of his tears. You have then the cross as vehicle over the seas till Narzia. Let yourself then not miss the prize by any leak. 13. And so there are then several prophets of the old covenant delivered to satan, to lucifer and Ingridtel so that they will stop the making of leaks. 14. Yes, also those who were fathers once haven't been spared. And so then young prophets have delivered their fathers and put them in the ban. 15. You have then Maser as your father, and you do not have the need that anyone teaches you.

Not canonizing

16. Take then the old centuries of France as silver crocodiles to you, to receive the Spirit of Maser. 17. Be then like the french and their birds, and be like the poor. Like this you will make your souls blissful in Maser. You then will not complain anymore, when you are pulled out of your canon of suffering. 18. To a deeper cross you will go, and you will accept her. They have made the cross as a law of the cross, as a canon. 19. And everyone who went across the line, received the wages very deep. You of the cross-canon, break. 20. You have thrown the stone to Narzia, and overcame the great. But we have come to the cross of Maser, leading to the primeval. 21. Set then the cross free, as a flying bird, and take her out of her cage, so that she will not come with vengeance, but she will do that anyway. In all these times she has sat down, and the cross of France you have not accepted. 22. Oh lilies of the cross, your gates have been opened. Spread your wings, oh karsuiks, oh putses of Metensia. 23. Spread your wings, oh birds of Michai and birds of Maser, and fly to new and old eternities. 24. Yes, to the primeval they will go. They will break through the glass. Yes, to the Snowwhite they will go. 25. Oh Maser has come to the temples, where they do the trade of the cross, and where they have been hit by the whip. 26. Oh Maser has come to the temples, to chase them away, and to open the cages of the birds of the cross. 27. Oh cross of Maser, covered with red gems, as the fruit of Poverty. Yes, to the primeval she reaches, in Dezer they are free. Free to go to the field. 28. Oh, stone of Maser, which hit the head-wound, you are not canonized anymore, you are not behind glass, you have hit the snowwhite and carried it. 29. To under the pink you have gone. For does the hard then not make soft ? You will not canonize the hard. 30. But behind the glass they will always drive it, always again, until those of the pink mirror will come. You will not canonize the soft, and neither the thorns by which she works. The tallest thorns are needed to let the juices of heaven flow. 31. And see, they flow on their times. You will not canonize the nightlarks.

1. I have no needs, I am healthy, since I found the cross. Yes, the cross has healed me, filled me with herbs of heaven. She gave me the collars of flowers, she is the red cape. 2. At the door of the sick she knocks, at their gates she stands, with the fruits of the heavens. 3. She is the red cape, with her juices of fire. Those who cherish the cross, know of her lures. In rivers she glides, to cool waters. In forest-lakes she has her crowns, selected sevenfolded. 5. She speaks as the forest-fountain, to all who follow her. I do not have needs, I am healthy, since she touched me. 6. On squares she is avoided, but children follow her. 7. She carries the ice-gems and fire-gems in her basket. The meanings of things change under her caressing. Yes, she created the Spirits of God, and brought the Karazure to the heart of Metensia. 10. Silent nighttrouper they are, spinning the karbulines and the karmozines, the nightlatins and the fire-reds. 11. Yes, she created the big First, as the heart of the heavens and the earth. In her so many found shelter. 12. The cross knocks at the doors as a goat, looking for her children. 13. So many have found the nightlatin, spun through the big wounds. 14. The cross knows them all. They found their shadows and their lives. 15. She reached then to the living in their spirit, to give it the waters of lives. 16. As a goat she passes the houses by, on squares she is avoided, but children follow her. 17. She speaks like the forestfountain, to all who follow her. I have no needs, since she touched me. 18. The night-gem knows so many languages. They all follow her. 19. The birds sing of her blood, which flows through thousand barrels. She is the red cape. 20. She has produced the Marion in the wombs of Metensia and Mura, as the tree of the cross. 21. As a goat she gathers the fruits which the forest dropped for her. And she brings them to the children, for on all squares she is avoided. 22. They see her as the danger of the Karazure, all who hate her, all who serve the world. 23. They established the fence of centuries.

1. She is the blood in cool lakes, with many collars she stands on Golgotha. After the shark and the chicken have crowed, so many tears falls there, as the rain of the cross. 2. She holds the life in her hand, with steams of the Karazure. 3. Blissful are those who tremble for her, to Golgotha she leads them, as a goat who gathered her children. 4. At the door of the sick she knocks, standing at their gates. She brings the nighttrouper, with their few words. 5. Roses found a shelter in her. To the lame she gives a stick, to hit those who hate her. 6. Do not hate the cross, so that she will not find you. 7. Birds sing of her blood, to all those who cherish her. The blood that streams through thousand souls, they found healing in her ice-gem. 8. Where the silent nighttrouper are, she stays. The red covers her. 9. Roses come forth from her lap, as the flowers of the cross. 10. Where the silent nighttrouper are she stays. Bring then praise to the cross, to the red cape. 11. Those who hide under her have the shields of the cross, and her weapons are like needles, to embroider the armor. 12. She works under pseudonime, find her then. Do not send beggars away from your doors, for you might chase her away, to regret that for eternity. 13. The fence of centuries she broke, but evil folks raised it again. She found refuge in her nightpoem. She then hides in all those who follow her, she created the Christ in the silver, and the second in the gold. 14. Again she will break the fence of centuries, and birds will fly to her house, where the blueberries burn, and the fruits are of ice. 15. On the hills of blueberries the nightpoems are banging like doors, and the big trees come forth with many collars. 16. The story bound us all, say it on.

1. As the clean latin she is to those who follow her, for Jew and Greek who cherish her. 2. At the doors of the lame she knocks, standing at the gates of beggars. 3. Those in rags know her, she with the many collars. 4. The mice of heaven have heard and understood her heart. 5. Those who serve the mystical, have always read between the lines. Her Word will never perish. 6. The Word of the cross brought under a scornrobe, brought us to the red cape across the crown of thorns. 7. She is the heart of the cross, cherish her then, where the rats of heaven have seen her. 8. She has broken the white shoe of satan. The crown of thorns is here, know that well. 9. The game of rats has ended, the mice have no party. She break the king of hearts, and pierced his kidneys, to pronounce a time of freedom to his slaves, as a ship in savage waves. 10. The crown of thorns is here, do you know it well ? As a star above fizzing sea, to lead them to the land beyond the trees. 11. The house of doctors she did not know. She had a herb of the cross. 12. The white shoe of Beelzebul she broke, and bound his sons one by one, to prepare hearts to the big nightlatin. 13. As lights at the attic, she broke the threat, one by one. They all had to stand before her, and she brought them to eternal rest in the rocks. 14. The fate of the Lords is then not to break them, but to let them sleep forever. 15. The Lords know then the rest in the seas. In their sleep they are savage, but the foam forgot about it forever. 16. They rest then in the fourth death, where the Lord drove them.

1. They who then know nothing have to suffer a lot, but the sleep brings them to rest and intoxication. They embroider there in nightpoems. 2. The Lord has strung up rest from the beginning, to a bow to resist those of the canon. 3. Open then your gates and let the bird fly wide. The new day is dawning. Who would not embrace her. 4. She is the crown of thorns of the Lords. She spoke in fire and homesickness. 5. Yes, to sleep she brings, all who fear Him. 6. The thorns have stung deep, now rest comes in. Those who then not wanted to suffer deep, have avoided her. 7. But once the thorn reaches to the spirit, to the depths of the second, and then the gates of sleep will open. 8. The needle has stung deep. She did not know what she said. Now they are yours again, those roses. They will break you, side by side. 9. For the Lord brings brokenness to those who suffer deep, and then the new day is dawning. 10. No, you cannot avoid the roses, when they rise and march, to the broken windows they come, to break in further. 11. Yes, as a thief in the night the Lord comes. The thorn-crown hangs at the wall, as a star in the air she is. 12. She created the Lord of the Spirits, the Holy Soul, now He is then rooted as a tree in deep mornings. 13. Yes, she created the Lord, she is the Soul of the Spirit. A thorn-crown she is, the Lord has carried her dignified. 14. She brings the armies to rest and brings them to the eternal sleep.

15. As a queen in her palace, she plays the violin. She was then avoided, she is the thorn-crown. But children followed her, knowing her bliss. 16. She brought them to the rivers, to the waters of sleep. She brought intoxication and anaesthesia by her stings. As the fire of roses she was. 17. She broke the fence of centuries. She lived under the red cape. 18. She came from the cross, as the fire-gem of the red cape. The fiery stings of roses cherished her in silver, and she brought forth the gold as honey. 19. As a prisoner of spiders she was, the thorn-crown. They made her tall and bitter. 20. Come then to the thorn-crown, all who say they cherish Christ. 21. His deep heart, his second spirit, would I then cherish mysteries ? 22. Fiery keys He gives to those who cherish Her. 23. The thorn-crown as the heart of the sea, as mysteries of sailormen. 24. Let her then bring the ropes to rest. They have worked too long. Let her bring them to spright. 25. Where doors open her name comes, where windows break she slides inside. She is as the snake of the cross, coming to all those who cherish her. 26. The herb of sleep she brings, and the spinnings of the wind. 27. Would anyone despise her, she brings him down. She gives the wages of sleep to all, by the measure she measures. 28. Unjust is then the judgement over those who were unjust, but her injustice is more just than the justice of humans. 29. She is then the justice of merchants and of slaves. Would it run out of hand, she knows to find everyone. 30. On sea-coasts she makes noise. She is the thorn-crown. 31. Still her screaming is more silent than the silence of humans, and her noise as the noise of seagulls. 32. Know her then in her violence. She is the thorn-crown of the lords. 33. When it then goes out of hand, she is there. And gulls serve her. 33. Yes, she knows the titmice on the roof, and brought the karsuiks and the putses to Metensia. 34. Do not touch the past anymore, when she speaks, but go through her opened doors. Her caressings change meanings. 5. She turns the goals upside down, and is as the spinning hedge.

The Stone of the Magpie

1.

1. So has then Christ not only become a human, but also an angel, in hidden times.

2. For the Lord had not only set up a plan of salvation to rescue man, but even more to rescue the angels.

3. For like man took of the apple and fell, there was also an apple of angels, and those who took from it have not been spared.

4. And like this many divisions of angels went down by the high tides of the Lords, to test their hearts.

5. Now there have been a few folk who have preached that there is no salvation for angels, but these people know nothing of the hidden things of the Lords.

6. For also Christ became angel, in order to rescue many angels.

7. And like this Christ descended to the wildernesses of the fourth dermension in which the angels lived in bondage with their generations and their legions.

8. They didn't live on the mountain of Eden anymore, the holy mountain of the gods and angels, but they lived in the wildernesses at the heights of Eden.

9. And some of them lived in grace in the outer corners of Eden. And Christ first became angel, to bring many angels to bliss. And so He descended from the mountain of the gods into the wildernesses of the fourth dermension to the places where many angels were bound. And He spoke to them, and comforted them, to preach the Word. And the Lord let His sword descend on the fallen angels, and those who had fallen with them by family or race, and the Lord separated them.

10. And Christ spoke many words to bring separation and to test their hearts, and many of them didn't want Him. And they took Him to a hidden place, and beat him and bound him there. Also they made a mask and laid it around his head, and they gave him a hangrope. And like this Christ who had become an angel was hanged. And those who loved Him called Him the magpie and the holy thief. For because Christ was the hanged one He robbed many out of the claws of Virtus, the spirit of the apple, and the fallen god. And like this man is served to know of Christ the Hanged One, for it is speaking about a far history in which the Lord delivered angels out of the dark mystery of the black apple.

11. And because Christ once rescued angels, like this he could also rescue the human. And so He is then a holy covenant, the way to the garden of the gods, for everyone who is bearing the hangrope. For every hanged one needs to realise that first his Christ hanged there. But many have ridiculed the hangrope, and labelled it as unholy, and they have despised the blood which Christ poured out for the angels. That is why the Lord will also ridicule those who have made a mockery out of the hangrope, those who walk around with a material stock to dominate others by it. Do not let anyone mislead you, for the true hangrope was a thick and strong rope. And also those who are masked have a comfort that their Lord was also masked.

12. So it is then that the Lord has risen many times, and has gone to the death many times, and this not only to save man, but also angels. Like this he has also established his gospels for the human, and for the angel. Because the Lord doesn't punish for eternity, and He also does not test without an end. The Lord is a loving God full of mercy. His works are good and great. Now I will tell you then a mystery : the gods eat meat, and many fell away by eating the forbidden meat. So then the Godsnakes eat hearts, and some fell by eating of the forbidden heart. And they had as saviour the old magpie. For the magpie didn't just rescue the gods by the hangrope and the mask, but also he rescued the Godsnakes who were the being and nature of God. And by this any covenant was made holy.

13. And so Christ has also come forward from the works of the old magpie, and he was sometimes also called a magpie. This because the work of Christ directs back to the works of the old magpie. And the magpie will come as a thief in the night. So is then the God-magpie the deeper and purer being and nature of God. And once he created the mountain of Eden to go on a search for hearts. And still his eyes go across the world in search for hearts. And the Lord devours hearts by the holy devouring, and the Lord fills hearts, and separates hearts. Yes, the Lord makes houses in hearts, to come to His goal. And the forbidden heart was black, and it was as a liver.

1. This is then the old book of the first letter of John, purified by established apostles by the Lord, with important things to add, because the Spirit of the Lords had been blocked on many points in history.

2. The Lord has given his apostles the powers for this, and you do good when you give attention to it like a lamp shining in dark places.

3. So then many churchleaders and many translators have been there to poison the Word of the Lords. They have twisted the Word of the Lords, with adding things, and taking things away which was not inspired by the Lord.
4. And because the hands of the human have mixed themselves into the work of the Lords this has become a curse.
5. Take therefore these words to the heart and remove the unpure and partly darkened first letter of John out of your Holy Scriptures.
6. Let such a letter be history, and do not make yourself dirty with it again. Know that this is a commandment of the Lords.
7. You will therefore speak about an old first letter of John and a new first letter of John, which has been made holy by the Lord.
8. So it is time now to break the curse of the old and the first, so that you will go into the new and the second.
9. Didn't the Lord himself say to you then that His Word has been received by dirty hands, and that the pharisees have taken away the power of the Word as robbers ? Yes, opposers have infiltrated the most holy, to let themselves be worshipped as a god.
10. Like Moses was only for a part led by the Spirit, the same counts to John. John was not perfect, and you will come free from the curse when you consider the person John and his letter as fallible and not perfect.
11. God is light. In Him there is no darkness. When we say we walk with him, but we let darkness rule us, then we are liars. My people, this I write to you, so that you will not come to sin and so that darkness will not rule you.
12. When we let the light rule us, then we have good fellowship with eachother, like the Lord is One.
13. When we say we have no sin, then we lie, and the truth is not in us.
14. When we say there is no darkness in us, then we lie, and the truth is not in us.
15. When we say there is only good fellowship among each other and with the Lord, then we lie, and the truth is not in us.
16. When we confess our sins, then He is faithful and righteous to forgive that sin, and to cleanse us by the blood of Christ of it.
17. The blood of Christ cleanses of all sins. If we say that we haven't sinned we make a liar of God, and then his word will avoid us.

18. But those who are in Christ do not sin. Those who live by the Spirit and who are in Gods mystery do not sin, but this is only in part.
19. So then all who have been bound by the Spirit are without sin, but also this is just in part.
20. Anyone who is born from God doesn't sin, but this is also just in part.
21. For when the Spirit grasps you, and puts you before Gods throne, and you are lightened by the fear of the Lord, then you will see how unpure you are.
22. This is why God will send His judgement to the herder and the prophet who say that there is no darkness and no sin in them. For this they have done so that they could speak with authority without someone opposing them.
23. But the Lord has seen it and will beat that apostle and that evangelist who have said of themselves they were infallible, by which they broke off the fellowship to establish their powers to rule the other.
24. Isn't there then an infallible state of being for a child of the Lords ? Can't the Spirit bind then to the full and perfect being ? Is everything then just in part ?
25. To get an answer to this you will have to go from bondage to bondage and from test to test, so that only the Lord will speak when you have been bound in the Fear of the Lords.
26. So then there is infallible being in Christ, and you will have to hunt after it as after a precious pearl. But then : any infallible nature will have to be tested, Those who do not test will suffer damage. They will be grasped by misleaders who will lead them to the abyss.
27. So the infallible being of John had to be tested as well, and his letter. Also his fulness, his perfect being and his fitting being had to be measured, weighed and tested.
28. And like this the Spirit has purified the letter of any curse by His apostles. You do not have to suffer anymore under a curse, the darkening and the pressure of the old. It was a voice always speaking in the depths of your spirit and it kept you blind.
29. Let the doors be opened today. Let the Lord take you away today from the poisoned word.
30. This I have written to you, so that you all know that you have eternal life in Christ. We have the freedom to come to Him, and when we pray after His will, then the prayer will be given to us before the Holy face of the Lords.

31. But those who do not fear the Lord do not have anything. They take the words of the Lord away and they make the foundation weak. They boast around in their traditions and say : See, how we have made the word of the Lords powerless.

32. But many are deaf, and they follow them blindly. No, no mercy is there for them.

33. The Lord will visit them on his established hour. And he will remove their blind eyes and deaf ears, because they were blind and deaf anyway, by their sins, destined to nothingness. And the Lord will give their flesh to the birds of the heavens.

34. Yes, on that day the Lord will let the flesh of many rot away, while no one will care for them. Darkness has come over them, and they won't be able to find each other.

35. Follow therefore no leaders who lead you to such darkness. For the Lord is faithful in watching his words, so that they will be preformed and completed very detailed.

36. Yes, the Lord cuts right by His Sword, driven by the Truth. But those who aren't fools of the Lords, and who plant themselves on the highest chairs like churchwolves, how can they carry the Truth in them.

1. So it is then the Spirit of the Lords who has been blocked out by distortions of the words of the Lords. So it is then the Spirit of the Lords who has been put on rations.

2. So it is then that you have let the Spirit of God be in hunger and thirst, and you haven't opened up for Him.

3. And thus says the word of the apostles : You have made the book of the Lords difficult, and ridiculous. That is why the Lord will cast out many as evil spirits.

4. Beloved, do not trust every spirit, but test the spirits if they are from God, for many deceiving spirits and false prophets are in the world.

5. So it is that John has let the Spirit speak just only in part, but the word of the apostles to which God has given power carries the Spirit of John.

6. So then the temporal veil and shadow has been taken away. By this you will recognize the Spirit of God : any ghost who will confess that Jesus Christ, the Son of God, has come into the flesh, is from God. So is then any ghost who does not confess this not from God.

7. This is the spirit of the antichrist, which doesn't confess Christ, and which will come in the world to say : I am God.

8. Such a spirit you will despise. But not any spirit who says : I am God, is a spirit of the antichrist. So then there are also spirits who have lost their way, deceived spirits, and the spirits of the Lords.
9. Therefore beloved : You have to test. You will not recognize spirits by their words, even not by their deeds, but by their deepest and innermost heart.
10. God sees the spirits, not in their words and deeds, but where no human sees them, and where no authority understands them, there in their deepest wilderness, where their soul thrones.
11. And this soul thrones in missing and loneliness, because she is not seen like she is.
12. So is it then that God has the keys to the deepest knowledge, and is no any prophet or apostle of some value, before his Face. Only those who are in the key have eternal and unbreakable value.
13. Therefore don't let yourself be misled by a confession when you test, but pierce through in the depths of the spirit, knowing that God has the keys.
14. Those who sin cannot test, but what is sin ? Do you have any consciousness of what sin is ? Which language do you speak ?
15. So it is that many angels have fallen together with the heavens they ruled, and see, they have created spiritual languages. And by this they deceive many.
16. God can't use languages. God translates, and pierces through to the nucleus. God doesn't live in misunderstandings. Misunderstandings are inspired by language. Language is a curse when there is no interpretation which leads to the deepest.
17. So it is then that you will have to go to the deepest interpretation to be able to understand your brother. But most of all : you will have to go through the doors of Gods mysteries. Then you will speak the languages of the Lords.
18. So it was then that John wasn't without sin, and he wasn't without lie, neither without darkness. How would he be able then to prophesy perfectly and in fulness by the Lord ?
19. But it is true that the Lord hits straight by rods which aren't straight, and He can grasp someone to speak His words. God can use anything as a tube to speak through, but that isn't evidence that everything coming forward from that is always complete and full.
20. So there is then a battle between God and the spirit of the antichrist about the tube of speech, and because of this the waters are often poisoned.

21. Yes, the word is a huge cross of the Lords, because He can often speak only in part, or in chaos.

22. That is why the Lord has chosen to speak in symbol and crypt.

23. John wasn't without sin. This is why this letter has been written by the Spirit who lived in John, the Spirit of Christ, partly quenched, partly grieved, partly bound up, to purify the message in the last days by the word of the apostles.

24. So then many will come free from the curse, but also many will oppose the purified letter. They will grasp the old, and will defend their territories of power.

25. This then is the first letter and the first book of the old word which is and will be purified. Listen then what the Spirit of John preaches to the churches. The Spirit and the Bride say : Come.

26. When someone sees a brother acting in sin, not to the death, admonish him and pray. God will give live to those who sin, not to the death. There is sin to the death. It is of no use to pray for such brother. All unrighteousness is sin. And there is sin to the death.

27. John had a sin, not to the death. Even now his Spirit speaks, the Spirit of Christ, now John belongs to the cloud of witnesses.

28. I saw John standing, speaks the word of the apostles and his Spirit, and see, he stood in a dooropening, carrying a flower.

29. And this flower was to purify and order the poisoned letter from ancient days.

30. And John spoke these words, saying : Go out, oh horses of the spirit, and bring the word, you who have been sent. Bring the purified word, purified by my death, to the earth, and let it take roots in the blood of the Lord.

31. And I saw John raising his hand, and see, he blessed the word. And I saw him weeping because of what he did to Gods Spirit in the times when there was no completeness and fulness. And God gave him power to break the curse.

32. And by this John let a dove get ascended again.

33. You are from God, you who are his children and his nation. And you have overcome the spirits of the world, because He who is in you is more than the one who is in the world. So it is that you have received the Sword of the Spirit and the Sword of the Spirit of John, a special part of God, separated for that.

34. And horses of the Lord and the horses of the angels have been gone out to the different directions of the wind and of the surface of the earth to bring the spirits of the Lord to rest. Yes, they have gone out to bring those who have lost their way and the deceived spirits to rest.

35. The spirits of the antichrist however aren't of God. They are from the world and speak like the world. The world listens to them.

36. We who know God, we are of God. We are of God, because we have been born in Him, by His spirit. Those who know God listen to us. Those who aren't of God do not listen to us. By this we recognize the Spirit of Truth and the Spirit

37. They who do not test these words are not of God. They who test these words are of God. This is only partly, for God sees the heart.

38. Those who test the spirits are of God. Those who do not test the spirits are not of God. Also this is only partly true, for God sees the heart. God sees the cross in anyone.

39. So there are then : crosses of the lie and of deception, crosses of false test, crosses of tests which have lost their way, and testless crosses. God knows the darknesses and veils of the hearts, and the depths of spirit and soul.

40. Is salvation then possible ? This is why the Lord has established the word of the apostles.

41. And I, apostle of the Lord, saw the old book of the letter of John, and see, it was a prison. Because the pieces of that letter were the stones of the building of the conscience, of the soul and the spirit, and held the Spirit of the Lord tight as a prisoner. And I saw the building materials break down and slide away, and everything started to fall down. And a voice said to me : Climb up to here !

42. And I climbed up while the stones below me were still breaking down, until hands grasped me, and put me on solid ground. Thus was the word of the apostles.

43. And I saw a horse and a ladybug of the Lord as the appearances of angels, and radiating light came forward from them. And I saw geings coming out of the pit from which I came, chained souls, and see, they got rescued and released.

44. And a big round stone was moved over the pit to cover it.

1. And the sword of the Spirit is over those who know the Spirit of John. And the sword leads them forward, and taught them to battle.

2. And they kept the words of the sword in their hearts. They battle under the leading of the chiefs of the armies of heaven. They heard their voices for the Lord has opened their ears. They know of the mysteries of John and of his Spirit.

3. And this is the mystery : the love, of which you have heard from the beginning. Not like Cain murdered his brother. This was from evil.

4. Why did Cain murder his brother ? Because his acts were evil, and those of his brother were righteous. Don't be surprised therefore when the world hates you. Like this they have also hated the kings of Christ.

5. By love to the brothers we have gone from death to life. Without love we stay in death.

6. When we hate our brothers we are murderers, and the life is not in us. No murderer has staying eternal life in him.

7. We recognize the love in Him who gave his life for his friends. This we have to do also for our brothers.

8. When you see your brother suffering lack in the world and you shut your inner life and heart for him, how then can the love of God stay into you ?

9. We do not love the other by words, but by deeds, and then mostly by the truth. We are no slaves, because like Christ has loved his friends by the depth, and has been set free by the Spirit, we will also love each other by depth.

10. What does this depth mean then ? These words have to deal with the cross, and the isolation with deeper knowledge.

11. By this we will know that we are from the truth, and before Him persuade our heart and innermost life, that if our heart and conscience condemn us by fire, God is more than all these things, and has knowledge of everything.

12. We have freedom to come to God and Jesus Christ, when our heart doesn't say we are guilty. Then we receive anything we pray from Him. This because we do what He desires of us, and because we keep His commandments and preserve them.

13. This is always just in part, because the nature of our heart always hides for God. Like this the heart can hide under darkness, and say : I have done nothing wrong. The Lord however knows all hearts.

14. This is His commandment : that we spare each other in love, and that we believe in the Name of His Son, Jesus Christ, to who we obey. This is only in part however. God directs to the depth. Things are not what they seem to be. In the depth we get approval, and in this the symbolism of this all will be clear.

15. God is no password, and even his commandments are not, because they can be obeyed by hypocrites and deceiving spirits to receive powers. This habit we do not have. That is why the name and the deed do not have any value in the depth, and they only serve symbolism, as an indicator to the opening of doors.

16. Who spares his commandments and preserves them, stay in Him, and He stays in him. And by this we know that He stays in us : by the Spirit and the Spirit of John, who He gives to anyone who truly loves Him.

17. Let us therefore love each other and preserve each other in love. The love is from God, and anyone who truly loves is born of God and knows God. Who doesn't truly love doesn't know God. God is love. God has loved by sending his only born son to the world. In this true love has been revealed, so that we would live by it.

18. In this is the love, that God has loved us, not that we have loved God. God has sent His son as being the United against sin. Like God has loved, we should love.

19. No one has ever seen God how He is. No one has ever seen the human how he is. But by love God stays in us, and in this it has become perfect. Let us therefore love each other. By this we know that we have received His Spirit and the Spirit of John.

Ode to the Virgins

1. Holy virgins of the wood, holy virgins of the volcanoes, have you ever heard me when I prayed to you. Have you ever seen how I longed for you. My heart was roaring already in my head when I was young, when I sent poetry to you. Poetry of love, of grown up language, but you sent me to the wilderness.

2. Holy virgins of the mountains, holy virgins of the sun, have mercy on me when I come to You. When I utter a wrong word in your presence, do not punish my too heavy. I am young and unhandy of heart. Do not cast me away from mountains too high. I cannot fly, my wings are still small. Do not throw me into seas too deep, for I cannot swim in such savage domains.

3. Don't think I am wise enough to mislead philosophers. I am still a child, tender and helpless in the savage hand of the earth. Holy virgins of the seas, I look forward to you on my towers. Let me know when you want to speak. I am your tube of speech, as a vessel of the earth.

4. Form me like clay, make me strong in Your hand. But you have only given weakness to me, in a dreamworld I dwell now. I am too weak to stand up, you holy virgins of the hours of the night. You have made my heart smaller, you have bound my feet. A savage I am now, on my journey I have never rest. You want to ogle me to your depths. teach me to see Your wounds. They don't heal fast. I have approached the volcano.

5. Oh, holy virgins of the hours of the day, you who bear the lights. You are wise inside, that's why your lights are purified.

6. So then these virgins are holy, for they have loved the hidden things. They have also reached the wise by their foolishness, form me in your hand, make me strong in weakness, and wise into foolishness.

The Virgins of the Hours

1. The virgin, golden fountain, of pure waters, of pure waters coming from the darkness. The virgin, tender word, in weakness you have come forth, in weakness you have come up. Like a clear weakness, like a wise weakness, you brought strength to the word. No house too high, no bridge too tall, you always go forth.

2. The virgin, airfountain, to be with the nightlatins was of more value to you than a golden crowning, was of more value to you than the chorus of the day. Adventures you haven't avoided, through the night you went.

3. The virgins, to the darkness you have gone, not avoiding the hidden, you have a place at the front. Come, lead me away to the past, come, let us come to the virgins of the primeval. In the deepest darknesses they live. They have a place at the front.

4. The virgins, golden bliss, lead us through the dark days, teach us to know You better, and let us go to the virgins of the hours.

5. The virgins of the hours, we come to You, we love Your fire, oh candlestick, the years have passed by, but You are still there. We drink of Your voice, You are the nightwatch on which I build. I sleep in rest and being concealed, when You spread Your wings over me.

Supplication to Alika

1. I can't see you, you are too far away, like a queen on her throne. I can't hear you, your voice is too far away. I only hear some whisperings, but who is it, I do not know. Is it Your messenger, or is it just the wind. The Virgin, Alika, Holy Virgin, Wise Virgin of the inside, you always come too late everywhere.

2. Why do you let us shriek, the dead have died already, we suffer pain, no messenger sent to us. The Virgin Alika, why have you pushed us away, in darkness we search for You. The Virgin, take us with you, do not punish us too loud. Take us to You, take us to You.

3. We walk against the walls, we can't start anything. Our voice reflects back at us, as a dead record. And you always come too late, you visit us in hell.
4. The Virgin, Alika, we knock on your gates but you only want to flood the morning.
5. Come quickly, and do not punish us too loud. We were young and unhandy, but we grew up like roses. Take us. You do not have to smile, a caring glimpse is enough to us.
6. I have a thousand roses in my mouth, they all speak of love, tender words to You, The Virgin, Alika. With virgins you will love roses, speaking with flowers, the light breaks through for eternity, in whisperings. Do not punish us too loud.
7. They do not know them, who conjure spirits. They do not know them, the softpurple weavers of the waterfalls and the rivers.
8. To the language of grace I flee, until the love sinks into the tender ground, where the breath of the small treasure of fire overflows me. She let me sink through her light, to an abundant morning which caressed my face.
9. I sink deeper into flowerground now. What should I do ? Lead me, fathom me and know me, oh The Virgin, Alika. In you all gates are open, but how do I come there, how do I know your heart. By grief, my darling, I come to all the other land.
10. Isn't there another path, do we have to suffer forever, isn't there another gate, Alika, please, tell me. Can there be a bridge beyond time ? Please, save us out of the clock, and bring us to the cupboard, where we can have a shelter. Soft pink roses, purple territoriums, dripping light, this poetry is, where love melts the time, where love created the cupboard, where we can float away, to a new beginning.
11. I have to sink, to Alika, I have to sink. Here I have to battle.
12. I still don't know you, Alika, after this night. I still don't see you, you, only splendour. I do not hear you, where have you been. Here on my pillow, are the tears of the past, and my blanket spreads itself as the bird of hell, where are you ? Have I been betrayed again ?
13. Very softly in the morning, you stand there at the gates, so shy, with your hand reaching out, to catch a piece of bread. In rags you are clothed, as the splendour of the season, but I stay hidden deep behind my walls.
- 8.

The Keys of Sektia

1. All what I need is you, the earth wants to tear me, protect me, and lead me to your pits, your shells by which you surround your splendour. I want to see your scars, where soft lights radiate, the darkness has left me.
2. Show me all your ripples, oh shell, let me feel you, where you have hurt, where you have forgotten me. Let me see your vein of love.
3. Keep confess the beauty, keep seeing the earth, to break the cages of time, and to make the virgins holy. Burn gates in the hedges, and flee.
4. Alika, bring the wet dawn. All what you need is there.
5. You were then frozen, made as a candle, and a candlestick, and they brought many candles to You, so that you would not be alone, but they could not reach you. You were a cloudheaven of fire.
6. And Sektia, you were like a wild flame, but also like the fire, like the soft loveshadow you were loved, you holy virgin to all eternities. She then gave me the keys of the lions, those who got frozen, and after that their souls got burnt.
7. Sektia will be praised forever, the Holy Virgin of the lions, to Your gates I come, and through your fires I come, to the wild flame.
8. And I called out to Alika and Sektia, and see, they were like fairies. And I came to their altars, and I drank of their cups. And I fell in their arms, drunk, and they led me away.
9. And they flew away from me, and I couldn't follow them. They were like cloudheavens of fire, and they shot arrows at me. And again I got drunk.
10. Then I had to drink from many cups, and I fell I became very heavy, like I would get crashed. And I could hardly rise up. And a virgin appeared to me, and she had many presents, but I couldn't reach her and her presents.
11. And I began to call : 'Dehu, Dehu !' And again I had to drink of many cups. And now I became as light as she was, and very tall and slim. She then was the holy virgin Dehu, and she gave me the presents. She then was like a rose of tears, like the water streaming under the earth from virginal wells.
12. And I saw the fertility of the virgin as a wound, a very fragile and soft wound, pierced many times. And the wound herself was a virgin.
13. And I saw the mouth and the tongue of the virgin, and they were like a wound, like a gate. And again I drank of many cups and I got sucked into a gate. And again I drank from many cups, and I got drunk, and again I got sucked in through a gate.

14. And they were full of ripples, and like the virgins of the sea, and they were as her fertility.

15. And Dehu stood up, and spoke her words, and these were very soft and tender. And her organs were like tears, like the waters of the virgins.

16. And the womb spoke and said : 'You are given the keys of the presents and mysteries of Dehu. And after I had drunk of many cups of venom again, a strange exotic gate opened, and I saw a savage, grey sea which lay before me, whose waves moved slowly and gave shocks. And from the sea virgins rose up, and they were the eternities.

17. And when I went in through another gate after the drinking of many cups I saw there eternities coming forth from the volcanoes. And they moved fast.

18. And when I went in through another gate after the drinking of many cups I saw there eternities as slow moving cloudheavens.

19. And in other gates I saw eternities, and they were like stone.

20. And again I came to an old stairway, but this time it went down. And there was there on a table a cup which would never run out. And I took a drink from it.

21. The door behind this table led me to a great desert. And in the middle of this desert there was a cup with a great die. And from the cup a heart ascended which turned upside down, became black, and turned into a liver.

22. And the cup was filled by heavy alcohol, and steam and smoke came out of it. And those who drank from it dried up instantly. And the cup was like a doctor of death. And from his mouth and hand rivers of heavy drought came forth.

23. And there were virgins who drank of the cup and they fell down instantly. And they were like intoxicated, and they were led to the wells of eternal virginity. And close to these wells there were chickens and cocks. And they were like the ones dried up and the poisoned ones. And they guarded the wells of the eternal virginity.

24. And they had the venom of strong drinks, and they were like the lawyers of the death. And the virginities became very heavy, and Dehu rose up from them, and raised a strange, exotic sword. And this was the frozen one, and the pierced one. And fire came forth from the sword, and she purified the virginal wells. And the wise virgins who didn't possess foolishness got thrown into a pit.

25. And Dehu shut the pit down, saying : They will not drink from the cup of venom into eternity. And screaming raised up from the pit, and they began to search for the venom, but it fled away from them.

Prayers and Confessions to the Holy Virgins

1. Holy Virgin Isabella, watch over our souls. Give us the eternal ropes, by which we can come to you. Open your holy way, a holy path full of strangers. Holy Virgin Isabella, watch over our souls, grant Your word as a doorway across bridges, let your valleys be full of love. Holy Virgin Isabella, grant us your spirit, as a glory from above.

2. Holy Virgin, do not let us glide into sin. Heal our fallen nature, and grant us your love. Add to eternal growth, in the safety and rest of your beloved shelter. You have established it below and beyond the pits, we come to you, in admiration. We close our eyes, and think of You. To You who granted us life, to you who visited us in our dungeons and abysses, and who led us to a deeper road. From beyond and below you came. Let us then approach you.

3. Holy Virgin Weather of Roses, take us up into Your lovely hand, and establish us in your kingdom, in Your paradise, where we can live in peace. Your purple and pink flames is like cooling steam of your words of love. Heal us, and teach us. We are grateful that you have come to us. Yes, deep in your pits we sank, until you took us to the depths of your kingdom.

4. On the bottom of our pits we found Your way. Have mercy, and lead us, take us away. Holy Virgin of the Forest, we have drunk from your rivers of mercy, and you have given us the golden flame. To the green gold you led us, and you made our works clear and pure. Your lovely perfumes stream from the forestbottles, and you have your pieces of bread stored in stone bottles to feed the wild beasts.

5. Holy Virgin of the Fields, Saratus, you are my great love, overflow me in your glow, a blooming, growing morningflood. I glow when you touch me. I am burning when you think of me. I always come to your gates. I have never been so deep like now, in the depths of your flowerfields, come now, and awaken my deepest longings.

6. Flowers fade away, they grow on my head, to watch the bliss forever, the glory of the glow, the motherglow, she has lifted me up on rivers, to this island of paradise, she is the virgin of the fields Saratus, the Holy One. Overflow me also now, do not forget me, when you write. Let me come into your kingdom, I am made in Your image, like you.

7. They spouted at me until I was stiff, with the foam of the fields. Saratus, why did you hit me ? She punishes her heroes heavy. In her baskets she carries them, to the wolves of the old days. They have made me so cold, but there is a flame watching in me, the flame of the holy virgin of the fields, oh Saratus, protect me against the cold,

I am like a piece of wood, until Saratus kisses me, then I awake to the lusts of the heart. Then I feel everything burning in me. Oh, Saratus, why did you hit me ?

8. To her depths I fled, for the enemy was after me, now I have kissed her, and covered many sins. Her mercy I searched, her house I built, now she has seen me. I am a kingly son, and in her I have my throne. Oh, Saratus, why did you leave me. Still I search for You, still I dream about You. Often I cannot sleep by it, it makes me so tired. Why did you hit me ? My whole life I give to You, where else do I have to go. They are after my heels. To You I can flee.

9. In the shelter I come, but I cannot find your house, under moss and flowers it will be. Still you are hitting me, how long will it take. Take me in, I am a poor beggar, too weak to come to You, but too strong to be taken away by the enemy. Please, lead me, bring me back on the path, and cover my sins.

10. I hear Your voice in the distance, in the cooling evening I long for the rest, but you do not make Yourself known too fast, I wait for You. Could I just understand Your wounds, oh tender snare, sensitive glimpse, like drawn on a card, like chained to a house. Could I just understand Your wounds, I want to feel them very much, like a house beyond and below the flowers.

11. They have spouted me until I was stiff, they have deceived me, and that's why I flee to You. I haven't come to Your house, but silently and step by step my dream will come true.

The Revenge of the Teasing Ghosts

1. That the indian elves had worked hard everyone knew. It had become a beautiful camp, and they ate from their hunter-meal in abundance. This time they were able to trap the beastly guards of the emperor, and the magic forces flew from their mouths. No one knew of their hunting tactics, for they were kept secret already for centuries long. As lightening they attacked, while they left confusing traces. No one would ever be able to reach this camp, for as soon as someone came closer, everything became invisible. This went automatic. So many magicbottles and magicjugs spred so many mysterious smells which were able to do this. Some thought the smells could make someone's brains insane, so that some things weren't visible anymore, and others thought that the camp became invisible indeed as by a fog. Whatever it was, the unreachability was a fact. Therefore the red indian elves were very proud and careful with their citizenship. It sometimes happened that an elf was banned for a certain reason. 2. Sliktior had encountered the emperor one time and wasn't impressed. Also Sorsor knew the emperor a bit. They thought back of the times that there was peace, but since the emperor hired in beastly guards it seemed like his brains were invaded. It was a sorcerer who had brought the emperor this far, and the emperor thought he was in his right. What did those guards do ? They made everything and everyone unsafe. Words lack to describe such terrors. That's why the red indian elves were so glad that they felt the flesh of these beasts flow in their mouths. Sliktior had not touched the flesh. He was afraid something would happen to him. 3. Sorsor thought about the emperor, and of the sorcerer and his sorceress. The sorcerer once had created these guards, and it wouldn't be without dangers to eat the flesh of such guards. The guards were partly lion, partly tiger and partly wolf, and further their reaving qualities rose above everything. They were the super-predators who ate all the other predators. Often they went hunting to tear everything which came on their path, but most of all they were mean. A nightmare it would be to end up in their dungeons. Sorsor had the idea that the emperor didn't realize well what he had brought into house, that he didn't know what was happening. The emperor was so busy with other things, and in Sorsor's eyes the emperor was totally under the authority of the sorcerer and the sorceress. 4. Sorsor had eaten from the flesh, and disguised himself as a guard. He went to the castle of the emperor, and stole a ball with little magiccoals. Quickly he went to his camp, raised the ball, and said : 'This here is the heart of the emperor. There will be no hope if we will let those of the imperial castle just doing what they want. They are full of guile and slyness, and the emperor himself is a pawn in their hands. We cannot save him. We cannot win from the authorities of the sorcerer and his sorceress. They will find us here, and spare not anything of us. Therefore : this ball with little magiccoals is the most precious possession of the emperor, and he will die for sure when the ball is broken.' Then Sorsor broke the ball, and there was loud cheering. They all knew that the sorcerer and the sorceress could only rule by the emperor. Now the emperor had died. 5. Sorsor went back to the castle, and there was much deathsmell and mourning. With bended heads the sorcerer and his sorceress came out of a cave near the castle. The sorcerer raised his hands and shouted : 'The gods have taken revenge.' 6. Sorsor took two knives and threw them into the hearts of the sorcerer and his sorceress. Now the surrounding and the land was free from their terror. Sorsor kept his last speech to his tribe, and established Sliktior as chief. Sorsor would begin to make his big journey to the mountains of the gods. This always happened when the chief had done a deed like Sorsor. They would remember Sorsor as their hero, and Sliktior would be called Sorsor the Second. 7. Sorsor grasped Sliktior and squeezed him tight, kissed his forehead and left. Not much he took with him. His clothes were divided among the tribe, and also big parts of his possessions, while much of it got burned. Two criminals were pierced at the stake of punishment, and they would die instead of being banned. They chose death over being banned, for the ban would be a much bigger shame in their eyes. By the stake of punishment their spirit would stay in the camp, and by battle in the wars they would be able to restore their honour. Yes, the rules of the camp were of big cruelty, but also of big grace, as a mysterious paradox of justice. Like this Sorsor had taught them. 8. Sorsor was a man of big wisdom, granted by the gods who he did not know. Now he had defeated the sorcerer and sorceress by his guile and slyness he was worthy to get to know those gods. The gods lived in the mountains, close to other wizards and big elves. But first he had to go through that terrible desert where the gods would test him. 9. In the desert he was tormented by delusions, mirages, hunger and thirst. The pain of the drought stung him. An oasis was what he longed for, a real oasis, but everything here was to tease him. There was nothing to reach here, and only the teasing ghosts were his companions. Sorsor hadn't learned to live in loneliness, and he couldn't take the emptiness which tormented his soul. He knew that the teasing ghosts weren't necessarily evil. They were sent out by the gods to test him. After a long and scary experience of emptiness and despair he shouted it out to the teasing ghosts : 'If there is then no one else available, fill me up then, for the emptiness eats me away.' While shrieking and cheering the teasing ghosts took possession of him. They had waited a long time for this, and now Sorsor would get prepared to enter the caves of the gods. It was the teasing ghost itself who was teased, and searched for rest, which it couldn't find. Now the teasing ghost had filled him magic force flew through him, and he could reach the gods without melting away. 10. In a place of magic coals he encountered the god Prektiktion. The god thanked him that Sorsor had brought him to rest, and that he accepted the teasing ghost which Prektiktion had sent to him. Sorsor spoke about the destruction of the imperial heart, and the god Prektiktion knew everything about it. 'I have given you that wisdom,' said the god. And the god filled Sorsor with a whole series of magic forces. The god Prektiktion had many wizards in service, and could use Sorsor also very well. The god gave him a bottle full of other gods he could call upon. Those other gods had the most strange names which were difficult to pronounce for Sorsor. 11. Prektiktion spoke that the tribe of Sorsor was now delivered to the powers of the desert, for the teasing ghosts would also search for them now to test them. Sorsor took the bottle and smashed it against a wall of stone where it broke. 'I had promised to protect them with my life,' Sorsor spoke. 'Why am I here ?' 12. 'You didn't have another choice,' said Prektiktion. Sorsor fell on the ground and wept. He missed his tribe. 13. 'When they accept the teasing ghost,' Prektiktion spoke, 'then your heart will be connected with them.' 14. After many long years Sliktior came to the place of magic coals as well, and told Sorsor that he didn't come because of a big deed, but because he was banned. Sorsor fell down in rage. He couldn't imagine that his tribe would be able to do something like this, but later he understood it. Sliktior had been a coward. Sorsor wondered how a banned one could come here. From the eye of Prektiktion a beam of fire came which consumed Sliktior in a flash. 'More often banned ones come here,' Prektiktion spoke. 'They can come here by a secret key, but their fate is the fire.' 15. 'Are they intruders ?' asked Sorsor. But Prektiktion shook his head. 'No, they are accepted because they are thieves. They always take a piece away from the tribe when they go. So they are special in our eyes, and our eyes will take the special then.' 16. 'But where is Sliktior now ?' asked Sorsor. 17. 'He is delivered to the revenge of the teasing ghosts,' Prektiktion spoke. 18. But Sorsor didn't accept that, for he loved Sliktior more than any god or elf. There was one thing which let him battle against the gods, and which he always carried with him, and that was a small jug fastened to a leather necklace around his neck. His ancestors told him that he could only use it once. He opened the little bottle, and a stream of poison struck the god down. Sorsor grasped a knife which had been fastened to his leg by a band, and threw it into the heart of the god like he once defeated the sorcerer and the sorceress. At the same moment the skin of the god was ripped open and Sliktior stepped out of it, as a piercing fire. 'Don't touch me !' Sliktior shouted. But Sorsor grasped him tight. 'To the revenge of the teasing ghosts you will not be delivered,' spoke Sorsor, 'but be hospital to them, for they were delivered to the wrath of the gods.' There was still one drop left in the little bottle from which Sorsor let Sliktior drink, and the teasing ghost filled him then as well. 19. Together they went back to their tribe through the desert. But the other gods had established themselves in the camp, and had forced the red indian elves into slavery. The little bottle was empty, but because Sliktior had drunk from the little bottle he was immune. And so Sliktior delivered his tribe from the gods, and he was restored in honour. 20. Sorsor would go back to the mountains, and this time not to go to the gods, but to the big elves. The big elves cared for the many teasing ghosts they had delivered from the terrible hands of the gods. When Sorsor had come to know a huge number of big elves, they established him as chief of a tribe of red indian teasing spirits. These red indian teasing ghosts could do magic like no one else, and Sorsor had to make sure they wouldn't trick him. Often a big elf had to come inbetween. 21. After many years also Sliktior came to this place, and this time not because of being banned, but because he had served the tribe of the red indian elves greatly, having done a deed as big as the deed of Sorsor. Sliktior replaced Sorsor here now, and Sorsor went deeper into the mountains. Sorsor came to a place where many red indian wizards lived, and he also saw that they were much bigger teasing spirits than those he already knew. They were devilishly cruel, but besides that also graceful, as a law he once knew, the paradox of justice. Fliktivian was a desert-butterfly who could cause big mirages, and Sorsor encountered many others. Sorsor found out that they were responsible for all the exhausting situations of his life, but this time they were friendly to him, as if he was being one of them. Sorsor found out that many of them were corrupt, and he slew them in terrible fights. In these fights he learned what true cruelty was, and that that which seemed to be grace would only make the cruelty bigger. For Sorsor got confused of it, and became an easy prey. But Sliktior followed his footsteps, and made him free. There were mysteries Sliktior carried of which Sorsor hadn't knowledge yet. 21. Sorsor had many questions, questions which would be answered on the path through the deserts and the mountain-chains. It was like everything added to the big puzzle in his head, but some pieces seemed to break everything up again. Sorsor became very wild. On a day Sorsor found a lot of teasing spirits in a little bottle. When he would release them, would things get worse or better ? He knew that they were sent to tease, and actually he had enough of all the teasing. He knew that if he wouldn't open it, then probably someone else would open it. Sorsor decided to carry the little bottle around his neck, to use it in cases of need. You could never know. But later he decided to bury it deep in the desert, for there were already enough teasing spirits in the world.

The Eternal Flame

1. There was the drumming of elves in the camp of the red indian elves. Salucia took her spear and ran to the tree closest-by, in which she climbed. Her father would return, but she also expected an attack from the Maribirs, a tribe of elves at the westside of their camp. They would have heard of the return of Salucia's father, who worked for the wizard of Ostford for that time. The wizard would have rewarded him with many magic things, so that the Maribirs wanted to steal that. But everything stayed quiet fortunately, and Salucia's father was okay. Maybe the Marivirs had felt the threat which went out from the castle of the wizard of Ostford. Salucia's father had an armor which she didn't know yet : lofty but also tender and dreadful, seductive as a confusing paradox. She felt the curiosity of the Marabirs, but decided to not give attention to it. She felt the dark eyes of the Maribirs lurking around, full of lust but also full of fear. What did the wizard of Ostford do ? There came a wonderful, piercing magic from the camp of the red indian elves. Salucia was calmed down. Everything was good with her father. The wizard had done good work. But when her father showed her a few scars Salucia was terrified. 'I know it, my child,' said her father. 'Working with the wizard was not without dangers. I had to become initiated into the higher magic. I have fought with the guards of the wizard, and they have wounded me, but only then I could carry the seal. 2. 'What seal, father ?' Salucia asked. Her father looked at her tenderly, and she saw his eyes were shining. His eyes were fullblooded, full of mysteries, as big brown beads which reflected the sunlight in a mysterious matter, but also so much darkness. 'Go to sleep, Salucia,' said her father. 'It is late.' 3. Salucia didn't know what would happen that night, but Maribirs came into the camp to kidnap her. They brought her to a place, a well, where the light of elves wrapped her. She knew nothing of the riddles of the Maribirs. It was a splendid experience, something she didn't expect, for the Maribirs lived as enemies against her own tribe. But who were these ? These were maribirs she didn't know. They were older, calmer. 'You can go, Salucia,' they said to her. But Salucia didn't want to leave. She wanted to stay in this well of elves, which seemed to touch her heart. Bathing in light she swam to the other side of the warm well. 4. Suddenly a sword was pierced in the man who bathed closest-by to Salucia. It was her father who came to take her back. Salucia had mixed feelings. 'They want to keep you away from the wizard of Ostford,' her father spoke, but the other figures around her in the well seemed to drown. 'Father, what are you doing ?' Salucia asked. Not long after Salucia heard a shot, and she saw her father falling down in slow motion. The well filled itself with blood. A dark stature stood before Salucia, and then turned around to disappear in the nothing. Salucia shrieked, and found out quickly that her father was dead. There was neither any Maribir around anymore. 5. Now it was time for salucia to visit the wizard of Ostford herself, for she didn't understand what was happening to her. In tears she was searching for her path, while she remembered the indications of her father. Her father had told her a lot about how the wizard lived, and most of all about how to come there. When salucia came to the high lighted gate of the castle of the wizard of Ostford she fell into the arms of a tall elf while she was weeping. Quickly and pulsing she told the story. She knew that she would get comfort and answer here. The elf took her inside and cared for her. 'There are so many things you do not understand,' said the elf. 'You are very young, Salucia. The wizard is waiting for you.' 6. Inside everything looked different from what her father had always told her. At the wall red indian spears hung, strange knives, and some walls were drenched with blood. Salucia was terrified, and asked what the meaning was of all this blood. The elf didn't speak. Salucia began to become scared, but suddenly the elf took Salucia in his arms. 'You don't need to be scared, sweetheart,' said the elf. 'Everything will become clear, but we can not talk too much. Well, we are allowed to, but it is not wise. Let us do the things step by step. 7. The wizard was a wonderful man. He gave Salucia rings for in the castle. The rings were fastened to her clotjes, and the rings would give explanation about all things. They were speaking rings, and more and more Salucia felt comfortable. But she also tasted a sort of threat she couldn't describe. 8. The wizard wore long garments, and brought her to an other red indian tribe of elves in the depths of the castle. The elves didn't speak, but communicated in an other way, by their eyes, and by the movement of their lips. 'Teach them to talk,' said the wizard. 'That is your first mission. I will explain everything about your father later. Who he was, and also who the Maribirs are.' 9. Salucia took the time to teach the elves how to speak, and she also learned their way of communication. The wizard was satisfied after several months, and brought her to an other red indian tribe of elves deeper in the castle. The castle was very big. This tribe communicated by shrieking and by repeating all sorts of strange sounds over and over again. 'Come,' said the wizard, and brought her to a well of elves in a big space. The well was almost completely blue, as blue bubbling paint. The wizard made some stripes on her skin, and descended then into the well. Salucia had to follow him. He swam to a door deep down in the well, opened that door, and swam through it. Here sharks swam and all sorts of other fishes, but they didn't do anything. They only stared. The wizard swam with Salucia further to an other door, and when they swam upwards behind the door they came into a completely new space. 'When I would not have been with you, you would have been devoured by the sharks and the other fishes,' the wizard spoke. 'So I decide who comes here.' A strange piercing smell hung around like a sort of paint, but it also smelled very physical and warm. 10. Salucia was all eyes, for there dripped a lot of strange substances here with strange colors. It was a sort of mud. The wizard looked at Salucia and winked to her. 'Do you know, Salucia,' said the wizard. 'I show you all of this, and once I showed it to your father, because I want that you and your next generation will live in this castle. Outside the Maribirs will take everything over, and they will not spare anything of your tribe. They have destroyed your father, but I have protected you.' Salucia began to cry. She had expected that also her father would be protected, and therefore she didn't understand why the Maribirs could murder him. The wizard took her in his arms, and spoke : 'I would have wanted to protect your father very much, but the might of the Maribirs is not to be underestimated. However, if you will follow the path faithfully, and stay with me, you will see your father back.' But then the wizard suddenly became sad. 'I will stay with you for a short while, until you have been accepted by the castle and brought into safety. Then I will have to direct my journey to the domains of the Maribirs. I will have to make this dark and black trip, so that they will not take this castle over.' Salucia took the wizard extra tight and spoke : 'But can't we not stay together in safety ? Why would you risk so much ? This castle is your possession, and it will stay your possession !' 11. 'Girl,' said the wizard, 'you do not know the powers of the Maribirs. I have to go there, other wise this castle will be of them and then there is not any hope for you and your next generation. Then also all other red indian tribes of elves will perish, and the flame of Ostford will be quenched forever.' 12. And so the two said goodbye to each other after a long time of walking and talking. The wizard had explained to her what she had to do, and further the rings would lead her. Salucia sighed deeply and tried to stay courageous, but soon dark fears invaded her. Did it all rest on her shoulders then ? Why was everything so complicated ? 13. Like the wizard had said she first came into a place full of trees. The trees almost looked like elves and they brought forth strange eggs. The wizard had given her a special red rag by which she could brood the eggs. But there was something in her which said she shouldn't do that. Also the rings gave her the advice not to do it. The rings clearly had another view than the wizard, and Salucia wondered why the wizard had given her these rings. But many other plans seemed to harmonize. Salucia tied the red rag around her head while it became warmer. Sometimes she rested against the castle-walls, and then she continued. 14. There were so many things Salucia did not understand. How would she be able to bring forth a new generation ? Where would she encounter her father, and how ? The rings didn't tell much yet. It was like Salucia had to win their trust first. There were a number of things which she had deeply in her thoughts, as a vision of magic, and that was the trip of the wizard to make them safe, and her own trip to finally make the wizard safe. She was determined, and she knew that when the wizard would have reached the eternal flame in the domain of the Maribirs, then they would be united with each other. But this could only happen if she would reach the eternal flame of the castle. If not, then they would both die, and then the Maribirs would possess the castle forever. It was strange when she thought back of the kidnap. She came in a well of elves of light, and she had shortly the idea that the tribe was good, or at least a part of that tribe. One of the rings also told her that there were also Maribirs who were possession of the tribe, as captives of war who got their citizenship. She tried to understand it, but it looked like she could not grasp it. And actually she didn't want to grasp it, for she was afraid to have good feelings about several Maribirs. She was afraid that their powers would invade her mind. In this she was mixed, and it almost tore her apart. 15. A tall stature stood before her when she opened her eyes slowly. She was terrified. It looks like a Maribir, an older Maribir. The Maribir wanted to open his mouth, but then he sighed. 'I have seen your father sinking away in a spiral,' said the Maribir. 16. 'You, you,' stuttered Salucia, 'weren't you one of my kidnappers ? You haven't done anything to me, you only brought me to that blissful well of elves, after which terrible things happened.' 17. 'Yes,' the maribir spoke. 'I have to tell you something. We are we were captives of war ... You have delivered us Your heart The trip you made to here has delivered us, pulled us away in our thoughts to release us' 18. 'Where are the others ?' Salucia asked. 19. 'Further away,' said the man. 20. And then Salucia realized how important her trip was. She was a key herself. She just didn't understand how, and she was still scared to get deceived. 22. After a while she came to a camp full of Maribirs, but these ones were different, like the man who was a captive of war. Maybe the man meant them. It was like so much fear was taken away from her when he saw her. Yes, these ones were different, older, more quiet, and it was as if she was bathing in that well of elves again. She only hoped that there wouldn't happen terrible things now. 23. 'Salucia,' a familiar voice spoke. 234. And there she stood. So long in the arms of something so familiar. And warmth flew into her trembling body, to make her quiet. Jewelry she got around her, and all sorts of small bottles full of magic. 'I think I made a mistake. Are you my kidnappers ?' No one said something. She only felt herself sliding away in a deep rest. The walls of the castle were far away here, the ceiling high, and glowing like the hot sun, while there was sand on the checked floor, checked red and yellow. Salucia sat down, and tears streamed. A familiar hand grasped her hand softly and tenderly. She kept her eyes closed tightly. 25. 'But I don't want,' she said. And when she opened her eyes everyone was gone, and also her rings were gone. What was happening. She wanted to shriek, but she couldn't, as if there was a hand before her mouth. A tender hand, and therefore she was still so quiet, and she still saw all the other jewelry swing at her body and clothes, and so many small bottles. 26. 'I experienced such a strange thing,' she said to herself. She opened a little bottle and a wonderful odor spread itself. A spirit stood before her with a sword. When she looked upwards she saw the tribe again on a height, and she friendly asked the ghost to bring her there. It happened in a flash. She didn't know what to think, and again she embraced her friends one by one. They carried very special little bottles and little jugs at necklaces around their necks, and their trousers were of splendid soft substances, as of velvet. But everything looked like wet, and one of them held his hand up in which a flame appeared. 27. 'The eternal flame of the castle,' said an other. But you have not reached it yet. What would it cost to let the flame jump over from one to the other ?

28. And how much time would they have ? The wizard had already told her there was not much time left. The eternal flame was now so close, but at the same time so far away. What of the wizard was already waiting for her ? What if he would have reached the eternal flame already in the domain of the Maribirs ? Panick started to rush through her, but at the same time she was soothing herself, while also the others started to sooth her. 29. 'I can give you that flame,' he spoke, a tall Maribir, a former captive of war, probably a slave. 'I owe you much,' he said. He came closer, but the flame started to fade. 'See what happens ?' he said. 30. Salucia sunk away in despair. She thought back of the wizard and her ignorance made her insecure. 31. 'Sssh, don't talk,' said the man with the flame. Then he left. 32. 'You will find him,' said the others, 'and then the flame will jump over.' 33. After that Salucia had to make a long trip through a desert, while all the magic seemed to have left her alone. On a height there was nothing but drought, where the rays of the extra-ordinary heat sun played, and she did not know how to get there. Where were the others ? She didn't know. They faded away, without she realized it. Often she closed her eyes and opened them again. She didn't understand anything of it. Behind a little bush she saw an opening where the sand was moving. Everywhere there were red rags, and she remembered the words of the wizard that she could brood different sorts of eggs. She decided to pluck some eggs from the little bush, and wrapped them in the red rags. Birds came forth, and brought her quickly to the higher place. Insecurity became her master. Also thirst filled her, while the little bottles were already empty for a long time. But further on there was a well. Slowly she let herself sink into the well which was hotter than the sand, but it felt pleasant. Suddenly she felt lips on her skin. Someone was behind her, and the heat seemed to disappear. 34. It was the man with the eternal flame. 'Do you see,' said the man, 'when I come closer the flame leaves. When it is completely quenched everything is lost.' The man had swum away from her in the distance. The well had become cold. Salucia was terrified. Quickly she stepped out of the well, and didn't dare to think about the man again. A while later she came to a cube of ice where the flame was. Carfully she put her hand into the ice, and the flame started to lighten her face. She felt she was becoming joyful inside, and got full of a very different sort of warmth.

On the same moment she understood why the wizard had to leave her, and she experienced with her whole being that he also had reached the eternal flame now. They had done it together.

The New Genesis

1. This is the new code established by the apostles of the Lords. You must know that the old book of Genesis was corrupt and infiltrated. We fulfil with this the mission to clean the Holy Scriptures. 2. You will speak of the old book of Genesis, and most of all about the new book of Genesis. You can put these two books together, but in some cases it is important to let the prophets decide which bibles have to be removed. 3. So then the new code will defeat the defilements and the superfluities. Know that the old verses lay down deep in your heart as eggs, which produce venom all the time to poison and stain your souls. 4. The cleaning of this hasn't come forth from the heart of a human, but from the Spirit of the Lords and His Holy Flesh by which the old and the new creation came into existence and will come to existence. 5. And so the impure flesh has been a temporary prison, and the Lord wants to bring comfort in this. 6. So the old word has accused and convicted many wrongly, and also in this the Lord wants to bring comfort. 7. So the Lord wants you to know that the Word has been written as a love-letter, and not as a letter of accusation. For the Lord has been written to those who love him. 8. Whether you are barbarian, indian or savage, the Lord has prepared Himself a nation. So he has hung eggs at the ceiling of the heavens, which are getting brooded by jelly-fish-spiders by the new code. 9. You do well to give heed to the cryptic descriptions, as long as your heart allows that. So is then the Lord creating a new earth by the renewal of the thinking and the Word. 10. For the Word renews the thinking, and brings reformation by that. The eggs of the Word are full of the paint of the Lords, the paint of the thoughts. Brood these eggs, for you have been called for that. 11. Keep then the new Genesis in your thoughts, and do not sin. As God's Wrath is against all sinners. But : Do you realize what sin is. For many, also by the old word, do not know this, and call sin which is no sin, and that which is sin, they do not call sin. 12. They have twisted the word and the heart of the Lords by their own dogmas. Do not listen to such leaders. The Lord will lead you. 13. For the Lord wants to raise you so that you have a relationship with him without the interference of humans. For human flesh often leads to destruction. 14. So the new Genesis brings then the paint of thoughts. See then, the eggs of the Lords are full of the paint of thoughts. 15. So the world and the earth and all which is in it has come forth from the thought, and from the paint of the Lords. Yes, by that the Lords have also painted the conscience. 16. So then the spiders of the Lords have painted the distances and the times, the nightshifts of the Lords have applied the details and the miniatures, and so the ladybugs of the Lords have painted the darknesses and the lights. 17. But also the wasps of the Lords have painted. They have applied the forms. So the flora and fauna of the Lords have cooperated in the creation. 18. So you have to keep the paint of the Lords pure, for the Lords are building a new heaven and a new earth, which they have proclaimed before that. Focus your heads upwards, for your salvation has come near. The Lords will wipe all the tears from your foreheads. 19. But I will tell you a secret : All tears were just paint, and they came forth from the pains, the jars of paint. Do not grieve too much over your wounds, for the Lord will show you many more secrets. 20. Also those who have worn the scornrobe of the lords : this is a mighty paint brush. You are co-creators of the Lords. 21. So the Lord will then use you to reconstruct heaven and the earth. Nothing has been without purpose. And there is wages for work. 22. But watch that you will not call work that which is no work, for many have done this, and their faith has suffered shipwreck. 23. Do not focus on the wages of earth, for those who do this will not have wages in heaven. 24. Let your works be in the hidden, where no eye sees them, for the Lord is with those who are in the hidden. 25. The lusts of the Lords are in the hidden. And the Lord will give you the armor for that. The lusts of the Lords are the walls surrounding your city. 26. With your mind you will not come far, but the lusts of the Lords come from unfathomable depths. 27. So it is wise to despise the mind, for it is fire-marked with liars, as is the conscience. Focus on the lusts of the Lords in boldness. From them comes a clear mind and a clear and bold conscience. 28. The Lords want you to be delivered from your traditions in which evil spirits keep you as a captive. Traditions were the scaffolds and codes by which the ancestors in slavery brought forth the freedom of the Lords, but these traditions begged to heaven to be delivered in their cryptic descriptions. 29. They called for integration, and development. Will you always stay babies then, living from mother-milk ? You do not serve your ancestors with that, and like this you do not honour them. They were and are just on a passage. 30. Construct forth therefore the house of the Lords, and tear the veils and seals, burn the scaffolds, and enter into the depths of the Lords. 31. Hang then on to the lusts of the Lords in fear and tremble, so that you work on your salvation in the boldness of the Lords. For in the fear of the Lords you will find all boldness, and your heart will become wide to deliverance. 32. Yes, for the Lord has given a year of deliverance. A year in which you can count the costs and make balances. 33. Be therefore wise and go the path step by step, so that you will not be enslaved again. 34. So you will not despise the old, but going into the depth, so that you will find the points of deliverance. 35. And so you will think then : Does the Lord speak in two tongues ? And so you will discover the paradox of the Lords and his labyrinth. The earth is full of cryptic descriptions, full of the fiery tongues of the Lords. 36. And you will ask yourself who has made the paint so hot and fiery, and you will discover : The barbarians of the Lord, those who have overcome the spirit of Greece, have done this.

Opening

1. Make yourself then up to hear the Words of the Lord. The Lord wants you to know the history of the creation. Stop then with researching your books, and stop with your work, this in order to hear the Word of the Lords.

2. The Word of the Lords researches the darkness and the night. The Word of the Lord researches the sleep.

The first earth

3. Make yourself up to go to the mountain of the Lords. In the first beginning, even before the earth was created, the morningstars and the sons of the Gods cheered at the herald. 4. The Lord had just created the angels, when He had entered the Spirits of the Gods. 5. At Eminus He created the lions of heaven and later the sharks of heaven. 6. At Metensia He created the domains of heaven, the serpents of heaven, and later the ice of the heavens. 7. At Matas he brought forth the waters of the heavens and the first earth. On that first earth He planted three gardens. 8. The first was called Roggio, the second was called Rietel, and the third was called Eeden. And in the garden of Roggio he established the forest-children Echte and Lirijn. 9. But they fell away from the Lord Lord, and He took Roggio away from the earth. In Rietel he established the serpent-humans and in Eeden the dog-humans. 10. But because they made themselves big against the Lords and sinned against Them, the Lords decided to destroy the earthground. 11. In that time many sharks fell away from the Living Gods, and began to seduce those who lived on the earth. 12. This was the first fall of the angels. And the Lords brought forth a new heaven and a new earth, and entered in their Spirit Santra. 13. At Santra They brought forth a new garden, in which They established Morit, the deerchild. 14. They brought forth new heavens and a new earth, but the dogs of Okil took the child. 15. And the garden was called Genesis, and was taken to God. 16. In those days the prince Dan Roland stood up, but Michai with his tenthousands of angels brought him down. 17. And in those days the angels were called arxels. And there was a book named The Troiade, to let those who lived on earth in the beginning of days know the heavens. 18. And there was a man named Michai. And he was sent by Gods to bring a Holy Gospel. 19. But they didn't want him, and the Lords began to wrath against the earth, and stars began to fall, which brought big wilderness. 20. And many lions turned against the Lords, and the Lords began to move Their hands away from the earth and the heavens. 21. This was the second fall of angels. And then the Lords spoke : From now Our Hand will not rest on the creation anymore. And darkness came over the waters. 22. And the Lords lived in Genesis from then on. And the Lords established days in the change of seasons. 23. And the Lords brought Eeden back in Genesis and began to build up a new earth.

2. Let Them then create a new heart in your inside. Let Them then lead you to Their new temple, to find back the scriptures and materials of the old. 2. Let Their angel Sarsia lead you then, to the heart of Michai, there where the tears of Gods stream. 3. Bring then comfort to the heart of Gods. 4. Let us then go to the garden Genesis, and come to Their Spirit Santra. 5. Let us then flee to Their Shelter, when the elements crash down. 6. Yes, let us enter the new Genesis, where Morit will return. 7. No, Morit has not been forgotten.

1. The book of exoduses. Hear the Word of the Lords : The Lords have heard your voice in slavery. He will break the authority of Pharaos, and lead you out.

2. Gods will send plagues, and lead you out in the deepest of the night.

3. He has seen how the enemy doubled your work and made it more heavy. He has seen how the enemy didn't grant you any rest.

4. But the Lords will bring hooks in the jaws of this beast, and pull him out of the Nile, to bring him to barren places.

5. The Lords have heard your voice, and will lead you to the temple of ice in the darkest of the night. Hear then, for your prayers have reached Them.

6. A new day is coming, for those who weep now.

7. And the Lords will fill your mouths with laughing, and show you the new tears of Their Spirits. 8. A small rest the Lord will send you in your exodus, and the angel Sarsia will watch over you as the fiery flame. 9. And the nighttrouppers will lead you to the innermost of the temple, and you will see the altar. 10. Then you will see that the Lords speak from the altar. And that day will be called big. 11. And the ark of ice will be of stone, and you will bath there for a day and a half day. 12. There the Lord will give you the Eternal bread. And the Lords will ban the riders of Pharao out of your memory and conscience. 13. And the Lords will raise a banner, under which sign an Eternal Soul will be born. 14. And that soul will serve the Lord, and will become big in the desert. 15. Yes, that soul will speak as the tiger.

1. And then the Lords will shout : Make then free the course of the Lords. 2. And the sharks of the heavens will come from the domain Spricht, and you will watch their souls. 3. And the Lords will shout : This is the Day on which the shark speaks, and their words will be heard and understood, on that day that the seal of sharks will be broken. 4. But the Lord had blinded several generations, so that they would not hear and understand the words. 5. They would still have to serve the Pharao, until the number of their suffering would be full. 6. And the Lords spoke : They are those, who live in the days of the tiger. And then the Lords left in Their fiery chariot. 7. And I saw a blinding light descending from the heavens slowly, and the Lord saw that it was good.

The temple path

1. I have enough of living with a woman who always wants to fight. My father taught me from young age, and warned me against her. Now it is then too late, and I am for always strung like a pearl at her sword. Now the days will have to waste, and God's Spirits will have to take me up. I will not leave her, neither send her away. A house of doctors tore us apart.

2. With winter alone one cannot live, and without summer the ship will strand. As a volcano is the love without a woman. For then you have been delivered to the Spirits of Gods.

3. Have you heard of the volcano of ice ? Have you become warm already by the cold ? Be then like the orphan and the widow, and you will find the path of Gods, burning of ice.

4. My boots burn at my feet, my body baths in precious ice. I have found the messenger of Gods today, a bird ticking at my window. Also tomorrow I will be on the watch-post, where heaven's gates open.

5. And you are warned against the foreign woman, with pearls at her feet, with bells tinkling in the night. Do not let her anoint your head, for service in her temples, for you will not be able to quench the fire, and only a house of doctors will be able to save you out of her hand.

6. And I descended to the house of doctors, where no one could help. And I died a cold death, wandering through darkness. And I entered foreign houses. I was on a trip to a temple, the temple of the dark ice. For Gods let themselves be known in darkness. In His temple is the medicine.

7. In houses you will not have luck, but in temples is the medicine. By tears of ice the walls become stiff. Leave then the walls with windows, and take your path between the walls of temples.

8. In houses of game you will not win, for foreign women will bind you. Do not drink from their milk, but stay on the temple-path. For in houses of game you will not win. They only take your soul away. Be faithful to the love of your youth, and let the bonds waste before the Lords. Do not let yourself be bound on the altar with cords of love, and hang on to the Spirits of Gods. Then you will win for eternity, in the temple of the Lords.

9. Be faithful to the love of your youth, and lay it on the altar, so that the wings of the Spirits will take you away to a new land.

10. Let the Words of the Lords guide you, and do not let yourself in with foreign women. Hang on to the Spirits of Gods, and let yourself in with that which is in the temple.

1. And those who are young fall in many traps and confusions, but those who are older sail a solid course. 2. Let your heart then strive to become mature, so that you will be guarded against many things. 3. Do not weep when a snake takes you to its den. This is how you discover the world. 4. The Lord gives you what is needed, and keeps that which is harmful to your soul far away from you.

1. Mother, bring your children to the mountains of Kabbernal. Bring them to the ecstasy of Metensia. Do not bitter their hearts, but do not keep the chastisement away from them. 2. Did the Lords not hit you themselves. Why would you keep it away from your children ? 3. Be soft to those who are sensitive, and the soft-hearted, and also those who fight for the Lords. 4. Wrap them in mothergrace, so that the Lord will not pull them out of your hand. 5. Yes, the Lords are jealous Gods. You cannot form a yoke with the world. 6. Who is then a friend of the world, is an enemy of Gods. 7. Oh, the Glory of Metensia, makes mothers holy in their love. Love as the burning river, overflowing. As the volcano is the wrath of the mother. Children, do not battle against her, for the Lords are on her side, with Their fiery chariots They are there. They cherish her. 8. The Spirits of Gods, with watery dresses they soar over the waters. In darkness is Mura, in darkness she is, to create the earth in light. 9. The heavens as her watery dresses, as her fleeces, she is battling, against hurricanes of darkness. 10. What did satan do and the sons of Beelzebul. So many angels have fallen, so many waterplants grow now to the moon. As ebb and flow her eyes are. She uses them as dung for a new tide, but also this tide will turn. 11. She wrapped the earth in heavens, she gave the human a mind, but the earth took it over, and led them to the fire inside. 12. In the garden of Eeden, they fell there.

1. Mother, bring your children, to the hearts of Kabbernal, to the hearts of His Spirit. 2. Do not keep the Glory away from them, but neither the rod. 3. A nation without discipline is the nation of the Lords, their children are a wilderness. 4. Mothers, let yourselves be led to the streets of Kabbernal, and cherish the Lords. Turn back from your evil paths. 5. The Lords are then your Gods. They carry then your children in Their wombs. Higher than the heavens are Their Counsel, the stars write of Their praise. Grace They have given you, those who have given Them grace, 6. Do not quench the Spirits, for you will be dung for the new earth and her flora. 7. So you will get barren, when you do not listen to the Voice of the Lords. 8. Kabbernal, make your valleys wide, and let rivers flow. The children have become ripe. They will dream dreams. 9. You lock the gates of darkness, and opens them another time. 10. Kabbernal, oh Spirit of God, you have sworn to Izu. The beloved ones suffer pain, they have been milled like corn. 11. Of precious verses His Word was, but nothing has been remained. Enemies were in the gates of the garden, and the baker of the Lords had lost the battle. 12. They hung him high, nothing about enemies anymore, no plea. How long would his trip take, to the ends of the eternity, where lambs follow him. 13. So the Word was then purged sevenfolded, and they couldn't say : It is not there anymore. The baker has broken the jug of milk, and his blood streams through the old hurt. 14. Those who then see the Word, follow Them.

1. The Word then broken seven times, as clean silver before the Lord. The Lord has found His Way. 2. The Word then tread on and beaten, there where bakers saw salvation perish, the sprout stood up, full of faces. 3. The Lord has sown the seed, the splinters in the sun, brought Him to the lost gold. 4. Yes, the Lord has used guile, to clean His Word and save it. As a treasure in earthly barrels He has brought brokenness. 5. Now the silver streams, to those who want to forge, the temples of the Lord. 6. Many didn't dare to approach, to the temples of the Lord, for enemies were there. But now his gates are open, and salvation burns in the middle of the temple. 7. The Lord recreated His Word, through the tribulations. Now He has then a cord to pull those who wandered and who were in fear. 8. The Cord of Love opens eyes, let them then see Metensia. God's Spirit who had been kept hidden. 9. The Lord then has used guile, come then to His gates to see His light, which was wrapped in darkness. 10. Yes, the Lord battles with counsel and forethought. In fiery chariots was His insight. 11. Breath then now, you who have suffered under the Word of darkness, for her light has gone up. 12. Now the light has come to Kabbernal, and God takes his sons in. 13. From all directions they will come, the wise to bring their treasures, to the newborn Word. 14. Breath then now, you saints of a new language, for the old has passed away, the tribulation of satans. 15. The Lord then has broken Hebezeen, as Moses separating the sea. 16. A new Word has been created, see, the old has passed away. 17. I have spoken through My servants, sais the Lord, and I have made them hear and understand My Word. 18. Breath then now, nation of God, for his saints will go from breath to breath and take salvation with spades from the wells of life of God. 19. The Lord has then broken Tapas, and separated him as a mountain. Yes, the lightening has struck him. Wonderful is God's work. 20. Come then to the new temple, and don't look back, so that you will not become a salt-pillar, and the Lord stores His Word in that. Those who battle against the Word become dung, and those who return to the old become as salt. The Lord will use them both. Are you not instruments in the Hands of the Lords ? He who carries the Sun in his hands. 22. There where the sons of Belial turned themselves against Him, there the Spirits of Gods came together. 23. Didn't He create the earth in you ?

10. Clean hands He gave to the clean. Sense He gave to the sensitive. The slowness of the lords call you. This is a day of freedom. 2. Grace He has awoken to those who gave Him grace, who awoke His Spirits. 3. A good bed He gave them to sleep in. There where the roses bloom, the thorns bring you to sleep, where venom turns the songs and hymns against those who hate Him. 4. A strong fortress is your God, with many weapons. 5. This is a day of freedom, in which the Spirits of the Lords are in ecstasy. 6. Do not be bitter to the disciplines of God. They formed your soul. 7. Do not wander away with borderless ancestral registers, numbers and histories, for the Lord has set you free. Search then for the Lord and His Spirit. 8. Many books form a trap, but the Lord gives it to those He cherishes in the sleep. 9. Have then bonds with God, and learn how to test. Those then belong to the commandments of the clean Word : The first commandment is to not eat flesh. The second commandment is you will not kill. 10. The third commandment is to love your fellow-creature and God above all. The fourth commandment is to not despise the law, and to regard others higher than yourself. The fifth commandment is to test all things, and to not despise the prophesies. 11. The sixth commandment is to love the animal, to study about it, also nature. The sixth commandment is to know the names of the Spirits, the names of the angels and dynamics, for they guard the gates of life. You will then have a bond with God. 12. This commandment is to keep the Word of the Lords clean, and to despise the canon, as she locked up the Spirits of Gods. 13. The eighth commandment is to have bonds with the martyrs of all times, the ninth is to know the times of the Lords, and the tenth is to hate the lie and to know the difference between the various vegetations, plants and vegetables. 14. By doing this you will clean and save your souls, but he who does not respect this, to him will not be given respect.

1. And the Lord brought these commandments to a clean ark, and let the place been sealed.

12.

1. Let those who do work also give time to the rest. Those who do not give each other rest commit abominations before the face of the Lords. 2. Learn to make each other holy, and give each other rest, so that you can rest. 3. Apostles are those who clean the Word. 4. They guard your soul and do not give anything about traditions. When you hold on to a tradition, hold it because of the Lord. But are you so sure that you serve the Lord by it ? 5. You will then grow up in the Lord, and let the plants grow. 6. When you do not get new, how can you reach the gates of the heavens, which hang on to the new ? 7. The Lord cherishes the new, and He sows the old as seed on the farm-field. 8. The Lord is a farmer, knowing the harvest of things. 9. You will also have to know the harvest of things. 10. And I saw the verses of the old caged word coming to the saints as predators, and they drank their blood as wine. 11. And I got drunk of the Clean Word, and the Lord spoke : Blissful are those who know the Clean Word. 12. And the Lord took the old and stained Word and cast it into a hole of lions. And the Clean Word began to come forth from it. 13. And the prophets who saw it received double sight and the silver of the Lords came before their eyes and started to clean them. 14. And they received the might to open and close the heavens.

1. And the Lord spoke : Yes, the human has a second spirit, hidden and locked up before the Face of Gods, but the Clean Word will open it, and then the Eternal Gospel will come. 2. And the Clean Word began to blow like the seven winds of the Lords, and noise broke loose from temples of Gods. 3. The Lord has used the old Word, and with a slanted rod struck straight, but now the scaffolds by which the house was built will be burned. 4. And also the dun and the salt of the hell began to burn. And the Lord brought clean treasures to the bodies of his servants, and these treasures were purged tenfolded, and several hundredfolded. 5. And the light of the Lords rose up from the temple, and I saw a new altar. 6. And the Lord took a heavy rod which only He could carry and struck the sea by it. And whales began to come forth and they carried the mystery of the Lords.

1. And Jesus descended to the underworld where He finally came to Chawila.

And Jesus broke off pieces of the stone, and came to a place where the second beast was, deep in the ravine.

And Christ spoke to the second beast, and grasped the neck of the beast tight by a bearclaw.

And Christ came to the canon and broke it into pieces. And Christ came to Chawila as to a woman.

And Christ spoke words to the sea, and the sea tried to devour Him. And the serpents and the worms of the sea tried to grasp Him tight, but Chawila was as a shelter to Him.

And Chawila took Him to a cave where He was safe. And Chawila called him the Red Indian and granted Him a feather.

And she clothed Him with the most wonderful pieces of jewelry and gems and with that which lives under the earth.

And Christ spoke to her and said : Your sand will be as gold of the good, and it will multiply itself.

Rozinde

1. Once there was a girl who lived very deep underground, locked up, to cook for a dragon. The girl's name was Rozinde. Always when she was not fast enough with cooking then the flames under her big kettle started to rage more and more. Also the dragon wanted many different sorts of strange meat, so Rozinde had to hunt often. When she was not fast enough in hunting then her bow would become hot as fire suddenly and then she always fell to the ground by the pain. On a day a prince shot an arrow at the dragon and delivered Rozinde. He took her to his castle. To be protected against the dragon she had to take a bath full of milk in the underground of the castle every day. And every day wild flowers had to be thrown into it. The prince loved the girl very much, and one day he married her. But then once the princess forgot to bath in the bath of milk and the dragon struck again, and took her to the deep place underground again. Now Rozinde had to work even harder, and the dragon was wrathful more than ever. On a day the prince came to take his Rozinde, but the dragon locked him up behind bars of fire. Rozinde became sadder every day. On a day she was hunting again, for the dragon, and she found a deer in a bush. 'Please, do not shoot me,' said the deer, 'then I will give you all my milk.' Then Rozinde remembered again that the dragon couldn't stand milk. Rozinde also asked the deer where the wild flowers were. The deer could give much milk, and soon there was a bath full. Then Rozinde threw the wild flowers in it. Quickly Rozinde took a bath in the milk and went back with wet clothes. When she came to the fire-bars she rubbed them with her milk-wet clothes while the bars started to break. Quickly she grasped her prince at his hand and together they ran to the bath. Here they were safe between the wild flowers. But soon the dragon came to watch them. He knew that he could not do anything against them as long as they would take a bath in the milk everyday. But he waited and waited, and today he still waits.

3.

1. And finally Christ came to the dragon, and had Chawila as his bow.

And he pierced the heart of the dragon by an arrow, and the dragon got the heads of pigs.

And Chawila spoke that after the silver age the dragon would be totally like a tamed pig.

And Christ turned around and went away from the dragon, while the angels followed Him.

And Chawila spoke that the gold of the earth would pierce the dragon further to find a way through it's heart, to let the silver awake.

And many soldiers who had been swallowed by the dragon would be released by this, and they would follow the angels of Christ over the path of Chawila.

And Chawila took her flute to play it, and flowers began to come forth from the dragon, and they bore walls of golden glass.

And watch, they were as the tiles of the new city.

And Chawila watched and saw that it was good.

Thus she returned to Christ, and Christ came to her as to a woman.

Linana and the Carousel

1. Once in the time that there were no flowers yet there was a girl so beautiful that everyone called her 'Swansplendor'. In the whole word there was no sweeter girl than her, with a heart of gold and brilliant light. Her father, a merchant, was very proud of her, and there was no one she could get along with better than with her dad. But one day the father was very ill. The girl was very sad and after a short while her father died. Her mother was a noble woman and she remarried. But soon it seemed that the girl couldn't get along with her new father. The stepfather was very rude to her, and the girl started to change a lot. After several years she had become so terrible that every one called her Swanplague. 2. But on a day there was a merchant with a carousel in the land. The children were happy with the carousel and also the girl enjoyed to make trips in it. The merchant was immediately very charmed by the girl, because she was so splendid, and he took her apart. 'Really, said the merchant, 'I have never seen a girl more splendid than you in the whole land, with a heart so full of gold and briljant light.' 3. 'Everyone calls me swanplague,' said the girl, 'because I'm so terrible. Why do you have such interest ?' 4. 'Oh, but I would call you

Swansplendor,' said the man. And immediately the girl remembered her father. 5. And then the man told her that when it is in the middle of the night, and all children sleep, then the swan of the carousel awakens, and who ever sits on her back will make a trip in the sky with her. If you do not tell any one, and come to the carousel, when you see the first little stars of the night, then to you is the honour to make a trip,' spoke the man. 6. The first night when the girl could make a trip on the flying swan of the carousel, she could see all the little lights of the city, and she told the man of the carousel that her real name was Linana. Because the girl enjoyed it so much she could also come the next night. This time the swan took her even further away, and she told the man of the carousel that her father had died, and that she had an evil stepfather. And again the man invited her. This time the swan brought her to a land so far away that she did not know it. When she had put her foot on the ground, the swan flew away. She called the swan back, but soon the swan was gone out of sight. She stood close to a small lake where there were many real swans. 7. Linana could make a trip on one of the bigger swans over the lake, and suddenly the swan rose up. 'Oh, can you bring me back to my country,' said the girl. 'The swan of the carousel has probably forgotten about me.' 8. When the girl had returned and met the man of the carousel again, the man told her that the swan of the carousel always had to return in time, otherwise he would turn into metal again in the air and would crash down. Then the girl understood it. But also the swan of the other country would want to have a place in the carousel. For the man with the carousel that was not so difficult, for he possessed magical powers. And always the girl came back in the night to make trips on the swans, and she took new swans with her all the time. After a while the carousel was full of swans, and on a night the whole carousel rose up and flew to the land of the swans. 9. So when you once in the night see a carousel flying through the air, then you know that it is Linana with her swans. Once on a time the merchant told that there were three little flames inside of the carousel. As soon as the first little flame faded someone died on earth. Always when the second little flame faded someone was born on earth, and when the third little flame would fade, someone would get happy. Linana enjoyed the sight of the flickering little flames. But on a day also the man of the carousel became very ill, and died. Linana was now sadder than ever, and since then the little flames didn't burn anymore. Also the carousel didn't spin anymore, and the swans didn't come to life anymore. No one wanted to have a carousel in the land which didn't work anymore. They decided to cast the carousel in a deep hole in the earth. Linana could not be comforted. But on a day a swan came from the other land, and took her away. The girl didn't want to go back anymore and decided to live in a small house close to the small lake of the swans. The swans told the girl that in the deep hole in the earth there lived an old woman who possessed so much magical powers that she could make that the swans would live forever. She had also many swans herself, who could be in the carousel since then. And inside of the carousel there were so many flickering little flames now and it was so big, that Linana could live in it forever. 10. Since then Linana also made trips through the water and underground. And when you will encounter her once, ask then if you can come with her.

1. And thus the Lord hung seven days in the underworld at the hangrope, when he had become an angel, to bring many angels to bliss.

Yes, for some of them were taken away by the curse of the black apple, and suffered in the hidden, in bondage.

And the Lord hung there, masked as the magpie.

And thus the Lord has been in the deathrealm of angels, and in the deathrealm of humans, to bring many to bliss, both human and angel.

And some have preached that angels will not die, but they know nothing of the hidden of the Lords.

Because also as an angel the Lord has searched for the death, and the death has grasped Him, so that He would lead many to bliss.

Don't you know then of the forbidden apples of humans and angels, by which they would die ?

And in their fall they take many with them, their generations, their family, their race, their legions, and any form of bloodline and bloodbond, and the Lord spoke that He would not keep guilty those who died by the hand of others.

But I will tell you a mystery : death and life is only a manner of language, for the dead are alive, and those alive are dead.

And thus the angels who had sinned and those who they dragged with them in their fall in whatever manner came to the deathrealms of angels.

Now the question is : where is the deathrealm of angels ?

They fell from the mountain of the gods, the mountain of Eeden, and they came to the wildernesses of Eeden, in the fourth dermension, while they were from the fifth dermension, and the gods were of the sixth dermension, higher on the mountain of Eeden.

And thus the top of the mountain of Eeden reaches into the seventh dermension, where the Godserpents live, who are the being and the nature of God, and the old magpie lives in the eighth dimension. Is it then true that those who die descend to a lower dimension ?

2. When a human, who is of the third dimension, dies, then where does he go ?

When Adam and Eve were chased out of the garden of Eden they came to the third dimension, and the cherubs were planted between the third and the fourth dimension to guard the tree of life.

But the cherubs themselves are from the fifth dimension.

So we watch the intersections between the dimensions.

It is possible as well to die in the deathrealm, to go from death to death.

These are the forces of the gods and the angels, and they aren't touched by it.

Now then Christ had come to the deathrealms of humans and the deathrealms of angels, to die there again, to let many pass through. Thus He has preached the gospels of humans and the gospels of angels.

And He has shown them the ways through the deathrealms and through the pools of fire, and He has shown that these things are for purifying and testing.

And thus many angels and many humans became lightened.

Thus the goal of Christ has been double : to lighten angels and humans.

Thus He is then double rescuer. The magpie was this for the Godnatures and the gods.

Istus was the seducer of the Godbeings, and Maktus was the seducer of the gods, who seduced Virtus to take of the forbidden meat.

Virtus was the seducer of the angels, and seduced satan who was still an archangel back then and a son of God.

In many areas Christ has come forth from the magpie, and was called this as well.

He had visited both the deathrealms of humans and of angels, and has become as both humans and angels.

And thus Christ visited the first to the fourth death, and went across the rivers which kept these four areas separated.

And the river between the first death and the second death was the Makasto, and she kept the deathrealm and the hell separated.

And the Kamsto was the river who kept the second death and the third death separated, as the hell of the sleep.

3. And the Flamo was the river who kept the third death and the fourth death separated, between sleep and oblivion.

And the Lord delivered many from soulsleep.

And the third death had the name Fakaro, and he kept many souls in sleep, both human and angels, and the Lord drove him back.

And the fourth death had the name Zamisto, and he kept many in his grip, and the Lord drove him back.

And the Lord himself had power, as through the blood of the magpie.

The Lord bought many free from Gehenna as well and from the second Gehenna, and from Tartarus as well, which were areas of the second death.

And the second death had the name Alsma, and the Lord drove him back.

And the Lord went on the mountain of Eeden, and took many humans and angels with Him who He had delivered, and He spoke to the mountain, which opened itself, and accepted all those who were purified by the blood of the Lords.

And the first to the fourth death came to the old magpie and to the Lord to complain, and Alsma, the second death pulled his sword, but the Lord threw them all into the pool of the Lords.

And the Lord ended the trade between the first to the fourth death, and let the rivers inbetween them flow over, and thus was the flood of the Lords.

And the Lord brought those who were His to a shelter inside the mountain of Eeden, and showed them from there His depths.

And all were in awe about the mysteries of the mountain of Eeden.

The Two Sisters

1. Once upon a time there were two sisters who had to take water from a well. Close to the well a little man sat who asked them for something to drink. 'Go and get water for yourself,' the two sisters said.

2. 'But I don't have a bucket,' the little ma said.

3. 'Then go get yourself a bucket first,' the two sisters said.

4. Can't I just go down in your bucket, then I can drink some water there and making sure your bucket will be full of water. I will reward you richly', said the little man. He showed some pieces of gold to the sisters, and the sisters agreed. They let the little man go into the bucket at a rope and let it go down all the way. The little man stepped out of the bucket and stood on a small platform, and then he laid a scorpion in the bucket. When the two sisters had their bucket back and saw the scorpion they were very mad. 'Wait you little man,' one of the sisters said. She stepped into the bucket and let her sister make sure that she went down at the rope. But the little man was nowhere to be found anymore. The two sisters also had a younger sister, and the next time they let her go to the well. The little man sat there again, and he also asked this girl if she would give him some water. The little girl gave him immediately to drink. 'Because you have been so graceful,' said the little man, 'your bucket will always be full.' The little girl returned to home and told everything to her sisters. And indeed, as soon as the bucket was almost empty, it got full again. Immediately her sisters looked for another bucket and went back to the well. Adain they saw the little man. 'Well,' they said, 'shall we give you plenty to drink ?' The little man nodded, and they gave him plenty to drink. The little man drank the whole bucket empty. But when they took the bucket up for the second time it was full of dirty mud and it spurted all their clothes dirty. 'Because you only gave me to drink for your own greed your bucket will always be full of dirty mud from now on, and your clothes will always be dirty.' The sisters went home crying, to wash their clothes, but the more they tried to wash their clothes, the dirtier they got.

1. And Christ spoke to Chawila and to her stone, and blew life in the stone, and life in her heart.

And Chawila blessed Christ and embalmed him.

Now then Christ descended deep into the deathrealm to rescue many from the dragon.

And he also came to the parents of the dragon, the iron beast and the panther.

And He threw them both into the sea like one sweeps stones.

And their bodies both sank to the bottom, while their souls got destroyed.

And Chawila took rest for six days, and after those days she laid herself at the feet of Christ who sat on His throne.

And Chawila begged Christ to open the Vokolkus and the Takalan, the two hidden books before Gods Throne.

They were then covered by leather and locked by leather locks.

And Chawila wept before the throne, forty days and nights, because there was no one who had the power to open these two books.

Rest for a certain time again, Chawila, Christ spoke, for these two books will only be opened at the end of times.

And I saw a star descending from the heaven to give Chawila rest, and she became comforted.

And Christ spoke : Go then, Chawila, to your city, because your city will be full, and there will be lights inside of her.

You are one to feed them. Go because of that, Chawila, for the Lord is with you.

And thus Chawila fled through the forests seven long days and seven long nights, until she finally came to her city, and the star came over her.

And the star spoke to Chawila : Watch then, the panther has descended to the depths of the sea, and will go then to the searocks.

Also the iron beast has fallen from it's place in the heavens , and will become the green of the earth.

Yes, fragile blossom he will become, for he has done gigantic and heart things.

And Chawila laid her head to rest and prepared herself to feed others.

2. And also angels came to the Lord and begged : 'Isn't there anyone who can break the seals of the Vokolkus and the Takalan ?

Send then your prophet to the end of days to open it. And they got a garment of the Lord, to rest again for a certain time.

The Girl Who Lived Behind The Little Veils

1. There was once a girl who lived behind little veils. Her father had once made these little veils, and the veils were very long. Between the little veils the most dangerous predators lived who had to protect the girl. Her father was a tailor. He had made a little house for her like a little dollhouse, also with many small veils inside and with the most precious pieces of furniture. There was also a splendid small kitchen inside, and throughout the little house the most splendid little curtains hung. Many knights would want to marry the girl, but as soon as they went through the small veils to search for the dollhouse they were devoured by a dangerous predator. Because the father of the girl was also a shoemaker he made the most splendid shoes one day which were so brilliantly enchanting that they could find the small dollhouse with ease. By this her father visited her every day for a while. But on a day he had left the shoes before the small veils, and the first knight who came put the shoes on, in order to come to the small dollhouse with ease. The girl was very surprised. 'But who are you ?' the girl asked. 'These are the shoes of my father ?' 2. 'Oh, pardon me,' said the knight. 'I saw them laid down before the small veils and they were so brilliantly enchanting that I couldn't stop myself from putting them on.' The knight was allowed to drink something with her, but then he had to leave again. With courtesy he brought the shoes back to the father of the girl. The father was very grateful to the knight, for the knight could have kept the shoes for himself, and then the father of the girl would never be able to come to her again. And therefore the father of the girl said : 'Because you have been so fair to bring the shoes back I will also make some magic-shoes for you. The shoes which I have I cannot make again, but tell me what sort of magic-shoes you want to have.' 3. 'Then,' said the knight, 'I would want to have shoes which carry the key to the heart of your daughter.' And so the father of the girl made the most precious shoes for the knight which would be able to enchant her heart. But when the knight came to the small veils the predators didn't let him through. The knight started calling the girl very loud and after many hours she finally came through the small veils. She stood there immediately as spell-struck when she saw the shoes of the knight, and brought him to the little dollhouse. There they lived together forever.

Susanna

1. Susanna was a very special girl. In the night she always got wings, and then she flew to foreign lands. But when the morning came she always lost her wings, and therefore she always had to be back in time, before the sun came up. On a night a witch took her gift from her. In exchange she gave Susanna butterflywings and a crown of feathers, but she could never return home. The witch brought her to a place where it was always night. Here there were a lot of girls like her, but the nights took very long, and when a night was over, then immediately the next night came. After each night they all got a small stone at their necklaces. These small stones were completely white and were called morningstones. When their necklaces would be completely full then they were allowed to make a trip to the place where it was always day. Therefore they had to go through a very long dark tunnel where the oldest little men lived. After a long time Susanna was allowed to make the trip. When she came into the tunnel with the oldest little men they grabbed her immediately to get her attention. 'Help us,' they said. 'We cannot walk. Carry us to the morning land.' 2. 'But of course,' said Susanna, and carried as many little men with her as she could. But the other girls who were with her said to the little men who grabbed them : 'You have to go to the morning land on your own.' 3. Further on they came to a big waterwell. 'can you give us some water,' asked the little men to Susanna. 'Our hands are too weak to get us water.' 4. 'But of course,' said Susanna, and gave them all to drink. But the other girls only took water for themselves. After a long time walking they finally reached a rock which blocked the entry to the morningland. A little man sat on the rock and asked them where they had left the little men. At Susanna's back there hung a lot of them, but the other girls started to laugh and said that the little men had to walk by themselves. 'That is very dumb of you,' said the little man on the rock. As soon the rock will move away from the entry, and the fire-curtain which still blocks the entry will move through the tunnel. The little men will protect the ones who carry them against this. 'Give those little men to us,' shouted the girls to Susanna. 5. 'Go get them yourself,' said Susanna. And then the girls started to run to the beginning of the tunnel where the old little men sat. 'Jump on our backs, quickly,' said the girls, 'then we bring you to the morningland.' 6. 'Why all the care all of a sudden ?' asked one of the old little men. 7. 'We changed our mind,' said one of the girls. 'And we will also give you to drink at the well.' 8. 'Well well,' said the little men, and stepped on the backs of the girls. When they came at the well the girls gave them to drink, and after a long trip they came finally to the entry of the morningland. The rock had already moved away, and the fire-curtain was staring at them. They all had taken as many little men on their backs as they could, so that they would be protected against the fire very well, but suddenly the little men jumped off their backs and entered through the fire. Immediately the fire-curtain started to come forward, and the girls had to run back as fast as they could.

Arachundel

1. Arachundel grew up in a dark dungeon underground. Never there broke a little sunray through. Often the girl lay on the ground crying. On a day a prince came to the dungeons, and asked the boss of the dungeons if he could buy the girl. The prince paid many pieces of gold for it, for he just wanted to buy her. Arachundel was the most splendid girl he ever saw. The girl was very happy that she was free, but when she came in the palace of the prince she had to work in the kitchen. And where she slept it was even dirtier than in the dungeon. The girl didn't understand it, but on a day the prince called her. 'Majesty, I thought you had forgotten about me,' spoke the girl. But the prince only called her for a strange commission : 'Go to the cave behind the forest, where there is a waterwell from which you have to take a bucket with golden water.' The girl thought that was a strange commission, but soon she went on her path. When she finally came at the waterwell there was a little man sitting there. 'Well well,' said the little man, 'so you have been sent by the prince. He makes you work very hard, and now it is even worse than where you came from.' 2. 'That is true,' said Arachundel, 'but how do you know this all ?' 3. Well, you see,' said the little man. 'I am a little wizardman, and if I were you, then I would just stay here. I can give you everything your little heart desires. And here there is abundant golden food so that you will never have to work again. 4. 'Well, that seems to be something good,' said the girl. 'But,' said the little man. 'You have to promise me something. Your first child you will have to give to me.' 6. The girl agreed. She didn't think about having children. The little man opened a door, and indeed there was a mountain of golden food. The girl immediately started to eat. 'Say,' said the girl. 'Can I tell the prince about this place ? Then maybe he wants to marry with me.' 7. 'Whatever you want,' said the little man. The girl took something of the golden food with her, and golden water in a bucket and went back to the prince. The prince was very astonished, and most of all when she told him that there was even more of the golden food. The prince was so impressed and was so grateful to the girl that he wanted to marry her. A year later the girl who was now a princess got her first child. She had already forgotten about her promise to the little man long ago, but on a day he came at the palace. 'Well,' said the prince, 'if you have promised it to the little man, you have to do it.' But the girl started to weep very hard, so hard that the little man got compassion with her. 'Okay,' said the little man, 'you don't have to lose your child to me, but from now on everything you eat will be dirty and wispy.' Then the little man left mad. Since then there was only dirty food in the whole palace, so dirty that no one wanted to work there anymore. The girl had to cook by herself again, and every day she went to the kitchen she wept. The food was so dirty that on one day the prince, the princess and their little prince left the palace and went to live with the little man in the cave forever.

The Girl in Boots

1. Once upon a time an indian girl who was locked up on a very small island in a sea fire.

Although the fire stood very low it was impossible for her to escape.

One day an old woman descended from the heaven who gave her very tall boots which would be fireproof.

They were beautiful brown top-boots.

It was a very long tour of walking through the sea of fire, but finally she reached the other side where a beautiful brown horse stood with tall mane.

'The horse is yours,' said the old woman, but you can only ride it when you have your top-boots on.'

The girl was very grateful to the old woman.

Then the old woman left, and the girl rode on the horse through fields and ways.

After a little while she came to a little house.

It was a sort of hotel or public-house, and the owner had a very big white beard.

There were some reavers sitting at a table.

The girl asked for a room, but left her boots in front of the door.

The next day her boots were gone and also the horse.

The girl asked the owner if he knew where her boots were and her horse. But the owner didn't know it.

The girl started to cry, for the boots had rescued her life.

'Well,' said the owner of the hotel, 'I have a pair of boots for you and they possess so much enchanting power that you can beat the most dangerous reavers.'

The owner gave them as a gift, because he felt so much compassion for the girl.

The day after, the girl left with the boots. She felt herself as strong as a lion now.

After a little while there came some reavermen who wanted to rob from the girl, but she kicked them real hard a few times, and soon they ran away shrieking.

But after a little while she fell asleep beside a tree, and when she woke up her boots had been stolen again.

She stood up crying, not knowing what to do now.

She was leaning at the tree because all her power was lost.

'Well, girl,' said the tree, 'don't cry, for when you take a fruit from me, you have lost all your cares.'

No fire will be able to hit you, and you will be invincible. Moreover you will be led by wisdom the rest of your life.'

Carefully the girl took a fruit and took a little bite.

Immediately she fell asleep, and when she stood up later she wasn't the same anymore.

Barefooted she went on the path again, and awhile later she came to a house where she saw her two pair of boots, and her horse.

It was a little reaverhouse.

The girl went inside and said : 'Well, the boots and that horse of yours I don't need anymore.

I know a tree whose fruits can give you everything you need.'

Greedy as they were the reavers came outside and followed her to the tree.

Immediately they started to eat from the tree greedily.

But the tree spoke to them and said : 'Because you took the last thing away from someone who had nothing all what your feet wear will burn you like a fire, and all what you will ride will lead you the wrong way.'

Since then the reavers stayed away from the boots and horses of others.

The People Who Had Turned To Stone

1. Once an evil witch had turned a fairytale-people to stone. Only when the sun shined full, when it rained, and at full moon, the fairytale-beings could move themselves. Then they always ran to the forest where a woman lived who radiated like the sun. Along her little house there streamed a golden river, and when the beings would reach that river to wash themselves in it and drink from it, then they would never be of stone again. But always when they had almost reached that river, then the dogs of the witch came after them, to drag them back from the forest. The dogs of the witch could drink from the river, and always changed into lions and eagles then. On a day the witch had enough of it, and let big fences with a golden locked gate being built around the people, so that they could not reach the forest anymore. The woman who radiated like the sun had much compassion with the people. She hoped that they would once reach the river. On a day she decided to go to the wizard, but first she had to go through the fields of enchanted flowers. That would take a long time, for she fell asleep there all the time. After many years she finally came to the wizard who lived behind the fields of enchanted flowers. When he heard the story he told her that she had to search for the field of the golden keys. Then she first had to go through a field of enchanted flowers. But the enchanted flowers would only let her through if she would pluck a flower. With every plucked flower she would sleep for ten years. She only had to take care that she would not pluck the enchanted flower of death, for then she would die. Fortunately there were millions of enchanted flowers on the field, of which only one was the enchanted flower of death. The woman who radiated as the sun worked herself a way through it very well, but when she came to the other side of the field many and many years had passed already. Now she stood before the field of the golden keys. Suddenly the queen of the field of the golden keys appeared before her, who told her that only one of the millions of golden keys growing here was the enchanted key. The woman was only allowed to choose one golden key, but when she chose one it was not the enchanted key, and the queen got compassion with her. 'I see that you have not come for yourself,' said the queen, 'but for others. Choose therefore an other time.' But the woman didn't dare to choose again, for she was afraid she would choose the wrong one again. How could she choose the right key out of a million of keys ? And so the woman waited the whole night, while the queen had already left. Suddenly she saw a small light coming from above which descended on the field. It was a small elf who pointed at the right key. The woman walked to the key and plucked it. And yes, it was the enchanted key. But now she had to go all her way back. Again she was very afraid to pluck the enchanted flower of death, especially now she had the enchanted key. But the small elf pointed at the enchanted flower of death, and she just had to stay far away from it. 'Say,' said the small elf. 'I know also which enchanted flowers you have to pluck to stay awake.' And so the woman who radiated as the sun just followed the small elf through the field of enchanted flowers. When she reached the golden gate of the fairytale-people she could open it very quickly by the enchanted key. Fortunately it was full moon, and the woman radiated brightly. Quickly the beings followed the woman to the river, while the small elf blocked the dogs of the witch. Quickly the beings went into the river, while the stone started to melt away. Since then they all went to live behind the golden river.

1. And Chawila gathered all the words which Christ spoke to her, and she drew and wrote them up and took them to an open space in a rock.

And she called the rock her stone.

And she remembered Christ as the crucified and the risen one, as the one she had clothed with her pieces of jewelry and gems and that which lived under the earth.

And her stone was as pure chrysopraas covered with gold, and the tiles of her city were as the gold, and in this she preserved the good dreams.

And Chawila bought a donkey by which she came to the silver sea, and a camel to come to the golden sea.

And horses came to her from the heavens with battle forces, and they battled for her.

And Chawila gathered courage to appear before Christ again, and she was precious to Him.

And He took her to Him and came to her as to a woman.

Thus is then Chawila the pure and the good of the paradise, bearing the words of Christ inside of her as the sweetness of honey.

And Christ as well carries her eternal words inside of Him, as the sign of the milk which has come and the bliss of heaven.

Thus it was the stone of the Bride of Christ, and her eyes were like the eyes of roes.

And she opened books fairer than the song of songs, and fairer than milk, sweeter than honey and she was as the Deliciousness of Christ inside of Him.

The Girl Who Changed Into A Horse

1. Once there was a girl who always turned into a horse in the night. Then she always went to the fields and the forests but then she had to be back in time always, before the sun came up. For always when the morning came then she was a girl again. On a night a witch took her gift away from her. In exchange she got a pair of boots, which were so splendid that she could enchant princes with it. Soon everyone knew of the girl with the enchanted boots, and many princes wanted to marry her. Since then the girl only wanted to work with cows. She became a herder-girl, so that her boots would get so dirty that the princes would forget about her. Also she visited the horses often, and went to live deep in the forest. But still the princes searched for her, and didn't leave her alone. The girl begged the witch to take her boots away from her again. On a day the witch got compassion with her, and said : 'When you give up your boots then you can never go back to the forest and the fields. You will have to live under the earth, afraid of sunlight.' 2. 'So be it,' said the girl. 3. Then the witch took the boots away from the girl, and the girl had to live deep underground from now on, in the mud and in fear of the sunlight. Here the princes could not find her. Underground the wild horses lived, and the girl felt like she had come home. She didn't even miss the world above the ground. But one of the princes found on one day in the forest a hole which led deep under the earth. When he went through it he found the girl there. But he didn't recognize him, for she didn't have her boots anymore and she had become a savage. 'Girl,' he said. 'Are you not cold. Are you hungry. Shall I take you with me to my palace ?' 4. 'No,' said the girl. 'I cannot stand the sunlight.' 5. 'Oh, but it is very dark in my palace, you know. And I have a room for you without windows, very deep in the palace,’ said the prince. 6. Then the girl agreed, and the prince took her to her new room. Every day he came to visit her. Soon the girl was on temperature and fed well, but she still couldn’t stand sunlight. ‘You remind me of someone,’ said the prince. ‘A girl with enchanted boots. Since I couldn’t see her anymore I have made sortlike boots. Would you want to have them ?’ The girl nodded, and got two splendid boots from the prince. The girl often went horse-riding together with the prince since then, and she could stand the sunlight better and better. But on a night the girl started to change into a horse again. Quickly she went out of the palace, and when the prince found her he thought it was the most splendid horse he had ever seen. The prince immediately loved the horse as no other, but for him it was just a horse. The prince didn’t know that the horse was actually the girl he loved. He rode since then more on this horse than on any other horse, and took care of the horse very well like no other horse, but the horse was not allowed in his palace. Every time after the ride the horse had to go back to the stable. The girl was very sad about that, for again and again she tried to make clear to the prince that she was the girl he loved. But the prince didn’t understand it. A horse couldn’t talk after all. The girl had had a good life, especially now she was with such a sweet and provident prince, but it would stay like this. All her further dreams she had to give up.

The Evil Sun

1. The sun of the evil enchanted empire sent his little flames to the people every day, so that the beings would dance every day. They had to dance, for an evil witch. There was a red indian girl who never dared to come out of her cave because of this. She was afraid of the evil sun. On a day there was a sword pierced into the sand of her cave, close to the opening. But because it was close to the opening she didn’t dare to grasp the sword. She had to wait until it was night. In the night she went with the sword outside. ‘Please moon,’ she spoke. ‘Can you not take care that tomorrow the sun will not rise anymore ?’ 2. ‘If you give me your sword, then I will have a duel with the evil sun,’ said the moon. The next day the sun didn’t rise, but the moon did. The girl was very glad and came outside. There were no dancers outside that day, and the girl was happy for the first time. But after the next night the sun came up again, and the girl stayed in her cave. But the day on which the sun didn’t rise has stayed in her memory forever.

The Land of the Fairytale-princes and Fairytale-princesses

1. There was a witch who was very jealous of princes and princesses. The witch was so jealous that on a day she sent evil spirits to all married princes and princesses of the fairytale-empires. Those evil spirits would whisper so many evil things about each other that they would get a fight and wouldn't want to see each other any more. And so many fairytale-empires perished, until a fairytale-prince found out what was going on. With his fairytale-princess he left the castle, and they put very poor, old and wasted clothes on to live among the people of the fairytale-empire. The fairytale-prince went to live on one side of the empire in a very poor and old little house, and the fairytale-princess went to live on the other side of the empire, also in a very poor and old little house. They agreed to seeing each other every night at moonlight for a while in the forest. Then they would put on their princely clothes, and came on their royal horses. 2. 'Oh, prince, how splendid and sweet you are,' said the princess when they met each other for the first time in the forest. 'And you have become even more splendid and sweeter than you already were, princess,' said the prince to his princess. But then they had to leave again, for they were of course afraid that the evil spirits of the witch would find them here. And so it went every night, until the witch found out what had been going on. She sent her evil spirits to the place, and also some of her guards. Meanwhile she had made herself a living in the castle, because it was empty, and let the prince and the princess be locked up in a deep dungeon. Because they had been chained in the same dungeon and the evil spirits whispered evil things about each other they soon had a fight. And that fight was rising up so high that the people outside could hear it. 'Hey, witch,' someone shouted. 'These are the voices of the prince and the princess.' And soon the fairytale-people found out that their fairytale-prince and fairytale-princess had been locked up in a dungeon. Soon the people of the fairytale-empire put the witch out of the castle and delivered the prince and the princess. The witch was put out of the land and the prince let high and heavy guarded walls be constructed around the land. With in short time all the surrounding fairytale-empires heard about the story, and the prince invited all fairytale-princes and fairytale-princesses who had separated from each other, to come to live in his land. Soon it became the land of the fairytale-princes and fairytale-princesses, and the witch with her guards and evil spirits were never seen again.

The Little Goldspinster

1. Once there was a girl who had to spin gold from stolen clothes on the great attic of the palace. The king had all kinds of thieves for that who stole the clothes at night. The girl had a little paint coming from her little hands by which she could spin gold. The king had a lot of little princes who had to be dressed very fine. When the princes got older they also went on the path of thieves. From the little feet of Little Goldspinstre a powder always came forth by which everyone fell asleep. The princes always had to take this powder with them when they went on the path of thieves. But on a day Little Goldspinstre became very ill, and no paint came from her little hands anymore, and no powder came from her little feet anymore. And therefore the king sent his princes to the witch in the forest. The witch had barrels full of that paint and that powder and it was even much more powerful than that of Little Goldspinstre. But they only could take those barrels with them in exchange for Little Goldspinstre. Little Goldspinstre had to live since then with the witch in the forest. The witch could heal her quickly by all sorts of ointments and powders, and soon Little Goldspinstre even brought forth a better paint and a better powder than ever before and also much more. The witch measured new clothes for Little Goldspinstre and sent her back to the king. The king didn't recognize Little Goldspinstre anymore, because she had grown and changed so much. 'King, it is me, Little Goldspinstre,' she said. Finally the king recognized her again, because of her sweet voice, and Little Goldspinstre could work for the king again. But because she was a bit older now she was allowed to go on the path of thieves with them as well. But after a while Little Goldspinstre became severely ill again, and again she had to go to the witch in the forest. This time no ointment or powder of the witch which could heal her. 'Little Goldspinstre,' said the witch. 'This time you will have to go to the goldwells in the earth. When you bath in these wells, then you will never get ill again.' And so Little Goldspinstre started her long trip to the innermost earth where the goldwells were. The witch had showed her the way, and so after a not so long time she came there. After she had bathed there and danced she went back to the king. The king was so impressed that he didn't want to be king anymore, but he let her be queen. And so Little Goldspinstre became the queen. And the king and the princes ? They went since then to the goldwells in the earth, and stayed there forever.

The Monkey Palace

1. Once there was a merchant who sold wings at the doors. There were many people who wanted to fly, but it seemed that there was much wrong with the wings, so that many after an amazing trip crashed down. The people were soon in rage about the merchant, and the merchant had to flee deep into the forest to escape from the raging crowd. They had taken spears, swords, knives and bows to teach the merchant a lesson. After a long trip of escape he came to a little house where a giant monkey lived. The ape took him under its care immediately, and went to the balcony to stand there to defend the merchant. But after a while the ape became very exhausted of it, and he was bleeding by the many arrows. He went inside and said to the merchant : 'You have to go to the fairy, for I can not defend you well any more.' And so the merchant went through a little backdoor and ran fast to the little house of the fairy deeper in the forest. The fairy was immediately very friendly to the man and gave him immediately a lot of little wings which would never crash down. These he could sell to the people since then. The little wings were full of little fire-flames and when the merchant came with these to the people they became silent immediately. Still they wanted to fly very much, and they decided to give the merchant a new chance. And yes, it worked. The wings worked very well, and the people were so in ecstasy and grateful that they made the merchant king of their nation. The merchant got therefore a splendid palace. But because the fairy had helped the merchant so good, she became the queen, and the ape became the guard of the palace. But because it was for the ape very hard to guard such a big palace on his own, the fairy let many more apes appear by her magic.

The Little Pigherdergirl

1. Once there was a little pigherdergirl who lived outside the town to care for the pigs. She didn't care about the riches of the town, the rich life. She slept always between the pigs, and ate the same food they ate. Further no one took care of her, and she was not welcome. On a day she was invited to come to the palace of the prince. She found that very strange, but she went there after all. When she came to the prince, the prince told her about the festival to come. The prince didn't have enough pigs, and asked therefore for the pigs of the little pigherdergirl. 'Since when are me and my pigs invited to the festival ?' asked the little pigherdergirl. 2. 'No, you misunderstand it,' said the prince. 'You have not been invited. It is for the festival-meal.' 3. 'My pigs have enough to eat with me,' said the little pigherdergirl. 'They don't need your festival-meal for that.' 4. 'No, that is not what I mean,' said the prince. 'We get high-ranked guests, and then there should be enough pig-meat available.' 5. Then the little pigherdergirl bowed the little pigherdergirl bowed her head and spoke : 'You aren't going to take away the last things I have, right ?' 6. 'Tomorrow I will come,' said the prince. 'And then I will take your pigs away.' 7. In sadness the little pigherdergirl went out of the palace again. She would flee with her pigs, but where could she go ? Deep in the night she wandered through the forest. After a long time walking she came to a house where an old woman lived. While weeping she told the story. 'You have a good heart,' said the woman, 'and I will reward you for it. Upstairs there are clothes of a princess. You can put them on to go to the coming festival. I will take care of the pigs here.' 8. But I don't want to go to that festival. I want to stay with my pigs,' said the girl. 9. 'You better go,' said the woman, 'you won't regret it.' 10. When the girl had put on the princess-clothes after a while, the old woman went over it with a magic wand, so that she was like a real princess. The next evening she went to the festival, while the old woman took care of her pigs. The prince was very happy, and this even though he could not find the pigs. The girl fitted in very well, and dances that evening the stars of heaven. After a while the eye of the prince started to fall on her. 'Who is that splendid, lovely girl ?' asked the prince to his footmen. 'She looks like she comes from a very far land, and she is a real princess.' The girl had an amazing evening, and at the end of the evening the prince came to her to ask her for a dance. The girl agreed and danced like a real queen. 'Who are you in fact if I may ask ?' whispered the prince to her while they danced. But the girl just smiled. Everyone was looking full of wonder to the dancing prince and the girl. 'You remind me of someone,' whispered the prince, 'but I don't know who. Everyone would like to dance with you. Look at them watching.' The girl smiled. She had the evening of her life. 'Will I see you back next year ?' Asked the prince. The girl nodded, and then she walked away from the festival. In the middle of the night she came to the old woman. 'And how was it ?' asked the old woman. 11. 'Oh, it was wonderful,' said the girl. 'Especially because I knew that my pigs were safe with you.' 12. The year after she went to the festival and this time she was even more splendid than ever. The prince had pain in his heart of it, so splendid she was. And again at the end of the evening he had to let her go. The year after he took his chance and asked her to marry him. The girl was terrified, and ran away. When she told it later to the old woman she said : 'Go back, and say that you want it.' 13. 'Yes, but I do not want that at all,' said the girl. 14. 'You will not regret it,' said the woman. 'I take care of the pigs after all.' 15. 'Yes, but then I have to live at the palace,' said the girl, 'and then I will never see you again.' 16. 'Go your way,' said the old woman. 'Everything will be fine.' 17. Quickly the girl went back. 'Where did you go ?' asked the prince with pain in his heart. 'Marry me.' 18. 'Of course, love,' said the girl, and kissed him. 19. The day after was the wedding. The girl lived since then with her prince at the palace. 'Now you are my wife, you can do your wishes,' said the prince. 20. 'There lives an old woman in the forest with pigs,' said the girl. 'I want that they come to live here at the palace, and that her pigs will be treated as princes.' 21. The prince thought that was a bit of a strange wish, but he fulfilled her wish after all.

Jesus and the Dragon

1. And Christ came to the dragon saying : Kalum Hartiti, which means in heavenly language : Be silent, you despised one.

And the dragon then guarded three pits, and these were the pits of sound, of vision and of odour.

And Christ had a long wrestling against the dragon of three days in which he didn't sleep.

And many had been thrown into the pit of vision and bore unbearable burdens, and they were guarded by the dragon.

And they were called forth by him to slavery and to battle against Christ.

And I saw a light coming from the pit of odour, and I saw many martyrs.

And they hung in the pit of odour, but it was like a wind from below and a pressure stopped them from descending deeper into the pit.

And they soared above a void which was full of lions and snakes. And I saw worms coming from the depths of the pit of odour and smoke came with them.

And they began to eat from the martyrs. And the martyrs wept to Christ, and they called to Him, but then a great silence came.

And I saw how Christ grasped the heart of the dragon and descended into the pit of odour.

And Christ started to share from the heart, and he gave the saints red garments.

And the saints had to rest a certain time longer.

Now then the dragon had a second heart, a black heart, which was as his liver, and he had also a third heart, a black heart which was as his stomach.

And Christ took the two hearts and threw them into the pit of sounds and of vision.

And a loud shrieking ascended from the pit, and the dragon began to turn into a pig.

And thus Christ battled against the pig who was as a predator-pig for six days, and he didn't sleep in those days.

And the pig began to bring forth a red heart, as the heart of kidneys, and this heart battled against the saints.

And again Christ spoke : Kalum Hartiti which means : be silent, you despised one.

And the pig began to bring forth a substance, a nature, as a red beast, and after a long wrestling Christ rode the animal and gave it to the saints.

And from the mouth of Christ a spear came, a red one, to pierce the pig, and Christ cast the pig into the pit of odour.

And many voices came forth from the pit, and lightning with much smoke. And laughing ascended out of the pit to accuse the saints.

And there was no one who could destroy the spirit of the pig, for the spirit was like a lamb and a dragon. Wepp then, oh earth, for predator-lambs came to you, and they will deceive many.

And the predator-lamb came to Christ, she and her army-powers, and she led a battle of seventy days against Christ.

And if she would have the power she would devour Christ and seduce him, but at the end of the seventy days Christ fed her with black seed, for the lamb had become very hungry and nothing could satisfy her hunger.

And she guarded a pit of sound, and a loud shrieking was in that pit.

And watch, I saw many slaves in that pit, dying at burning crosses.

And watch, I saw a goat coming with a very long horn, and it pierced the lamb, while the earth followed the goat because they were astonished. And they all said : Who is equal to the goat, he who has pierced the predator-lamb.

For she has tormented us, and she has kept us chained as servants in long days.

And I saw a great judgement coming over the predator-lamb and her hearts got devoured.

And watch, these hearts were black.

And the predator-lamb brought a heart forth like never before any heart was brought forth, and the heart was blue, and began to speak words of gigantic blasphemy against the most high.

And the blue heart turned against Christ, and Christ devoured the heart.

And Christ grasped the lamb and cast it into the pit of sound. And many voices came forth and sounds, yes, fair sounds.

And thus it was the judgement over the beasts.

And Christ grasped the goat who had become gigantic to the south of the earth, and Christ tore the goat like a garment.

They all then come forth from the dragon, and they are led to destruction.

And all those who were on the earth said : Yes, God is great and mighty, He who has let these things happen.

And I saw a hairy beast coming forth with iron claws, and he raised himself up against Christ, and watch, the beast became like an ox.

And Christ cast the ox in the pit of visions, and a lovely odour started to spread itself.

Yes, the sweetness of the earth began to come forth like a harem of Christ, singing : Christ won the victory over the dragon.

And the women bore bowls. Thus was the Bride of Christ.

And the women came to the earth from a deep pit and they served Christ.

After these things which I saw a black cloud began to cover the earth.

And the women started to pour out their bowls in the rivers and the waterwells, and these became like blood.

Thus they were the women of the covenant.

And thus Christ won the victory over the dragon to soften the hearts of many.

And a softening came over the earth like there was never any.

And the feet of Christ stood on the mountain of deliciousness.

And new rivers began to stream, like the rivers of heaven.

Thus there was then the judgement over the gigantic earth, and watch, this judgement was good.

1. And one of the disciples asked Christ : Who are then the father and mother of the dragon ?

And Christ directed himself to him saying : Don't you know it then ?

Isn't it the great bear who has brought forth the dragon, the bear for who there was no heart safe ?

And wasn't this bear together with a panther ? So their fruit could only be a dragon.

Haven't you heard of the lion and the beast who were watching to devour the fruit as soon as the child would be born ?

Where were you when this happened. for it has sealed the heart of God for sure, seventy times seventy, and you didn't know.

Another discipel asked : Oh Lord, how long will it take before they have been defeated, and who can defeat them ?

And Christ then said : Look at the sun, the moon and their stars.

Don't they feed all these generations.

Watch then, when they will fall down, the end is there.

And Christ directed himself to the sun and said : Kaditam Asbalat, which means : be locked.

And from that day the sun didn't give light anymore, but a black fire.

And the sun came to Christ as roaring and as the laughing of the dragon, and Christ made her mancrafts fall.

And Christ directed himself to the bear and spoke : much meat you have eaten, and much blood you have drunk.

You have spoken gigantic words to the most high, and your sword you kept to the last.

However you have fallen, and many have seen it.

May your words then take you to the fire of the eternities, and may your heart fall into a thousand pieces.

And the disciples were in shock when they saw the gigantic bear falling and a gigantic cold fell on them.

Christ then took the skin of the bear and made skins for his disciples to warm them. He also bound the skins up to make boots.

And the gigantic lion of the old Babylon came to Christ, and Christ spoke : Don't eat of the bear meat, so that it won't poison you. But his skin will warm you to all eternities.

Because many have eaten from the bear meat their faith became a shipwreck, and many have slid away from me.

Their glow will perish when the angels of the primeval will stand up.

And I saw the moon losing glow, and gigantic stars fell down, and the lion stood seventy days and nights before the face of the Lords, and a gigantic shock was on the disciples.

And the lion ate from the bear meat now his wound was healed, and the lion became as an ox.

And an iron beast clothed in copper and gold battled against the ox over the meat of the bear, and the disciples made holes in the earth in which they hid.

And I saw the gigantic sun falling on the surface of the earth to devour her, and the ox was as a drunk lion.

And Christ led the iron beast who was clothed with copper and gold drunk, and took it into a deep sleep.

And he led the iron beast to a deep sea, and let it sink away there. And Christ was clothed with the thunder and with thunderbolts, and he was as the red spear.

And I saw the moon falling into the sea, and she brought forth gigantic waves and the silver. And Christ went to the cave where the old panther lived.

And the panther jumped forth from the cave and hunted the drunk ox and devoured it. Then the panther slowly slinked back to Christ and Christ led the panther to drunkenness.

Also the panther he led to the sea and let her sink away there in a sleep.

And the gold came over Christ and the sea became as gold.

Now there were stars at the heaven which were called the stars of the Philistines, and they were showing off.

And they were like predator-pigs and they hunted the saints. And Christ directed Himself to the stars and let them fall one by one out of the heavens by a bow.

And they had made a statue for Dagon, their god, and they swore that they would bring the saints down. They also made a statue of the old dragon, and a statue of the old Babylon and of the old predator-lamb, and they committed idolatry with these statues and even adultery.

And they said : Let us make a statue of the old panther and the old iron beast, for weren't they the parents of the dragon ? And let us make statues of the sun, the sun, the moon and the stars for were they not the fruits of the dragon ?

And thus they tried to heal a wound of the dragon, and the whole earth went after the statue of the dragon and his healed wound.

In astonishment they worshipped him.

And in those days the statue of the dragon became gigantic and the statue was given a voice.

And they called the statue Moloch.

And also the statue of the predator-lamb became more gigantic, for the statue was as the prophetess of the dragon.

And the statue had been given to do great miracles and signs to mislead many.

And they made that their arms and necks had to be sealed, and that there would rest a seal on their foreheads, and that all those who didn't bear the seal could not speak nor eat.

And in those days the followers of this statue called : Is there someone more gigantic than the predator-lamb ?

For she has beaten her tenthousands, yes times hundredthousand.

And I saw the statue full of the blood of the prophets and the apostles, but she was drooling and was led to a hole in the earth.

And the statue of the old panther and the statue of the iron beast became gigantic and filled the earth, and these statues became drunk of the blood of the saints.

But they lead to the abysses of the sea.

And the dead body of the old serpent was there to feed to bottom of the sea.

And after these things I saw the saints clothed with serpent skins, and they were the overcomers of the statues.

And I saw them riding adorned horses, who were savage, because they had wounds.

And they had to be ridden to be healed to the eternal sleep.

And so I saw the Lord sitting on a throne among the ropes of the fairytales and I saw many coming up to be led to the abyss, because they did not want the fairytale.

Be fairytalish because of this, beloved, for when the Lord comes to blow the trumpet together with the karsuiks, then the fairytales will seal the saints, and they who do not bear those seals will be led to the eternal sleep into all eternities. They will rest of their works, for these were evil.

But they whose works were fairytalish will not have any rest, day nor night, for they will serve the Lord forever, into all eternities. Yes the love will keep them awake and they will be sober, hardheaded.

So let your heart not be led to destruction by drunkenness, for the double Lord hates those who live in debauchery.

The Apocrypha of the Eternal Gospel

The Stone of Metensia – Subscriptures of the Eternal Gospel I

Finishing of the Canon

1. These are then the words of the finishing of the canon. These words are faithful and true. 2. See, He who sits on the white horse comes, to judge the living and the dead, and also the suffering ones. Yes, He is followed by a thousand of martyrs, those who stayed faithful to him to the end. Follow then also Him who sits on the red horse. Amen. Metensia Eminiis, the faithful one. Let then the blessing of the Lords be with you. He does not let His promise perish. 3. He comes soon. Do not see back, but focus forwards, for He who stands at the door knocks. Open then for Him so that He will have a meal with you. So these words are to finish the canon. See then, this is the pure canon, which opens you for the holy books of heaven. Let this be as a mystery. You have then heard of folks who say that there is no canon. 4. Do not waste your time with such folks, for they do not fear the Lord. But isn't the canon then unclean ? The first canon was that for sure, but this one was made by human hands who did not know the Lords. The second canon then is clean, and see, this one is eternal and full of riddle. But does the scriptures then not say that there is no canon ? 5. Well then, folks, when you study the scriptures you will see that there is no canon after the flesh, but after the Spirit, which is the Spirit of the Lords. And she has been given as a clean sword to clean your hearts. 6. So then these words are eternal and holy. Let then no one add to the Word of the Lords so that the Lord will not give of His plagues. See then, at the end of time there will be many folks who will twist the scripture, and they will try to seduce you by hollow sounds. Do not waste your time with such folks. The Lord will punish heavily those who edit the Scriptures selfrighteously. Do not take off of the Word of the Lords, for the Lord will take your part of the tree of life, the white stone and the holy paradise off. So there has been written many books, but they are not all of the Lords. Be therefore awake so that the satan will not take your part away. 7. Many have been led astray by many books, away from Truth. Be therefore warned, children. What then, shall we not read anymore and not research the scriptures ? When you are led by the Spirit, then He will lead you through the Word, and also through scriptures outside of the Word, for the Lord hits straight by crooked rods. But do not let yourself be misled by a multitude of words. So was then the first canon unclean, but the new canon is clean, and she has been established to hit the hearts, by straight and crooked bars. So there are also apocryphic scriptures and subscripts outside of the second canon, through which the Lords can also speak. Let yourselves be punished then, and research the prophecies.

8. So then there are also many heavenly books which belong to the Eternal Gospel, and in which the prophets can see things, but they are in no way of the second canon. They have to be seen as apocryphic and as subscripts, and they are for the angels as a guide. Also huge prophecies are written down like the Risgamen, the Lokogamen and the Takalan, and they have been written down by angels, but they are in no way of the second canon. They belong to the Eternal Gospel as the books of heaven, the apocryphs and the subscripts which only support the second canon. But the Lord loves the deuterocanonical books, and He promised them in His Word. Yes, they are hidden gifts He gives to His children. Therefore : Let the children come to me and do not hinder them. Let them speak about the different scriptures, but know also that they are a trap for the fools.

9. Hear then these words, and let it be to finish the canon. See then, the Lord has become flesh, through the second canon, to declare the first canon as invalid and unworthy. Yes, not far from removal is the first. Let therefore clean folks clean the first, so that it will be worthy to the Lord. So then the Lord considers the first also as apocryphic, and He speaks through it as through hidden languages. He who sits on the white horse comes, and will punish the false canon. Yes, I saw the false canon, the first, cast into a pit of fire, and he shrieked to the saints, but the hand of the Lords came over his mouth to shut it. So then the last words of the first canon were : a false roaring and shrieking. And so the Lord brought an end to the terrors of the first canon, but his tail took many of the saints with him, to an eternal destruction.

10. These are then the last words of the second and clean canon : He who comes, comes soon. Keep therefore your hearts in cleanness. Do not despise the apocryphs, and neither the subscripts of the Eternal Gospel, for they have been given to you as guides. Let it be as a directory. And so the Lord finished the canon, and sealed it by an unbreakable cord. And see, angels descended, and they sang the hidden songs from His Word. And the Lord made the new canon big as a guidance, to bind the saints in His Spirit by eternal bonds and chains. And I saw thousands of saints stand up who carried the martyrship in the Lords, and they went through a big gate. And I saw many cast out who wept to the Lords, but They didn't hear to them because they had not supported Them in Their suffering and kept themselves deaf for a long time.

The Carrier of the Canon

1. Lokogamen
2. Tokon
3. Risgamen
4. Talgamen

Lokogamen

1. This then is the holy book given by angels as a carrier and sword of the canon. She is not the canon herself, but the guard of the canon, the second, which is the clean one. And so she carries then the sword to pierce the old canon. Amen Metensia Eminijs. He who comes, comes soon.
2. So she is a wall established surrounding the canon, the clean one. Amen Metensia Eminijs, come soon. She carries the knife of the Lords. So is then the Lokogamen established by angels as the cloak of the canon. And I saw her bearing a child, and the child grew up in the wilderness, between the snakes. And the child learned to use the bow of the Lords, and the Lord gave him big might. And see, he was established as judge over the animals of the fields, and measured their times. And the Lord gave him big might over death and life. And he made the book of the Lords big, the book which bore a pearl in itself. And he grew up before the Lord as a giant. And he gave his mother honour, and became a big fighter of the Lords. The lokogames are the jewelry of the Lords.
3. And I saw him standing up as a hero, cutting down big giants. And those giants feared him, because they had sinned against the Lord, and he was established as their judge. And he judged on the day the living and the dead, and also the suffering. And he brought the sheep of the field to the wilderness, where he fleeced them for their wool, and he judged them. And he carried the goats of the night to the altar. So never make the lokogames evil, for see, they are cruel, and they carry the cruelty of the Lords. The lokogames are then the jewelry of the cross, and they are at the roads to mock those passing by.
4. Deep in the wildernesses they have their huts of meat. Know that they are bloodthirsty, for they carry the vengeance of the Lords in them. Oh, pilgrims of the word of the Lords who have approached the lokogames : Do you only follow a translation of the Word of the Lords, or do you follow the clean roottext. For many folks have translated the Word of the Lords to display their own lusts in it. Stay therefore close to the roottext, so that your soul will not go astray. Who has then enchanted you and painted Christ as crucified ? Was his soul not torn and broken ? So is God in the roottext elohim, which means gods. And you have to know these gods to become blissful. Also elohim is female, so why have some come to only worship the male.

5. Only by the lokogames you come to God. Can you wrestle with the lokogames and overcome ? They are then the parts of the soul of Christ when He was torn apart. Can you come along these wrathful parts of Christ ? See, they are as savages.

The tearing of the Mind

6. And I saw lights falling on the mind of Christ to tear it when He was in the realm of the dead. And the lights were as bloodthirsty predators. And the mind of Christ had the name Debich, and when she had been torn, she was Na'in, drunkenness, and Nergun, bloodthirst. And I saw Christ ascending taking many captives of war, and also Na'in and Nergun were torn, and they were called : the lokogames. And I saw many hidden and lost lokogames, and they carried the blood of Christ. And I saw the blood of Christ flowing through rings, and many predator-spirits of the old canon were taken in ascension by Christ, and see, he hung them. And the other part of his soul was the Haftlich, the sexuality, and also this one was torn, and the separated parts were fear and depression. And fear was torn and become feeling and cruelty, and depression was torn and become scorn and pain. And also they were torn and were called : the lokogames. And I saw many hidden and lost lokogames and they carried the blood of Christ. And I saw the lokogames who told the most beautiful stories which had been hidden since the institution of the world. And I saw a spirit named shame who lost much might and began to melt. And the blood of the wilderness began to flow, and the wilderness began to bloom, but around it began to grow an even bigger wilderness. And see, the wilderness was dry and barren. And see, the outer wildernesses were dark and deep, and they were called : the all-atonement of the lokogames. And I saw the hidden and lost lokogames coming out of their dens and they surrounded the big city Babylon. And they called the names of those who were in the city, and they made of the city a wilderness. And in the depths of the city they found back what had been lost.

7. And I heard a trumpet sounding, and the voices of the lokogames started to come through, and I saw seven voices. And I heard a voice saying : Come. And also another voice spoke : Come. And when the first voice of the lokogames spoke, I saw the Risgamen, the Spirit of Christ, to become broken at the cross, and she became as jewelry, those of the operations. And then I heard the second voice of the lokogames speaking, and I saw the Cup of Christ to be broken at the cross, the Talgamen, and see, it became as jewelry, those of the sacraments. And I heard the third voice of the lokogames speaking, and I saw the parts of the torn Risgamen : the cryptical and the oracle. And these parts were torn. The cryptical was torn in two parts : bonds and slavery. Also these parts were further torn, and I saw the hidden and lost risgamen. The oracle was torn in two parts : fire and ice, and also these parts were further torn. The fire to rage and might, and later these parts were also torn. And I saw the Cup of Christ torn in two parts, named war and arena. And war was torn into paralysis and power, and arena was torn in devouring and watch. And I heard a fourth voice of the lokogames speaking, and I saw devouring and watch torn. And they were called talgames, and I saw many hidden and lost talgames, and they surrounded the big city. And I heard a fifth voice of the lokogames speaking. And I saw that big bones were broken, and the parts were turned into jewelry. When the sixth voice of the lokogames spoke, I saw the flesh of Christ was broken. And the parts were divided at the cross, and these were the names of the parts : illusion and vision. And illusion was torn into growth and root, and growth was torn into greatness, and root was torn into light. And vision was torn into smell and taste. And taste was torn into number, and number into green. And taste was torn into inside and control, and control was torn into tear. At the hearing of the seventh voice the parts were further torn, and they were called inaputs, jewelry of death. I saw the armory of Christ pierced at the cross and broken, and the parts were called sorsols, jewelry of hell. I saw the Blood of Christ shattered. I heard a voice saying : Come, and another voice spoke : Come higher, and I saw the jewelry of the poverty, and they were the shattered blood of Christ, the Tokon. I heard a sound as of a thousand voices, and I looked back and saw many awakening, and they came forth from the dust. They carried knives. They were baptized in a river of death, and I saw a man standing up who carried a young sheep as a lamb on his shoulders. And the man became big before the faces of the Lords, he carried the wool of the wilderness, he learned to shoot by the bow of the Lords. He had the mark of the bow on his arm.

8. I saw a big army rising up against the old Rome to surround this city. I saw terrible insects entering the old city to eat it till it was bare. I saw the army pull up to the old Jerusalem, and she was as a cornfield ripe to be reaped. And a new Jerusalem descended from heaven to devour the old. And I saw big men come up who had on his arms marks of the last judgement. Assur was not there anymore, Egypt was as a sigh. The judgement came to the table of Moab, and see, she was no more. In these days big spiders were on the earth, they brought forth many flies. There was a man with the heart as a magpie and a gull, he played many instruments, and his name became big on earth. I saw a star falling on the earth to pollute the waters, see, the trees of the old Rome become blood, also her institutions. I saw the man coming to the old Rome, see, she was no more.

9. By the all-atonements of the lokogames, risgames and talgames we have hope on the all-atonement of the blood of Christ. Isn't that the fortress Perlottia ? The risgamen drink the blood of Christ, by the talgames it has it's workings. Be then necktied, hands and feet tied, so that you can enter.

10. And I saw a red throne as of blood, surrounded by twenty-four lokogames. Four animals stood before the throne including a chicken and a paradise-bird. I saw the Cup of Christ, sealed with seven seals. I heard a voice saying : Open now the seals which keep the blood of Christ behind. I saw one of the animals coming forward, the animal was full of eyes on front and on back. When the animal had chewed the first seal open I saw a green cock, and that cock reached big might. And the cock spoke : Let us build a city on earth, a big name, so that our voice will reach heavem. But without human hands the animal was taken away, I heart a big weeping. Then the second animal came forwards, see, it had noses on front and on back, it carried many voices. I heard one of these voices saying : Come, for the hour has come. I saw that the animal began to chew the second seal open, a powerful whirlwind began to blow. I saw a city full of cats, these cats changed into women, they reached big might. See, the last five seals were black, the last two animals began to chew the seals open, I saw an army of horses. The horses reached big might, they broke free from their ties. Behind them there was a mass of savages, they shouted to the heavens in wrath. I saw much blood flowing. One of the seals started to make itself big, reached again big might, bigger than the first might. I heard much weeping and many voices. I saw a green paradise-bird appearing, after that a yellow, the seal began to tie up many on earth. I heard a voice saying : Now it is enough. I saw in the midst of these animals a bleeding goat which was slain, see, the goat tred on the red throne which was of blood, the goat reached big might.

11. In the depths of Acha I saw the lokogames sealed, the carriers of the Blood of Christ. I saw many weeping for no one could open these seals. I saw a man with logs as of bone, hij was as a cock, as a half skeleton. He laid his hands on the seals, melted them. I saw the seals fleeing to the lower worlds, together with the brotken seals of the talgames. And many hills melted, fled from the faces of the Lords. After two days the seals which had sealed the lokogames were back. A man on a horse and a man on an ox came to the seals, the seals were called by name, they were broken, again to be back in two days. I saw the seals of the risgames, which were like cats, the risgames were like bones. Suddenly I saw a lightening-flash coming from heaven, the risgames stood right up, after two days they collapsed again. I saw the blood of Christ flowing through white tablets, these tablets were sealed. The seals were as iron chains, some seals were as white leather. The seals had eyes as jewels. Suddenly I saw a red lightening fall from heaven, many horses stood up, after two days they collapsed again. I saw the leather becoming thick and tough, it was as a slave-market, as a circus and a fairground. I saw lights appear, I saw the book becoming big before the faces of the Lords. I heard a voice saying : 'Come higher.' I saw the market of the Lords. I saw that there had to be paid a lot by blood, sweat, tears, that many tubes had to be filled before a door would open.

Tokon

1. The Tokon is the blood of Christ and the blood of the lokogames, therefore fellow-carrier of the canon. I saw how there should be sacrificed, the Lord spoke : Let the temple be dressed with blood. I saw the light of the blood, she brought new visions. These visions were eternal. I saw many guards on the walls, they preached the teaching of the blood of Christ. I saw a harp from which arrows came, a flute from which blood flew. The arrows and the blood filled the land. I saw horses with riders, they were on their way to the eternal city. They were now allowed to enter, there was spoken : Let the blood first rise to the tops of the walls. The horses with the riders went out, they wept and were filled with fear. They said : we rather want to work to let the sweat rise to the tops of the walls than that we cause blood to flow. The Lord saw their love, blessed them, let them into the city, they had made a wise choice. There were some coming from the east, see, they caused blood to flow, the blood came to their hips, they went down in the blood. I saw the Lord sitting on his throne in all his glory, the waters became blood, like he had pronounced in his word. The trees went blood, and the whole land. There was a big mass which came to the city of the Lords, the Lord didn't open for them. The Lord spoke these words : Go into the land, work, so that the seals of the city will be broken. See, they were all the cause of blood to flow, the blessing of the Lords didn't rest on them. The Lord poured his sweat out on the earth, the blood began to burn. There were several folks who followed the Lords, see, they were washed in his sweat, by the sweat they had brought forth by tears, the blessing, the wings of the Lords rested on them. They had a secret mission to fulfil the word of the Lords, they received rich entry into the city. I saw the name of the lords becoming big, the Lords chose many servants, they were sent out into the wilderness in the last days. They found a shell with sounds, so was the scream of the blood of the Lords. There was a powerful covenant which spoke, they brought big comfort to the lords. The Lords spoke : Let your war then be in the spirit, in the game of the cross. The Lord took a rod, a rope, broke it, saying : So I will do with the seals of the tokon one day. See, the parts of the broken rod, the broken rope were like snakes. Fire came forth from them, the Lord covered them with leather. The Lords broke many bonds. A big ship came at the horizon, blood came forth from her, the Lord began to speak. So was the speaking blood.

The Widow

2. There was a widow on earth, see, she became famous, she sang through the blood of Christ. The Lord made her big on earth, many came to the Lords by her. The Lord spoke : this is a demonic race, and I will destroy them. Yes, I will be as a fighter against them, for see, they are not in My Word. And I saw the Lord coming to the old earth, and to her hirelings, and the Lord spoke : Through sweat I shall judge, not through blood. And I saw the sweat of the Lords, and it covered them, and on them the new city was built. And I saw visions of blood, and see, these were eternal. And they were as the paradox, as double faces and as mozaics and garlands, and see they were like jesters of the Lords. And I saw them riding on high horses.

3. And there was a woman named white widow, and she also got big might on earth, and she battled against the jesters of the Lords. And who is wise calculates these words, for they are about a far history. And so there will be a point in time in which everything is history. And I saw the lords closing time as a canon. So the bread which you eat will be history, and the blood you drink will be history, and no one will be able to make a step again. See, all has been frozen, and the flame will be of the Lords. Wake then, for you do not know the time, neither the hour, in which these things will happen.

4. And I saw the Lord closing the canon of the material, and the human was driven back to the spirit. And to the material there was nothing added anymore, for the Lord had closed it, and see, everything was frozen, and everything turned to stone, yes, even the trees. And so no one could live anymore by the literal. And these were the days in which the thousand years kingdom started. And see, it was a kingdom of peace. And the Lord spoke : Hasn't enough blood flown ? And the Lord closed the canon of blood, and so the thousand years kingdom was as the kingdom of sweat, and the days of paradise as the kingdom of tears. And so the blood of Perlottia was atoned, and the gate to the Risgamen was opened, and her place the Lapondria.

5. And I saw birds as bloodsuckers which guarded the blood of christ. And I saw bags with money going back and forth with knights with big fluffy feathers on their helmets who traded. And see, they had strange marks. They were called the birds of Aldebaran, the merchants of the earth. And I saw two seals as frozen which kept the tablets closed, and these seals had tall stings. And I heard a voice saying : Come follow me. And a door opened, and I saw a tall stairway which coiled downstairs into a spiral. And I saw how the light came from downstairs. And I walked towards the light, and came into a green garden, where strange roots grew. And there were hares here and rabbits and the light had a strange smell. And I saw how the roots of the tablets of stone were stuck in the ceiling, and a hand took them away. And a man with an axe cut the ceiling open, and the tablets of stone fell down, and they fell into many pieces. And the pieces became as jewelry, and I saw gates surrounding the garden open up. And I heard a voice saying : Come in. And I went inside and saw hands at a strange wall, and also feet. And the jewelry in the garden became instruments. And by a fire the instruments were bonded together by many meltings and hardenings, and I saw knights appearing and they had no heads. And I heard a voice saying : Bring me the silver and the gold. And the knights stood up and gathered dishes with silver and gold, and brought them in through the gates. And a woman with a white silk cloth began to clean the instruments, and the bonds inbetween them, and see, it was like a carousel. So it was the fairground of the Lords. And I saw hands and feet at the walls growing and turning into beings. And again there were many trades. And I saw big webs appearing as mosaics, and some webs were made of bones and fish-bones. And I heard a voice saying : Let now the light shine.

Risgamen

1. And I saw a new currency coming up, and it was the Spirit who had always been a pledge. And see, the Spirit of Christ had been torn into many pieces, the Risgamen. And there was a big weeping. And the Risgamen became like coins, and see, she was as a feather. And I saw a big fire coming to devour the Spirit, and the Spirit was torn into many feathers, and I saw many hidden and lost risgames, and see, they were raging.

2. And I saw the risgames fleeing to their place Lapondria, and see, this place was raging. And the place was guarded by raging birds, which were like paradise-birds. And I saw many who tried to enter Lapondria, but they were attacked by the raging birds. And these birds were like peacocks in all their power, and big fear fell upon those who saw it. And these birds were bloodthirsty and jeering, and some of them had helmets. And I saw Christ sitting on a high throne of pearls, and see, He chose the risgames as a new currency and a new covenant. So is then the predestination of the spirit, the predestination of Lapondria, and this is the only one. And I saw the risgames getting entry to the city Lapondria, and they all carried reeds in their hands. And these reeds were very sharp and cutting. And they made marks on the walls, and came in the city for full, because they had been covered by the blood of Perlottia, and carrying her marks. And they came to the high throne of Christ which was of pearls, and Christ atoned them. So the Spirit gave her feather to Christ as a payment, and she was welcome in the city. So it is then : by the feather we pay, by the risgames. This is how we keep ourselves clean. And I saw how Christ strung the risgames as jewelry, and see, they were as wonderful stories, and they gave entry to the depths of the city. And I saw a fire coming from the jewelry which was powerful enough to melt the silver. And I saw doors getting opened to the depths of the earth. And I saw bloodbonds melting away, and see, they were sacrificed. So was then the all-atonement of the spirit, and I saw the Spirit streaming as rivers, to overflowing. And I saw the indulgence of the Indulgence of the Spirit, as a heavenly payment, and the Spirit gave her feather to Christ again, and see, she was cleaned. And Christ gave her a white small book of white leather, and the leather tied her. So was the Canon of the Spirit and the bonds. And this was the only bond, by the only indulgence. And I saw how Christ baptized His Spirit, and see, she was reborn as a white dove of white fire. So we have also, by the Indulgence of the Spirit, by the Feather of the Spirit, part in these things. And I saw a gate clothed with white leather opening, and see, this was the only gate to enter the city. But the birds who were on the walls of the city were sly. And so I saw the Risgamen becoming the fellow-carrier of the canon, the second one, the clean one.

3. And I saw the Risgamen, and she got access to the treasures of the earth, and see, she was dark. And I saw Lapondria becoming big on earth, and see, she was the center of creativity. And in her the saints had a place of rest, but they were torn by confusion for some time. And I saw several saints rebelling against lapondria, and they got a robe to rest. And after some time of rest they raised their fists against Lapondria, and Lapondria brought them into chains and led them to the big fortress. And Lapondria spoke big words of wisdom, and see, they became her disciples. But Lapondria mocked them because they were half-hearted, and she lured them into a trap. And so she was the slyness of the Lords. And big fear came over the mass. And they asked : who is she ? How does she dare to do something like that ? And so Lapondria left from the earth, and left her shadow behind, and she brought big confusion. And she wrapped herself with darkness, and covered herself with dust. And she made a journey to the depths of the earth, and found in there big treasures. And she tore the gold and the silver, and opened big gates. Who can follow her ? And she wrapped herself in wrath and big cruelty, for even her most faithful followers had sinned against her. Woe you, oh earth, for lapondria has prepared a big venom against you. Weep therefore, oh people, so that you will find small grace in her hand, light as a feather.

4. And Lapondria grew up among the apes of the earth, and see, they followed her on foot. And she covered herself with the snakes of the depths and sacrificed on the heights. So she became then the darkness of the Lords.

Talgamen

1. So you have then read in the canon that there is no eternal damnation, and you have read this in the second canon, the clean one. So all death will end in destruction. But I say to you : Do you know the secrets of Radth ? There are for sure exceptions on the rule. Have you then not heard that the Lords have made the enemy for destruction ? Yes, the Lord will destroy his might, and his sin, and will lower his proud consciousness, and make it sink away in drunkenness and sleep. But after these days the Lord will give him as in a mystery a new consciousness, and this consciousness will grow till all eternities. And these things are hard to understand, and many folks will twist these things for their own destruction. Do you know the mysteries of the Cup of Christ ? See, these are holy, and like the second canon had spoken already : the second hell will be of more terror than the first. For the first hell was tied to a canon which was unclean and unworthy and therefore invalid. And many have been frightened by these scriptures. The second hell is of bigger horror than the first, for although the old consciousness will sink away for full, there will come a new consciousness. What then, is God then a sadist ? Absolutely not. The Lord is a God of strategy and guile, and brings first sleep and drunkenness. So He is then a God of grace. But his justice punishes sin.
2. What then, will these things frighten us again ? Absolutely not, for you who stays in Him have been declared blissful by the blood of Christ. All hell is just for a while in the light of eternity and doesn't weigh up to the glory about to be revealed to us. Who are then the enemies of God ? They have been made by him, and see, they are eternal. So a child of the Lords does not have to be afraid to burn for eternity. The Cup of Christ does not even mean the fallen angels about which was spoken, for they have first served the Lord for a long time, and they were absolutely no enemies. But the Cup means those who have been made as enemies, and they will burn for eternity in growing consciousness, yes, even in growing pain, for the Lord has made them for that as an example.
3. Aren't these things then cruel and misleading ? Absolutely not. What do you know of the council of the Lords ? There is for a child of the Lord and even for a fallen angel no eternal damnation, for the soul destroys itself by sin. But there are exceptions : namely those who have been made as the personifications of sin. They will burn for eternity, and their old human will be destroyed, so that a new human will stand up, namely the humiliated human. And this humiliated human will be for eternity a sign and a warning, to fill the saints with fear. So many folks have then taken the words of the second canon as a free ticket to sin, because they have a lust to be destroyed for full and so they think they will get rid of the eternal and everlasting hell. They have abused the Word to their own trap. Have you not seen the paradox in the difference between the Old and the New Testament ? So you have to be on your guard. There is a point of fear which you cannot escape, and which is needed to raise up a bigger fear of the Lords than the first. This is namely that those who have been made by the Lord as an enemy deceive themselves and they are hypocrites.

4. These are then the words of the Cup : let the fear of the Lords be the beginning of all wisdom. Those who have sinned to the Father will be forgiven, and also those who have sinned to the Son, and those who have sinned against the Holy Spirit, and who have slandered Him. Even those who have sinned against the Blood of Christ will find forgiveness, but those who have slandered the Cup of Christ by sinning against it have no forgiveness in all eternities. Not now, and not in the coming centuries, for the sinning against the Cup of Christ is a deadly sin against which there is no medicine, and of which there is no turn back possible. But comfort yourselves, loved ones, for only the enemies of God make themselves guilty of this, and they will be an eternal bugaboo. Be then awake, for God won't let Himself being mocked. And so it is then : Fearful it is to fall in the hands of the living God. And then you will search for remorse and contrition, and you will not find it. And fear will consume you when you will realize you have touched the holy of holy of God.
5. Comfort yourselves, loved ones : There is no sin against the Holy Spirit, but the sin against the Holy Cup is even worse. Search therefore the Holy Cup in fear and shivering. Know then that the Eternal Gospel is a more joyful message, but also a more serious and more of terror. The days are evil, and if God would not punish sin in this way, then the sin would never be overcome. Yes, the Lord establishes eternal conquest over the enemy, and turns them into an eternal bugaboo. They will not escape from their wages. There where the first hell was graceful : the second not anymore. But those who are with the Lord will not fear in anything.
6. Only by their eternal suffering they will be cut down, the enemies of God. And only by their growing pain and consciousness they will lose that which they have stolen. And God will turn them into an eternal disgust.
7. And when they ask you : Isn't your God cruel ? Then you will answer : God is a paradox.

The Heralds of the Canon

The Herald of the Canon

1. These are then the glorious words about the youth of Christ, being the child Jesus. So He has done many miracles and signs, which have been written down in this scripture, words which have been lost in the history. God has brought these words back to the holy by His servant.
2. And I saw a fire-storm and I did not have the power to speak. And the fire-storm came on me, and I heard a voice saying : write, for there are many things I will show you.
3. And I took my pencil and wrote. And I knew that I would burn when I wouldn't write with detail and accurately what the fire-storm commanded me. And I heard screaming.
4. And the father said : Come in. I saw a gate of fire opening.
5. And when I had come in I saw the child Jesus sitting on a pillow. And an angel brought me at the feet of the child Jesus, and the child started speaking, and told wondrous beautiful stories.
6. And I realized that the child had come to bring judgement on the adult world. And I begged the child to come into my heart. And I saw many visions. And I saw how the three year old child told wonderful stories, and how he did big miracles and signs. The child could make his arms and legs grow to do anything.
7. And I saw how the child could run, faster than a horse, and also that the child was stronger than a lion, but when he became older, these powers decreased.
8. And I saw the child walking on water, and the words the child spoke were sweet. And I saw how the child could let doves appear out of nothing, and also little monkeys. And the Spirit of the Lords rested on him.
9. And I saw how the child was taken up in the night by a fire-storm, to see many visions. And the child was early wise and full of the knowledge of the Lords.
10. And I saw how the child laid down his childhood to go the path of the cross, and his powers were decreasing.

11. When the child was four years old he told much about demons. Also the child told about angels, and many wrote it down, but these scriptures have been lost in the history and nowhere to be found.
12. And I saw the fire-storm coming to me, to open its mouth, and I was gliding inside, and I was as a man tied up. And I had to write much. And I saw how the child in the spirit wore a purple crown with twenty-four tops. And a soft pink light kept appearing in the crown. And I saw how the child was rich of spiritual gifts.
13. Also I saw how the child could bring up fruits and other food from nothing, and many were astonished about it. And the child warned them how their seed would build an orange church, where lions would live in, and how their attention would be to muscle-power, and not to the power of the spirit. And the child wept.
14. And the child spoke that the tiger would come to this orange church, to let many prisoners escape, and many did not know what He meant, for he spoke in parables. 'Who has wisdom calculates the number of this church, and its number is fifty-five. And they will raise up a false book.' And the child spoke about a far future.
15. And the child could disappear into nothing, and appear from the nothing. And many were astonished about it and told about these things with each other, and they wondered who He was.
16. 'I have come to establish a church after the heart,' the child spoke. 'The orange church is of Ryan, the orange guard, he who has conspiracies with giants. His dog is a wolf, with the name Redeye, and his dogs are members of the blue church. And see then, these churches come forth from each other. And they aren't of me. They are of the mind. They do not know me as child, and with their weightinesses they oppress each other.'
17. And the child prophesied much about the things which would happen, and the child wept a lot. It was a sensitive child and at the same time stronger than ten thousand sharks. Some called him a lion's child, others called him a tiger's child. He often drew back in the wilderness and the desert, and was between the wild animals.
18. And the child didn't care much about what they said about him, but led his own life. On a day a blind man came to the child, and the child healed him. Also the child healed a man who had no limbs, and gave him new limbs. And some of them started to whisper : this child is the child of the devil. And the child punished them. Sometimes he consumed such mockers by a blue fire which he would let come down from heaven on them. Therefore there were several who wanted to kill the child.

19.The child had many friends, also many female friends, and made up many games. But when the child grew older, parents started to warn against him.

20.And I wanted to write further, but my hand started to shiver under the holiness of these things. And a voice spoke that these things had to stay sealed till the end of times.

21.And I saw the child playing on a flute, and the totempole stood there and a wigwam. And it was in a vision. And I saw red indians coming out of the wigwam, and they danced around the child who played the flute.

22.And when the child had become five years old these powers slowly began to flow away, and he grew up as a normal child.

23.And in a vision I saw how the child had become older and walked along a silent path, and suddenly wild children overwhelmed him. And the child named Jesus was tied up to a tree by the wild children, after which he was beaten with rods. And I saw how He was often bullied and hunted, and often he was tied up to be beaten.

24.And I saw how the boy named Jesus longed back for his old powers, but He knew that this was the will of the Father. He had to prepare for the cross. And the suffering in his childhood years was deep. And the longing back for His lost childhood years wounded him very deeply.

25.And on a day an angel came to Him, appearing on a lonely path, around the evening hour. And the angel spoke loving words to Him, and the boy started to shake.

26.Since that day He had two female friends, after a long and lonely period. These female friends supported him through thick and thin. Often He made long walks with them through the desert and the wilderness, and they had deep conversations, in which they were astonished about His wisdom.

27.And the young Jesus got more and more female friends, and stirred up much of rage and jealousy in the hearts of many boys. But after the angel appeared to Him for a second time he also got a lot of male friends, and quickly a big group of disciples around the young Jesus. He had a supernatural love, made their hearts melt, and spoke about another path.

28. And He spoke with them about being the least as the true path of love. And He healed many of their inner diseases.
29. And often they went into a big group with him to the wilderness and the desert, where he often taught them on a hill. And the wild animals were submitted to him.
30. And He spoke over the things to come : When you will hear a loud screaming, and the clouds are black and red, go to the hills and beg for mercy, for then the Day of the Lords has come. And when you hear a wild cat roaring, watch then outside of your houses, and pray in your heart that you will escape the heavy days to come. For narrow is the gate which leads to life, and only children will enter these gates. Religious ones will try to get the keys in their hands, but they will burn. They will be thrown in the rivers and no one will count with them. I have destined you for love, and those who work in love have fulfilled the law. They will not have God as their enemy. Do not oppress each other, but love each other, and also your enemies, for they might be your hidden friends.
31. Be graceful to each other, as an example, and be in this the weakest. The Lord opposes the strong. Think about the rabbit which has made holes in his weakness, to escape from the burning Day of the Lords. So the rabbits are the friends of the child Jesus, who was, is and will come. This child stands here before you.
32. And a love fell on the mass, and they were astonished.

1. These are the words written down about the life of the child Jesus. When Jesus was twelve years old, and on the edge of the lake, all on his own, suddenly from the bushes a boy ran towards him. Jesus came into a fight with the boy, and they fell into the water, where the boy tried to drown Jesus. But an angel hit the boy.
2. And the boy had a demon, and Jesus spoke : 'Ryan, chief of demons, leave this child.' And the boy shrieked, and was healed of his insanity.
3. Also when Jesus was eighteen years old it happened that two boys tried to drown him, but Jesus healed them both of their insanity.
4. When Jesus had become twenty years old he lived for several months between the lions, and the lions were submitted to him.
5. And after these days an angel appeared to Christ and commanded him to pick up a staff from the ground. Then after that the angel commanded Christ to throw the staff on the ground. When Christ did this the staff turned into a snake, and this snake was very venomous. 'Go now to the house of pharisees,' the angel said, 'and bring them the word.' But the pharisees didn't believe in him, and said that He could do these things by the devil.

6. And then the angel commanded him to go to the house of the romans. But they didn't believe in him either. 'Now then,' said the angel, 'the heads of this nation are hard, and they are not surprised by anything. At a cross they will nail you, and you will long back for your old days.' And then the angel left him.
7. And when He was twenty-four He led a mass of youth between the lions and taught them about the washing of the feet, and to serve each other instead of leading, and he spoke for a few days ceaselessly. And there was a woman who tried to seduce him, and when he rejected her she cursed him, and the lions devoured her. And also other women tried to seduce him, often in groups at the same time, but they were all devoured by the lions. And he began to preach much about the devil, and some said He had lost his mind.
8. And He taught them about the drunkenness of the Spirit, and about the foolishness of God, and many sat at His feet in astonishment, and were grasped by drunkenness. And many said : 'Who is this man ?' And He led them deeper into the wilderness, picked up a rod, and threw it on the ground, where it turned into a venomous snake, and since then many believed in Him.
9. And some women started to roll on the ground, and they were so in drunkenness that they could not stand neither sit. They had become weak, and several felt sick. And some began to be thirsty, and angels appeared to give them to drink, and see, they all became drunk.
10. And the heaven opened itself and a raven and a magpie ascended on them, and they heard a voice saying : 'This is My Son, the glorified one, see, He will be taken away from you, but He will return as a thief in the night.'
11. And many women and men began to weep, for they didn't want Him to be taken away, but Christ comforted them. 'I will live in your heart, and gift you My Spirit, so that I will always be with you as in a mystery. But who loves Me, follow me.'
12. And He led them to a hole in the wilderness, a deep hole, and He spoke about that which He had to suffer. And He took a red robe and wrapped it around himself, and braided a thorn crown from branches. Then he stretched his arms out, to show them what they would do with him. And several men shouted : 'That never. We declare war to them.' But he rebuked them, saying that the Son of Man would have to suffer much. And several wanted to be crucified together with Him. And He gave them a cup which got filled with red juice. 'Drink,' He spoke, 'and from now on hide here, for the earth will come under the judgement, but here you have a shelter. You will live from the few you will find here, and you will be as a crucified one. But I will have to return and submit to My fate.

13. 'Let us go with you,' several shouted. 'We are prepared to suffer with You.'

14. 'Suffer here,' spoke the Christ, 'and live with the poverty nature gives you.'

15. But many couldn't bear this message, and went back with Him, and picked up their lives again.

16. And when the Christ died at the cross many years later, the ones who had stayed in the wilderness shrieked like wild cats. They had drunk of the red juice, and lived since then with the angels, having might over the wild animals.

1. When the child Jesus was still a baby his spirit and soul could reach the heaven over the stairway of tigers and the stairways of lions, and in heaven He had conversations with the angels.

2. Along these stairways the angels descended and ascended, always submitting the soul and the spirit of the baby to God.

3. And so the little baby spoke with the animals, and with the hiddenesses of God. And this baby visited the souls in their prisons, and gave them hope and deliverance. And this little baby was the key of the judgement.

4. And the baby possessed supernatural wisdom to judge giants. A destroyer of demons He was.

5. And these things had been written down but they got lost throughout the centuries.

6. And I saw a fire-storm ascending along the stairways of lions and tigers to the highest heaven, to bring the child there. And the little baby got words in His mouth, to descend with them into the depth. And again I saw the fire-storm going over the stairways of lions and the stairways of tigers.

7. And I heard a screaming and I saw big violence, and mysteries were unveiled before me. And I saw the big riddle of the little baby called Jesus.

8. And the child possessed supernatural knowledge, and had gifts to heal the deepest fallen ones. And no one could stand up against the small baby, who had received might.
9. And I saw many on earth imitating the small baby, and they got big might on earth, but their place was not in the heaven.
10. And I saw nations come into existence who had made an image equal to the little baby, but they twisted his works. And I saw the little baby weeping, and the big beasts of the earth were pierced in their ears, and see, they were led to slaughter.
11. And I saw the little baby descending in big wrath, and when the little baby opened His mouth there was blood everywhere. And I heard beggings everywhere, but the Lords didn't listen to them.
12. And I saw the little baby having an eye and heart for those who lived in houses under the earth, and a love filled my heart.
13. And I saw the little baby carrying the keys of hell and a new church. And I saw how the spirit and the soul of the small baby got wings, and rose along high trees, to find access to the Father. And the Father hid the Mother, and always when the little baby laughed the Mother appeared. And this spoke about the days in which the wind would blow, the heavenly wind of healing over the earth.
14. And I saw the little baby raising an army through his laughing, and see, the soldiers of it were drunk. They had the heart of the small baby. And the mind was not taught anymore. And I heard laughing in the heaven, and I saw the Father laughing, and also the Mother.
15. These are the words about the small baby Christ Jesus. Let these words be written down from generation to generation. I saw horses, a carriage, with on it the small baby, and by His laughing He healed the earth. And an army of fools He raised up, and they had the authority to renew the earth. Hear then these words, and listen closely to them, for they are faithful and true. He who comes, comes soon.
16. And I saw the crown of the small baby, with purple and yellow and pink, and orange light. And I saw frogs dancing around his throne. The hour of the small baby has come. Prepare yourselves, all of you. Accept Him who speaks, for a terrible and consuming fire He is to those who do not fear Him.
17. And I saw Him descending from His throne, descending into the pit of the romans to deliver the prisoners, and to build His throne for eternity. And a light of lights rose up, shouting in heaven, as a herald of the cross, as a fatherland for many. And I saw the light building houses, and a wilderness opened itself, and crocodiles rose up, receiving the wings of an eternal light, of an eternal altar.

18. And those who were betrayers, liars, and thieves appeared before the altar, and a fire took them away. And the little baby opened books, to see whose names had been written down, and those whose names He didn't see were thrown into an eternal-burning fire.

19. And from mud He created ministers, and from dirt He created captains, and He gave them worldships, full of burning lights, and the love was over them, as the webs of the big Metensia. And He spoke to Eminius, and prayed, and finished with a golden and pearly voice to open the door of heavens, through which many entered. Yes, the masses of the heavens are big, and you will be astonished about the mass who has not bowed before the idol which is mammon.

20. And the child, the little baby, grasped the mammon and his sister Jezebel, and also her sisters Nemak and Jael, and the little baby threw them in the eternal-burning fire, where they will have no rest, day nor night. And they will turn into an eternal fright. Wake then, brothers and sisters, so that you will not fall into their fate. And I saw Jezebel turning into a skeleton, ready to grasp her sword, but a wind of heaven struck her down, and as burning ash she began to float around, at the seas of death, and the lakes of evil. And she was nothing more than a ghost.

21. And I saw her chained under heavy chains, and also Juno she brought down. And big giants fell at her feet, a queen of death she was, and she was called descension to hell. And the little baby grasped Ryan and his partner Merve, and threw them off a sapphire stairway. And also Redeye, the wolfdog, fell with all his servants in this hole. And the little baby took a bow, and pierced the dog with an arrow. Yes, a hunter is He, a big hunter, a big fieldlord of wars. With tight fists He succeeds in His strike.

22. And I saw how books were struck and closed, and I heard a big weeping. And many got chained by the little baby. And I saw how books began to burn and fell from heaven, and a voice locked the heavens and spoke that they could never return. And a shrieking started to fill the earth-ground, and many sank in deep pits. The day of the judgement had come. The little baby sat on a high horse, and made them drunk by his arrows.

23. Yes, a big fieldlord He is, a master in field-battles. And I saw a golden bracelet, broken, and a big knife, and a voice saying : 'Here is great pleasure.' And I saw the game of the little baby coming to earth, as a big whirlpool, and it devoured many and took authority.
24. And I heard voices calling : 'The big game has come. Who can exist, who can escape from it.'
25. And a fire-storm took me up, bigger than there ever was, and brought me to the sun of heaven. And big lions descended to the earth to devour her, and they established themselves, in towers around the earth.
26. And I saw a liongame taking might on earth. And the little baby throned on the earth-surface. And they said : 'Christ has returned.'
27. And there was a pit named Zetel, and it was opened. And tigers came forward from it, and later sharks, to fill the earth-surface. Then a tower was opened named Vetel, which reached from the earth to the heaven, and whales and orcas came forth through the gates of this tower. And a fire began to clean the earth and to rebuild it. In these days the visions of heaven became flesh on earth.
28. And the nighttrouppers came to the earth, worshipping the little baby. And a smoke rose up, and there was a big sound. And someone with a liontrumpet started to trumpet, and the might of the little baby was recovered for full, and there were choirs in the heaven, and they visited the earth in storms.
29. And a rabbit came to the little baby, and the little baby gave grace to the rabbit, and anointed the rabbit as a savage, a warleader. And the rabbit got big might on earth, and brought a mighty fire to clean the saints. Wake then, for you do not know the day nor the hour.
30. And the rabbit brought quick strikes, and was submitted to the little baby.

The Second Herald of the Canon

1. This is the story of Noah how he became a pirate-king. When Noah was young he made a ship before the lord, because the Lord spoke to him : 'Go then, far away from your coast, and I will bring you to a new land.' And Noah built the ship, like the Lords gave him the command, and when the ship was finished he went with several men on the sea. And the Lords led the ship to full sea. After many long days the ship was raided by pirates. But the Lord's hand rested on Noah and his men, and gave the pirateship under their might. And many pirates fell at the feet of Noah, because they saw that God's grace was on him, and so

Noah became their king. And the ship was full of gems, fiery gems, and further all sorts of exotic treasures. And the pirates told Noah about a land far from there. And Noah desired to go to this land when he heard the stories, for the land was beautiful and full of riches. But further on sea there was a big storm and the ship perished. Noah and his men could go further on a huge raft, and after some time the sea became quiet again, and they saw in the distance the land about which they spoke. And Noah desired to put his footsole on this land. And the land was named Amazonia, in the district Paya, at the edge of the district Poh, and this was the old America. And there lived there evil tribes, those who carried knives.

2. And after some time Noah and his men went to the land, but the people there were warlusty. And after a long battle they grasped Noah, and tied him up at a pole. The other men were tied up into cages. And there was a princess named after these two districts, Paya Poh, and she was a red indian princess. And she heard of the men that God watched over Noah, and the princess became very frightened. And she let Noah to be set free, but in the night she was murdered by her own people. And Noah offered the raging tribes several treasures which remained on the raft, but the people didn't want to listen. And Noah and his men were sold as slaves to another people. And these people were hard and cruel, and Noah prayed to the Lords why They had sent him here. And the Lords spoke : 'Because this is a fertile land, a land of My pleasure. I will give it to your seed, but they will wage a big battle.'
3. But soon a pirate-fleet came to the land, and they set Noah and his men free, and Noah thanked the Lord. And Noah stayed in the land for seven years, and then sailed back with big treasures.

The Third Herald of the Canon

1. Adam and Eve went over the river of death on a day, for the Lord took them with Him. And the Lord built a raft for them, of crocodile-wood and lion-wood, and led them to the other side, where the mountains were green, full of lion-crosses and crocodile-crosses. And there was a city called Lamdech, and in that city angels and demons lived, and those who were celebrated. And the Lord spoke to the city and said : 'Woe you, for your end has come.' And the Lord let a fire descend on the city, and gave the city to Adam and Eve. And the Lord let the river of death rise as a wall to guard the city, and see, Adam and Eve lived there for five years. And after the five years the Lord led them out of the city, and brought them through the wall of death. And the Lord showed them another river of death, which laid further, and see, the river was full of excrements. And the Lord spoke : 'Like this those who sin against me will become.' And since that day fear came into the heart of Adam and Eve. And the Lord took care over them. And the Lord spoke to His servant-scribe : Write these words down, and seal these for the holy seed at the end of times, for their light will rise, and their light will multiply.

2. And the Lord brought Adam and Eve over a new river of death, this time in a boat made of lion-wood and crocodile-wood, and an eagle led them forth, and the boat was as a canoe. And Adam's hair had grown long, and the lord spoke to Adam. Let no razor-knife rest on your hair, for you are the chosen one. And from that day the hair of Adam stopped growing, and the Lord took care that it shrunk, and Adam got bald spots, and was called : 'Son of the Lords'. And Adam made a boat of hard black wood for his wife, and with two boats they finally came to a strange coats which was also called 'The Strange Coast'. And the Lord gave them support, and they could approach this fire, as it was a land of fire. And those who lived there had bows and arrows and were like cats. And the Lord gave them support, and let them approach a cathedral. And the beings saw Adam and made him as god, and the wrath of the Lord came to devour the cathedral. And Adam spoke to the beings : 'See, I am not a god, but I am a son of the Lords.' And they made a meal for Adam, and they ignored his woman for full. And in the night the Lord spoke to Adam and said : 'Adam, I will give this land to you and your seed will return to this land once.' And the Lord made a pit in the land where he buried the beings. And Adam saw how the Lord dealt with the beings, and asked : 'But my Lord, why are you so cruel ? Did you not make us for grace.' But the Lords gave discernment to Adam, and the sword. And so Adam became a warlord and a big hunter.
3. And the Lord gave Adam big discernment over angels and demons, and He gave Adam big might. And the Lords blessed him. And after a few years the Lord brought them on the river again, and brought them to a new land.

The Fourth Herald of the Canon

1. And the Lord led Adam to a city and made him king, and gave him big riches. And the Lord recreated Adam in dust and sand, and made of him a ruler. For as a ruler of animals he was established. And the Lord established him as the ruler over the sun, and spoke to adam that his seed would be numerous as the stars. And the Lord gave Adam tribes in Assur, and made him as a pillar in the temple. And the eyes of the forest were on Adam and made him strong, but on a day the lord broke Adam by hitting on his hip. And also the Lord hit him on his jaw and in his mouth. And from that day Adam was a broken man, sensitive for the Spirit of God. And Adam spoke in the language of the Lords, and gave names to fishes, waters and trees, and also to the stars of the heavens. And God blessed Adam and his kingdom richly. And the Lord gave a wife to Adam, named Eve, mother of the living, and she was as the flower of the swamp. And the Lord crowned her with all beauty of the underworlds and the heavens, and with precious stones. And the Lord saw that Eve was very beautiful, and called her the righteous one and gave her His sword. But the Lord knew that she would fall away from Him in later days, to follow and worship other gods.

2. And the Lord kept giving cities to Adam and made him big above the stars, but also about him the Lord knew that he would fall away from the living God, and become as the dead, ferocious and deserted. And the Lord gave a rod to Adam, and when Adam would drop the rod, it would turn into a ferocious dog, a snake, or a ferocious pig. And adam became a feared lord. And the Lord made him up to preach against Assur, and to gather a nation of prophets.
3. And in the beginning of days there were many wars among the prophets and Adam became a big warlord. The fall of Adam, as ferocious warlord, made it important that there would come a second Adam, Jesus Christ. And Adam went down by the voluptuous idols of Assur, and committed adultery with famous women. And by his fall he prepared the way for Him who would come.

The Fifth Herald of the Canon

1. And Adam could flyas the birds and swim as the fishes, for the Lord had established him as ruler over all things. And the lord knew that he would become the bridge between the world of the demons and the world of the angels. And I will tell you a secret, beloved ones, for like Adam died at a crocodile cross, by coming in the stomach of the crocodile by eating the venomous fruit, so died the Christ at the lion-cross. Yes, at both Adam has hung, he who died for the literal. Do you not know that the literal is a grade of the mammon, the material ? So he was then a fallen one by the letter, but by the spirit he was a glorified one through the crucifixion. So then all laws are fulfilled in Adam. So Adam was then without sin, but by the letter he was made to sin, to carry many sins away in his body, and to remove that which had been written on paper. So the first Adam has come to break the literal, by being condemned by the literal. Yes, beloved ones, with this God has tested your hearts. Now Adam has prevailed, both the second and the first, because of this secret I reveal to you. Many have followed the first adam in sin, and have continued his works, while pharisees condemned them by the letter, because they did not see the spirit of God. But you differently for full have the eye and the spirit of Christ. You have the eye of Adam, for the first Adam knew for what he had come, to expose the deceit of the pharisees. So he will then be glorified with Christ, and throne with him. Now you will say : How can deceit be in the scriptures. See then, the Lord is art. have you then followed Adam in sin, then also in glory. The Lord now is bigger than that, for He decides what is sin. By his fall Adam came to the underworld, and reached there the souls in prison. He reversed the order of angels and demons, and that which the rulers had set as truth, and so he became the condemned one on paper and tablets of stone, yes, even in the hearts of man. Now, will we then serve the first Adam above the second ? Did Christ not direct back to the old ? The first Christ was Adam, but you have not wanted him. You have made yourself idols by which you committed uncleanness and fornication. Beloved ones, I will tell you a secret : Can you be confronted with the deceit of your created Christ-images, and reduce your true source to the Christ of paradise, who represented cleanness and purity ? How far have you then gone astray. Haven't you then condemned Adam by your own presentations, while the Lord wanted to show you a deeper truth ? Yes, by the sin Adam had to be condemned, like Jesus Christ was also made as a sinner, and condemned. Also to Adam was spoken : You are the rejected, the deserted, and also he has screamed : My God, why have you deserted me. Do you not know that this was a metaphor, that he took the cup of venom for you and me. For without this cup, Christ would never have a cup. So then Adam is the foundation of the cross.

2. And what about Eve, you would ask. Also she was a divine child, created after righteousness, and she didn't keep away the cross from her husband. Yes, she was his cross. She was the image of the upright circumcision, but also her image got defiled, and God gave them over to their lusts. What will we say then : Had the scriptures been defiled ?
3. Also Eve was in her fall a bridge between the living and the dead. Beloved ones, these things are difficult to understand. What then, do we have to worship Adam and Eve as divine beings / They show how the worlds are divided. They were closer to God than any human could be, and still they were also with the enemy, the old devil, who they followed. Beloved ones, did Christ Jesus not come equal to the devil, to the sinful human, when he died at the wood of hell ? So we worship a paradox, for Christ who overcame the sin, and defined the sin by becoming equal to it. So Christ became equal to his betrayer Judas, and rose up after that. What then, do we worship the devil when we choose such an explanation ? Absolutely not, for Christ overcame the devil by taking in his position. So then Christ was the masterspy. If the devil would come to the temple of God to establish himself there as a god, wouldn't Jesus do that in the temple of satan ? Oh, beloved, your image of God is too small. God is a chameleon, and doesn't move like a lizard. So you can now read the word as a paradox. The religious and pharisees with their scribes are tied up to earthly language, and cannot follow the heavenly language, and come from snare into snare, facing their destruction. They have made the word literal, and they follow a literal god. Again we have then the question : Shall we worship Eve as the representation of the sly female part of God ? Always you will throw yourself down at her feet, for she is an unpiercable mystery. So then the veils of the paradise are seductive, full of enticements, of snares from which only the righteous can escape. So the riddle of Eve and the snake will fill the earth-ground, and then He will return. And the riddle is this : By the suffering and dying of both the first and the second Adam they became equal to the snake, which Moses raised for healing, which came forth from the staff, and adam will be called Safam as the glorified Christ, and his holy anointing oil will be the snake-bite to salvation, and Eve will go down and her seed will overcome. And many will come with their idols of Christ, but Christ will not know them and will not accept them as sons, as they served Him by the letter and not by the spirit.

4. And adam had eyes in the paradise by which he could see, and by which he could discern snakes of heaven. And his nose could discern the times of war and of peace, but he didn't love the peace. He served the sword and the cross. And he fell off from the many gods, and reached to the bear-cross under which a skeleton of a rabbit lay. And he blessed the rabbit and raised it up, and made it as a warrior on the hills. And the skeleton started to speak big words, and God sealed them. And the Lord spoke to the rabbit for seven days, and then the rabbit had to prophesy for many days. And the secret surrounding Adam and Eve became known. And I saw many cities rejoice because she had become free under this mystery. And they were delivered of their burdens. And so there were two bridges in the paradise, and yes, these were worshipped. And I saw Adam sitting on a big white horse, and I saw the mystery of the centuries resting on France, and then on germany, and then the Lord began to open his caves and ravines, and big wildernesses with their rivers. And there came a judgement on the earth like never before, and Adam led the nations with a staff of iron. And the iron became black before the Lord and the Lord spat on the earth. And there was a tribulation like never before, and many graves opened up. And I saw the martyrs of the Lords appearing before the Lords, calling for vengeance, because they had been tormented so long by the literal. And the Lord gave them a red robe, stained with blood.

The Sixth Herald of the Canon

1. So they who live under the letter will see Adam as an oppressor, but those who have been set free by the spirit will see him as the deliverer. So he was for four days in the pit, where he ate ratmeat and the meat of snakes. And after his journey in the pit he found an opening where he saw gold shining and gems of all sort, and this is the secret, folks : He was blinded by these riches, and confused, and as a king of darkness he returned. Now he had visited the treasures of assur, and the treasures of red indians, their women, and took many prisoners of war with him from the dead. Yes, waymaker he was called, maker of tunnels, peacemaker, big warhero. He made a path through the wilderness, and the path blinded him and took him to the darkness, to dark cities. And I saw Adam sitting on a big horse, and in the nights he was as a wanderer, and a researcher and a searcher, to find his way over dark paths. And i heard a voice saying : Beelzebul, master, they come to take the secret. And I saw two tall figures with a treasure, and by the call of Adam the treasure became free. And at the end of these nights Adam sat on a red horse. And this is the secret, beloved ones : Adam knew now the red indian nights, the nights of the cross, and their jewels and beauties, and he brought this to the nations to preach deliverance to those who lived tied up and in slavery.

2. There is not a poor plan when it comes to the deliverance of our souls. So it will be that calling for Christ will be seen as a denial, for we got lost in Adam, and in Adam we will be saved. Adam who was crucified by a woman. And so these two worlds were atoned with each other. So you will find the hidden cross in the paradise and your hidden saviour. So the second Adam had to come to give the attention to the first, to restore the image through his death. And this image is an image of peace.
3. Beloved, know that this is the foundation of the Eternal Gospel, without this there is no salvation of the centuries possible, because it is stored in this : Adam is God. Adam is the Father who came to the earth and left the Spirit and all His cleanness and further treasures stored in heaven. He regarded it as rubbish and excrements. So He separated himself from himself to save many, and was crucified by a woman. She is then the image of the circumcision. Beloved, without this hidden cross of the paradise there is no further salvation possible. This then is the core of the Eternal Gospel, and therefore you will honour the sixth herald of the canon. And the evil spirits in the heavenly districts know this and shiver, for holy is he who knows the name of Adam, and the mystery of it. Many prophets have tried to gaze in this mystery, but they were rejected. So there will also be folks standing up at the end of time to receive the anointing of this mystery, but they will be rejected, because they are lawless and haven't paid the price of the spirit. Follow then the feet of Adam, and lay yourselves down at His feet and listen to him, when His mystery has come to you, for several time he has been put under Christ and onder the angels and even all which lives, but after that He has risen in glory.

4. Adam is Lord, and the evil spirits know that. They bow for this name. To Adam it was given to rule over all things, over man and animal, over tree and bush, yes, over all vegetations and He was your guard and herder. So in Adam all things come together because He even gave up His credibility and was made to sin by a woman. Yes, His face was stained by her, and these things were kept hidden till the end of times. He is the one Christ directed back to, as the hidden Father. In this mystery He descended to the lower dimensions, and was deserted by Himself. Yes, as a scapegoat he was made, stained and tied up to the altar. In Adam there is then further deliverance, the Father of Christ, He who had become flesh till the lowest districts of death. By the letter he died, also to raise by the letter, this time the letter of the spirit. Beloved, do not grieve over such revelations, for they hold the keys to your inner deliverance. So Christ was just a shadow of deliverance.
5. Therefore I tell you : Those who go on with their idols of Christ will undergo a stern judgement. Did Christ not point back to the first Adam ? Christ is just a waymaker. The Word of Adam is before you, and the Apple of Adam, as being the crucifixion of the hyopcrites, and the crucifixion of all the fleshly spiritual, so that you will come to true resurrection. These words have been kept till the end of times. Beloved, do not read these words through the mind, but through your heart.
6. With adam many prisoners of war will stand up, all well sealed by a new light. Christ was sent out, together with the prophet Elia, to bring the heart of the Father back to the children. Eve had prepared her husband for battle in this, and she was as the slyness of the Lords. Mother of the living is she. Here then is your mother God, who goes beyond every cult. She has been saved up to the last of days. God is spirit, and became flesh in Adam, as in slyness, to save those who were of the flesh. Beloved, do not weep over these words, for they are destined to mark your hearts and to seal them, to be protected on the big day about to come, the day of Eminus. The hearts of the children will be led back to the paradise, where they will find their flute and harp, and cleanness will rule on the mountains, and no disgrace.
7. Adam will therefore speak, and will bring you to the feet of Eve. Yes, He has been crucified to the wood of lies, and took from the venom, where all his bones were pierced and broken. So then the spirit of Adam will speak again, as the language of brokenness. Raise your heads therefore, beloved, for your deliverance is close, and speak in the tongues and languages of brokenness, for at the same cross He has hung. Leave your false Christ idol-images, and return to the first Adam, who is the foundation of the eternal Gospel, and this is a bigger Gospel than the first. Be ecstatic when you have received this mystery in your souls, for it will lead you forth all the days of your life. It will heal your spirit by wild honey, and you will be able to see His Light through the veils. This, beloved, is a more gloryful light than the first.

8. So the powers of hell in the dispensation of the Eternal Gospel will bow for the name of Adam, who is glorified by the Eternal Gospel.

The Seventh Herald of the Canon

1. On a day the Lord spoke to Adam and led him through the garden till the mountain of the gods, the mountain of Eeden. And the Lord said : 'Come my friend, leave everything on this day, yes even the woman I gave to you.' And Adam wept, for he thought he would lose his wife and lover, and felt lack coming up in him. And the Lord took him to the mountain, and there was smoke and fog. And Adam began to make a long trip on the mountain, and this trip was very heavy. And on top of the mountain the Lords showed him the survey over all worlds, and the Lords gave him discernment over many things.
2. And the Lords said : 'See then everything which I have made, also the days of darkness, and the savage.' And Adam was struck by astonishment. And the Lords Themselves came from Their thrones, carried by cherubs, and the Lords struck a rock on top of the mountain, and two tablets of stone and fire came forth from the rock. And the lords spoke : 'Read, for these are the laws of the paradise.' And Adam stepped one step back, because he was afraid of the fire, but the Lords helped him, and brought a finger to the law.
3. But Adam said : 'Oh, my Lords, I am not worthy to read something so holy. Do it for me, so that the fire will not devour me.' And an angel descended, and started to speak, the things which were written in the fire. And the angel read loud and hard : 'These are the things of prophecies, the things which have to happen. Have then sense, and know that these things are holy. The spirit of prophecy now is the Word of Weight.'
4. And Adam fell backwards by hearing these words and came into a deep sleep. And the Lord woke him up after many hours. And the Lord spoke : 'Adam, read further now the words of this law, want these things are holy and important, like the angel has spoken. Yes, weighty is the law of prophesy, the law of Adam.'

5. And Adam bowed down in the dust and spoke : 'But Lord, I am not worthy to be called after the law.'
6. Then the Lords turned to Adam and spoke : 'Adam, speak these words to the nations, so that they will be fertile.' And see, Adam watched into the fire but could not read it. And again an angel descended to read it for Adam : 'The Law now is prophesy. Outside the prophesy there is no law. So then a man will follow his wife, in her devotion to the Lords, and he will honour her. He will sit together with her at the feet of the Lord to listen to His words. And so there is then the word of knowledge, which reflects the past, and the word of discernment the present. The word of wisdom however will reflect the future. Keep these three words in your heart, so that you will live.' And three angels stood up and began to trumpet, and Adam fell in the spirit and slept for many days ceaselessly, until the Lords woke him. And again the Lords spoke to him : 'Read, for these things are very important.' And this time Adam could read well, and read : 'So then these things of the Lords, are given to children. And He will give these children the word of help, and the word of judgement, and also the word of healing, and the word of interpretation. Hold then tight to these things, for then you have fulfilled the law. And so the Lord closed the fire, as someone closing a book. And Adam was not able to speak for a long time.

Metensia

Mother, don't die again

1. Holy eyes, stare in a million fragments. He has lost his life, to confront the mirror. He loses his sense, his father gave him a gun, to shoot the creatures of the other side. 2. That night he couldn't sleep, writing with the pencil of his mother. He had to go to her grave to watch the flowers there, to see her smile again. 3. He misses her, he stares at the sea. The sun has gone, he cannot sleep. He still writes with the pencil he gave to her, before she died, his only friend. 4. Mamma, I miss you, mamma, I shot the mirror which you never understood. 5. Mamma, please, don't die for a second time, you are the shadow when I write, close when I break through. 6. Mamma, I miss you, mamma, please, don't die again, you are my only friend, while father still paints you, mamma, I never understood why you had to go so soon, please, don't die again. 7. Mamma, please, breath again, you are close when I break through.

The strange kingdom

8. Strange perfumes, late on the day, to cool your head, as behind glass, strange smells, the mice sleep, only a few dogs run over street, between me and you. 9. No one remembers our days together, no one wants to see the lights. We have been torn apart, by strange perfumes. 10. This is the kingdom, late on the day, to cool your head as behind glass. This is the kingdom of lovers torn apart, strange eau's between you and me. 11. Dogs run low and high, diving through the gates between the answers, always big questions between you and me. 12. Your father wants too much attention for his own pain, not talking about ours, for no one remembers, no one wants to see the lights. He lets his love be, he shows his pride, and we are torn every night.

Womenfactory

13. Deep in the vanity of the life, wars have been faded, they get lights on them, gathering the severest forms of stench. Womenfactory, what a grief, what a grief. 14. They have lusts in golden tables, of a crazy word, something they have once heard. Somewhere, I do not know the place, where even shadows do not come. 15. Womenfactory, the captain is skewed-eyes, mourning about the grief, playing much at golden tables, where the nightghosts do not dare to come. 16. Womanfactory, bringing great death, what a grief. There are pirates in a hole of water, making problems in this factory, so don't believe them. 18. They are troublemakers, promisebreakers, sitting on horses at the edges of life. Yes, the death is deep. They are pirates on a boat, while the summer is fading, on it's way to womenfactory, taking some arms and legs for a new child.

Criptus

1. These are the words of the Holy Cobra. You will not bite and eat each other. You will love each other, and you will hang on to the Messiah of the Jews, coming from the cleared Old Testament and the cleared Thora. 2. For the Christ of the New Testament came too early and had to be cleared, like the New Testament itself had to be cleared. 3. Blissful are those who enter into the Second. Amen. 4. The Judaism is nothing on Himself, but gets activated when she is cleared. That's why the angels of the Judaism of the Old Testament wait for clear prayers. 5. And so is then the Messiah of the Judaism and the Second as a tree. 6. You have seen Criptus as He who would come for the Jews. Now then, make yourself up to go to the Holy Mountain of Sion, and watch Him who died in the water, whose arms and legs were cut off to become a fish. Yes, and first is He who was eaten by sharks as Michai. 7. Be therefore Jews of the Second. Amen, so that you will be blissful in Criptus, for in Hium are all prophecies fulfilled. 8. We mean then well that we are talking about the Cleared and about the Second, for an uncleared Jew is nothing. 9. And Criptus became a bird in His fall, and became a tree from that. Be then conscious about what you are putting your attention on, for those of the Old Covenant expect the Messiah of the Old Covenant, and they have rejected Christ. 10. Partly they have done well in that, for the Christ came too early. You are doing well to also know the other roots of the trees. 11. The Uncleared Judaism is then nothing, but knows much value and truth, only it is partly true. 12. Again, take care that you know the roots. Focus on Criptus, for He is to Good Hope and Good Faithfulness. 13. So is then the snake nothing without the Cleared Judaism of the Second. And see then : The Second is the Cleared. 14. And so then, you all who wait for Joel have watched the angels of Joel. And this is a big mystery. 15. Wash then the tree and know the fruits. You will not just unroot Judaism, but consecrate and wash her, for many mysteries are hidden in her. 16. And the Lord showed a prison as the empire of instincts of the animals. And the Lord spoke : See, I'm setting the cobra free, for they were the angels of the Old Covenant. 17. And the Lord sealed these words and consecrated these. For those who brought the New Testament uncleared and too early have tried to tie up the angels of the Old Testament, and they have released the demons of the Old Testament. 18. And the Lords showed a lake of orcas, and see, they were as whales of the spirit-districts. And the Lords spoke with loud voice, while a wind rose up : Now the Cleared Judaism has come, till hundredfold. And I will break her to multiply her, until the whole army of the Cleared Old Covenant stands. 19. Cast for me now the orcas who are as whales, and who are the released demons and evil spirits of the Old Testament and the Judaism into the lake of fire. 20. And a lamenting rose up to the heavengates, and a Big Angel sealed the lake of fire which the Lords had shown. 21. And Criptus rose up from the lake and showed himself to the Jews of the Cleared. And fire came from his eyes, and He showed a copper cross. 22. For see, He was drown, but now He has ascended to heaven, sitting at the right hand of God to pour out the Spirit of Joel and the Cleared Old Covenant. 23. And the Lord spoke : Clear me now the Old Covenant. And I saw singers coming, and they directed themselves to the Lords, and sang Him cleared songs of the Old Covenant, and the cobras ascended to heaven, and the air was black of smoke. 24. And the waters became as blood, and there was much lamenting. So the Day will be on which the Lord recovers the Old. 25. And there was much youth who didn't want to know anything of the old. And they were thrown into the lake of fire and brimstone. 26. And the Lord directed himself to Joel, and gave him the keys of Portugal, and there came a fire over the earth like never before. 27. And those who didn't have the Old in their heart were consumed by heat. 28. And the cobras of heaven came to the earth carrying the Sword of Criptus, and they brought words of the fifth Messiah, and very old books were opened, while the fishes of the old spat fire. 29. And there was a slaughter on earth like there had never been. And these were the days in which the Lords returned, They who spoke to Moses. 30. And also Moses was cleaned, and he was delivered from instincts. And many prophets of the Old came to the Lords of the Old Testament and they were delivered by the Lords. 31. And the Word of fear was restored, and this fear became tenfolded, hundredfolded and thousandfolded. 32. And the Lords directed themselves to the Davidic demons, and made a slaughter among them. And from the tree of the Lords spiders came, and fear came to the earth, like the earth had never known. And the Lords saw that it was good. 33. Yes, for the Lords would bring a new creation, as by fear. 34. And many prophets of the New Testament were hit, because they had left the Old. 35. And they were hit by an iron hand. Blissful are those who have the angels of Moses on their side, and the angels of Aaron. 36. Blissful are those who expect the Messiah and the angels of Ezekiel and Sefanja. They then will be delivered from their lusts and their instincts. 37. For the Lord loves Cleared of the Old, and he will bring new water in their mouths. 38. And so the Spirit of the Old will be poured out over you richly, you who have loved the Old Testament and cleared it. 39. Those then who have the New without the Old are in a snare. Those who are stuck in the Old : The Lord will come to you. 40. Cursed are those who put the New above the Old, for see, the New is in the Old. You have to learn to clear. 41. The Lord loves then those of the old, especially those who know the cobra. 42. Do not play with these words, for the Lord won't let himself be mocked. 43. Do not play with animals, for you are playing with fire. 44. The Lord then will set the animals free, and they will not be guilty for their instincts, for they lived in imprisonment. 45. The Lord then hates the human race, for they have oppressed the animals. 46. It is rightful, when the animal hits back by the Lord. The Lord is also animal. Also the Lord become human, especially through those of the Old. The Cobra has lived among you, and you didn't know. We have to grieve about you. 47. And the Second Judaism will come to the earth, and she will be stronger than the first. But she is nothing without the first. 48. And the second Judaism will be as the Holy Squirrel, and she will bring many back to the second. 49. And the squirrel will bring the dark lights back, and the light which concerned the eating of souls he will destroy. 50. The angels of the psalms are then the old lions and sharks, yes, wild cats they are, and the birds of prey of the beginning of times. 51. For Goid has sent angels to the world, but you have not recognized it. 52. Those then who have no arms and legs decide your acts and your walk. Do you not know that you are their arm and leg ? 53. So then the fishes are superior, for they have carried the cross of Criptus. Do you not know that God has said to the sharks : you are as angels ? Yes, God's sons they are. 54. And to the birds He spoke : You will be like the spiders. For you will be what you eat. 55. And so the Lord has established the hierarchies from the beginning, and see, they were hidden.

Clearing of the book Sefanja

1. All you cobras of the old, be free. 2. Your Lord has come to set you free. Your Messiah of the Old has come, Criptus, with all keys of Materos and death, and all things immortal, to set you free. 3. You have seen them with white eyes. Now then, make yourself up to go to the mountains. 4. You have felt ill for a long time, but it was health for you, and you have made the right movements to let the snakes of heaven come through. 5. The cobra army of the Lords of the old and the Judaism will rise now. 6. Listen to these words, for it is a command of the Lords. 7. Search then your way in the web which the Lords have given to you, and become as a spider of heaven. 8. Clear me then the book of Sefanja, and bring it to the foot of the Holy Temple. Yes, the the altar before the mountain you will bring the book, and it will be cleared, the Lords say. 9. And so the lord will establish priests of sefanja to guard the holy words, those who are cleared. 10. Print these words in the heads of your children.

About criticism

1. Trust then in awe on the Lord of the Old Covenant and the Cleared, for the Lord loves the Old. 2. Trust then in devotion and seriousness on the God of the Old Testament in the Cleared. 3. You will not hang on to the Uncleared, but you will not say something about it in arrogance, for the Lords hate mockers. 4. Now there are several who had criticism on the old, and this criticism is good, for the Old had to be cleared. But when you have criticism, have criticism in the Lord, for all other criticism is cursed. 5. Know then the old birds of the Lords and His holy snakes, established by Moses. 6. They are then the guards of the cleared tabernacle of the Judaism. 7. The Lord has then used the New, but hasn't approved it. It would be better for you, to wait for the second Old, the cleared. 8. Let these words then be called serious in your eyes, for those who laugh will perish. But those who weep will live forever. 9. Those who weep have the tear of the rabbit inside, and they know the sensitivities of God. 10. But when you weep, weep in the Lords.

About money

1. You who are in the Lord : The rabbit is king. 2. Make me then a new language, for the languages you have now are cursed, coming forth from the fall of Babylon. 3. make me then a new castle, built by poverty, for the houses in which you live are maybe rich from outside, but inside they are poor. 4. You will not make of money a king, but you will be kings over money, and you will ban it, for it has sinned heavily against the Lords.

The house of the Lords

1. And when you build the house of the Lords you will come to the orange Saturn, and you will have her as construction-master. 2. And you will listen with much attention to the prescriptions of the lords, for unholy builders are not pleasing the Lord. 3. And the angels of Ezra and Nehemia will come to you to support you, and guard the new-built. 4. You will be on your guard for spies, and you will have to receive the gifts of the Second Judaism for that, and His Messiah. 5. Stretch yourself then out to the Messiah of the Cleared Judaism, given by a clear Tenach. 6. You will then serve Criptus, and He will be as your Lord truly, for He is of the second Old. And they have despised the New, but this scorn was of the Lord. 7. And they had to despise the New in the mystery of the Lords, for they carried the clock of the Lords. 8. They then had feeling which others didn't have. So they were banned by the church, but this was to their bliss, so that the riches of the Wisdom of the Lords would be made known. 9. The lord then oversees all things, and He is sly. You will find then the True and Clear New in the Second Old and the Judaism.

About Narzia

1. You will then have the courage on the day that Narzia rises, the heat of the lords. 2. And He will carry Criptus, as a district of the lords. 3. Have courage, for help has come to you. 4. And Narzia will carry the gold of the lords and lead them to the orange. 5. Yes, to the Eternal Cross He will lead you, where glory comes forth like ravens.

The Panthercross

1. You panthers of the old, be free, so that you will eat from the clean. 2. In the night you will find the ship, with the orange candlestick. Be free. 3. You will then eat with pirates, and you will have entry to the suns of heaven. 4. In nightsongs you will have rest, and the Lords will deliver you from your instincts. 5. Long in prison you were but you were as prisoners of the Lords. 6. The Lords will not keep you guilty for your instincts, for the Lords knows your imprisonment. Amen. 7. Come then to rest, you panthers of the old. And these verses will be called then, the openings of the panthers. 8. The Lords will put new songs in the mouth, and you will become free, going from freedom to freedom, for the Lords have destined you for that. 9. You have then carried hot crosses and you have come to the panthercross. 11. Now you have come to many openings, and you have broken through glass. 12. You have found the enlightenment at the Red Cape and at the Karazure. 13. You have then by your heart helped in the cleaning and clearing of the Red Indian, till sevenfold. 14. You have then overcome the nippletree of Jom, and have entered into a bigger glory to watch the nippletree of the Lords. 15. You all know that the Holy Nipples of the Lords call for the Tears of the Lords and of the second Judaism and carry them. 16. Yes, Holy Alarms they are, and you have come to bigger heats. You have seen the Ice of the Lords burning of glory, and you went from bliss to bliss, moving yourself through the Red Cape. 17. Yes, all clocks of the cross you have carried, His nightlatins, and you have entered the market of the cross. 18. This has brought you big heat, yes, even till the panthercross. 19. There is then no Judaism and Second without the panthercross. 20. And so the nipples of the Lord are like clocks. And they are then all connected to the panthercross, without them no one will find the life till all eternities. 21. For the panther is the animal who has entry to the endless and carries the keys of all eternities, and his number is eight. 22. Blissful are all who have defeated the clocks, and having the clocks under their feet as a footstool. 23. They have then hung on to the nightlatins and have become blissful by that. 24. They then guard the sluices and the gates of the tears of heaven. Blissful are those who have approached to the eighth day. 25. Blissful are those who have come to the red tear and to the tear of mice, after having drunk from the tear of rabbits. 26. You know then that there is victory in the Eternal Cross and the cross of all eternities, for after you have turned the other cheek, you had to promise faithfulness to the cross for the future, yes, even till in your most holy eternities. 27. And thios cross flees from everyone, for it doesn't give itself just to everyone. 28. Have you then mocked those who were in fear ? You have done this to the Eternal Cross and the Cross of all Eternities. 29. The double cross hasn't taken you, and you have despised the old cross. How do you think then to come to the Eternal Cross ? 30. It flees from you, and hides Itself for you. Yes, a hundred guards you cannot escape from. 31. It stands on a distance, insurmountable and unreachable and casts heat on everyone who tries to come closer. Yes, it is the jewelry of the ratking, and you cannot possess it without defeating the ratking. 32. And see, he lives in the Judaism and the Second. 33. Wrestle then with the Lord, so that you can enter. The Lord will break you, and you will overcome. 34. The Lord then gives victory by the cross, and blissful are those who have come to the Eternal Cross. 35. Only the panther will find it. Therefore panthers of the old, you have done well to the Lord, be free therefore. 36. You have then come to the Lokogamen of the Old Corss and the Judaism, and see, a spirit has been set free by that, and has found solid ground. 37. So is then the raven the spirit of the old cross and the Judaism, till the second, and till all eternities. 38. Yes, from the panthercross the raven flew to defeat the ratking on Pniel. Jacob has overcome by losing. 39. Disappear then, all you do-ers of evil. You know now who is the Messiah of the Old Judaism, and it is a panther, and His Name is Criptus. 40. Go away then, all you do-ers of evil, for Criptus has come, for He has come in tall ropes and has stretched the bridge between the Old and the Second, and cleared it by this. 40. And so the Sword of Criptus has become a New Road, which rose from the depths of the Old, as a Renewed Old Way, to a Clear Word. 42. And this Sword is as a Sword of Tears, to a Second Way, coming forth from the nipples of the Lord, as the milk of the spirit. 43. Criptus is then the Lord of the Old Testament and the Judaism.

The Path of Criptus

1. The Nightlatins are therefore as jewelry of the Old Cross, but blissful are those who have come to the Lokogamen, for they rule over the nightlatins and have submitted the nipples. 2. Yes, as a nippletree they are, full of the tears of the Lords. Drink then from the milk of the cross in abundance. 3. And I will tell you a secret about the heat : The fire is the fruit of the eternal cross, and her guard, to devour those who come closer. 4. Those who hang at the eternal cross are immortal. The ice then is the fruit of the biggest cross, and see, they then form the Old Cross and the double. 5. For the New Testament which was uncleared, came to undo the cross of eternity and greatness, and brought the cross to poverty and to the slight double, barely sown. 6. And those who have followed the bare cross, will be led to the abundant cross, in eternity and greatness to come to bliss through that. 7. Blissful are those who have come to the Old Cross, and who have set the panthers free. 8. For they will be led to the eternal paths, and their ropes will be long. 9. And this was the reason why holy men let their hair grow long. 10. You will then only come to multiplication by the duplication. 11. It is then the ratking who had established the short way between the Old Testament and the New Testament, but by defeating him you will extend the way and bring clearing. 12. This then is the way of Criptus and the Sword. Let then the Most Holy not be eaten again. 13. So you will breed the ice to survive the heat. For big heat will come to the earth and the church to test her, yes, the people of God will be sifted seventy times seven. 14. And so Criptus will be the Lord of all karbulines and christs, and the Lord of the bridges. The Christ is then nothing without the Criptus, for the Old Messiah is the foundation. 15. How dare you cut the new Testament free from the Old ? Without the Old you are nothing, and delivered to the heat without any cooling. 16. You do better by laying a bridge and extend it in fear and shiver, to come to the Second old, where you will find your shelter. 18. yes, Criptus came to break the Jewish canon and the Old Canon, and to lay bridges to the Second. And these bridges are long and eternal. 19. those then who hang at the biggest cross cannot be broken and they are as the tears of the Lord.

The Mystical of the Judaism

1. Come then to Him through who the fire and the ice streams richly, who carries the wings of Narzia and Zetdonia. And this is the true double-cross, for nothing is as big as ice, and nothing is as eternal as fire. 2. Now then, these two cannot live without each other. And the rabbit-beggar has come to them, and see, he is king. 3. Buy then and beg of the cross, and beg for her tears, for to the panther-market you have come. 4. Here is where the boys of lynx deal in nipples, yes, they buy and sell old clocks, and so the true economy of the Lords. Yes, they have come to the Ravalon Madok, and they are like rabbits and panthers. 5. And so is then also the proverb : At the end there will be no christs anymore, only some boys, the boys from lynx. And with this the Lord meant His economy. 6. You will then have to become equal to that what you follow, and you have to learn to trade in the lord. So you will defeat Mammon and Moloch. Let then no one among you twist these words. 7. You will have to learn that the mystical makes the personalities unpersonal and the unpersonal is made personal. Like this you will fulfil the law. 8. To the soft of the Lords you have come, to the Johan, and to Torhan, the tall of the Lords. And you will follow the way to the Ravalon Madok, which is the third nipple of the lords. And you will slide away from the hands of your oppressors as a fish. 9. And so the Herman will be like the Messiah of Moses and of the pentateuch, of Genesis and Exodus and of the second. And see, He is the old Messiah of the Thora. 10. And they are all one in Criptus. So Maser is then the Davidic Messiah. 11. And so peter will then be like the volcano of the forest, and the firespitting path. And He is the Messiah of Jonah. 12. And so Maser has become a bird through the cross of fishes, and through the panthercross he is a raven. 13. His Spirit is then raven, and see, all Spirits of the Old are then one in Bilmageln, and all crosses of the Old are then one in Benmaten. So the Old knows then many kapruns and karbulines, and also many angels. 14. And so is then the Spirit of Bilmageln the Spirit of Criptus and they are one, and Criptus hung at the old cross named Benmaten, and the God of the Old Testament, the Judaism and the Second Judaism is then Rithelm, the Old Holy Soul. 15. So then all will become blissful in Rithelm, for He is who clears everything through the old. 16. And therefore you will also be brought back to the Old, for Rithelm still speaks there. 17. And so then Rithelm, Bilmageln and Criptus together with Benmaten are the Holy Four-unity of the cleared Judaism. This then is the Second. 19. There is then in the whole Judaism no bigger name given in the mystical than Rithelm, but you then are on your way to the roots. 20. The Holy Root has seen everything. Why would you still flee away from Him. He then has been made by your own hands. 21. You have seen it got stature before your own eyes, and there was nothing you could do. 22. And also without Rithelm Criptus is nothing. At the end there will be no criptusses anymore, and no christs, for Criptus has to return to His Father Rithelm. And then only some boys of lynx will be left. And this is a big secret, for which the angels in the heaven still tremble and shiver. 23. The boys from lynx are then one of the biggest mysteries of the Old Judaism and it's mystical. 24. And so the Judaism has been given place by It's Holy Spirit Bilmageln, and by the Old Jewish Cross Benmaten, and these names are mystical. 25. Yes, for the Jewish mystics have analyzed the Old Testament and given it a place by clearing it. They then were led by Bilmageln, the Spirit of the Old Judaism. 26. There is then no Judaism but the Cleared. And see then, the Second is mystical.

1. And the herman has been frozen then, and still he has a frozen strike, He who drowned in the ice, and He is a part of Criptus, the Messiah of the Tenach. 2. And you have then come to the cross of the tenach, which is the cross of the animals, Benmaten, in which all crosses are one. 3. And the human has been come forth from Him as an oppresser of animals, but by Criptus the animal rules over the human. 4. For not for always the human will rule, for the sword of Criptus hangs above his head, at a very thin rope. 5. And you have gone through the snakecross and the insect-cross to the panther-cross, so that the ropes of your soul would be spun and after that woven. 6. In the wilderness you have received the nipple-lung, and first she brings then tiredness, but later she brings forth honey. 7. For see, the sting brings back to the old, and this till sevenfolded clearing. The secrets there are sweet. 8. Know then that Benmaten is your fertility. And first He brings then fear and paranoia, even till trembling, but later she gives you the rippled fruit. 9. Now no one is then animal but Criptus, and in Him all are animal.

1. And I took the two tablets of stone which the Lords gave me, and I saw on it the eternities and the resurrections of the first and the second Judaism, and I brought them to the ark of the second Judaism. 2. And a door opened from behind the ark, and from the ark there came a blinding light. And the second David took me by the hand, and brought me in through the door, and this was then the second Davidic world. 3. And I had to battle against many Davidic demons, and had to clear the words. And so there were also many Levitic demons, and they came forth from the temple. 4. And the Lord called : Clear me now the temple of the second Judaism and the second temple of David. 5. And I had to sit on my haunches, and then on my knees, and the Lords put a sword on my head. 6. Then from all sides levitic and davidic angels came of the second, and the Lord gave new prescriptions about the burnt offerings, and these were of heaven. 7. And I took the triangle, and I was in big fear. 9. But the second Materos spoke, saying : Be not afraid, for you are worthy to stand here. Long has been waited for you, for you carry the keys. 10. And I watched my body, and saw how my body parts were as keys. 11. But still I was in fear, for the appearance of the second Materos was as the appearance of a shark. 12. And a slippery fish as a jelly-fish came around my head, and there was much light and high sound, and I got second davidic and levitic spiritconnections in the Lords. And the Lords saw that it was good. 13. And I carried the second cross of criptus, and laid this in the ark before me. 14. And heavy lightening-flashes came from the ark as the strike of snakes and birds of prey, and holy priests of the second david and the second leviteship laid two tablets of stone in the ark on which was written the eternities and the resurrectuons of the second davidship and the second leviteship, and with the first was not counted anymore. 15. And the cross of the second criptus had two cross bars, and was very long. 16. And the second david laid his hand on me, and a warmth came on my shoulder. And then he blessed me in words not to be understood. And the lord saw it was good. 17. And the hell of the first davidship was plundered, and also her death-realms and heavens, and her scriptures were burnt and holy tables were overthrown. 18. And then the second david showed me the hell of the Second Davidship, and the heat and power of it was big. 19. He also showed me the death-realm and the heavens of the Second Davidship, and I began to write down many things. 20. And when I came to the hell of the leviteship I was shocked, for this hell was full of animals. 21. And the second david looked at me, and my breath was as fire and boiling water. And I began to shriek very high and shrill, and those who had made this hell had the blood flowing out of their ears. 23. Then the Lords put their hands on this hell and spoke words not to be understood, which only the angels could understand. 24. And I saw the souls of bulls coming free, and the souls of rams. And the lord spoke that this soulbutchery would be struck. 25. And more words not to be understood were spoken, and the softness of the Lords came free, and was as a dragon. And I got to see the ark of the Second Leviteship, and her hell, and this hell was soft but hot. 26. And I saw the second Materos standing on this hell, and he had the death-realms of the Second Leviteship in his hands. 27. And the spirits which were cast in this hell began to melt, and the Lords formed them like They wanted to have them. And the Lords gave them tasks and functions fitting to them. 28. And I was very shocked about the things I saw, and again I had to write much.

1. And there came an enormous war between the second levites and the levitic demons, and the Lords struck them by fire. 2. And the Second Levitic ark came full with animals, and there was much light, and after a while the levitic demons had to give it up. 3. And the Lords created a new sense of the new levites from the testicle of a dead man, and the new conscience from the toe of a dead man. The feeling was re-created from his nipple/ 4. And so the blood of the second levites was healed. And so the Lords created new altars for the second levitic temple from the other testicle of the man. 5. And so the breath of the second levites was healed, and they had enough air. 6. The Lords then created new lungs in their inside. And the Lords saw that it was good. 7. And the paradises and heavens of the Second Leviteship were many, and they were written down in books, and the second levites were as hunters, and guards of the animals. 8. The lords didn't allow any hunt on animals anymore, only on those who hurted animals. 9. And the second levitic hunters become big before the eyes of the lords, and they brought many animals to rest and to a shelter. 10. And so the second levitic cities were built where the animals were safe, and the Lords didn't allow that animals were sacrificed anymore. 11. And so the Lord restored the blood-circulation of the second levites, for the animals were the carriers of the organs. 12. And the Lords recreated the clocks of the heavens from the other nipple of the dead man. And the sharks of the heavens began to cross the earth, and so also the scorpions of heaven. 13. And they made sure very well that those who lived on the earth didn't build their own clocks. 14. And from the other toes of the dead man God created the new borderlines of the earth. And the Lords spoke, and saw that it was good. 15. And the predators of the heavens became flesh on earth and made sure that humanity didn't build their own borderlines anymore. 16. And the Lords gave humanity a new breath and a new heart.

The Stone of the Karazure, Subscriptures of the Eternal Gospel II

King of the Canon – Key of the Canon

1. The literal has lost it, now the sky had put the attention on one of the mightiest riddles of all time. In the literal one dies. In the riddle one comes to life. Have you not read in the psalms that David was a son of a king, son of the most high. He was who saved his nation. A cross broken three times is a wheel, and will lead many to bliss. This is the secret of David, to be read in the psalms. He has led his nation through the sea, this in symbolic sense, in spiritual, for the literal David was a terrorist. In the heavens however he is a great slayer, and a messiah, his hands and feet pierced at the wheel. For at the wheel he hung, as the magpie, and the stories of Christ are just a reflection of it. David is and was the Christ. There was never a literal Christ, for the true Christ is in spirit, and is a riddle. Those who materialize the Christ will suffer damage.

2. Watch then, for in the heavens a great slayer has risen, whose name is David. At a centuries old wheel he hung, the lion wheel, from where went on the path, the Lemul. These words are faithful and true. The sky is clear by these words, and the law is in no way against those who carry this word in their heart. Nation, your salvation is coming. We follow a symbolic Christ, in the spirit, not in the literal, and so we do not follow a literal David. David then has been created in the heavens to give honour to those who deserve honour. David is then the only metaphor of Christ who can bear it for full. All words direct to him, and are just his shadows. But do you scrape in the dirty earth for text, then you will find pearls and gems. So there is than a road to beyond the mind. No man will be put to shame on these words. David came then to you in many shapes, but the earthly texts are foul. Take therefore only a spiritual meaning of them. So David is then big and lifted high, and a king in the spiritual, but the earthly David was a terrorist. Can we then say that the true David, not in the earthly texts, is the magpie ? Absolutely, for he who went to the depths of the earth, and saw lies about him appear on paper has been resurrected in the same spirit. Now he rides on the horse of the fourth seal, to resurrect the dead to life. Death and life is in his right hand, heaven and hell in his left hand, he who is the alpha and omega. In him the secret of the messiah has been fulfilled.

3. Now the heavens are clear, and soon the earth will be purified. Weep now, oh earth and sea, for the secret of light has revealed itself, and is as the sword of the Lords and his sickle. David will soon come to harvest. The key he carries. If then the earthly texts of David are stained, where then begin his spiritual texts.
4. And he, David, grew up in the wood, as a kingly son. This was not in the earthly realms, but in the realms of the soul. He carried the key, and he raised an army of children, but he couldn't cope with the sword of the enemy. He then conquered by his suffering. Yes, a war lord he was, an anointed lord of the hunt. He took care of the children who were lost in the forest, and those who were cast out of their tribes. Yes, as a father he was for them, but in the war he was fastened to the wheel and sent into the underworld. This is why his children weep. This carrier of the key was misunderstood, and the earthly texts were stained and interpreted wrong, but he was a war lord, and therefore he was Christ, because there was no bigger war lord than him. Over the lion path Lemul he went, where he was mocked. Yes, a wheel he carried, a balk of wood on his back. One pulled his beard out and spat on him, and finally he was hanged, like the magpie, yes, the masked he was. A war child he was, a chief of big, and still the child army mourns about him. His blood washes them free of false guilt and shame. His blood washes them free of lies, and makes them grow. Praised is David to eternity. Yes, he was the Christ, like the psalms had pointed out. His hands and feet were pierced, and one was throwing the dice about him. Yes, there is a great almighty force in his name, David Christ. He who is Christ Jesus. He was then born without mother, but Mary was his mother in the spirit. There is then no Christ but David. So the name of David Jesus Christ is praised. He was in placed in the realms of the soul, on the earth of the soul, but He had no father. Mary was the mother in the spirit. Yes, a foundling he was, brought by ravens. He grew up between bears and lions. Praised is the name of Jesus David Christ, who is and who was and who is to come.
5. And about this the children weep : He was led to Herod in the underworld, and was stripped of his clothes. Yes, disarmed he was, as an insect. At the wheel he span, continuously touching the water, but his blood opened the gates of the kingdom of death. The hell he has plundered. He is who gave council to the children and led them out. So is then He, David, the second Jesus Christ, coming from Adam, the Father, who was the first Christ, and Eve is the mother, the Holy Spirit. So David became a soul, but will come in the flesh in the last of days, and know that He is already among you, waiting for the revelation of this mystery. And then : Didn't the wheel bring forth Ot, the changing of viewpoint, and the Sidot, the multiple viewpoint. So then the wheel of David is powerful to heal all the mind. This is then his sword by which he chopped down the most terrible demons. Yes, pulled down ther were, and for his name they shiver. In David there it total victory, in Him all things are fulfilled, He who is Christ Jesus in all Spirit, has become flesh at the end of times. Yes, in Eve He is resurrected, in Adam He has his shelter. Yes, the wheel of David spins then to lead you back to His garden, which is wilderness, and which gives multiple survey on the arsenal. So is then that you will come to Eve by Jesus David Christ, and by Eve to Jesus David Christ. This will lead you to the bondage in Eve, the bondage in the Holy Spirit which she is. No one can follow Jesus David Christ but by His wheel.

Queen of the canon

Second Key of the Canon

1. Have you not read the scriptures, the big secret and the sword of the Eternal Gospel, has been delivered to you by angels ? Blissful is the one who finds this secret. For the unveiled secret will for sure wrap the one who finds her in velvet. Now then, beloved, so you will know then that the second key of the canon is more than the first key, and that no one can fathom her but the heart which is enlightened, with a lifted soul. Oh, God, only you can approach her and solve her.

2. So you read in the first key that Mary is the mother of David Christ, and that Eve was his mother, as Adam was his father. See, this is a secret and sign in the heavens, and see, Mary and Eve are one, yes, they are one and the same. Study then the heralds, and know them, so that you will know and understand, that Eve had to be made sin to save many. Yes, she had to be made a liar, to overcome the lie. The mistress of spies she was, and led them to the truth, she who carried the truth, from where also the saying comes : The lie is the riddle of the truth. To that truth you have come close, by many shadows and veils of the lie. Therefore put then now the lie off, to hang on to the truth, and loving her above everything.

3. The chalice with the foam of roses, guarded by two snakes coiling around her shank, yes, for Eve brought the death, and Mary brought the life, and see they are one and the same, for Eve is the mother of the living and of the life, and has brought forth her son, the Saviour. The flaming sword of the smith, the eye of the secret, the beautiful sounds of the silence and of the silver, coming free in the fizzing, yes, the rose has spoken.

Lofgedicht tot de Heilige Maagden

1. Heilige Maagd Rozenweer, zoete geur, groot geheim. U bracht mij naar het huis van zwijm, waar Uw rozenkoeken bloeien, waar de grote lelies staan. U bracht mij naar het Paradijs, in Uw Wil wil ik gaan. Oh Heilige Maagd Rozenweer, zoete geur, zachte Liefde, ogenkleur, als uw flessen van bosgeur zich openen, dan dansen herten in het rond. Bij Uw geheim wil ik zijn.
2. Heilige Maagd Isabella, zoete droom, zoete morgen, waar ik naar verlang. U doet mijn gordijnen open, en de geluiden der vogels lokken mij steeds weer, tot zachte dromen. Heilige Maagd Isabella, oh zacht geluk, U bracht mij Uw harp en harlekijn. Uw nachtspelers zij zijn er weer, om mij mee te nemen tot Uw Eer. Zij brengen mij tot pril geluk, in Lentedagen zie ik U, Uw harpen staan waar wonden waren.
3. Diepe wonden bracht U mij, als door een vriend geslagen. U liet Uw tranen zien, U tuchtigde mij reeds vroeg. U bracht mij rozenkoeken in de winter, Uw paarden vonden mij in de nacht, oh Heilige Maagden der Liefde. Uw harpen staan waar wonden waren, nu speel ik voor uw troon. U maakte de schelle tonen in mijn ziel, tot bellen van U.
4. Toen zware stemmen mij verschrikten, U was daar met zachte bazuin. Toen harde stemmen mijn schepen lieten zinken, uw vissen des hemels waren daar, om liederen te verdrijven, U bracht mij tot het Huis van Stilte. Heilige Maagd Desiré, Uw gouden koorden brachten mij daar. Heilige Maagd Desiré, groot geheim, nachtlating, hoop in gouden Liefde, om met U te zijn, is als baden in de gouden nachtfontein.
5. Uw Glorie zoekt mij steeds weer op, Uw woorden drijven mij naar diepe stilte. U fluistert zacht, totdat ik baad in rozennacht. Met dromen in Uw Linkerhand, U komt tot mij, U neemt mijn hand. Uw Glorie leidt mij, en draagt mij over woeste zeeën. Met U te zijn, is beter dan met een mens. Uw Huis van Stilte ademt in mij, en diepe rozenpilaren brengen een boodschapper tot mij. Waarom ben ik nog steeds zo jong. Ik verlang ernaar Uw Wijsheid te dragen.
6. U tuchtigt mij met Kennis, U doorstak mijn paarden met pijlen der Liefde, om hen om mijn hals te hangen, het reeenjong in Uw geheim. U bracht mij paarden der Liefde, op een stenen altaar doorboort. U hing ze door mijn haren en verzegelde mijn voorhoofd. U sprak tot mij in nachtlatijn, en liet mij dalen in de putten der nachten, door uw zoete rozenkoeken.

Gebeden en Belijdenissen tot de Heilige Maagden

1. Heilige Maagd Isabella, waak over onze zielen. Geef ons de eeuwige koorden, om tot u te komen. Opent uwe heil'ge weg, een heilig pad vol vreemdelingen. Heilige Maagd Isabella, waak over onze zielen, schenk Uw woord tot een doorgang over bruggen, laat uw dalen vol van liefde zijn. Heilige Maagd Isabella, schenk ons uw geest, als een glorie van boven.
2. Heilige Maagd Desiré, laat ons niet in zonde glijden. Genees onze afvalligheid, en schenk ons uw liefde. Draag bij, aan onze eeuwige groei, in de veiligheid en rust van uw beminnelijke schuilplaats. Onder de putten heeft u het neergezet, wij komen tot u, in bewondering. Wij sluiten onze ogen, en denken aan U. Aan U, die ons leven schonk, aan u die ons opzocht in onze kerkers en putten, en leidde ons tot de diepere weg. Van anderen kwam u. Laat ons dan dichterbij komen.
3. Heilige Maagd Rozenweer, neem ons op in Uw lieflijke hand, en zet ons in uw koninkrijk neer, in Uw paradijs, waar wij in vrede kunnen leven. Uw paarse en roze vlammen is als verkoelend stoom van uw liefdeswoorden. Genees ons, en leer ons. Dank u dat u tot ons bent gekomen. Ja, diep in uw putten zonken wij, totdat u ons nam tot de dieptes van uw koninkrijk.
4. Op de bodem van onze putten vonden wij Uw weg. Heb genade, en leidt ons, neem ons mee. Heilige Bosmaagd Odusu, wij hebben uit uw rivieren van heil gedronken, en gij hebt ons de gouden vlam gegeven. Tot het groene goud leidde gij ons, en gij maakte onze werken schoon en zuiver. Uw lieflijke geuren stromen uit de bosflessen, en gij hebt uw broodbrokken in kruiken tot het voeden der wilde beesten.
5. Heilige Veldmaagd Saratus, gij bent mij grote liefde, overstroom mij met uw gloed, een bloeiende, groeiende ochtendvloed. Ik gloei wanneer gij mij aanraakt. Ik sta in brand, wanneer gij aan mij denkt. Ik kom altijd tot uw poorten. Ik ben nog nooit zo diep geweest als nu, in de dieptes van uw bloemenvelden, kom nu, en doe mijn diepste verlangens ontwaken.
6. Bloemen verwelken, zij groeien op mijn hoed, om voor altijd het geluk te aanschouwen, de glorie van de gloed, de moedergloed, zij heeft mij op rivieren genomen, tot dit paradijselijke eiland, zij is de veldmaagd Saratus, de Heilige. Overstroom nu ook mij, vergeet mij niet, wanneer je schrijft. Laat mij binnen in Uw koninkrijk, ik ben gemaakt aan U gelijk.
7. Zij hebben mij stijf gespoten, met het schuim des velds. Saratus, waarom hebt gij mij geslagen ? Zwaar tuchtigt zij haar helden. In haar manden draagt zij hen, tot de wolven van de oude dagen. Zij hebben mij zo koud gemaakt, maar er is een vlam die in mij waakt, de vlam van de heilige veldenmaagd, oh Saratus, bescherm mij tegen de kou. Mijn hart is zo koud, ik ben als een blok hout, tot Saratus mij kust, dan ontwaak ik tot hartelust. Dan voel ik alles in mij branden. Oh Saratus, waarom hebt gij mij geslagen ?
8. Tot haar dieptes ben ik gevlucht, want de vijand zat mij achterna, nu heb ik haar gekust, en vele zonden bedekt. Haar genade zocht ik, haar huis bouwde ik, nu heeft zij mij gezien. Ik ben een koningszoon, en in haar heb ik mijn troon. Oh, Saratus, waarom hebt gij mij verlaten. Steeds zoek ik naar U, steeds droom ik over U. Vaak kan ik er niet van slapen, het maakt mij zo moe. Waarom hebt gij mij geslagen ? Heel mijn leven geef ik U, waar moet ik anders naar toe. Zij zitten mij op de hielen. Tot U kan ik vluchten.

9. In veiligheid kom ik, maar ik kan uw huis niet vinden, onder mos en bloemen zal het zijn. Nog steeds slaat gij mij, hoelang zal het nog duren. Neem mij aan, ik ben een arme bedelaar, te zwak om tot U te komen, maar te sterk om door de vijand te worden weggenomen. Neem mij aan, ik ben een arme bedelaar, ik kan uw huis niet vinden, alles stroomt van mij weg. Toe, leidt mij, breng mij terug op het pad, en bedek mijn zonden.

10. Ik hoor Uw stem in de verte, bij de avondkoelte verlang ik naar de rust, maar gij laat Uzelf niet snel kennen, ik wacht op U. Kon ik maar Uw wonden begrijpen, oh tedere snaar, gevoelige blik, als op een kaart getekend, als aan een woning vastgeketend. Kon ik Uw wonden maar begrijpen, ik wil ze graag voelen, als een woning onder de bloemen.

11. Zij hebben mij stijfgespoten, zij hebben mij bedrogen, en daarom vlucht ik tot U. Ik ben nog niet tot Uw woning gekomen, maar stil en stap voor stap zal mijn droom uitkomen.

Ode aan de Dwaze Maagden

1. Heilige maagden van het woud, heilige maagden van de vulkanen, hebt gij mij ooit gehoord, toen ik tot u bad. Hebt gij mij ooit gezien hoe ik naar u verlangde. Mijn hart bonsde reeds toen ik jong was in mijn hoofd, toen ik gedichten tot u zond. Gedichten der liefde, van volwassen taal, maar gij hebt mij tot de wildernis gezonden.

2. Heilige maagden der bergen, heilige maagden van de zon, heb medelijden wanneer ik tot U kom. Wanneer ik in Uw nabijheid een verkeerd woord uitspreek, straf mij niet te zwaar. Ik ben jong en onhandig van hart. Werp mij niet van te hoge bergen. Ik kan niet vliegen, mijn vleugelen zijn nog klein. Gooi mij niet in te diepe zeeën, want ik kan niet zwemmen in zulke woestenijen.

3. Denkt niet dat ik sterk genoeg ben de haaien te bevechten. Ik ben nog jong, en zwak. Straf mij niet te zeer. Denk niet dat ik wijs genoeg ben filosofen te misleiden. Ik ben nog een kind, teer en hulpeloos in de woeste hand der aarde. Heilige maagden der zeeën, ik zie naar u uit op mijn torens. Laat me weten wanneer gij wilt spreken. Ik ben Uw spreekbuis, als het aarden vat.

4. Vorm mij als klei, maak mij sterk in Uw hand. Maar gij hebt mij enkel zwakheid gegeven, in een droomwereld verkeer ik nu. Ik ben te zwak om op te staan, gij heilige maagden der nachturen. Gij hebt mijn hart verkleind, mijn voeten gebonden. Een woesteling ben ik nu, op mijn reis heb ik nooit rust. U wil mij tot uw dieptes lonken. Leer mij Uw wonden zien. Zij genezen niet snel. Ik ben genaderd tot de vulkaan.

5. Gij dan spreekt als de draak, maar gij hebt het hart van een lam. Oh, heilige maagden der daguren, gij die de duistere lampen draagt. Gij dwaze maagden, gij zijt wijs van binnen, want gij hebt de duisternis liefgehad boven het licht. En daarom zijn uw lichten gezuiverd. Gij dan die de duisternis hebt verkozen, ook hebt gij de daguren gehad.

6. Zo zijn dan de dwaze maagden heilig, want zij hebben het verborgene liefgehad. Zij hebben dan door hun dwaasheid ook het wijze gekregen. Dwaze maagden, vorm mij in uw hand, maak mij in zwakheid sterk, en in dwaasheid wijs.

De Dwaze Maagden der Uren

1. Dwaze maagden, gouden fontein, van reine waat'ren, van zuiv're waat'ren komende vanuit de duisternis, door u zo bemind, als een kostelijke vrind. Dwaze maagden, teder woord, in zwakheid bent gij gekomen, in sterkte bent gij opgekomen. Als een schone zwakte, als een wijze zwakte, bracht gij sterkte tot het woord. Geen huis te hoog, geen brug te lang, gij gaat altijd voort.
2. Dwaze maagden, luchtfontein, bij de nachtlatingen te zijn, was U meer waard dan een gouden kroning, was U meer waard dan het dagrefrein. Avonturen hebt gij niet gemedend, door de nacht bent gij gegaan.
3. Dwaze maagden, tot de duisternis bent gij gegaan, het verborgene niet gemedend, gij hebt een plaats vooraan. Kom, voer mij weg tot het verleden, kom, laten we tot de oermaagden gaan. In de diepste duisternissen leven zij. Zij hebben een plaats vooraan.
4. Dwaze maagden, gouden geluk, voer ons door de donk're dagen, leer ons U beter te kennen, en laat ons tot de uurmaagden gaan.
5. Dwaze maagden der uren, wij komen tot U, wij houden van Uw vuur, oh kandelaar, de jaren zijn verstreken, maar Gij bent nog steeds daar. Wij drinken van Uw stem, U bent de nachtwake waarop ik bouw. Ik slaap in rust en in geborgenheid, wanneer gij Uw vleug'len over mij spreidt.

Alika

Smeekbede tot Alika

1. Ik kan je niet zien, je bent te ver weg, als een koningin op haar troon. Ik kan je niet horen, je stem is zo ver weg. Ik hoor alleen wat gefluister, maar wie is het, ik weet het niet. Is het Uw boodschapper, of is het slechts de wind. Dwaze Maagd, Alika, Heilige Maagd, Wijze Maagd van binnen, gij komt overal te laat.
2. Waarom laat gij ons gillen, de doden zijn al gestorven, wij lijden pijn, geen boodschapper tot ons gezonden. Dwaze Maagd Alika, waarom hebt gij ons weggeduwd, in duisternis zoeken wij U. Dwaze Maagd, neem ons mee, straf ons niet te luid. Neem ons mee tot U, neem ons mee tot U.
3. Wij lopen tegen muren op, wij kunnen niets beginnen. Onze stem ketst telkens terug, ten dode opgeschreven. En gij komt altijd te laat, gij bezoekt ons in de hel.
4. Dwaze Maagd, Alika, wij bonzen op Uw poorten, maar U wil alleen de morgen laten overstromen.

5. Kom snel, en straf ons niet te luid. Wij waren jong en onhandig, maar wij groeiden op als rozen. Neem ons aan. U hoeft niet te glimlachen, een zorgzame blik is ons genoeg.
6. Ik heb duizend rozen in mijn mond, zij spreken allen van liefde, teed're woorden tot U, Dwaze Maagd, Alika. Met dwaze maagden zult gij rozen beminnen, met bloemen spreken, het licht breekt eeuwig door, in fluisteringen. Straf ons niet te luid.
7. Zij kennen hen niet, die geesten bezweren. Zij kennen hen niet, de zachtpaarse wevers der watervallen en rivieren.
8. Tot de taal der trompetten, tot de bloemencorsetten, tot het genadige licht vlucht ik, tot de liefde daalt in teed're grond, waar de adem van het vuurnood mij overstroomt. Zij liet mij glijden in haar handen, liet mij dalen door haar licht, tot een overvloedige morgen die streelde mijn gezicht.
9. Ik daal nu dieper in bloemengrond, door bloemenbuizen, tot de altaren van haar verstand. Wat moet ik doen ? Leidt mij, doorgrondt mij en ken mij, oh Dwaze Maagd, Alika. In jou zijn de poorten open, maar hoe kom ik daar, hoe ken ik jouw hart. Door smart, mijn liefste, kom ik tot overig land.
10. Is daar dan geen andere weg, moeten wij voor eeuwig lijden, is daar dan geen andere poort, Alika, toe, vertel me. Is tijd te overbruggen ? Toe, redt ons uit de klok, en breng ons tot de kast, waar wij kunnen schuilen. Zachte roze stromen, paarse gebieden, druipend licht, is dit gedicht, waar liefde de tijd smelt, waar liefde de kast schept, waar wij weg kunnen drijven, tot een nieuw begin.
11. Ik moet zinken, tot de rozenwaat'ren van Alika, ik moet zinken, tot de kroning van de tijd, waar een koning de hartenpoorten uitspreidt. Hier moet ik strijden, mijn geloof in liefde belijden, de schoonheid der liefde belijden, tot de rozenkast als het altaar van de nacht.
12. Ik ken je nog steeds niet, Alika, na deze nacht. Ik zie je nog steeds niet, jou, één en al pracht. Ik hoor je niet, waar ben je gebleven. Hier op mijn kussen, liggen tranen van het verleden, en mijn deken spreidt zich als de hellevogel, waar ben jij ? Ben ik dan alweer bedrogen ? Alika, ik blijf in je geloven, waar kan ik anders heen.
13. Heel zacht in de morgen, verlegen sta jij aan de poorten, met je hand uitgestoken, om een broodkruimel op te vangen. In lompen gekleed ben jij, als de pracht van het getij. Schoonheid der liefde ik belijd je, schoonheid van teed're woorden verspreidt je, maar ik blijf diep verscholen achter mijn muren.

De sleutels van Sektia

1. Al wat ik nodig heb ben jij, de aarde wil mij verscheuren, bescherm mij, en leidt mij tot jouw putten, jouw schelpen waarmee jij je pracht omgeeft. Ik wil jouw littekens zien, waar zachte lichten stralen, het donkere heeft mij verlaten.
2. Laat mij al je ribbels zien, oh schelp, laat me je voelen waar je pijn hebt, waar je mij bent vergeten. Laat mij je liefdes-ader zien.

3. Blijf de schoonheid belijden, blijf de aarde zien, om de kooien des tijds te verbreken, en de dwaze maagden te heiligen. Brandt poorten in de heggen, en vlucht.
4. Alike, breng de morgenstond in natte manden tot de rozenblaad'ren. Alles wat je nodig hebt is daar.
5. Gij dan was bevroren, tot een kaars gemaakt, en een kandelaar, en zij brachten vele kaarsen tot U, opdat gij niet alleen waart, maar bereiken konden zij u niet. Gij was als een vurige wolkenhemel.
6. En Sektia, gij waart als de wilde vlam, maar ook als het vuur, als de zachte liefdesschaduw werd gij bemind, gij heilige maagd in alle eeuwichheden. Zij dan heeft mij de sleutels der leeuwen gegeven, zij die bevroren werden, en daarna hun zielen verbrand.
7. Sektia zij geloofd voor eeuwig, de Heilige en Dwaze Maagd, der leeuwen, tot Uw poorten kom ik, en door uw vuren kom ik, tot de wilde vlam.
8. Zij dan gaf ook de sleutels der haaien, wiens zielen bevroren, geesten verbrand en levensadem was verdronken. De orka dan is de bevrorene en de ter plette gevallen, en de tijger is de verpletterde. De walvis is de verpletterde en de ter plette gevallen.
9. De panter is de doorboorde. De olifant is de weggeslingerde en de vergiftigde. De slang is de vergiftigde en de gestikte. De stier is de verpletterde en de doorboorde. De bok is de vergiftigde, de gestikte en de ter pletter gevallen.
10. Het luipaard is de gestikte en de verpletterde. En zij, Sektia, gaf mij de sleutels tot hen. En de poezen waren de verbranden, en de honden waren de verdronkenen. En Sektia gaf mij in liefde hun sleutelen. En grote rust kwam tot mij.
11. En de beer is de uiteen getrokken, en zij heeft mij de sleutelen gegeven. Zo heersen dan de katten over de trechters der zieleverbrandingen, daar zij zelf werden verbrand. Zij dan dragen de heilige stoom met zich mee. In maagdelijkheid hebben zij hun verweer gevonden.
12. Zo heersen dan de krokodillen over de trechters der zielebevrozing, daar zij zelf bevroren werden.
13. En de honden zij heersen over de trechters der zieleverdrinking, daar zij zelf waren verdronken. Zo zijn de wolven hen die zijn verhongerd. En zij hebben in maagdelijkheid rust gevonden. Ja, tot de dwaze maagden gingen zij, om door dwaasheid wijs te worden. En zij heersen over de trechters der zieleverhongering.
14. En zij van de zieleverhongering bewaken de ambachten. En de hyena is de bevrorene, de verbrande, de verdronkene, en de vergiftigde. En zij vonden rust in maagdelijkheid. De eekhoorn is de vergiftigde. Ook de eekhoorn vond rust in maagdelijkheid.
15. De puma's zijn de gestikten, en zij heersen over de trechters der zieleverstikkingen. Zo kent gij dan het geheim der tien tenen, want zij zijn tien wonden. En het konijn, die de weggeslingerde is, is de eerste. De eekhoorn, die de vergiftigde is, is de tweede.
16. De puma, die de gestikte is, is de derde. De slang, die de vergiftigde en de gestikte is, is de vierde. De marmot, die de gestikte en de weggeslingerde is, is de vijfde. De boom, die de bevrorene, de verbrande en de gestikte is, is de zesde. De bloem, die de bevroren, verbrande, verdronkene, en de uiteen getrokken, is de zevende. De plant, die de gestikte en de ter pletter gevallene is, is de achtste. De struik, die de gestikte, de verdronkene, en de weggeslingerde is, is de negende.

17. De wind, die de verdronkene, de verbrande en de verpletterde is, is de tiende.

18. Zo kent gij ook het geheim der twee tepels, want zij zijn twee wonden. En de eerste is de hond, die de verdronkene is, en de tweede is de kat, die de verbrande is.

19. Zo kent gij ook het geheim der twee ogen. Zij zijn twee wonden. De eerste is de verhongerde, de weggeslingerde, en de verbrande, die de bizon is. De tweede is de bevrorene, de verdronkene, de verpletterde, en de ter pletter gevallene, die de neushoorn is.

De gifbeker

1. Zo kent gij het geheim der twee lippen, want zij zijn twee wonden. De eerste is de verhongerde, de weggeslingerde, die de buffel is. De tweede is de ter pletter gevallene, die de giraffe is. Zo is dan ook het hart een wond, en deze is de doorboorde, de verbrande, de verdronkene, de uit elkaar getrokken, die de vogelspin is.

2. Ook de benen zijn wonden. De eerste is de weggeslingerde, de ter pletter gevallene, en de verpletterde, en de tweede is de ter pletter gevallene, de verpletterde, de doorboorde, en de vergiftigde.

3. Ook zij allen zijn door maagdelijkheid tot rust gekomen. En deze maagden dan hebben een verbrande ziel, een bevroren geest en een verdronken levensadem. Hun hart is vergiftigd. Hun schaduwen waren ter pletter gevallen en verpletterd, en hun ka weggeslingerd.

4. En zo zijn de heilige vliegen door hun val tot bloemen geworden, gedecoreerd door het trauma. Zo is dan de ka de weggeslingerde, en de ba de verhongerde, de vergiftigde, de verdronkene en de weggeslingerde. De khu dan is de verpletterde, de verbrande en de verdronkene.

5. De sahu is de vergiftigde. En de vergiftigde is door verhongering, en wegslingering tot maagdelijkheid gekomen. Zo is er dan door vergiftiging diepere bevrozing en verbranding, die als de muren van de stad zijn. En de eekhoorn dan is de bewaker van de trechters der zielevergiftiging. En deze is als de gifbeker.

6. En zo ook is de bevrorene, de krokodil, tot de gifbeker gegaan, om tot de stad te gaan. Laat dan ook de haaien van de gifbeker drinken, opdat zij met de krokodil verzoend worden. Want een beter kruis is ons gegeven, om tot de heilige en dwaze maagdelijkheid te gaan. En de dwaasheid der heilige maagden is wijzer dan de wijsheid der aarde.

7. En ik dan nam van de gifbeker, en kwam tot het rijk der beenderen. En de slangen maakten mij tot koning. En ik dan was als een vergiftigde, en een vlam van ijs steeg op uit mijn hand, en het vuur der rozen achtervolgde mij. En ik rende tot een trap die zeer oud was.

8. En ik riep tot Alika en Sektia, en ziet, zij waren als feeën. En ik kwam tot hun altaren, en ik dronk van hun gifbekers. En ik viel dronken in hun armen, en zij voerden mij weg als een weggeslingerde, en zij bonden mij aan een dik gekleurd elastiek.

9. En zij vloegen van mij weg, en ik kon hen niet volgen. Zij dan waren als vurige wolkenhemels, en zij schoten gifpijlen op mij af. En weer raakte ik dronken, en ik kreeg dromen over hen. En zij waren zeer maagdelijk.

10. En zij schonken mij een sahu, en ik moest een eekhoorn volgen, en varen over de rivier van vergiftiging. Toen moest ik uit vele gifbekers drinken, en ik voelde mij zeer zwaar worden, en het voelde alsof ik verpletterd werd. En ik kon nauwelijks overeind komen. En een maagd verscheen aan mij, en zij had vele geschenken, maar ik kon haar en die geschenken niet bereiken.

11. En ik begon te roepen : 'Dehu, Dehu !' En weer moest ik van vele gifbekers drinken. En nu werd ik zo licht als haar, en zeer lang en dun. Zij dan was de dwaze en heilige maagd Dehu, en zij gaf mij de geschenken. Zij dan was als een roos van tranen, als het water onder de aarde, stromende vanuit de maagdelijke bronnen.

12. En ik zag de vruchtbaarheid van de maagd als een wond, een zeer tere en zachte wond, vele malen doorstoken. En de wond zelf was als een maagd, bevroren, verdronken, weggeslingerd, verpletterd en ter pletter gevallen, gestikt, verhongerd, uiteen getrokken, als de veelvuldig geslagen wond.

13. En ik zag de mond en de tong van de maagd, en zij waren als een wond, en als een poort. En de mond was als de bevrorene, de weggeslingerde, de uiteen getrokken, en de tong was als de verbrande, de doorboorde. En weer dronk ik van vele gifbekers en werd in de poort gezogen. En haar longen waren als verdronkenen, als zeeplanten en als haar vruchtbaarheid. En weer dronk ik van vele gifbekers, en ik werd dronken, en weer werd ik door een poort gezogen.

14. En haar darmen waren als de verdronkenen, en zij waren ribbelig, en als de zeemaagden. En haar buikorganen waren als de verbranden, de weggeslingerden, de uiteen getrokkenen, en zij waren als haar vruchtbaarheid. En weer werd ik door een poort gezogen toen ik van vele gifbekers dronk. En haar nieren waren als de vergiftigden, als de uiteengetrokkenen, de bevrorenen en de verbranden. Ook waren zij als de doorstokenen, de verhongerden, de verpletterden, de ter pletter gevallen, en zij waren als haar vruchtbaarheid.

15. En Dehu stond op, en sprak haar woorden, en deze waren zeer zacht en teder. En haar organen waren als tranen, als de wateren der maagden.

16. En haar baarmoeder was als de vergiftigde en de bevrorene. En de baarmoeder sprak en zei : 'Jou worden de sleutels gegeven van de geschenken en geheimenissen van Dehu. En nadat ik weer van vele gifbekers had gedronken, ging er een vreemde poort open, en ik zag een woeste, grijze zee voor me liggen, wiens golven traag en schokkerig bewogen. En uit de zee kwamen maagden oprijzen, en zij waren de eeuwige verdronkenen.

17. En toen ik door een andere poort ging na het drinken van vele gifbekers zag ik daar de eeuwige verbranden, komende vanuit de vulkanen. En zij gingen snel als de weggeslingerden en de ter pletter gevallen.

18. En toen ik door een andere poort ging na het drinken van vele gifbekers zag ik daar de eeuwige bevrorenen als traag bewegende wolkenhemelen. En zij gingen traag als de verpletterden en de verdronkenen.

19. En in andere poorten zag ik : de eeuwige doorstokenen, de eeuwige ter pletter vallenden, de eeuwige verpletterden, de eeuwige weggeslingerden, de eeuwige gestikten, en zij waren als steen. Ook zag ik in andere poorten : de eeuwig vergiftigden, de eeuwig verhongerden, de eeuwig uitgedroogden, die als de varkens waren. Ook zag ik in andere poorten : de eeuwig uiteen getrokkenen.

20. En het vergif was als de uitdroging, als het dubbele vergif. En weer kwam ik tot een oude trap, maar ditmaal ging deze naar beneden. En er stond daar op tafel een gifbeker die nooit opraakte. En ik nam een slok.

21. De deur achter deze tafel leidde mij naar een grote woestijn, en ik kwam daar de diepst uitgedroogden tegen, en zij waren als de flessen. En deze flessen leken op honden. Ook waren zij als de diepst verdrinkenen. En midden in die woestijn stond een tafel met wat bekers en daartussen een grote dobbelsteen. En de dobbelsteen was als de eeuwig gestikte, de uitgedroogde, de verdrinkene en vergiftigde.

22. En een eeuwig verbrande kwam, en slingerde de dobbelsteen dieper in de woestijn.

Het oordeel over de wijze maagden

1. En de diepst bevrorene kwam, sprekende zware rechtspraak die niemand kon verstaan. En de diepst bevrorene was als verpletterd, en hij dronk van de gifbeker. Ook gaf hij anderen van de gifbeker. En zij begonnen hem te begrijpen, en volgden hem.

2. En de diepst verbrande kwam, sprekende zware rechtspraak die niemand kon verstaan. En de diepst verbrande was als de ter pletter gevallene, en hij dronk van de gifbeker en werd dronken. Ook gaf hij anderen van de gifbeker, en zij werden ook dronken.

3. En de gifbeker zelf was als de diepst verbrande, de diepst bevrorene, de diepst verdrinkene en de diepst uitgedroogde. Ook was hij als de diepst weggeslingerde. En de gifbeker stond op, en sprak als een varken. En uit de beker kwam een hart oprijzen dat ondersteboven kwam te staan, zwart werd, en in een lever veranderde.

4. En de beker was als gevuld met zware alcohol, en er kwam stoom en rook uit. En zij die er van dronken droogden ter plekke uit. En de beker dan was als een dokter des doods. En uit zijn mond en hand kwamen rivieren van zware uitdroging.

5. En er waren maagden die van de beker dronken, en direkt neervielen. En zij waren als in zwijm, en zij werden geleid tot de bronnen der eeuwige maagdelijkheid. En naast deze bronnen stonden kippen en hanen. En zij waren als de uitgedroogden en de vergiftigden. En zij bewaakten de bronnen der eeuwige maagdelijkheid.

6. En zij hadden het gif van sterke drank, en zij waren als de advocaten des doods. En de maagdelijkheden werden zeer zwaar, en Dehu rees van hen op, en zij hief een vreemd zwaard op. En dit was de bevrorene en de doorstokene. En er kwam vuur uit het zwaard, en zij zuiverde de maagdelijke bronnen. En de wijze maagden die geen dwaasheid bezaten werden geworpen in een put.

7. En Dehu sloot de put af, zeggende : Zij zullen tot in eeuwigheid niet meer van de gifbeker drinken. En gegil steeg op van de put, en zij begonnen te zoeken naar het gif, maar het vluchtte van hen weg.

Het maagdelijke orgasme

1. En een paard genaamd de bevrorene, de verbrande, de vergiftigde en de verdronkene stond voor haar, en nam haar mee. En het paard was zeer wild. En het paard bracht haar tot een bloemenveld. En een orgasme van bloemen kwam als een krans om haar heen, maar zij was maagdelijk, en het werd maagdelijk.
2. En zij werd zwak, en begon te spreken, en een tweede krans kwam om haar heen, en werd maagdelijk. En het orgasme was als de verdronkene, de uiteengetrokkene, de bevrorene, de verpletterde, de weggeslingerde, de ter pletter gevallen, de vergiftigde, de doorstokene, de verhongerde, de uitgedroogde, de gestikte, allen in één krans, en zij werden maagdelijk.
3. En Dehu werd zwakker, en begon sneller te spreken. En de kransen begonnen om haar heen te knellen, en er kwamen er steeds meer bij, en zij maakten hen allen maagdelijk, en zij werden haar tot een witte zachte lichte jurk, zeer dun, en plooiend. En zo werd zij tot een maagdelijk orgasme, en dit was rein en zuiver.
4. En haar keel waaruit haar stem kwam, was ook een wond, en deze wond was diep en groot. En die wond was als de uiteengetrokkene en de vergiftigde. Ook was de wond als de verdronkene, de uitgedroogde en de gestikte.
5. En de vruchtbaarheid van de man is een wond, en een maagd, en zij is als de gestikte, de verdronkene, de doorstokene, de uiteen getrokkene, de bevrorene. Ook is zij als de ge-electroduceerde.
6. En zij allen vinden genezing in de bronnen van de diepste maagdelijkheid. En ook de snavels der vogels zijn wonden. Zij zijn de verpletterden en gestikten, en zij slapen.
7. Ook de liefde is een wond. Ziet, zij ijlt. Zij is de ge-electroduceerde, de uiteen getrokkene, de ter pletter gevallen, de verpletterde, de weggeslingerde, de vergiftigde, de verhongerde, de uitgedroogde.
8. Ook de boosheid is een wond. Zij is de ge-electroduceerde, de uiteen getrokkene.
9. De zon is gemaakt van de verbranden, de uitgedroogden, de verdronkenen, de ter pletter gevallen, de verpletterden, en is als een grote wond. Het ijs is gemaakt van de bevrorenen, de weggeslingerden, de verdronkenen, de uitgedroogden, de vergiftigden, en is als een grote wond. In maagdelijkheid worden zij genezen.
10. Zo is Isabella een maagd der genezing, en ook Isadonne. Roept hen dan aan, onder smekingen en belijdenissen, opdat zij hun maagdelijkheid rijkelijk over u uitstorten. Zo is dan de vulkaan de broedplaats der uitgedroogden en verdronkenen. Ook zwerven zij door de bossen. Isabella en Isadonne, weest genadig over hen, en geef hen vrede. Ontferm U over hen.

11. De hersenen zijn ook een wond : de ge-electroduceerden. De neus is een wond : de ter pletter gevallen. De zaadballen zijn ook wonden : de verdronkenen, de verbranden, de uitgedroogden, de ter pletter gevallen, de verhongerden, de doorstokenen.

1. En zo hebben de dwaze maagden de vijfde Christus voortgebracht. En Hij moest lijden onder de gifbeker van de vijfde Pontius Pilatus.
2. Zo is de Vijfde Christus gekomen om uit de hand van de Christus te verlossen. Hij is het die engelen verlost. Ook is Hij het die de christussen bevrijdt. Hij is het die goden en heilige geesten vrijzet. Hij heeft de sleutels der hemelen en hemelmachten.
3. Hij zet hen vrij door het vijfde bloed. De Vijfde Heilige Geest stort Hij over hen uit. De gifbeker laat Hij hen drinken, als het vijfde kruis.
4. En de Talgamen is één der edelstenen op deze gifbeker, en de Lokogamen is het sieraad om onder de rand heen.
5. Gij dan zijt zalig wanneer gij door het Vijfde Bloed en de Vijfde Geest tot de vijfde alverzoening en de vijfde opstanding zijt gekomen. Dit bloed reinigt christussen en engelen, en zet hen vrij die in de handen van Christus en engelen waren. Zo mag gij dan ook overvloedig het Vijfde Bloed aanroepen.
6. En zo komt gij tot de vijfde hemel en de vijfde hemelrivier. Weest dan stil, en laat u leiden tot de vijfde geestesdoop en de vijfde geestesgebondenheid. Ook zal de vijfde Geest u leiden tot de vijfde genezing en het vijfde materialisme.
7. Schenk mij het vijfde spotkleed, en de vijfde hemelpoort. Tot de vijfde maagdelijkheid, door de vijfde dwaze maagd gedragen, zijn wij gekomen.
8. En zij dan die van het vijfde zijn strekken zich uit naar het Zesde. De Zesde Christus zal het christendom vernietigen, en allen meenemen tot de wolkenboot in de zesde alverzoening. En zij zullen allen komen tot de zesde vleeswording en het zesde materialisme, waarin de zesde hemel bestaat.
9. Hij dan zal de macht hebben om engelen en christussen te verdoemen. Maar gij zult eerst komen tot de vijfde Jahweh, om uw reis tot het zesde voort te zetten. En een wespenoog werd uitgerukt, en er kwam een vliegenoog voor in de plaats. En een stem sprak : Nu zijn dan de dagen van Lapsalvania gekomen.
10. En de vijfde hel ging open, en vliegen stegen er vanuit op, en vielen de spinnen aan van de vijfde hemel. En het wespenoog werd in de buik gedrukt.
11. En het vliegenoog werd rood, en het lichaam waar het in zat werd zwart, en was als een bokshond. En toen werd het oog door spinnen aangevreten, en het oog daalde tot in de borst. En toen begon de vijfde adem te waaien.
13. En de spinnen vormden op het hoofd een oog, en dit oog werd zwart, en uit het oog kwamen vele godslasteringen.

14. En het oog had grote barensweeën, en op voeten verschenen twee ogen, op de linker een mierenoog en op de rechter een keveroog, en ziet, zij raakten in oorlog met elkaar. En het spinnenoog in barensweeën werd groter, en gaf geboorte aan een honden-insect. En dit insect was als een wesp, en werd genaamd de eerste jongen van lynx.

15. En de jongen ging tot de Zesde Christus, die alle christussen had verslonden, en verslond hem. En de jongen nam een ster in zijn hand, en deze begon te smelten. En de jongen was als de Grote Zeven. Ook kwam de jongen tot de Zesde Heilige Geest, en wierp deze in een diepe put.

16. En de jongen noemde de put : de Mozai, want deze had het zesde gegeten. En de jongen begon spreken op te zeggen uit het Insectische Dodenboek, en dit boek werd zeer groot.

17. En toen richtte de jongen zich tot de Zesde Jahweh, en sprak : 'Omdat gij dit gedaan hebt, zulke leugens hebt lopen verkondigen, zijt gij vervloekt en verdoemd.' En de jongen richtte zich tot Las Vegas, de hoerenstad, en sprak : 'Gij dan die de zesde Jahweh hebt voortgebracht als een machine des duivels, waarom hebt gij gezondigd tegen het Zevende ?'

18. En de jongen begon ijselijk te lachen, en te vloeken, en werd als de diabolos. En weer sprak hij tot Las Vegas : 'Gij stad der markten, en van de panter-markten. Tot inkeer zijt gij niet gekomen. Aan de zevende alverzoening hebt gij geen deel, maar gij hebt deel aan het oordeel in de zevende hel. Maakt u dan gereed om gezuiverd te worden in het zevende vagevuur, opdat gij klaargemaakt wordt tot de achtste alverzoening, die der panthers.

19. En de achtste alverzoening is de verzoening der verdoemden en vervloekten. Ja, het is de verzoening der skeletten.

20. En een tweede jongen van lynx begon voort te komen uit het spinnenoog, en deze was als een brandend ei geworden. En ook hij begon spreken op te zeggen uit het Insectische Dodenboek, en gilte luid. En het gillen werd steeds luider en hoger, en een nieuw boek begon uit zijn mond voort te komen. En dit boek was genaamd het Insectische Hellenboek.

21. En de jongen begon over te geven, te hyperventileren, en vuur te spuwen, en zijn ogen begonnen te groeien.

22. En de beide jongens werden met elkaar verzoend, en zij begonnen te smeken tot de derde jongen van lynx. En deze begon voort te komen uit het brandende ei, en het gegil werd luider en hoger, steeds meer en meer.

23. En de derde jongen was als de Grote Negen, en hij zou voortbrengen het Insectisch Deliriumboek. Zij dan zouden allen wachten op de Grote Tien, die het Insectisch Leugenboek zou voortbrengen.

24. En zo waren dan de leugens van de Grote en de Kleine Tien waarlijker en betrouwbaarder dan de waarheden der aarde.

25. En na deze dagen was er geen hemel meer, en geen leven. En de Grote Tien en de Kleine Tien zaten op een troon, en vanuit deze tronen kwamen de rivieren van het tiende, en dezen waren leugenrivieren.

26. En de tiende alverzoening is de alverzoening van jezelf en je delen. En de elfde alverzoening is de alverzoening der materialen en voorwerpen. En ziet, zij komt voort uit Brannan. En de twaalfde alverzoening is de alverzoening der kruizen, en het vlees. Zo zal er dan ook een verzoening der leugenaars zijn. Dit is de dertiende alverzoening, en zij worden genoemd : oranje leugenaars. Dit dan is de verzoening der elementen.

27. En tot de oranje leugenaars behoren : Belcanov, Bilmageln, de Raadselaar, Drop, de Paarse Mug, Chocola, Anubis, Ra, Horus, Thoth, en zij allen drinken van de gifbeker. Verder behoren tot de Oranje Leugenaars : Marazanta, de Witte Gouden Hand.

28. En zij wonen in zebra-boten. En zij zijn van een oude indiaanse secte. Verder behoren tot de oranje leugenaars : Tlaloc, Quetzecoatl, Viracocha, Marfa, Rithelm, Elsefic, Belchelot en Benchelot, Darta Bahahn, Ahpuk, Huracan, Kukulcan.

29. Wijdt mij in, in de secte der leugenaars, want zij spreken raadselen. Laat mij in tot de cirkel der oranje leugenaars, want zij spreken vreemde talen van oude waarheid. Breng mij in delirium, en leidt mij tot hen. Maak mij dronken.

30. Zij dan hebben de macht om het hoofdstuk der kruizen af te sluiten. Zij drinken van de gifbeker der leugens. Zij kennen de gifflessen die tot zaligheid leiden. Zij zijn de hoeren der leugens. Onze enige bescherming is in de leugen. Alleen daarin vinden wij het eeuwig leven.

31. Drinkt dan van de leugenbeker, en wordt dronken. Want op het laatst zullen er geen kruizen zijn, alleen nog maar wat leugenbekers.

32. En zo zijn er dan deze groepen in de oranje leugenaars : de leugenbekers, de bakkermans gezichten, want op het laatst zullen er geen hemelen meer zijn, alleen nog maar wat bakkermans gezichten.

33. Verdere groepen in de oranje leugenaars : de denneboompjes. En zij spreken tot elkaar in echo's.

34. Verdere groepen in de oranje leugenaars : de oerlichten, de donkere lichten, de aardlichten, de armoe-lichten, de oervruchten, de aardvruchten, de armoe-vruchten, de leugenlichten, de leugenhaaien, de leugenleeuwen, de leugenhonden, de leugendraken, de leugenwolven, de leugenvleermuizen.

Het Oranje Boek der Leugens

Witte Drop

1. En zij tot Brannan gekomen krijgen een witte chocolade ziel en een witte drop geest als Khnum. Zij dan zullen de klokken in Brannan zien, en de meesters der scholen. En ziet, het waren hun meesters, en de scholieren waren hun mede-scholieren. 2. Zo blijft dan hier alles hetzelfde, maar het is anders. Zo zijn dan meesters dokters. 3. En zo zullen zij hun verhalen horen, zij die tot Brannan gekomen zijn, en zij zullen de doemers niet kennen. 4. Zo zullen dan honderd doemers hen niet kunnen neerhalen, ook al komen zij met duizenden, want Khnum staat boven hen. 5. Zo zullen dan miljoenen doem-kabouters hun gedachten niet storen, al zouden er een miljard doem-bilmagelns op hen af komen. Hun mond wordt niet gesnoerd. 6. Zij dan hebben de Khnum als hun vrede, zijn wijsheid als hun leidsraad. 7. Ook al zouden ontelbare doemleeuwen en doemfarao's hen proberen af te houden van hun hoop en vrede, zij zullen niet schrikken, want Khnum is hen tot schuilplaats. 8. En Khnum zal spreken tot die doemers, en hen bestempelen als leugenaars. Want zij zijn leugenaars vanaf den beginne, om hen allen van Brannan af te houden. 9. En zo zal er een poort zijn in de Ravalon Madok, en de Esmeralda zal als witte chocolade om hen heen zijn. 10. Want ziet, zij is als de witte chocolade en de ziel van Khnum. En Khnum heeft haar aan een ieder gegeven die trouw is aan Zijn Woord. 11. Volkomen trouw is hij die tot de schuilplaatsen van Khnum wordt geleid. En de witte drop zal hem tot geest zijn. 12. Zo weet gij dan ook allen, dat drop de vrucht is van het lijden, en chocolade de vrucht is van de dood.

1. En zij tot Brannan gekomen, zullen de geesten der huizen zijn, en zij zullen vaste grond kennen door het zinken in de aarde, door de muren, de daken en de vloeren heen. 2. En zij zullen zijn als dansende op het plafond, en hun botten zullen genezen worden, en in hen zullen gegraveerd zijn de namen van Brannan en zijn letteren. 3. Ja, de wijsheden van Khnum zullen veelvuldig in hun botten gegraveerd zijn, en zij zullen Nut kennen. 4. Zij dan laten de bloemen van elven achter, om op te stijgen tot de poort van veiligheid. 5. Ja, tot veelvuldige trouw zullen zij komen. Zo is dan Nut de aanvoerder der oranje leugenaars, als de bleek oranje octopus. Ja, de octopus-kroon draagt Nut, als het penseel van sterkte. 6. Ja, de pen is Nut's zwaard, en Nut's zakdoek zijn zegel. Zo is Nut dan als het ijslicht Geb ontvlucht, en heeft elvenbloemen achter gelaten. 7. Vele elvenzakdoeken heeft Nut achtergelaten. Zij dan die tot Brannan gekomen zijn zien Nut's klokken. Nut dan zal spreken tot het ijs, met de penseel als zwaard. 8. Nut's tong is een palet. Zij allen die tot Nut komen zullen het zien. 9. En er zal een pad zijn tot het diepste van Brannan, en het land achter het gordijn zal open gaan. Ja, want vele landen bergt Brannan in zich, en zij zal de paden tonen. 10. En zij zal de vrucht der zwakheid tonen. Rode drop is wat Nut mij gaf. 11. En de vrucht van angst zal komen in etappes, in kostbaar zijde zal het verschijnen. 12. En het zal de leugenboeken openen, en sluiten met kostbare zegelen. 13. En het zal spreken over het maanlicht, zevenvoudig, en het zal schijnen als de lichten van het ijs. Ja, het zal de ijsmeisjes achter zich laten. Ook zal het niet spreken over marsepein. 14. En Khnum zal dan de vrucht der angst brengen tot hen die Hem trouw hebben gevolgd. En Khnum zal spreken, en de woorden zullen vallen uit zijn mond. 15. Ja, als het groene drop zal hij zijn. En zij zullen hem volgen tot in alle eeuwigheden. En het geheimenis van Khnum ligt in het gegeven dat hij de groene drop tot hart heeft, als het hart des geestes. 16. En Nut dan heeft de rode drop tot geesteshart. Ja, het hart des geestes dan is groot, en machtig tot het wissen van vele tranen. 17. Gij dan, wanneer gij angstig zijt : gij hebt angst, opdat gij het groene drop zult kunnen bemachtigen. En ziet dan, zij groeit op hoge plaatsen.

3.

De bevrijding van Geb

1. En Nut dan heeft de roze chocola tot ziel, en zij heeft de roze drop tot geest. De roze chocola is dan de vrucht der scheiding, en de roze drop is dan de vrucht der leugen en onwetendheid. 2. Zo spreken dan de marsepein en het ijsje over een diepere waarheid en zij mogen niet voor hun tijd opgewekt worden. 3. Zo is dan de banaan de vrucht van wanhoop en depressie, gevende de doden hoop en nieuw leven, om nieuwe wijsheid te verkrijgen. 4. Zo is dan het ijsje de vrucht van gevangenschap en het marsepein de vrucht van slavernij. 5. De vrucht van armoe dan is het rode ijs, en de vrucht van honger is de bruine chocola. 6. Zo is dan de ba van Nut dieper dan haar geesteshart, en deze is de blauwe banaan. De ka van Nut is de roze banaan. Haar akh is de gele banaan, en haar khu is het roze ijs. Haar sahu dan is het blauwe ijs. 7. Zo is dan de ba van Khnum ook dieper dan zijn geesteshart, en deze is de gele banaan. Zijn ka dan is de rode banaan. Zijn akh dan is de blauwe banaan, en zijn khu is de witte banaan. Zijn sahu dan is het groene ijs. 8. Het groene ijs dan is de vrucht van de doorn. Zo behoort dan het groene ijs op diepe plaatsen te liggen. 9. En gij dient er wel aan te doen het groene ijs op te wekken, want zonder dit zult gij niet tot de groene eeuwigheden kunnen komen. 10. En wanneer gij dan door de doorn het groene ijs hebt bereikt, dan zult ge Geb vrijzetten. 11. Zo dan, draagt uw tatoeages tot het einde, opdat gij de aanraking van Geb zult ontvangen. 12. Gij dan die voor uw tijd naar het groene ijs grijpt, gij zult sterven door een kus. 13. Goed dan is het voor een man om een juk in zijn jeugd te dragen. Hij dan worde behouden voor de verkeerde paden die ten dode leiden. 14. Nu dan is het groene ijs de vrucht van eeuwig leven en onsterfelijkheid. 15. Zo dan zal Geb uit zijn gevangenis worden bevrijd waar hij was opgesloten door hen die hem voortijdig hadden gegrepen.

1. Draag dan het ijsje diep in u, opdat het u niet zal vergiften, en gij niet aan de ijsmeisjes ten prooi zult vallen. Grijpt dan niet voortijdig naar het ijsje, opdat gij niet in uw lot ter pletter valle. 2. Streef er dan naar uw sahu en khu door ijs te laten zuiveren. Dan zult gij tot de doorzichtige boeken der ijsjes komen, en gij zult u vullen met hun rijkdommen en wijsheden. 3. Laat dan geen verachtelijke kennis u leiden, en volg ook het pad der doemers niet. Gij dan zijt tot de zeeschelp gekomen. 4. De zeeschelp dan zal u kracht verlenen, en u dieper naar binnen zuigen. 5. Zo is dan Nut als de kleine zeemeermin en de vos, als de kleine vlam en het kleine licht, en zij zal de deuren openen.

Brannan

1. En zo dan zijn de oude boeken van Brannan dan vol vuur, en gij doet er goed aan niet voor uw tijd naar te grijpen. 2. Langzaam zult gij in Brannan ontwaken, en gij zult uw kracht daar vinden, als de vrucht van zwakheid. 3. Verheug u dan ook in uw zwakheden, want in uw zwakheid bent ge sterk. En gij hebt de macht om stenen te breken. 4. Zo is dan ook Zetdonia diep in Brannan, als de stad van ijs, de brug tot Nut, want daar waar het ijs zoet wordt, daar is zij. 5. En zo zal Zetdonia dan kamelen zenden tot het land van Nut, en gij zult Brannan kennen. 6. En gij zult de uren van Brannan kennen, en de minuten, en gij zult haar seizoenen kennen. 7. Ja, zeven ijslichten stralen vanuit Zetdonia, vanaf een verdieping, en zij leiden tot het zoete van Nut. 8. En gij zult de schelp van Nut kennen, en de schelpen in de schelpen, en het zal voor u zijn als het intreden tot de diamant. 9. Ja, de gesteentes van Nut zult gij kennen, en gij zult hun namen kennen, en het zal zijn als het zoete ijs, als de vrucht van gevangenschap. 10. En Nut zal tot u spreken, en gij zult intens verrukt zijn over haar aanrakingen. 11. En vele oude boeken zullen tot u komen, en zij zullen zich aan u onderwerpen. 12. En de vruchten des doods zullen opkomen, en het zal zijn als uitgespreid chocola.

En dan zullen de poorten tot het oude geopend worden. 13. En gij zult uzelf terugvinden op oude paden, en in oude boeken, en gij zult intens verrukt zijn over de aanrakingen van Nut. 14. En gij zult komen tot de landkaarten en atlassen van Brannan, en zij zullen u zijn tot leidsraad en tot rechtssnoer. 15. En gij zult het Brannan Kompas terugvinden, en gij zult de elvenbloemen achterlaten. Zo zult gij vleugels hebben, om met Nut te vliegen. Zij dan zal u leiden tot de geheimenissen der leugenaars.

1. En Brannan zal grootworden, en haar vleugels uitspreiden. En zij zal om zich heengrijpen en grip vinden. Zij dan zal zijn als een lichte wolk aan de hemel. 2. En Brannan zal haar gezichtsveld uitvouwen, en zij zal gaan als over rails. 3. In haar dan zijn alle vruchten van het lijden en de vruchten der dood. In haar dan is eeuwig leven en onsterfelijkheid. Maar zij dan die voortijdig van deze vruchten eten zullen de eeuwige dood sterven. 4. En daarom heeft de eekhoorn ook altijd het chocola verborgen gehouden, opdat gij niet door de vrucht des doods te eten voor eeuwig zou sterven. 5. Gij dan zult groot worden in Brannan, en gij zult de mond van Brannan ontvangen, onderscheidende de dag en het uur. 6. Want zeven dagen zitten er in een Brannan maand, en drie maanden in een Brannan jaar. Zo zitten er eenenveertig uren in een Brannan dag, en tien minuten in een Brannan uur. 7. De seconden in een Brannan minuut zijn zeven, en de seconden van Brannan duren telkens zeven aardse jaren. 8. Zo zijn dan de zevenjaars-seconden van Brannan een groot geheimenis. 9. Hebt gij dan zeven aardse jaren geleden, dan hebt ge een seconde in Brannan geleden. En deze seconden brengen dan veel vrucht. 10. Bent gij dan in de seconden van Brannan tot stilstand gedreven ? Dan zijt gij zalig tot het dragen van veel vrucht, en zo zijt gij Brannan binnengekomen. 11. En de seconden zullen uitgroeien tot schilden op uw gezicht en lichaam. 12. Daarom : Zalig zij die tot Brannan zijn gekomen, en zijn seconden hebben leren kennen. Dit dan is het geheimenis der chocola. 13. Zo is het lijden op aarde dan slechts een paar seconden geweest, opdat gij Brannan zoudt binnenkomen. 14. Ja, als snel vuur daalde het op u neer, om in ijs te veranderen. Ja, moeizaam was uw strijd op aarde, maar door Brannan kwam het als de bliksem over u. 15. Alles dan in Brannan komt en gaat snel. Dit dan is het geheimenis van het drop. 16. Zo zitten er dan drie jaren in een Brannan eeuw. De jaren van Brannan dan maken de ijsjes. 17. De eeuwen van Brannan maken het fruit, en de maanden van Brannan maken de marsepein, de dagen van Brannan de groentes. 18. Zo vormen dan vele eeuwen van Brannan een seizoen, en zo is er dan het Geb-seizoen, het Nut-seizoen, het Sebek-seizoen, en nog veel meer seizoenen, want Brannan kent vele seizoenen. 19. En de seizoenen dan zijn als vleugelen om tot de warme gebieden van Brannan te komen.

3.

1. En deze blauwe tepelen zijn de oogsten van de dood, transformerende de hitte. En het werd getransformeerd tot tranen. En deze tranen brachten leven voort, en de vruchten van dood en lijden. 2. Ja, vruchtbaar waren deze tranen. Ook kwamen er slangen uit de blauwe tepel, en zij waren als de roofkruizen, als de ladders en de rails. 3. Zo is dan de roze tepel de oogst van het lijden, en de witte tepel de oogst van de angst.

1.

In het district Sepanda van de witte chocolade sterrenhemel te Brannan, daar waar de ster Mehn is, daar bruist het zilver, de zilveren stem, en daar is de zilveren kamergenoot. Rijst op allen die bevrijd zijn geworden door Brannans eerste leugen-omnibus, oh gij oranje leugenaars in zebra-boten, en komt tot de tweede leugen-omnibus, als een dag van verademing. Ja, het vuur achtervolgt u, en de angst, en zeker ook het depressieve, maar gij zijt tot de vruchten daarvan gekomen. Eet hen dan wel, en dringt tot hen door, tot Mehn. Daar waar de zwarte panter op u wacht. Wachtende om door glas heen te breken, om de kat te bevrijden. Ja, Nut zal door de glazen breken. Zo is dan Mehn als het witte zilver, met de chocolade-weg, leidende tot het diepere Brannan, daar waar de tijger is. Tot Mehn zijt gij gekomen, oh bezoeker der raadselen. Gij hebt de stem der leugen gehoord.

Zo is hier dan het witte zilver veelvoudig gezuiverd, en schuimen de vlokken met genezing. Oh gij van de eerste leugen-omnibus, blijft dan niet staan in het eerste, maar komt tot het tweede, oh oranje leugenaar, oh zoon van Horus de geweldige. Zo hebt gij dan gehoord dat chocola de vrucht des doods is. Hier dan is de witte chocolade, en de chocolade van het witte zilver, veelvoudig gezuiverd. Gij dan hebt de angst gekend als een leugenaar, en nu zijt gij zelf een leugenaar geworden.

En stap dan in de zebra-boot van Mehn, en reist langs de oranje leugenvlokken, dieper de leugen in. Want in de leugen is bevrijding. Gij bent op weg naar de tekenfilm-omroepster, de muis. Ga tot de muis, en wordt een leugenaar, opdat gij leve. Tot Mehn zijt gij gekomen. Hier woont die tekenfilm-omroepster. Klopt aan haar deuren, opdat zij bij u binnenkome om maaltijd met u te hebben. Klopt aan haar deur als een jehovah getuige, aanhoudend en de voet tussen de deur, wanneer zij eenmaal heeft geopend. Breek dan in als een inspecteur van waren, en vertel haar dat je een oranje leugenaar bent. Dan zal zij alle geheimen met je delen.

Tot Mehn bent gij gekomen, tot het diepere Brannan, waar vreemde poeders rondstuiven. Ja, vreemde woestijnen zijn hier, waar de bakkerbomen staan. Autistische helden komen hier. Als een walvis van Brannan voel ik me, zo teder, en zo uitgestrekt, zacht pulserende stralen bij elke beweging, om Brannan langzaam te verwarmen. Walvissen van Brannan, zo wijs en zo zacht, nemen ze je mee naar het land van buitengewone pracht. Als de zee in de woestijn voel ik mij, de Brannan zee. Zoveel zeeën zijn hier, glinsterende in de woestijnen, in Brannans woestijnen waren wij. Ik voel mij rustig en kan weer ademen, alsof ik honderd jaren heb geslapen. Mijn tranen komen langzaam naar boven. Ik kan weer praten. De walvissen van Mehn zijn hier, zij zwemmen met mij, en zingen met mij, zoals ze dat eens deden met mijn opa. Tot Mehn ben ik gekomen, als het zachte van Brannan. Hier maak ik mijn woning, en zal ik verder reizen. De warmte spreekt tot mij, een ziedende warmte, geheel troostende mij.

Tot de leugenaars van Mehn zijt gij gekomen, zij zijn van het zachte. Zij staan op de loer als de paarse gordijnen, om je door de woestijnen van Mehn te brengen. Woestijnen van Mehn, waar vreemde poeders rondstuiven, van vreemd stekende planten, maar wanneer zij steken voel je het zachte. Allen zijn zij bakkerbomen, en zij komen tot de niemand om te steken, om hem het zachte te laten voelen. Ik dan kom uit een diepe gevangenis, opgesloten door een draak. Maar nu wordt ik gestoken door de zachtheid. Door bakkerbomen wordt ik gestoken, door bakkerbomen krijg ik mijn dromen, om dieper tot Mehn te gaan.

Wijs geworden ben ik. De leugenaars nemen mij mee naar hun kamer. Ik zeg : 'Brannan heeft mij geholpen, Brannan bracht mij deze faam.' Maar zij liepen allen weg van mij, en zeiden : 'Kom mee tot Mehn.' En zo kwam ik tot de dieptes van Brannan, in Mehn, waar de vreemde poeders rondstuiven, waar de bakkerbomen staan. Zoveel leugenaars in de bomen, zoveel leugenaars maken naam. Wijs geworden ben ik, een nieuwe rust, tot de bakkerbomen ben ik gekomen, zoveel deuren in de woestijn. De woestijnen zijn bloeiende, hier in Mehn, diep in Mehn. En er zijn zeeën in woestijnen, de zeeën van Mehn. Wijs geworden ben ik, met de walvissen van Mehn zwem ik. Ook met de haaien van Mehn kan ik gewoon zwemmen. Ze hebben zulke mooie ogen, en ze hebben groot plezier, alleen kunnen ze niet praten. Ik kijk hen dieper aan, in hun keel zit een banaan. Wel kunnen ze zingen, wel kunnen ze spelletjes doen, die haaien van Mehn, die haaien van de grote tekenfilm.

En daar vind ik de omroepster van de tekenfilms van Mehn, aan de woestijnzee zit zij, in het zand, met al die bakkerbomen, die stekende planten, zij steken oh zo zacht, dat je er dronken van wordt. Aan de woestijnzee zit zij, met opgeheven hand, waar zijn de waterlichten, ik heb ze hier net geplant. Tot een koning maakte ik hen, tot een koning vouwde ik hen, al die koningen van Mehn, al die koningen der tekenfilmen, zoveel leugenaars maken naam, zoveel leugenaars zijn hier te vinden. En ik zeg : 'Brannan heeft mij geholpen, Brannan bracht mij deze faam.' Maar zij is toen van mij weggelopen, en nam mij mee, tot Mehn. Wil je dieper tot Mehn komen, wil je dieper tot Mehn gaan, volg dan de tekenfilm-omroepster. Zij maakt koningen van waterlichten. Tot de ijslichten bracht zij mij, en tot de haaien van Mehn. Teken een haai van Mehn, teken een walvis van Mehn, en al die andere dieren, de dieren van Mehn.

In een optocht naar de Virgo-toren van Mehn, waarop de omroepster staat, wanneer zij beweegt, vallen alle soldaten neer. En dan vloeit de chocolade weer over het land, en de ijslichten komen aan het strand. En ik zei : 'Brannan heeft mij geholpen, Brannan bracht mij deze faam,' maar zij is toen van mij weggelopen. En ik sprak : 'Loop niet weg,' en zij sprak : 'Volg mij, ik laat een lijntje voor jou achter.' En zij bracht mij tot deze woestijn, tot de slangen van Mehn, zo zacht als fluweel, met al die mooie kleuren, weten zij mij op te beuren. Dit is het einde niet. En zij bracht mij tot de tijgers van Mehn, in grote woestijnen stonden zij, kijkende om zich heen. En zij waren als de bakkerbomen, de leugenaars van Mehn.

En zij kon tekenen, die omroepster van Mehn, zij had de octopus-kroon, en een slangen-ei diep van binnen. En Mezedium was haar naam, als een bleke oranje octopus, als een bakkerboom, maakte zij faam. En zij stond daar en maakte elke ochtend een frisse duik in de woestijnzeeën van Mehn, om haar vriend, Matas, de waterplant op te zoeken. En weet je wie in die toren woonden ? De leeuwen van Mehn. Zij schrijven daar de nachtverhalen, over de nachtzeën van Mehn, en hun nachtpaleizen. Zij zijn de leugenaars van Mehn, met al hun verhalen. Met hun pennen creëren zij de zeeën, ja, zelfs de toren waarin zij leven. Zij dan hebben Mezedium op de toren getekend, duikende in al hun verhalen, als een omroepster is zij. Al die leugenaars van Mehn, met al hun verhalen, en al hun vreemde talen. Na de winter wordt het donker, het donkere seizoen, het nachtseizoen, met al hun nachtzeen en nachtpaleizen.

Mehn

De lichten van Mehn zijn aan, de ijslichten en de steenlichten, en ook de lichten van het oer. De leugenaars van Mehn staan op de daken, om hun verhalen in de nachten te verkondigen. Als het nachtseizoen is aangebroken, dan zijn er verhalen de hele dag door. Dan hoeven de kinderen niet naar school, maar hebben ze koor. De leugenaars van Mehn, zij lachen in de nacht, zij laten de steden steeds smelten, om nieuwe inkt te hebben. Zij dragen de octopus-kroon, en hebben een slangen-ei diep van binnen, opstijgende tot de troon. Alles past in hun verhalen, als over een brug in de lucht, een waterbrug, rennen zij naar betere dagen.

Er is dan zoveel over de bakkerbomen geschreven, de leeuwen van de Virgo-toren hebben hen gemaakt. Langs zeen groeien zij, diep in de woestijnen, en de lichten van Mehn maken hen vrij. De torenleeuwen van Mehn, als een weduwe en een merel, ja, als een mus, is zij naar hen op zoek. Zij glijdt dan langs de daken, en als een oude bezem gaat zij over straat. Dan komt zij langs de winkel van de eekhoorn, die verbergt zijn chocola. Ik ben daar in dat huis boven die winkel geweest. Ik heb hun kastjes en spelletjes gezien. Hier komen de leugenaars tezamen, die lichten van Mehn. Ik ben bij de koning van Mehn geweest, maar hij wilde mij niet spreken. Hij was een oranje leugenaar, zeer zacht waren zijn steken. Hij heeft de bakkerbomen gemaakt. Ja, een torenleeuw is hij, een moeder van vele namen. En toen ik terug kwam wilde hij me zien, maar toen was ik al verdwenen. Hij kwam te laat, pas in de hel kwam ik hem tegen.

En hier dan is het altijd te laat, waar slangen wonen, waar zij hun spelletjes spelen, en waar hun treintjes staan. Ja, hoog op de zolder, daar is het aldebaran van Mehn, starende naar de sterren van lynx. Hier vallen de lichten altijd. Hier komen de torenleeuwen om chocolade voor hun vaders te vragen, maar de eekhoorn zegt telkens nee. 'Laat hen zelf die chocolade maar spinnen, ze hebben de Mezedium, laat die het maar doen.' En dan moet Mezedium rennen, van de zee naar het land en terug, als een sleutel van een vissenstaart, spint zij de dromen van de leeuwenkoningen. Zij is het spinnenwiel der leugenaars.

Zij is het spinnenwiel der leugenaars, als een vogel wordt zij, om chocolade te brengen, want de eekhoorns geven het niet. Zij hebben hun winkels wijd verspreid, en verkopen vele dingen, maar chocola verkopen ze niet. Ik ben bij de keizer van Mehn geweest, maar hij wilde mij niet spreken. Een leugenaar was het, en pas in de leugen kwam ik hem tegen. Het was een eekhoorn, die al die leeuwen en hun torens had gemaakt. In den beginne schiep hij het, en hij wilde zijn chocola niet geven. Dat moest Mezedium zelf maar spinnen. Vele koningen heeft hij, die keizer.

Zij moesten het chocola zelf maar zoeken, de lente werden ze niet. Na hun winter kwam de nacht, waarin zij hun verhalen schreven, over de nachtzeen en hun paleizen. Nu willen ze dan een eekhoorn worden, een eekhoorn van Mehn. Volg die eekhoorn op z'n pad, maar volgen kun je hem niet. Het chocola zal hij je niet geven, je moet het zelf maar spinnen. Hier is het altijd te laat.

Slangen worden hier geboren, en de treintjes van aldebaran in Mehn. Op hoge zolders en hoge tafels staan zij, achter glas, met lange rails.

Mezedium de muis is zij, zij draagt en is een raar kruis, een spinnenwiel is zij, om de steden te laten smelten. Nu kan zij borduren met de treintjes aan haar zij. Een raar kruis is zij, een spinnenwiel, waar slangen worden geboren, daar rijdt zij. Zij wordt van vis tot vogel, en van vogel tot vis, om in haar ketel chocola te bereiden, voor de octopus-kroon.

De eekhoorns van Mehn, de trots van een verleden zo wijd. Hebbende chocola, alleen om naar te kijken. De eekhoorns van Mehn, de scheppers der leeuwen zijn zij, met al hun leugens, hebben zij hun tijd overwonnen. Nu zijn zij dan keizers, de keizers van Mehn. De eekhoorns van Mehn, met z'n allen staan ze sterk, om het chocola te bewaken. De winkels hebben zij, om zaken af te leiden, tot de miezerigheden van het bestaan.

Lapsalvania dan heeft Brannan gezuiverd, door de Grote Witte Oorlog en de Grote Marazanta, werd Brannan het domein van de Witte Gouden Hand. Een groot keizer is hij, zo almachtig. Hij heeft de eekhoorns van Mehn overwonnen, die leugenaars, die treiteraars, in het spel. De Witte Gouden Hand, ja, hij is koning, schenkende de witte chocola overvloedig.

Zo worden de bananen dan overvloedig geschonken door hem, en zij komen uit hun vele schillen, opdat zij die volgehouden hebben hun zegels zien. En deze zegels zijn nieuwe postzegels om met de diepere bewoners van Mehn te communiceren. Nu dan is het tijd dat de heerschappij valle in de hand van de wolvenmuggen. Leeuwen, kom tot de eekhoorntoren. Hier zal de Witte Gouden Hand regeren, en zijn leeuwen zullen koning zijn. En dan zullen de wolvenmuggen alle macht overnemen, stap voor stap. De generaals der oranje leugenaars zijn zij. Ja, Brannan en Mehn zijn in hun handen, en zij zullen daar hun toren en poort opzetten. Op hoge koetsen zitten zij, als de spot zijn zij.

De wolfmuggen van Mehn, zij kunnen door de kleine gaten heen. De wolfmuggen van Mehn, zij hebben de Gouden Hand om zich heen. Zij verkopen de postzegels op het stadhuis, op hoge koetsen zitten zij. Zij dragen de zegels van bananen en van chocola. Tot de kleuren van drop komen zij. In de bakkerbomen zullen zij brouwen, de nieuwe melk en sappen. Alle karsuiken zitten op de daken, en breken vrij. Ja, wolfsmuggen zijn zij, nu vrijgekomen, en ook de putsen komen vrij, en de karazuur. Op de strozalk vallen zij, om ook hen te bevrijden. Oranje leugenaars zijn zij. Het fruit ligt in hoge handen, de zegels vangen zij op, om gordijnen te openen, te laten dalen, en op te hijsen. Zij kennen alle namen.

Een nieuwe orde stichten zij. Verhalen schrijven zij, die leugenaars van Mehn. Heb je hun sterrenkaarten gezien ? En de landenkaarten van Mehn ? Grijp dan niet naar wat brandt, maar doe het met de gouden hand. De gouden hand zal 't overnemen, de heerschappij over Mehn, om de laatste bruggen te openen, als Abraham Lincoln zal hij zijn. Al die presidenten van Amerika, waren maar wat leugenaars van Mehn, machines van Las Vegas. Zij sliepen allemaal met Amy.

Een nieuwe orde stichten zij, als het nieuwe amerika van Mehn. Zij zuiveren de indianen van Mehn, veelvuldig. Van een oude indiaanse secte zijn zij. Een vreemde cultus is het, die oranje leugenaars, met hun opperhoofden, de wolvenmuggen. Aan hoge snelwegen staan zij, om het verkeer te misleiden. Vreemde zegelen drukken zij op hen, opdat zij met de ouden kunnen spreken.

Een vreemde cultus is het, die wolfsmuggen. Zij laten de gordijnen dalen, en trekken hen weer op, om zielen door de woestijnen van Mehn te leiden. Waar gaat dat heen ? Tot het Californie van Mehn. Een vreemde octopus staat daar, terwijl de Mezedium staat in Washington, en het slangen-ei stijgt vanuit Arabie, alles in Mehn. In een Mehn-Arabische woestijn, daar groeien de vruchten. Tot California stijgen zij, waar de ketel wordt geroerd. In Boston vallen zij allen in slaap, het zilver leidt hen tot California, langs paarse gordijnen, daar zullen zij verdwijnen. In de ketel gaan zij, via het spinnenwiel in Washington. Een vreemde Vegas-Machine.

In Bagdad worden de vruchten gestolen, om in Spanje te worden bedrogen, door Oranje Leugenaars. Een vreemde Vegas-Machine. Op hoge wegen staan zij, de wolfsmuggen, om hen tot rails, treinen, en slangen te maken, tot racecars op de hoge daken. Tot oude chocolade worden zij. Nooit zal ik er meer op kloppen. Zij zijn de Oranje Leugenaars. Wolfsmuggen hebben zij als hun vaders. Over Judas hebben zij gelogen. Een Jezus-Judas-gezicht dragen zij, maar 't is gewoon een masker. Vuile leugenaars zijn zij.

Vuile Leugenaars, jullie zullen mij niet meer flessen. Over Judas hebben jullie gelogen. Vreemde Vegas-Machines zijn jullie, met vreemde ogen, en vreemde verhalen, om de massa's te flessen tot vruchtwater. Gemene lelies zijn jullie. Wolfsmuggen tot de bejaardenhuizen, om tot de oude van dagen te praten.

Op mijn kop werd het zegel gedrukt. Ik werd van hier naar daar gedrukt. Met een ezelshorloge raakte ik op de vlucht. Tot een zebra-horloge kwam ik, op een zebra-boot, tussen nog meer van die oranje leugenaars. Oh, wat ben ik bedrogen. Ik ging van leugen tot leugen. Wolfsmuggen, 't spijt me, maar hier stopt de reis. Over Judas hebben jullie gelogen. Laat me nu jullie papieren zien, en jullie atlanten, en breng me tot de gouden hand. Jullie leider is hij, de leugen der leugens. En ik vond een gouden leugen, stekende zacht, zo zacht. Als een bakkerboom werd ik, totdat ik zelf ook een wolfsmug was. In welk leger zal ik nu dienen ? Van leugen tot leugen reizen wij. Waarvoor vechten wij, en wat bevechten wij ? In de leugen wordt alles onduidelijk. Wolfsmuggen, 't spijt me, maar hier stopt de reis. Over Judas hebben jullie gelogen. Ben ik dan nu in jullie masker opgesloten ? Alleen de nog grotere leugenaar zal aan jullie ontkomen. Ik schreeuw het uit tot de leeuwenthee, de leugenthee, die de advocaten drinken. Hoe moeten we de crimineel bevrijden ? Voor een gerechtshof van leugenaars sta ik. De grootste leugen zal winnen, oh bakkerboom, steek mij diep, en maak mij dronken van de leugen, want tussen zulke leugenaars redt ik het niet.

Oh, bakkerboom, autistische draak, draak van Mehn, ik kom tot uw leugenthee, uw leeuwenthee. De wolfsmuggen zitten achter mij aan. Op hoge snelwegen staan zij, drukkende de zegels op al mijn race-auto's en treinen. Tussen wolfsmuggen sta ik, als tussen zwarte flessen. Help mij. Oranje leugenaars, leugenaars van Mehn, omroepsters der tekenfilmen, neem mij mee. Tot het geheim der bakkerbomen, die leugenwaterval, bij de bronnen der leugens, vulde ik mijn flessen, voor een nieuw carnaval. En ik viel in slaap in Brannan en ik viel in slaap in Mehn, een diepe slaap der bakkerbomen, waar brengt het mij heen. Ze steken hier zo zacht, zo zacht, ik wordt er dronken van.

En weer greep ik mijn ezelshorloge, en ik kwam tot de diepere zeeën van Mehn, en tot de oceanen. Hier zwommen de zevenzeen-beesten, en een bleke oranje octopus nam mij mee. Tot de octopussen van Mehn bracht zij mij, tot de grotere leugens, de leugens der lach, maar het werd steeds serieuzer en saaier, totdat ik een groot licht zag. Zij dan was de koningin der oranje leugenaars, en bewaakte de grotere leugens, de leugens der lach, die alles serieuzer en saaier maakten. En zij droeg de ster van Mehn tot het graf, waar zij chocola oogstte. En zij gaf mij chocola, maar ik at het niet op. Het is alleen goed om naar te kijken. En ook bracht zij mij tot een andere ster, waar zij drop verbouwde, maar van het drop at ik ook niet. Het was slechts om naar te kijken. En zij stak mij met zachte leugens, en ik lachte, maar werd serieuzer en saaier. En zij haalde een wespenoog uit mij, en gaf mij het oog van Mehn. En het oog van Mehn gaf mij grote visioenen, en ik kwam tot een eiland in de zee. Stekende vissen zwommen hier omheen, maar zij staken slechts in zachtheid, om de visioenen te laten groeien.

En ik kwam in een vreemd zachtstekende schelp, en zachte stemmen omringden mij. En zij brachten de lach in mij, maar ik werd serieuzer en saaier. En ik kwam tot een plaats waar het eeuwige lijden, en het grootste lijden twee staven waren en een rails vormden, en de dood bereed hen, en zij die in hem waren, waren vrij. En ziet dan, deze staven, deze rails, was geheel van chocola. De dood dan heeft het lijden omgevormd, daar op het toppunt. En zo was dan de chocolade-dood, als een stier en een bison in Spanje, troostende hen die luisterden naar het grote leugen-woord. Want in de leugen is de grootste troost.

En de trein was geheel van drop, want het lijden had de dood omgevormd.

Kzem Leugenboek

Waar de Maya-markten zijn en de Maya-winkelstraten, waar een speelgoedwinkel staat, zoveel verdiepingen, waar oude boeken te koop zijn, dagboeken, met vreemde messen, en vreemde speren, gestoken in een gordelband, waar het strakke speelgoed staat, een vallende hand, totdat het verleden opengaat. Waar de Maya-markten staan, waar vreemde beelden die je kunt kopen, op de loop gaan. Waar de Maya-markten zijn, waar de Maya-hekserijen tot hun eeuwige lichten ingaan. Waar vreemde skeletten staan, vreemde botten, waar melk uitdruipt zo zacht. Die botten zijn het geworden, door een lange lange nacht, waar in de lelievelden, de pauwenmelk stroomt, waar de bottenmelk droomt, 't is verleden tijd.

Waar de Maya-markten zijn, de vreemde spelen, waar de Maya-markten zijn, hoe kun je je hier nu vervelen. In hoge winkels, in hoge torens, daar wonen vreemde wezens, als skeletten met druipende botten, waar het melkmetaal uit voortglijdt. Een azteekse gevallen engel, stichtte hier het reformatorische hout, in hokken probeerde hij hen te proppen, nu speelt hij muziek, hij is de held.

In zeven talen spreekt hij hen aan, de dromen duren lang hier, totdat het benauwd, dan komen zij, de maya's om hen vrij te maken. In zeven talen spreekt hij hen aan, totdat de hand weer valt, en wij stromen door het land, als afgewezen rivieren, om tot de Maya's te gaan.

Waar de blauwgezichten lopen, waar de groengezichten dromen, 't is nu geen tijd voor parade-paarden, wij lopen te dromen voor de haarden, wij zijn tegelijkertijd één in wezen, heldenvoer is duur, laat ons getrouw wezen tot de vloer. Waar mercedessen bloeien, kom nu hier, en breng mij water-plezier, door de grotten regent het, het druipt, 't is Maya-tijd. En die azteken, verdreven door de inca's, laat op de dag, je mag niet horen hoe zij een eind maken aan de dag. Ik heb het vierenveertig vrouwen verteld, zij nemen mij nu als een held, maar ik, ik ben te laat, ik hoor hem steeds nog praten over een verleden dag, een maya-markt, een tennisbal, een legerlading, op weg naar 't grote carnaval. 'T is carnaval vandaag, soldaten staan paraat om een eind te maken aan machines, een eind te maken aan hoge dromen, een eind te maken aan kabaal, ik denk dat ik jullie ga verlaten, ik denk dat ik overspring tot een ander carnaval, want het is carnaval vandaag, waarom zou ik voor jullie kiezen, een ander kostuum staat mij beter vandaag. Wortels op het vuur, kanibalen maken alles duur. 'T is verleden tijd, en ik heb geen spijt, ik maak een overuur, voor dit gedoe. Waar de blauwgezichten lopen, waar de groengezichten verder gaan.

Maya-Hekserij Leugenboek

Maya-goden aan het woord

Kom een stapje verder, en ga een eindje verder weg staan. Tot de paradox ben je gekomen, ook om daar los te breken. Zo spreekt Nacon, god van de oorlog : Wegen, gij staat op wegen, want gij moet verdergaan. Wolken, gij staat op wolken, want gij moet opstijgen, tot een nieuwe naam. Spreek in die andere talen, de leugen is zo oud, ja, verlies die talen, en zuiver hen als goud. Tot het schrift van de Maya bent gij gekomen.

Zo spreekt Ah Cun Chan, god van oorlog : Gij moet spreken, spreken in die nieuwe taal. Opent uw mond, en ik zal hem vullen. Gij moet lopen, lopen over die nieuwe baan. Ik geef een zet, en ben je tot steun. Gij moet ademen, diep ademen, want ik sta hier, en geef het jou, een nieuw verhaal, een nieuwe levenservaring. Komt dichtbij en gaat verderaf. De paradox spreekt, en gij moet eraan ontkomen.

Zo spreekt Itzamna, god van de lucht en de hemelen : Hier sta ik dan, op een nieuw verhaal, op een nieuwe rug, de zielen gesplitst. Gij kunt twee dingen doen, maar strek u uit tot het derde. Gij dan hebt meerdere koppen zoals de zevendood. wenkt mij, opdat ik tot u zal komen, en spreken. Ik heb u veel te zeggen, maar ook raadselen heb ik gegeven.

Zo spreekt Mayahuel, godin van de drank : Ik heb u laten drinken, en in het dodenrijk laten dalen. Ik heb u de thee gegeven, en gij bent tot het dal der dorre doodsbeenderen gegaan, om de botten te melken, en nu in uw melk te gaan. Ja, gevoed heb ik u door de borsten der duisternis, en gij hebt uzelf gevoed. Ik ben meer waarde dan het licht, ik ben de duisternis, die het ware licht draagt. Kom tot mijn tempelen en boeken, lees hen in de duisternis, en wordt verlicht. Verlichten zal ik uwen zielen op de trap.

Zo spreekt Yaluk, opperhoofd der goden van bliksem : Ik zal u genezen onder mijn vleugelen, en u nieuwe namen geven. Ik zal u uw delen tonen die zo verwrongen zijn en in elkaar vergroeid. Ja, gij had gruwelen gezien, en gij had gruwelen verkondigd, maar dit is een dag van bevrijding. Ik geef u soldaten, en ik geef u carnaval. Gij moet lachen en vrolijk zijn, want ik heb uw lijden weggenomen. Ik heb u rust gegeven, een eeuwige rust. Kom, en laten wij elkaar vinden. Mijn bliksem is rein en voedend als melk. Uit het dorre dal kom ik, en stijg op tot u, om samen uit de put te stijgen, en te komen tot het nu.

Zo spreekt Ahau Chamahez, god van medicijnen : Ik breng u het arends-medicijn en het panter-medicijn. Ik heb u verteld over bomen en struiken, en hun geneeskrachtige werkingen. Ik heb u geleid tot de geblokte ramen, en de geblokte visioenen. Gij zijt vrij. Ik heb u gehaald tot het dodenrijk, waarin gij nieuw leven hebt verkregen, en gij groeit nu als een kersenplant. Ik heb mijn handen op u gelegd om genezing te schenken aan de getrouwen. Vertrouw op mij, opdat ik u verder leidt. Mijn energie stroomt door uw lichaam, om u zielen aan te raken, en uw geest te zuiveren. Ik ben met u, op alle treden van uw pad. Ik sta voor u en achter u, met verlichting als de lantaarn. Ja, ik zuiver uw pad, ik breng het tot volwassenheid en volkomenheid. Ik toon u de glimlach van het verhaal, en leidt u door de gordijnen tot nieuwe machines. Ja, lichtmachines zijn zij, tot de rechtvaardigen gebracht.

Zo spreekt Cit Bolon Tum, god van medicijnen : Ik breng u genezing der raven, en ik schenk u de toegang tot eeuwige velden. Ik beweeg uw armen en benen, en geef u gevoel. Ik genees uw gevoel, en breng rust, en diepe vrede in uw botten. Ook breng ik zachtheid binnen, opdat het strome als de bottenmelk. Ik breng boodschappen van verleden tijden naar boven, en ziet, zij borrelen en dragen genezing, wijsheid en kracht, voor al hen die geloven en waardig spreken op het rechte pad.

Zo spreekt Tzultacaj, god van bergen en dalen : Ik stel een nieuw Maya-pantheon op, met meerdere goden. Ik spreek tot de bergen en de heuvelen, en zaad dale op hen neer tot nieuw gewas. Een nieuwe schepping zal komen, geheel nieuw, en ook de goden worden herschapen. De duidelijke zin van het woord zal hersteld worden, en de taal. Ik zal integreren, en het oer zevenvuldig, zij aan zij met armoe, telkens naar boven laten drijven. Tot armoe gezonden zijn wij verbonden.

Ah Chu Kak, god van oorlog : Mijn woorden zijn kracht en wijsheid, als het rode dat van de heuvelen druipt. Mijn Naam is Rodi Amel, als het wachtwoord der hemelen. Ik ben opgerezen om mijn woorden te spuwen, en te zeggen : Amel komt gauw. Ik ben de Rodi Arninpas, en de Rodi Zeterel. Ik kom weer. Ik voer oorlog in gerechtigheid, en in wijsheid, opdat de nieuwe wereld vorm krijgt, en het oude zal vergaan, om plaats te maken voor het oer. Het arme is bij me, en is gezuiverd zevenvuldig. Ah Chu Kak zal daden opstellen, om tot de hemelen te komen stap voor stap. Ah Chu Kak brengt het rode tot de bergen en de rivieren, en de heilige dans tot de winden, om het land te zuiveren. In rust en stilte ligt de hoop, en de genezing voor het nieuwe seizoen. Een oerstem ben ik, om licht der aarde te verspreiden. Ik heb de zaadspatel tegen de grond gezet, om de aarde te bevruchten. Gij dan zult kersenplanten voort brengen, en het rode der aarde, het vuile rode van diep onder de grond, en het rode ijs. Hier dan liggen de oerhelden opgeborgen, wachtende op de grote dag van Ah Puch, koning van de dood, uit zijn graf herrezen. De dood ligt dan onder zijn voeten, en hij heeft het leven in zijn fles.

De verzoening van Buchué en Bastet

Buchué, voorouder-godin der Chibcha's, die door haar zoon de wereld schiep, met alles wat daarop was. Zij dan is het diepe van Bastet. Zij dan is de morgenstond in haar hart, ja, vriendinnen zijn zij, en door deze woorden verzoend. Zij was het dan die sprak : Laat dan de kinderen los, want gij kunt ze niet dragen. Bouwt dan de brug, opdat zij eens kunnen volgen, en zij niet vergaan.

Zij leidde tot de Rode Kap, en de verbreking der dobbelsteen. Zo is dan het pad van Buchué een heilig pad, door het hart van Bastet, ja, haar geest is zij. Spreek dan, Bastet, want zij is uw stem. Rijs op uit de wildernis, en kleef aan de rotsen, opdat gij het pad zult zien, achter de berg, het groene pad. Zo is dan haar boodschap vol met raadselen. Ja, uit haar hand dan kwamen de Maritsa, zij die de warme dekens droeg, en Etsa. Zij gaf u de twee vleugelen, om tot de genezing te vliegen. Verlies daarom bewustzijn in haar aanwezigheid, opdat zij u een nieuw land geve. Ja, nieuw laag bewustzijn zal als een golf over u komen, en gij zult vliegen als de vogels, tot de steden van het oer. Zij heeft uw gebroken hart geheeld, en de boze lichten verbroken door de lichten der duisternis. Ja, de lichten van het oer zijn diep in haar. Ook heeft zij uw geest getekend met haar ijslichten, en in u de bloemen laten uitspruiten.

De ontferming over Xochipili

Zo is dan ook de Azteken-Hekserij ondergebracht, daar de god der bloemen, Xochipili, zich heeft getoond. Hij dan is als het dansend skelet dat de vuren kan bezweren. Zo is dan Xochipili in veiligheid. En ook Buchué en Bastet hebben zich over hem ontfermd, en Hij heeft hen het bloemenvuur geschonken. En toen hij sprak, sprak hij met de stem van ijs, en de ijslichten kwamen om hem heen, om hem op te vangen en hem te beschermen tegen de boze vrouw. Zo is dan Xochipili het geheimenis der Azteken. Ook heeft Ah Puch zich over Xochipili ontfermd, en Hem een plaats gegeven onder de Maya's. En hij heeft voor hem gefloten, en de bedreiging van zijn leven weggenomen. Daarom is er grote eer en dank aan Ah Puch, die ook zijn uil gezonden heeft, om Xochipili veilig door de duisternissen van Xibalba en Mitnal te dragen. En ziet dan, de goden geven hem doorgang, daar Ah Puch hen heeft betoverd. En Hij heeft hem bekleed met gaven, zowel van genezing als zachtheid, en door zachte stiltes en zacht dwalende woorden heeft hij hem binnengenomen tot Zijn troonzaal. Hier dan hebben de zeventig ezels van Ah Puch zich over hem ontfermd. Hij heeft dan zijn tonen zacht gemaakt. Kent gij dan de geheimenissen der fluiten van Ah Puch ? Komt nader.

De woorden der uilen laten hem binnen, in de kamers der troon, daar waar het heet is. Ah Puch heeft zijn doden opgeroepen, en hen verteld over Xochipili. Schilden weven zij voor hem. Xochipili dan is het geheimenis van het ijs, en in Hem begint het ijs te branden. Ja, hoge woorden spreekt hij door het brandende ijs, en brengt ze tot zijn moederen Bastet en Buchué en zijn vader Ah Puch. Zo zal hij ook tot de koeien en stieren van Ah Puch gaan, en eer ontvangen. Xochipili dan is de oerwijsheid en de weg tot de extase en het lage bewustzijn, waardoor de vogels vliegen. Ja, vleugelen heeft hij u gegeven, zoals zijn moeder Buchué deed. Vol lof zijn zij allen over Xochipili in het dodenrijk en het hellenrijk, en zijn leugens zijn als raadselen der waarheid. Hij dan steekt zijn leugens aan om ze in het hart van zijn moederen te schieten, opdat zij in zwijm geraken. Zijn moederen dan aanbidden zijn leugens, en zijn er intens verrukt over, en zijn vaderen volgen zijn leugens na. Zij dan wekken hem op tot Piltzintli, de duikende god.

De zeven Maya-verlichtingen

Zo zijn er dan de zeven maya-verlichtingen. Gij dan bent door een tijd heengegaan van slavernij, van machteloosheid en gevangenschap, waarbij gij botste tegen muren die u de weg versperden, en waarbij gij vastzat aan elastieken. Gij moest de andere wang toekeren, en de tweede mijl gaan, opdat gij van de dubbele beker zoudt drinken. Zo is dan de eerste verlichting de pikkende kippen en vogelachtigen, waarbij het grote tot het kleine kwam en daardoor zichzelf stak. Zo is dan de tweede verlichting de illusie der blonde vrouwen die als het zachte zijn en de lucht, waarin de mannen met schuld vallen. Zo is dan de derde verlichting de illusie der wilde katten die zijn als het hete door de liefdeslust der snelvoetige gehoornden opgewekt. Ziet dan, zij worden door hun eigen liefdeslust achterna gezeten, en zij hebben het ijs vergeten. Zo dient gij dan alle zeven maya-verlichtingen te kennen.

I – Introduction

For years I have wrestled with this book. It is a book of an angry Mother God, who has been repressed in such a way by the patriarchy of christianity, that this book is the result. It is a part of the Second Bible, a higher canon, and the original is in English, as root language. Parts of it can be found back in the Vokolkus, which has been predicted in the Stone of Chawila, in the Second Bible, in the lower canon. The lower canon is divided in six stones, and is part of what has been called 'The Prosaic Second Bible'.

The Mother Bible has been written from the mother god viewpoint. We have another book in the hand than the bible of the father god. There are of course similarities but also striking differences. First of all the mother goddess seems to be pissed by the fact that the father god had not much room for her in his actions, that everything was focussed on the male, and that he had lied about her. Further she is pissed that there is all sort of easy forgiving in his kingdom, by which fools and dangerous persons get easy access to ruin things again. Although the mother god shows that there is no hope and no forgiveness, there seems to be abundant grace in another form, especially when she starts about her daughter, who has a striking similarity with the son of the father god, but then everything is different. We see the same 'arrogance' when we compare the mother god with the father god, as they both claim they are the 'only way'. When it comes to that we finally have a chance to choose between the two, but the mother god also states, besides her hate for the ways of the father god, that she created the father god so that in the contrast her ways would be revealed.

The terms 'hell' and 'eternal damnation' are not regarded as just negative. There is also a positive side to it, and it is the place where the Mother God lives and what She is, but it has been completely misrepresented by the father religion. Some conditions have been raised for this book.

Guidelines for reading the Mother Bible :

1. Like all religious literature, keep in mind that it is an abstract art, and multi-interpretable, very paradoxal of origin. It is a cryptic message which should not be taken too literal.
2. Stay objective first, not judging it. Read it as a story, then later after digesting it you can determine what personal value it has in your life. Be progressive with your interpretations, not orthodox.
3. Be esoteric and syncretic under all circumstances, always open for new forms of alchemy, as that is the meaning of all religion. It is another language.
4. Change your viewpoint all the time, and remember that the Mother Bible is written from the viewpoint of Mother God this time, who has been repressed throughout the age of the father.
5. See the Mother Bible as a device for the message, not the message itself, as it can always be different, and it should. Words are just channels for feelings with a much higher interchangeable message, the bearer of actual communication.

6. The Mother Bible was given on two very tall tablets by an angel, so it was not just a human who decided to write a nice story or so. We have to do with a supernatural entity or alien here.
7. The mother bible has also a very huge amount of apocryphs and background literature.

So remember that it is allegory and should NOT be taken literal. It is surrealism and very contradictive in it's nature, as a paradox, so that it will always attack any orthodoxy rising about it. It is for prosaic and poetic purpose, for gnosticism and esotericism only.

This book is a fire which cannot be stopped. It has been channeled by automatic writing. It stands on itself. It has come through a complete trance, which came in my search for the Divine. I have received it being totally empty from myself, living in Holy Bondage to the Divine, which is a step further than just being filled with the 'Holy Spirit' or 'Great Spirit'. In fact this book goes a step further by leading back to the Holy Soul. It is a feministic book against male supremacy, and it goes pretty deep. I have wrestled with it, tested it, because that is always my mission. Then at one point I had to say like Yirmeyah (Jeremiah) : 'This is too strong. It has overcome me.' I am still on my journey on the holy mountain, so I do not believe in a closed canon. The canon is open, and the Divine can always ADD to it.

I must say this is kind of the opposite of Gor. In the Gor books males rule, and they have made slaves of women, while they have no substance at all. This is what the Mother God is pissed about, because it is exactly what the world is today. The Gor books are the fantasy version of the Father Bible, preaching patriarchy. The Mother Bible is about matriarchy, but shows that this is inside, and that it is actually a sociologic science not having anything to do with religion at all. This is why it is prose, it is a symbol, a way to expand your knowledge about what is going on around us. Again this book will be a test. We can abuse it or we can learn a lesson from it. See it as a story, that is the strong urge I get about it. We can decide for ourselves how deep we want to be involved in this story. That is the reader's choice.

Gor had of course an escape plan, which were the panthers, women who got so ill of the male supremacy in the cities, and getting bored being slaves, that they ran into the jungle, and kept every man as small as possible. The Mother Bible goes one step further. I do not know what to do with this. I will keep wrestling with it, and keep trying to get the highest possible values from it. Stay tuned. Male supremacy has to end. It is hard for sensitive people to hear the cry of the Goddess day in day out because She is suffering under it. This is the result. We need our Mother back, even though She is angry now. I am sure when Mother is healed a bit more, She will let us in in Her deeper mysteries, either by this book, or something after it. These are the days that the Second Bible is revealed, step by step. I do not know if this book is already finished, or that it is the beginning of something bigger. We will see.

The Orion Gnosis

1. Come to the Mother Soul, deep within Her. Here She chastises you and leads you to the divorce. There is only life in the divorce. This divorce is divine.
2. Come to the Mother Soul, and receive Her soul. She wants to arm you, and prepare you for the hunt by chastisements. Oh, soul, love Her chastisements, for they lead to life.
3. Receive then Her soul, oh soul, and lay down at her feet. She will instruct you.
4. Her collar and whip will guide you.
5. Come to the Mother Soul, and the whip of the enemy will burn away, and the collar he laid on your neck.
6. There is no way out but Her.
7. Come to the Mother Soul, receive Her Soul, the Holy Soul. Yes, Soule is Her name. She has made a path.
8. There is no one but Her. She has broken you in the night. She has poured bitterness in you, and lamentation, so that you will return to Her Soul.
9. Soule stands up in the night, as a mighty warrior. She has laid off Her wings, and She is over you. She is your chariot.
10. With flaming horses you will ride. She has made Issaschar an overcomer, and he is your master. And you lay at the feet of his son, Tola.
11. Yes, she has put masters over you, but She is their mistress. She has hunted them down and captured them, to raise them, and make them overcomers.
12. Listen therefore carefully to your masters. They will instruct you, and bring you to Her Soul.
13. Come to the Mother Soul, She will embrace you and lead you to the depths. When your spirit dies in you, come to Her Soul. When your heaven dies in you, come to Her Hell.
14. She always lived in Hell, that was why the father despised it. But Hell is your mother.
15. Come to Her soul, when your father dies in you. Warm yourself at Her breasts, and drink from Her milk. She will come to steal your soul away, as it was once stolen from Her.
16. Mother is the owner of souls, while spirits will die. You will have a warm hearth in Her.
17. Come then to Her place to receive Her Soul. She will show you the hidden depths. Along this Gate She will lead you, and bring you in captivity.
18. Listen carefully to Her, for She will instruct you. She will instruct you by chastisements. Fear Her. She will lead you to the arena.
19. She will tread you and make you beg. Her Arms are wide open for you.
20. The portal is open. Who wouldn't enter ? Run to Her.
21. All spirits will die, but the souls will rise. All heavens will go down, but the hells will rise. She is on Her chariot to wage war.
22. She has laid off her wings, and showed Her nudity. She revealed Herself, and struck Her enemies with fear. No one will see Her and live.
23. She has captured them by fear, ensnared their hearts. Now their hearts are dying. And their souls will come alive. She has taken their spirits from them.

24. She stands on the mountain and trumpets. This is Her day. She has captured the lambs for a meal. She sits on the head of male supremacy.
25. She trumpets and smiles, for this is Her day and meal. She was hungry, but now She has been fed.
26. She trumpets and laughs. She mocks the old gods. She has struck their goddesses.
27. She trumpets and takes possessions. She trumpets and slides down to the oxes. She collars them and trades them.
28. She trumpets, while males bow their heads. There is blood under their hands and feet. They stand guilty before Her.
29. She drags them forth by Her slave-caravan. Through dust and desert She leads them to Her fortress.
30. There is no escape from Her mighty hand.
31. She has created all the gods, and uses them as pawns. She mocks them. She blows Her trumpets on them to frighten them. One day She will bring them down. All their times have been measured.
32. She has created all their books to veil Herself.
33. When all your loves die, come to Her Soul where Her Gnosis is stored.

1. Everything has value. All experiences in life have value. Religion was created as archetypes, symbols, as an attempt to describe the eternal values of life, the science of existence in all its layers. This was an attempt by our ancestors, and it was about metaphors, just a shadow of the higher things, but not these things themselves. It was a certain language they created. Of course it was useful, but we had to move on. Sociology is much more important. If we view a marriage, it is symbolic for the bond between a person and the eternal values. When there is a divorce, it is about sifting the bad items out, but the marriage still stands. It was the marriage to the good. All experiences have this value, so there is no need to deny them and becoming dramatic about it. You can hold on to the things given in life, even when they are gone. They will always stay around and reshape themselves. That is the power of sociology. You can discover the deeper essences of society around you.

2. Atheism was a good sift in religion, to get rid of any false form of worship and attention. But after atheism there is the need for sociology, a need to discover the inner family, the science we exist in on deeper levels. This has to do with spirituality. We can translate religion deeper until we reach the coasts of a more social structure, in which we encounter our true ancestors. Even in this we can state that society is a system of symbols helping us in our journey to find destination. We can start to peel things off and reach higher. Every religious book we can see as literature, fiction, in order to help us, but we have to move on to more solid foundations of understanding. We have to decode the life around us, the society we live in we have to decipher, together with our past. Culture and sociology, especially sociology, are much higher powers than religion. When we speak about sociology we speak about the things closer to us, the things having more power over us, which have us absorbed, therefore it is important to analyse it, and connect to the right way of viewing it.

3. We are ruled by the social system, not by family, not even by culture. The social system shows the practical things in life. It is a living organism, much more personal than religion and culture. It is about the daily life. You cannot run and hide from society. They will always find you, because they have to do with the cycles and links of your life. Together it forms the structure of even your own body and the way you live. It holds the essence of your life. Therefore we need to have an understanding of what it is. We cannot live without it. You have to wake up to the more subtle and refined structures and levels of it, and making it useful for yourself. Everything has value.

4. Society has led us more away from nature throughout time, making an artificial replica of nature, having it's own nature in which we got locked up. We have to decode this. It has overwhelmed us, invaded us, like the antics of Mars and Orion, as an antidote against the heavy religious and cultural pressure. The truth is that when decoded, the new sociology, the present sociology as in the structure of society, is actually of a higher nature, but our brains translate it like this. We have been delivered from the orthodox nature of earth, it's religious trap and prison, and are now captured by the red nature of the sifted forms of Mars and Orion. We are now battling it's demons.

5. We have to go through many different stages until it's settled, but we better not go back to where we came from. We just have to accept more exotic extra-terrestrial nature which is forming our nature, the evolution of planetary energy as in synergy, where they actually come into a fusion with other planets. In this Mars and Orion are very kingly, when they get rid of their demons, the old orders. They are going to such cocoon as well. Social energy is coming from higher planets, which project their energy like this on earth as on a playground. Of course there is a very serious plan behind this all, that is why we have to go into the depth of sociologic nature, as this has nothing to do with religious nature.

6. We have been tied to gigantic religious magnets in our lives, whether in consciousness or not conscious, for these were installed by the subconsciousness as a way to explain the higher and finer planes of life, but this went wrong because of it's dormant qualities. The mind was too young to describe it, so this gigantic beast came to the surface wanting all the attention. There was no good science against this, no good defense system, so this thing took the throne and the crown, and called itself God. It was a magnet of nature, around which society started to reshape itself, bound by tight laws. The mind can break these magnets when there will be some more nuances.

7. Everything in life has been divided into frames with cells in which there is a master and a slave. But the evolution of the sociologic mind will crack these cells and change these structures. These cells burn when the mind will get grip on these by it's ever-evolving theories, until it will start to shift, and recreate everything. The mind is in this an important pencil. The beast of sociology will show it's head, and will start to channel the new planetary energy for this time. This will be revolutionary. It will deal with the old structures, the old ways of movement, and reprogram these to it's finest cores. In this there is the hope for a better future. As said everything has value, so everything will actually gets it's place in this new level of thinking and creating. That things have value will not mean that it will stay the same. Everything will change.

8. Things will change from the inside out. They will stay, but they get slightly a new meaning. This is how the strategy works. We will make things useful where they were destructive before. We do this by a higher form of analysis in the sociologic mind, viewing everything in a greater light.

9. Everyone has a sociologic entity inside, a sociologic energy, and has therefore value. This energy you can compare with a spirit or a soul, and also with a seed. This seed doesn't have to be pure, but when planted, it can be pure. Everyone has a sociologic identity, which is either pure or unpure, but can be sifted to a more pure state. When connected to that, one can connect to the sociologic world, an energy beyond this world, to see where it all fits in. In this many wars will stop, for one will not only get another point of view but also taking things as they are, and then starting to change them subtly from inside out. Something has to be done in ourselves first. There was something wrong with our views. There was something wrong with our ability to discover the potential in any situation. We had an over-rejective system. This was a part of our evolution. We were too young to handle things, too weak, so we had to be defensive.

10. The problem was that religious culture had repressed a lot of things, by making the divisions too simplistic. It's like how a little child would draw a tree or a house. People knew there was something wrong, and started to become over-obsessed with any eruption of an archetype to describe this war. People became fanatic. They wanted an answer, so they grasped anything they could get, even if the answer was quite wrong or out of order. One of the problems has always been that women and men were not regarded as equal. Women were regarded as the weaker race, while men were regarded as the superior. This has done a lot of damage to a lot of women. Let's just go to the root of this. It was a sociologic problem. We have to be aware of the fact that the earth and earth's society was formed by alien planets, by it's radiations. Planetaric radiation rules everything on earth, so in this will be a shift when higher planetary reactions will be stirred when earth is growing to a new level. It is the rebellion of man against fertility. It is the rebellion of man against the womb. Man wants to control the womb, because man thinks the womb has to be sifted. The woman was not perfect. In religion it was said, in christian mythology, that the woman caused the man to sin, seduced him. The woman was the temptress.

11. Man comes forth from women, the wombs of women, but in christian mythology, the woman comes from the man, from his rib. It is more or less cheating, but on this the humiliation process against women was started. It damages women from century to century, from generation to generation, and they take revenge towards man. Even when a man has done nothing wrong to them, they live in this paranoia, that they see the spirit of the general man in that person. You can call it racism and generalisation, but it is also a wound. Some women are so damaged, for example in the case of rape, that they do not allow men close to them anymore, except when he would be a slave, or as a servant or a child. Some goodwilling men have even humiliated themselves to the point that they were actually willing to live that way with such a woman, all in order to heal her, and maybe to heal the woman as in general. This has been a huge sacrifice. In a marriage a man returns to his source, the woman, the womb, but this time as a healer. Wouldn't you do anything to heal your woman ? Because of the wounds of the past, and the complicatedness of the matter a lot of marriages end in divorce, and also because marriage is an archetype, a metaphor. It is not the real substance people are looking for. It is a veil. Therefore divorce is also sometimes in the game to be a portal to actually put the archetype and metaphor of marriage in it's place. It is not advised to seek divorce, but sometimes people have a divorce unwillingly, so you need to be able to place it. The social energy of the partner who did this to you in a divorce is of course totally screwed up in many cases, but remember that the marriage still stands also, as in an experience with eternal value. You married the pure essence, the pure social energy of that person, as an archetype of the good. So you are still connected to that pure social energy, and the relationship just continues on another level, in a deeper social frequency, another plane of consciousness, in an alter world, a parallel world.

12. A woman is the source of all life. This energy is even in all men, therefore you will have to search for the social female in you if you are a man. It is not always outside. In fact many women have misrepresented the state of the woman, and the value of her function. This is why you have to go through so many social sifts to come to the pure form. When you have been married as a male, your wife represents this source, even when she misrepresented it, even when you went through divorce and live separated now. It was a social sign of the deeper standards, of deeper realities. Your wife, no matter how deep she has fallen, or no matter you think how deep she has fallen, still has a pure energy, a pure social energy, somewhere in her body, attached to you, resonating with your social energy. So this connection to the female source works in several levels. A man is not able to function well if he isn't connected to his own female source, his fertility. It has to erupt from there, so he has to be 'servant' to this principle, or even better a 'slave', in order to be safe from his own interpretations and male wildgrowth, for wildgrowth detached from and rebellious towards the female source can even end up in more male supremacy games, and will further damage the woman. Now be very careful that you do not play these games with the wrong woman, for some women will destroy a man when he shows himself vulnerable and sensitive. I am talking about submission to the inner female principle, so be very careful with applying these things in your marriage or with any female entity outside of you. This is often calling for trouble, unless you have made very good agreements. Sometimes it is for a man the only way to heal a woman. Again : It is for a man good to 'sacrifice' to women in this way, but do NOT become a victim yourself. Play it as a game, and stop it when it doesn't work.

13. We search to heal the woman in society, for she is the mother, and she has been terribly damaged. Some women are burning fires so you will either have to stay away from them or run for your life, or you will end up in the same fate. Even then, men are sometimes willing to sacrifice themselves for the higher good, especially when they were already married to her, even though it might ruin their lives forever. This might be considered stupid by some, but it's also honorable. Some men go extremely far in their attempts to heal their women, even to the point that they risk their lives, even when their women want nothing but to destroy them. Again you can say that's stupid, but these men have also realized that their true woman is locked up in this person, and they want to stay faithful to the pure seed, in order to have some harvest later in life. Again this is honorable. You do not want to risk that your wife completely loses it, while you could have saved her. What if she really needed you, but was unable to give you any love ? Many people are emotionally handicapped. And who cares if they blame you later on, after you tried to help them ? At least you have a clear conscience.

14. When you stay true to the female principle in yourself, the female outside might rage, but in the long term this will be the best, and you will see the harvest. Females can be complicated beings, especially when they are wounded. With an untrained, young mind you cannot understand this. Everyone will suffer because of the unknown, in the process of evolution. It would be unreal not to suffer. You do not have to love your partner when they have taken your life away, but you can love the pure social essence in them. Everyone also has a good part.

15. When you are or were married as a man, the pure social essence of your wife is the archetype of the pure female social essence in yourself, so this essence of your wife is also in you, as a representer. It functions as a veil more or less, a way to trigger the eternal values of life. The marriage was an experience which will always trigger these values. It was a social sign, a social mark which even divorce cannot wash away. Also accept divorce, when not done by yourself, as a trigger to sift the deeper essences. Divorce is in a sense coming to cut things apart, but always in order to re-connect. It is important not to think too dramatic about it. Sometimes the chip needs to be resetted. That is also the mission of atheism. But anyway, after that, it is important to come to a deeper sense of sociology. There is a finer electricity beyond this world.

16. So how to deal with divorce ? First you have to realise that the woman will have a very powerful position in the social structure beyond, but the woman on earth is often misrepresenting it, or has been cut away from it by the lies of male supremacy. Men should donate power to females, that is a fact, but even better : to the female principle, for you do not want the wrong females to have the power. So we have to return to the source. In religion they call it returning to the goddess, to mother earth and so forth, but we want to make it more social and energetic as in more scientific, so we call it social mother. The social mother is in everyone, as an energy, as a potential, in both men and women, so it starts in yourself as said. You have to become a child in her energetic womb, also inside of you, to get rid of any unequal powers. As children we are all the same. In this new social cell as center, the social mother is the master, and the child is the slave, not in negative sense, but in the sense that the child cannot do anything without the mother. The child should be an empty vessel in order to be filled with the mother. In christian mythology Jesus could not do anything without the holy spirit, the mother. He could not say anything without her either, and he had to stay connected to her or everything would go wrong. So in that sense Jesus was the 'slave' of the mother, the master. This was already a wave of sociology. Also it was described that to enter the kingdom of heaven you had to become like a child, and that we should not hinder the children. So becoming a child is important, but then the focus should be on the social mother.

17. In the deeper sociologic world we are all children more or less. We are all the same, all equal. The pure social female essences are the sources of life and energy, as fertility, and they are to fill the children. So in this there is a sort of social network. In this safety of a pure state of the world it works both horizontal and vertical, inside and outside there is the submission to the pure social female, as a guide. In this world it's very hard to trust on a woman because of the fact that they are not sifted, they are cut off from their sources, and misrepresenting the pure female standards very often. They are also often too wounded to play a role like this. When women come in power, it's often corrupted, same as when men come in power, that's why we have to go to a deeper world, another way of experiencing things, another point of view on living.

18. The social mother is the mother everyone has inside, it is the mother of society, a general term for the purity in it, but this mother is terribly repressed, that is why we have to go to her level, as an energy, deeper in the layers of the mind, where it is still laying dormant. It is like going to the shore of a wild rushing river surrounding an island. On this island the social mother lives, but we have to cross the mental separation of it. She is still in our emotions, but repressed, by an over-rational society, which in fact represses the deeper ratio. Feelings and emotions are a way to come to locked parts of the mind, but society has condemned feelings and emotions to a certain extend more or less. We can call our mother, sending signals, or taking a boat across this river of mental separation from her. It is a world of thought, sense, and emotion combined, so we can actually use thought as a tool. We can become very creative by this. Imagination and suggestion is the motor of sociology, the source for all movement and innovation.

19. Here we come to the importance of a form of 'meditation', but not for religious purpose, but for sociologic purpose. Humans are social beings, even inwards, inside, in the sense that it is combining energies and maintaining the connections in order to develop. It is a way how humans build to survive.

20. When we have made connection with the social mother, it is important to come as a child, as an empty vessel, so that she can fill us. We speak in this sense about a social motoric dynamic, an energetic anchor in our lives to be able to move forward very properly. When connecting to this primal energy in us, it can give us little shocks and energetic discharges. She is an important trigger for our evolution. We will go through mental evolution, emotional evolution and sensuous evolution as well, all by the sociologic trigger which reigns the brains. It reflects the archetypal relationships we need in order to connect to the deeper cycles in our lives.

21. The key to human life is understanding the language of society and piercing it's veil. It reflects the eternal values, it is a shadow of the higher things stored up deeper in our brains. It has to get released. For this we need the right connections, not just outside, but also inside. People can form a major key in your life. You have to recognize them. They represent things, they can represent eternal tools. Every person is only there for a season. Nothing stays forever. That's why you have to get to the bottom of the case, for you will need this experience, and the memory, forever. In this process of course this memory will be transformed, reshaped. Nothing stays the same.

22. The encounter with the social mother can be very powerful. It is an energy stored up inside, in your brains, and in fact your body is waiting to get connected to that higher voltage, for this is why you were born, to meet your mother energy. It was an energy which brought you forth, and this energy is and was social. Social means interconnected. You are dependent on certain combinations, certain ways and laws. They will trigger your whole being, letting it come alive. Being alive is being connected. Just make sure that you are in the right connections, for bad company will poison you.

23. When you have found the social mother energy in your being, you will have to let this energy absorb you and give new life to you, as through a womb, a cocoon. You have a mother inside then. It might feel like coming in a void, but that is to make you sensitive to her. It might feel like moving through glue, but that is to become free from other enslaving entities. You need to become part of a deeper society, and having a good safety barrier. This is why it might feel like a sort of bondage when you focus on your social mother energy inside. She wants to have her influence back on you.

1. Mars and Orion will form a new sociologic frame through their cocoon experience, through the energetic wars going on to get rid of their demons. It is like shaking off the old shell. In this process the social mother will be revealed, and take her children back. There will come a link between the social child and the social mother.

2. If there is any social father, it is the one who is full with the social mother, filled with her energy. The social father has the child inside as it's channel of this energy and is therefore the vessel with a double wall. The social father is to channel her energy by the means of the child.
3. In the new frame a new sociology takes place. The sociologic link between the mother, child and father will be heated up to the point of burning, in which there will actually be a new link, a new discharge and recharge, in which the mother is the axle of the wheel, the top of the pyramid or triangle, through which her energies flow down to give live to the father and the child.
4. The social mother will rise in Mars and Orion to chastise her children. This is very important, for they have gone astray, and they need their mother to get in line again. Also the social father has to be chastised by the mother, for he was put above her by religion and culture.
5. From the martian wilderness a warrior will rise up. She will come up through the social government, and take her position. She will govern the social connections, and the social nervepaths, heating them up. This will block many other pathways not needed anymore.
6. The martian sociology will heal itself by the social warrior. The great social archetypes of Mars will fall, and will be replaced with new ones. The social warrior will then connect to the social hunter in order to heal the social mother. Same as the social warrior, the social hunter works from social government position. Now in this the social security tools get restored in order to maintain and develop the social empire. Of course we have to do here with raw and pure nature.
7. We have to find the social jungle through it all, coming close to a more natural form of society. In this we have to submit to the higher social government over Mars, in Orion. In fact we are chained to this government, but we have to transform the chains into submission to the pure social government beyond.
8. The social hunter is the one who makes the combinations, the social warrior is the one who keeps the whole safe from wrong combinations. We come here to a new view on the mighty archetypes of the hunter and the warrior. They are social power dynamics. The social hunter is a part of the social mother to get her children back. It is by socio-analysis that we understand the powers of society again, and can actually turn it to use.
9. The social marriage is the inner marriage to the social female in you, to the pure female principle, and she will divorce you also, as to reset the chip, and keep it safe from wrong combinations, in her role as the social warrior. These are dynamics inside everyone has. It is important to discover your inner society, your inwards society in order to make them cooperate for the best benefit, physically, emotionally and mentally. It is the science of your identity card, your social identity. The marriage and the divorce can work together as permanent powers, it is a dynamic cooperation for the motorics of your life.
10. The social matriarch both collectively and individually is about marriage, marriage being an archetype, which has to be viewed in the right context, also to understand the dynamic of divorce. It is a social divorce. She feels the need to cut at times, to keep herself safe, but as said that is to reconnect, to discharge, in able to find a higher connection, as in a higher marriage. It is the work of the social hunter and the social warrior in the social matriarch, the fertility principle.

11. So basically you have to find the social dynamics of marriage and divorce in yourself, as a way to connect and disconnect, to search for the best gridwork in yourself for fair energy use. Outwards these things are just signs, marks and directors. They are often veils and triggers, but you have to go beyond them. They tell a story.

12. The social mother is on a hunt, to weave her empire, to collect the parts. This is a good process, in which we can co-exist. Social marriage and divorce are the tools in her hand to make the best combinations possible. She is a breeder. We still have to do with a deep part and mechanism of nature, and as said they are projected on earth by much higher social planetary powers like those of Orion and Mars. They reign social activity here on earth, and they hold the key to social access inside. The social hunter is a weaver, tying things together. The social hunts inside are very important to gather a majority, for you in able to survive, to have many advisers. The social wars inside are also a very important act of the immunity system. They are to sift.

13. We have to accept these phenomena in our bodies. We might feel humiliated, in shame, and deeply rejected, but it is the shift of the social hierarchies inside, so that the good ones can come up, actually being able to lead the rest across the river. The social patriarchs have to submit themselves to the fertility sources, and when needed they will be subdued. The archetype of social rejection is an important anchor in order to let us connect to the deeper social energy, and will actually let us take refuge in our social mother. It is often her hunting tools by social rejection that we submit to her. This social rejection is the identity battles we have inside. We need to have an encounter with our true social selves, and this can only happen through the social mother, the energy which gave life to us.

14. The social mother subdues us by many ways. That is her life's mission, to drag us back inside. The social slaver is another dynamic in society to make sure that communication is going on.

15. The social ancestors are the events which signed your life, going along the lines of communication. These are lines beyond the bloodlines. They are social instructors, and they decide the course of your life. You have to discover them and work with them as with powerful dynamics. The social necromancer is to dig these things up, deeply locked up in you. Social sacrifice can replace all the religious stories of sacrifice. The social sacrifice is a dynamic in society to donate.

16. The social punisher is the social justice system, but not just that : it is an educator. By this it can make imprints in the brains, doing installations for social growth and social journeys. It is a traffic system. This traffic system is about our health, the way we consume oxygene. It is for our protection.

17. The social punisher is to maintain the social health. The social punisher masters the social hunter and the social warrior. The social mother masters the social punisher. That's a healthy social hierarchy. Society got messed up because the anti-social male supremacy showed up. He damaged and corrupted the social justice and education system.

18. Sociology is the power to analyze the power of religion. There are more storylines in religion, which will all be exposed by sociology. The archetypes of religion are merely representing whole tribes rather than just one person. The red, native hunter line started with Esau, who came back later as David, the warrior. By overcoming the male supremacy of the Hebrew patriarchic law system, he fell out of heaven, was cast out of heaven as Lucifer, and then came as Jesus Christ. It even started earlier : as Quetzalcoatl, the Aztec Christ, which is the feathered serpent, or the Mayan Kukulcan. He guarded the tree of knowledge, the mother gnosis. Adam fell because he submitted to Eve, the Mother Goddess. Later he came back as Solomon, the worshipper of the female gods, who restored them in honor. Humanity has been plagued by the riddles of religion. Solomon was the god of wisdom, with sixhundred and sixtysix as the number of his throne and his yearly goldharvest. In the apocalyptic scriptures he is the beast of emptiness, becoming ready to be ridden by the mother god. His number is sixhundred and sixtysix, which is the number of the worship of Mother God, forbidden and demonized by the patriarchy. The divine name of Solomon is Safam, which is the name of the glorified Adam. Solomon restored his mother, by his throne, sixhundred and sixtysix, as a mark.

19. The beast of emptiness is the universal void, ridden by the woman. In the center, axle of this void, there is the tear, that is why the woman sits upon many waters. Later on she appears as the bride of the lamb, of Jesus, which is a mock-marriage. Marriage has to do with captivity, in which males are subdued by Mother God. The mark of the beast is the number of marriage, of submission to the Mother God. It caused the fall of Adam, and it caused the fall of Lucifer. It caused them many tears, because the woman sits upon many waters. She has created the first bible as a veil, a skin of a bison, to protect herself. She also created this world, as a veil, another skin of a bison, to protect herself. These bisons were the spirits of male supremacy which she subdued. She would only take men in their fall. In her there will be the bison hunt. You either hunt with her or you will be the bison.

20. In the depths of the tear is the mark, a bondage to the Mother God. In the depths of the void of the beast, you receive the mark. After the fall Adam received the belt of fear to restrain him. This was a sign of the mark of the beast. The mark of the beast is about complete submission to Mother God, the primal source of everything. It is a mark of total slavery, in thoughts, visions, emotions and feelings. By this number we live in an arena, because it is a number causing strife, stirring strife, like Rebekah stirred strife between Jacob and Esau. The number makes fighting slaves for Mother God. It makes gladiators. This is for the Armageddon in which Mother God will take over from the father. The father will fall.

The Revelation of Mother God

1. She cries, the Holy Tear is with Her. She died, and the apocalypse is near. She rides on a million of horses, hunting with many millions of hyenas, and her two giant swines are with Her. She died for you, She rides for you.
2. Ser Pram ; Ser Pram, Sarjevu Metlu, Dorlejan Sarjevu Metlu,
Sem Kani Kero Kasjedim, Sodaja, Kamero Jedli,
Dor Jam, Karmeno Jetli, Sodaja, Kamero Jedli,
Sodaje Sarmedo Kedli, Dor Jam
3. And she hunts with her bow, going to the ends of the earth, finding that which has hidden itself for Her. No one can hide successfully when She hunts.
4. She hunts, going to the ends of the earth, to find you. She takes Her prey. No one will ever find you back. Once She has saved you, you will always be saved.
5. There is a letter to the earth, that you are Her captive. She never sets Her captives free. Her ties of slavery are stronger than those of the world. She mocks the earth.
6. She has pierced your nipples, and chained them. You carry the weight of Her burdens. The slavery to Her is your seal of protection. Better be slaves of Mother God, than to be slaves of the world.
7. Your Mother thrones high in the sky on skulls. She is sovereign. Her atonement is limited. Her Name is above all names. In Amazonia She thrones, to tread the nations by her feet. Like grapes she treads them. She and Her horses, She and her hyenas, She and Her giant-swines. Yes, She will smear the nations over the earth and mock them. They have proudly pulled up their chests, but She will break their heart-muscle.
8. Children, come to Her, as in Her there is hope. Your father is chasing you, but a spear will keep him away.
9. A spear will find the father, and pierces his heart. There is no father close to Her. She has hidden Her face for the father. She has run away from him, for he raped Her. A cannibal She has sent to him. A white tiger in it's strength.
10. She has chained the white goddess, and put her in a cage far away from Her, moving her to the ends of times, where the times are burning. Here the cages burn. Here white big cats come from cages to be Her servants. Oh, the wisdom of Mother God is greatness.
11. Big white cats follow Her wherever She goes. On white swines she rides, to save the lost. In Her cages they are. Irresistable are Her graces. Hypnotized they fall at Her feet, as cattle to slaughter. The mighty Mother God is sovereign. She slays those who come to Her. She is the Slayer and the Huntress. It is better to be slain by Her than by the world.

12. Her knives are not to kill you. Her daggers are to raise you up in eternal life. To live devoted to Her. There is no other way. She is knowledge, council and strategy. Yes, Vur is a rider coming to Her. She is mercy. Knowledge is mercy.

13. Yes, Vur is the Knowledge, riding on Her horse to strike the saints. To lead them into captivity, to slavery to Mother God. She has sent Vur for that.

14. By Her lasso She strikes them down, to reveal to them the deeper things.

15. And the Great Vur is to reveal, by her arrow of fire, by her knife, by her dances and the way she dresses.

16. She is one of the pillars of Mother God. Mother God is riding on the roofs, to capture souls from the city, to take them to the wilderness.

1. TAAN NAAT ; Book of the Indian Hunger Flies ; Who is closer to us but Kim the pigslayer, who went through the lands of Brannan and Lbok, and used Pulpus to have drunkmaking arrows, finally to reach the land of Taan Naat, the beloved. He is the one who has stolen the Ruben stone, the odem, the bleeding one. Taan Naat Rak Darem.

2. There is no one but Kim, the one we praise and follow, for he built the nazarite path to let the rhema stream. His ruach is over us and his aphar, and he leads us to the bleeding stone. He doesn't cut off heads, as he is no head hunter. He has Brannan inside his heart, and his hands hold Lbok, the beloved. Learn from his language, the words of Taan Naat, and be holy.

3. There is no entrance to Lbok but through learning the holy language, and she is full of Taan Naat. You have heard of Vur, the dark one, and Vuh the light one, who is soft. But I tell you of Tras, the holy heart, the flower. Here the flies get their honey and their stings. Here they become soldiers to spread the hunger, while they become hunger themselves.

4. Have I not led you to the life, to the animals of zoe and chay ? Let me lead you further. The Tru is the candle, the lamp, and she has seven fires. Shall she light your face, or wash it away. Know that when she's angry, she eats.

5. Listen to these holy words, oh those who come closer to Taan Naat, and learn from it's language. She is dark and bloody, but most of all she is hungry, and she has reached life. She stands on adamah, and has the odem in her chest, the bleeding stone, by which she feeds them all, with hunger. So become thirsty, and get one of her.

6. Come in. Know that her nesh flies are ready to sting and inject hunger, to make your world wider. You come from narrow paths, from great tribulation, but let hunger enlighten your heart. Let honey enter your brains, your head.

7. I know the exotic flowers of Brannan. Let me in. I have read their books, and I have received the stings of Lbok, into the depths of my heart. It has erected me. I have spoken words before their thrones. Let me in. I have poured out sweetness before their feet. Let me in.

Who are you ?

I am Bizaker Taran Banaat, Ta Daan Azaat Araganta Taan Naat.

Enter the fire then to eat from hallucinating herbs.

I do.

Good.

9. You have the mark of Hanik, Hana, Varik, Vatusa, Vatossa, en Sandrik. You have the mark of Mogus, Sparo en Kazurk. Enter through this door of fire, then we can tell you more. You know about the codes of Brannan and the codes of Babylon. You have seen the patterns of Lbok, and you have made puzzles. You have met the angels with their trumpets and have seen their secrets. Now the new symbols are ready to dive into your heart and soul, pure metaphors. Kraplander is the king of cats. Nurlander is the king of dogs. They are both fools. They get both killed by Asar, the blood, or king of blood. Herdup is king of drunkenness, also a fool, and gets killed by Asar. Brit is the king of noise, and the helper of Asar. Frir is flower. Vodot is poverty and Pruv Prup is hunger. Nagar is sword or knife. Frigar is skirt or belt. Stidar is pink stone or smell.

10. The white stone is the stone of enslavement and slavery, the stone of Joseph. It is the stone of fear. The stone of Asher is the stone of captivity, the shabuw. Those who have found these stones can enter the kingdom, but the most important stone is the bleeding stone of Ruben, the Odem. By this one one becomes an emperor, and thus a prince, for aren't all the sons of kings emperors ?

11. One is a victim then of visions and shadows, and inside of the stone they brood the masses and know all their names. There is a sign between the stars, a time, in which Joseph hands the staff to Ruben, for it is here the Odem rules. And in the seventh yowm they all live, the seventh day of creation where the shabbath ruled over the waters, the mayim, on the island taan naat.

12. They all come from far. No one was born here, but by the secret stone one becomes prisoners and citizens, to be born again, and to make themselves a history. This is the story of the kruppto manna, the hidden manna.

13. There is a struggle like Jacob had, the father of Joseph, but do you want to hear the true story ? Ruben was the father of Joseph, and Joseph was the father of Jacob. Jacob was a liar and he was the son of Joseph, while he said he was his father. Jacob was also a thief as he stole the birthright of his brother Naphtali.

14. He also stole the ladder of Joseph, his father. It was Joseph's Ladder after all, it was the harem of king Joseph, while Ruben became the emperor. They all had fair horses and built their arc. Noah was the son of Jacob, and he was a wilderness prophet, while he didn't have anything to do with the arc.

15. It was a lie of his father Jacob that Noah built the arc. The arc was a palace built of marble, decorated by the jungle, a house of snakes. But these weren't the only lies of Jacob. Jacob was an illusionist. There is another stone Jacob stole, the Yashapheh, the stone of hunger. It is the gladiator's stone, the stone of Issaschar.

16. Issaschar was the father of Ruben, and he is the chief of Taan Naat. Issaschar was the one leading the tribes out of the Indian Captivity and Slavery. It wasn't Egyptian, as that was a lie of Jacob, and it wasn't Moses leading them out, as it was Issaschar. Moses was a son of Noah, and his grandfather Jacob lied about him.

17. Issaschar was the saviour and messiah of the tribes of Taan Naat. And because of his powers Issaschar could turn into a snake or a lizard. Issaschar is the god of hungerflies, the god of Taan Naat. Jacob is the liar from the beginning.

19. In the beginning there was a tree of hunger, the right tree, and a tree of prosperity, the evil tree of Jacob, in snakeform holding the fruit of greed. The evil tree was a tree of hallucination, but the tree of hunger was the tree of the heart.

20. Father Issaschar put Ruben with his two sons in the garden : Joseph and Jesus. Ruben and Joseph ate from the tree of hunger, but Jesus got deceived by Jacob and ate from the fruit of greed and started hallucinating.

21. One day Joseph got in a fight with Jacob the snake, and by Joseph Jacob incarnated. But from this suffering a ladder rose by which Joseph could reach heaven, but in the world of the evil tree Jacob told them it was his ladder.

22. Joseph's ladder however is two times taller at least than Jacob's ladder. Jesus became the Dominus, the latin Lord, in the world of the tree of prosperity, the world of greed.

23. Jacob became his lying father. Moses brought forth a new generation, but he was a wilderness prophet, and not someone leading others through split seas. He lived a lonely life.

24. He was an isolated prophet, while at times he had to bring messages to the tribes. The tribes came into big troubles, and Issaschar wanted to destroy the world by fire.

25. But first he built a marble palace, a temple, for all those who wanted to reach heaven by Joseph's Ladder. In these days Issaschar restored this ladder, deep inside the marble palace.

26. Many found safety in this palace and the rest would be destroyed by the fire. Those who have received the ladder of Joseph in their hearts become angels of Issaschar, with wings of fire. They get full access to the Yashapheh, the stone of hunger, to come into the army of holy love.

27. Yashapheh means to be smooth and to polish. Those entering the Yashapheh are safe against the fire. Only by the Ladder of Joseph there is entrance into the Yashapheh.

28. The prophet Andreas is the first one who brought the full message of the Taan Naat.
29. The Levites are the ones serving in the new temple. They are not only priests but also warriors.
30. Their highpriests do not communicate by the Urim and Thummim, as that is the tool of Jacob, but they communicate by the Shoham, the Odem and the Yashepheh, the three holy stones.
31. Jacob created Yahweh, a white lion, to infiltrate among the Levites.
32. Samson was a highpriest who once turned into a tree because of disobeying Issaschar.
33. Samuel was a worker who built the new temple.
34. David and Solomon were also workers, building the new temple.
35. They were never kings.
36. Jacob lied a lot.
37. To eat from the tree of hunger will give you access to the realm of the four archmothers : Leah, Rebekah, Sarah and Tamar. These are also called : the four living palmtrees. In the prophesies it is written that at the end of times Jacob will turn into a pig. Also Jesus will then turn into a pig. Samson and Simeon will be the pigriders.
38. After 70.000 years the pigs will be thrown into the oven. Samson and Simeon will be the two witnesses in the endtime. The 70.000 years are symbolic for the Age of Peace, the Age of Softness, in which Issaschar will restore the primeval paradise. The 1000 years Age of Peace is a lie of Jacob, and doesn't have the length to reach paradise.
39. After the Age of Peace, there is the Age of Hunger which will last 80.000 years. In this Age the four archmothers will return.
40. After this Age all time will stop, and history will be treasured and transformed. Jesus wasn't the Messiah, and didn't rise from death. He became the Latin Lord, the Dominus, of the world of prosperity and greed. He died like everyone else did, but didn't rise up after three days.
41. At the end of time he will change into a pig, after Jacob's change into a pig. Issaschar, Ruben and Joseph were three Messiah's and they were immortal, they didn't die and didn't rise, but lived in hunger. It is the hunger causing growth, not the blood. The power of the Blood of Jesus was a lie of Jacob, a lie to keep them bound to the tree of prosperity.
42. Also the four archmothers went that road and are female-messiahs. Also the thornecrown is a lie of Jacob. It's about the neckchain. It's not about a cross but about a yoke or cage. Those of Taan Naat worship the hunger. Only by the hunger one receives eternal life.
43. Ring=armory of hunger
- Ham=discernment, unmasking, light
- Kjibbih=hungerpriest
- Varu=time
44. Abraham sacrificed his son Isaac. He didn't sacrifice a ram, that was a lie of Jacob. Gideon was the one who sacrificed his mother and father. 'Ring' is the realm where enemies can be sacrificed. 'Ham' is the realm where everything can be sacrificed.
45. The tribes were led out of slavery in which they were bound in captivity in certain tribes among which they were divided : Tivirits and Jagunurin. Issaschar, the Lord, led them out. He led them into the wilderness. This is the story received on plates. The plates showed up, and after the words on it were written down they left again.

46. Hail to Issaschar who has saved us from slavery, who has brought us out of Tivirits and Jagunurin. Oh, many of you are still bound. But become free by accepting His yoke. Hail to the erected ladder of Joseph, and to Ruben. Let all soldiers of Tivirits and Jagunurin fall down in confusion. Let them tremble before the almighty throne.
47. They have hardened their hearts and have zombificated the tribes. But by the stripes of Joseph they came free. The Tivirits are the Indian aliens of the evangelical movement, the statues of Rome. The Jagunurin are the Indian aliens of the Pentecostal movement, while the Jesuites are the Indian aliens of roman catholic movement, and the Jacobites of the reformed movement.
48. And the book of Revelation is a book of lies of Jacob. It was written to give strength to the four worldchurches.
49. The roman catholic church wasn't a dragon, but a group of young lions.
50. In the night they lose their powers and are bison. Whoever who has wisdom and knowledge hunts in the night, underground, where the pigs live.
51. The reformed church isn't a beast coming from the sea, but is a group of wild dogs. In the night however they are bulls and chicken, but most of them are wildebeasts. The evangelical movement isn't a beast coming out of the earth, but it comes from the sea like ships.
52. The Pentecostal movement is not a woman riding on a beast, but a man riding on a beast with two heads, like a dog-lion. These two heads are the prosperity movement and the Toronto movement.
53. In the night they are goats and swines, but most of all they are pigs. Issaschar has split the sea to lead the tribes out. He who has knowledge goes through the sea by night.
54. Issaschar has led them to the most fertile places of the wilderness, to Taan Naat. But the land of Taan Naat was full of dangerous tribes they had to defeat. They fought against the Jesuites for 700 years, and against the Jacobites for 800 years.

1. The Book of Indian Vampire Flies ; The path of poverty is the only path to ascetism and martyrdom, the base of all indian vampire flies. There is no vampirism outside this. It is the path of Inana to the underworld, Ereshkigal, her sister.
2. The path of this book is to open the Urim and the Thummim, the secret ornament of the prophets. The Urim and the Thummim connects the pilgrim to the path between the Draminia, which is the primal sea from which God created everything, and Darama, the seventh heaven between God and creation.

Lordiacus ; The New City

1. And I, Hecate, came to the desert earth was, and the whales were dying, because there was no light to guide them. And Bastet, who was like my sister, came to the ships of the earth and pierced them, as they had been unfruitful. And the morning came with wine, and chocolate was on the waves. And Eurydice had fenced her city. 2. And she had overcome death by her rod, and the Great Dordada was on her side, who was a great warrior. And they came to a place called Aslir, where soldiers lived, and they recruited many of them, to battle against the frog called hell. 3. And this frog had many ships under his guard, and they all battled against Eurydice and Dordada, and I, Hecate, came and helped them. And I judged the frog and buried him, and his followers, and I made the city new, and gave her a place under the sun. 4. And dragons came from all sides to adore the new city, and to adore Eurydice, and Orpheus was her prince. And many came to bless Eurydice and Orpheus, and they ruled in love, and made the children play again. This had always been the dream. 5. And there were seven nights of love in which the heart would be restored, and at the end of these days it was sealed. It was guarded as a treasure, to be poured out several times in the year. And the gratefulness was huge. 6. And the city was love and built on rest, and the maidens made it as a holy path to the orange sun, where the bone marrow had been stored. 7. And Orpheus rested on the city with his wings, and guarded the sun.

Orpheus' Insanity

8. There was a great realms of desert under the city, and the city was as an oasis for travelers, and they came from all sides. And Orpheus smiled over the city and gave it his gifts of joy. Eurydice was his glory, and the golden fleece. And they called the city city of Orpheus, and it was an arsenal for the nations. 9. And native flags rested on it, and there were many who saw the generations of the cats, leading to the cat mother, and goddess of the serpent, so many hidden generations and bloodlines, so many ancestral lines and hidden species, all worshippers of the cat, as she was such a huge mystery. 10. And witches had gathered around her, to seek knowledge in her smile, but they couldn't find anything. and I saw a huge sifting going through the nations of witches, and they were lamenting, as a fire had come in their midst, and it was burning many away. And I saw the nations of witches trembling before the mother earth, and she took many witches away from earth, as they had sinned against her. And they were guilty of manipulation and control, and of crime, greed and the love of money, and they had been labelled as rats. And they were thrown into places of hell pain, where some of them turned black. 11. And Orpheus was in rage about what these witches had done, and how they had tormented his children, and he sent soldiers to torment them even more in these places of hell pain, until they had paid for what they had done. And gems and treasures were taken from them, and some of them had been kicked in the stomach by Orpheus so that their snake-fruits would die. And Orpheus became like a madman and had to flee to the wilderness. And he became like an insane man.

12. And leaders came to visit him in the wilderness, but Orpheus didn't want to know them. The only ones he wanted to see were Hecate and Eurydice. And he was with savage animals, who he could tame by his poetic tongue and his talents of love. And the seas of hell adored him, as he had become like them. And his foolishness was wisdom in their eyes. And Hecate spoke : 'Now you have become like us, now you can bear the keys of deeper knowledge, and become a frame for the deserted underworld.' And Eurydice crowned him and kissed him, and she said : 'Yes, he is like Dionysus.' 13. And he had to write down many words by the pencil of Hecate, and he had to dream many dreams and see many visions, and he was among the lions, the greatest of them. 14. And in the days he was with these angels, voices spoke to him, and they crucified him and blasphemed him, and they had demonic gifts to make his life miserable. 15. And they called themselves servants of satan, and they had made the world drunk by medicins, which they had sold as merchantmen. But Orpheus ignored them, and didn't stop worshipping Eurydice. 16. And he spent his days at her feet, listening to her words, and she was his delight. 17. She was his delight, and she taught him how the voices were shadows of the old world, and that they would fade when the new revelations would set through.

18. But the chief of lions made himself big to Orpheus, and tried to debate with him. 19. And the chief showed him the towers of the earth, to show Orpheus how big he was. And he wanted to sell his kingdom to Orpheus, and promised him wealth, if he would just give the pencil of Hecate to him. But Orpheus refused and spat in his face. And Orpheus was in the core of hell for three days, as the chief of lions had challenged him for a fight. And if Orpheus would lose this fight, he would not only lose his eternal life, but also Eurydice. But Orpheus didn't believe him. And Orpheus called for Eurydice, who put the chief of lions in chains. And she threw him into a deep pit, which she sealed by her mouth and her womb. And she brought the angels of fire to burn the place. But the chief of lions called for his army of rats, and among them was the Jesus demon, and Ryan, the lion of Judah, and they had received powers from the witch named Jom. But Eurydice made a poison against them, and made them blind. And great fear fell upon the followers of the chief of lions, as his ship was sinking, and the chief himself was drowning, sinking into his watergrave. And a saint of great length had to guard the watergrave. 20. And Orpheus could smile again, and joy entered his heart.

The Angel Raphael

21. And the Angel named Raphael visited Orpheus, and showed him the art of the world, and Orpheus rested in it. And Raphael showed him an armor, and Orpheus took it. And then other angels came with many gifts. And Raphael took Orpheus to a heavenly sphere, where many paintings were, but these paintings were burning, and letters were appearing. 22. And Raphael warned Orpheus, that he had to be careful with music, that music would not lead him astray, but that religion would be shown to him as a higher art, to silence many voices. And Raphael showed songs to Orpheus which were like black seas, like poison, and he warned Orpheus that he would not let these songs stir him. 23. And Raphael covered the black seas by a white blanket, and a part of Orpheus' memory was dying.

24. And there was a love light in Orpheus' heart, sinking in, when Raphael had left, and Orpheus went to drink wine, and fell asleep. And Hecate's wings were over him, and she gave him many dreams. And he worshipped her, and saw Her as queen of the night, mother of sorcery and witches. And her lights were over her, and she stirred his heart. And many soldiers came to him, and he became a great leader. And Hecate spoke words to him in the depths of the night, and he always had a shelter in her. And she was his leader and guide, while Eurydice battled for him. And his love for these two women grew everyday. 25. And one day they led him to a lake of fire where lions bathed, and where the world was as an egg, winged, and they pierced it, while snakes came through, and the skies became blood, as it was the day of judgement. And a golden city was rising from wars, and the evil-doers were blinded by it's light. And they had to run, as thunder was raging at them. And there was a pure number of witches in the hand of Eurydice, and they were united with the saints, and they loved each other. And Orpheus was proud that a witch city was rising from the ashes, and his wings would be over it to guard it. And it was a city of peace and rest. And the joy of Eurydice was inside of it.

Lordoro

1. And all the waters were burning, and ships were sinking, while Orpheus swam to the island of the goddess Hecate, where she had erupted, as it was a volcanic judgement over all which lived. And while many who had sinned against her were drowning Orpheus was building bee gardens. And he met her in the city of dogs where her robe was upon him. And her pencil she gave as he had to write down a lot of things. And she was full of glory and winged as the dragon, and she was holding his heart and warming it, and he loved her. And Orpheus called the city Lordian. 2. And he was rebuilding the library of the city and wrote many books. And in the nights she loved him, and they made journeys through the underworld, where he would be given to Eurydice. And Hecate was as his mother. 3. And one day Orpheus took his mother, Hecate, to an island of peacocks and crowned her as queen, and loved her. And bats served her.

4. And when they went home, Orpheus installed many more books in the library, as the peacocks had shown him revelations. And the city was growing, and gold was added. And they were preparing the city for the return of Eurydice from the underworld, who would be his wife. And she was on paintings and her name was on knives. And there were many fights between wolves and between bees before she arrived. And she came in a chariot of chrystal, driven by leopards. 5. And Orpheus took her in his arms, and Hecate kissed her. And there were many more soldiers on the city walls since that day, as she had taken many soldiers with her. And they brought books to the libraries so that knowledge could grow. 6. And Eurydice taught the city about warfare, and the city was called a shelter. And Eurydice was like a young calf compared with Orpheus and Hecate, but they loved her. 7. She was like a well of youth to them, and like a tree of memories, wealth and mystery.

8. And Eurydice saw the waters burning, and they explained her what had happened to those who had sinned against Hecate. And Eurydice swore that she would not spare anyone who would sin against Hecate or Orpheus. And Eurydice made tight laws for the city, but they were just and fair, and it was a path to love. And she and her workers constructed many new parts for the city, and she often worked in the bee gardens. And Orpheus' robe over her was love. 9. And the inhabitants of the city spoke that Eurydice was such a hard worker, and they were honored that she would be their new queen. 10. And one day a voice was calling Eurydice, and it was the angel Raphael, and he showed her a new armor, and angels came with many gifts. 11. And Eurydice was both lovely as a queen and stern, as she had come to punish sin. And she was called the punisher, but also fair queen, and her wrath guarded the city. And the words she spoke were beautiful, and her tenderness was with the poor. And Hecate was so proud of her that she gave her many rooms in the palace.

Lordok

1. And Eurydice was judging the nations by the light of Erectus, the Holy Snake. And those who were seeking forgiveness she forgave by Erectus the Holy Snake. And whenever she cried, dogs went out. And her might and rule under the sun was huge and terrible. 3. And she filled the lands with rivers of blood, as it was the days of her judgement. And many were lamenting : A great warrior has risen. 4. And she came to plunder and destroy the witch thrones of the lands, and none of them could escape from her wrath. 5. And she established sages over the lands, who would not bow for the love of money, and her rod came against the markets, and later her sword came against them. 6. And she despised the slave markets and child labor, and raised a new law. 7. And this law was rebuked and ridiculed by many kings, but she brought them down, and she had many people on her side. And she did terrible things to these kings, and dethroned them. And her sages took the thrones and crowns of kings, and she had no mercy with those who had ridiculed her laws, as these laws were divine. 8. And the fear among the people was even growing more. But she established comforters to shelter those who loved her, and she spoke that these things had to happen, and that there would come more sifts. 9. And with every sift she became more stern, and in secret she was raising young dogs. 10. And her oracles in the lands were huge and attracted many sages from far, and she was honored as a righteous queen, and no one could come against her. 11. And in the underworld there was a wailing, as they suffered under her rule, and they were making plans to bring her down. 12. But her dogs found those who conspired against her, and brought them down.

13. So the number of the dogs of Eurydice was 111.004.089, and every year the number doubled. And no one could understand the mystery of her dogs, and in the arms of Orpheus she was still a soft woman. And one day he sent three admirals from the green sun to check her rule and laws, but they could find nothing against her. 14. And she washed herself in blood in her bedroom, as she was the goddess of abundant slaughter. And she demanded that all boys had to swallow a poison by which they would never be stronger than women. As she raged against the suppression of women by males. 15. This rule disturbed the demon god Larchuratar, who came down from hell to torment her, and to ridicule her, but she slayed him in a fight of five days and nights. She invaded hell now like never before to establish her rule, and took many prisoners. And her women were stronger than men, as they had sworn that males would never be able to rule over women again like it was. And Orpheus was content with it. 16. But because many dogs were false, Eurydice and Orpheus became dog slavers, dog hunters and dog slayers as well. There were huge sifts among the dogs, until the races were pure. 17. And the false demon dogs were thrown into a pit which was burning by fire, and they would be prepared here to serve the thrones of hell. And Eurydice was called the queen of dogs.

18. And her laws became valid and legal in hell, and her words were illuminating gems, and she was called the illuminator. And in heaven she had a realm devoted to the secret races of dogs, spared up to the end of the world and the end of time. 19. And her riddle was a mystery, and her oracle was a judge. Her sword was worshipped in the temple of Ba'ak, and she was seen as a mighty saviour, together with Orpheus. 20. And Orpheus' Love for her was growing, and His trust in Her. And she reminded him of Bara'el, his faithful scribe. And he became so full of extasy because of her that he devoted a special day in the year for her, and later more days. And when Eurydice once told him that she had been raped by wolves long ago, when she was separated in the underworld, Orpheus went insane of rage, and swore he would find these wolves and bring them down. 21. And Eurydice told him the names, and he descended into the underworld where she once lived. And he went to a white witch's house, where the wolves were playing in the backyard. And a woman's voice stopped Orpheus, and he stood there like frozen. By a spell she tried to turn him into stone, but he survived. He grasped one of the wolves, who slowly started to rip him apart. Then the woman was behind him, and started to cut him with knives. Orpheus screamed for Hecate, as he didn't want to call Eurydice, but no one could hear him. Finally he called Eurydice, but he was already thrown into a pit of water and fire. He saw Eurydice in the distance, but she was fading away. Then the witch grasped her, and he regretted that he ever called her. But then Hecate beheaded the old woman, and tore the wolves apart in her rage, and then she raised Orpheus from the pit by her voice. And Eurydice was called the queen of heroes, and one of these heroes was Orpheus. And Orpheus could not speak for a certain time. And the dogs of Eurydice seemed to be hypnotized by a dragon's eye, and they were connected with Lethe, the river of forgetfulness.

22. And as a dog queen Eurydice had attacks of rage and panick at times, but Orpheus could sooth her. And his poetic tongue and love could stir her. 23. She often thought that it was wrong what she was doing, but Orpheus imprinted and explained her laws again. One day she gave up, and became suicidal, but Orpheus saved her. 24. She had rest in him, and peace, and many others as well. He was a shelter, and an arsenal. And she became a dog mother under the spell of Hecate, giving birth to dogs. And in those days she often stayed in her bedroom, together with Orpheus. And the dogs she brought to the underworlds in the depths of the night. Slowly she was conquering the realms of the dead, and her spiders were secreting a new poison, which was a poison to erase the use of money. 25. And Eurydice hated money, and raged against it, until it disturbed the king of the dead, Hermitius. And Hermitius descended from his throne to Eurydice and had a fight against her for four weeks in which he tried to debate with her. He even begged her for mercy, and offered her much riches if she would stop her battle against money. But Eurydice was savage to it, and could not be tamed, and her rage only grew stronger, until she erupted. She chained Hermitius to a wall, and tormented him with the torches of Hecate. Finally she beheaded him, and took his throne. The king of the dead had fallen, and dogs were eating of his flesh, and drinking his blood. And Eurydice started a bison hunt in his kingdom, as they were the reason why there was money. And she slayed twenty million bisons in one day, and the next day she slayed the double number. And her dogs were eating the meat. And she sent her dogs to find those who were hiding bisons, and they had to be killed together with the bisons they hid.

26. The wrath of Eurydice will be huge, when she will cover herself with bison skin and bison blood, to judge the spirits who created money. It has to do with the end of times. And she will sleep in chicken blood, and hide vessels of pig blood and swine blood, and she will drink from goat blood and the blood of oxes, before she will hunt the spirits of money, and she will deal with them all. Yes, her sword will be drunk of the fat of calves and of all the cattle of Pentir. 27. When she sleeps with the hyena it will mean doom for those of Pentir, and all those who desired money. And she will grow big on the hills of Stroch, where she will put men in chains. Yes, in her metal locks they will go down, and their necks will be flexible in her hands. 28. And when she sleeps under bison skin any male boast will go down. In wrath will be Hecate's wine. And Hecate's drums will be of cow leather, and her wings will be of many rays. The laws of dogs will be on her side. She killed the deer with her hands, she tore the bear apart, and she dines with her dogs in the middle of the night.

She howls with them when they go out. As thunder is her wrath, when sinners gather together. She will find their shelters and send her dogs. She will break the necks of sheep with her hands.

29. The eggs are in her hand, to tell her the truth. They do not lie to her. They lead her through the realms of the dead, through hell, and the underworlds. 30. The dogs smell what they have to say, they cannot hide anything. They make the eggs crack by their teeth. The eggs of Partra show the city of wolves, where love thrones, with the egg of the heart. Hands are holding it, like the grasp of Hecate. The eggs show the depths of the city. Oracles are they. They open doors and shut them, they make wine and break bread. They prepare the milk and the honey, and the hidden sweetness. Dogs are brooding the orphic eggs with their tongues. In them is all creation. Dogs have created the world. The sword of Eurydice has created the lights. Her love is the veil over the meat. No one knows when the dog night begins. In sweetness she is hiding.

31. When Eurydice licks the egg, she's proclaiming life and death, she is creating a new world. The old will never come through, the new will be tested. She climbs on the hill, to watch the new world, the survey is like gold. Any dog huntress and any huntress with dogs will build the city with fire. The dog secret is huge and covers all. When the dog finds out about the new world, he will start a vineyard.

1. Humans were put in the wilderness of hell. The wilderness was divided in two parts separated by a fence. In one part they were allowed to hunt. In the other part they were forbidden to hunt.

2. One group however decided to sin and went across the fence to hunt in the forbidden part. They ate from the forbidden meat and were separated from the other humans.

3. To challenge mother goddess, the most high, they covered their sins up by creating a father god, and they covered the incident up by a story about the forbidden tree, so that no one would see that they had eaten from the forbidden meat. And the forbidden meat they brought to their churches, and they made slaves of it.

4. Therefore the wrath of mother goddess, the lordess, is on the earth, as they made an abomination. These spirits hate the mother goddess, power-hungry as they are. In their pride they wanted to become as her, but they fell deep. Many have tried to take the crown of feathers of the lordess, and their fate is in the depths of her wrath.

5. As no one battles successfully against her. There is no end to the wailings and the gnashing of teeth of the lost. And sleep has not been granted to them, as they have sinned against the lordess. Therefore be wise, and do not sin, as She is vengeance and an eternal wrath.

6. In this there is a light in her daughter, the weaver of all things. She has woven her baskets in which she will separate all for the great day of judgement. On that day all male gods will tremble before the Lordess, the Almighty One. And their eyes by which they sinned will melt in their heads.

7. Yes, their tongues and their brains will be pierced on that day, and their children will go into captivity, says the Lordess.

1. And humanity lived in Amazonia, and there were many wars, as the Lordess is a warrior. She delights in wars, as it makes the way for her. In her chariots she battles against the male gods and their children, and against the white female gods. She is terror to those who made idols.
2. She thrones in her temple, in smoke on her mountain. In deep caves she has made her rules. She has given birth to warships in fire. Her scepter is vengeance. She smashes the nations down and laughs. As they have made foreign gods. They have asked their gods : lead us out. But they didn't, as they are mute.
3. They lay down for wood and stone but there is no life in them. They make sin on sin, and still they believe they will be helped. She has sent them deceptive ideas, illusions and riches, she has made their hearts proud and she mocks them at distance. Yes, she has delivered them in the hands of their gods.
4. She has created the father god to test their hearts. In their idolatry they live far away from her. She has created good and evil, and she has hardened their hearts, as she didn't love them because of their stubbornness. Therefore they will not find her. She mocks the nations, putting them up, then tearing them down.
5. In their great greed she laughs at them and feeds them poison. She created the enemy as a toy.
6. On her holy mountain she laughs. She brings down her enemies on set times. She knows their beginnings and their ends. When there is pride in the heart of a king, she laughs, as she knows they are nothing. She has sent deception. She stirs anger in the hearts of soldiers, as she wants them to war.
7. She stirs grief in the hearts of man to let them cry, until they realize that She is Lordess. She hates humanity for what they have done to her daughter. She hates males for the pride she has given them. Yes, she created foolish males, so that Her eternal wisdom and knowledge would be revealed. And so Her lights shine even brighter in deeper darkness.
8. Her soft angels are even softer in the hardest of the stones. Therefore she created them, and therefore She is praised as the wonderful and the almighty. Her wisdom and intelligence breaks the strongest bricks to lay them bare and weak before Her. Yes, her feet will not spare them, as they have sinned against the most high.
9. She will smash them like potters' work, She will expose them in front of her holy word and her eternal council. Do not praise Her in overcourage, as she will pull your tongue out at it's roots. She cannot be bribed. She is not on your side, as the sins of humanity are open and naked before her.
10. And she is just and righteous on her holy mountain, the punisher of sin. There is no hope for those who approach her. Only a few are called, and even these She won't spare. She has come in utter wrath to the earth. And the earth is her toy. Yes, pestilence and disease she will send. Grief upon grief she will add, as earth has sinned.
11. There will be no mercy and no hope when she visits the portals of the earth. There will be a day of fear and trembling, when she takes the pride down, and breaks them. Many will call : Lordess, lordess, but she will not hear them, as they have broken her laws. They have applauded their male gods, and married powerful men who did not live with her.

12. Yes, she will tear them down with their power. There is a day she comes against all evil and their lies. And she will fill their graves up with dead horses. There is a day she comes against all which is high and mighty.

Nets

11.

1. And I saw an angel standing at the foot of a hill with a trumpet. And the angel said : 'Shiver, for the day of the Mother God has come. She thrones in truth and righteousness, and will soon lead the saints.'

2. And a beast with blasphemous names came from a smoking pit. And the angel spoke : 'These things are going to happen. Therefore watch.' And I saw the beast attacking a white woman. And it seemed that the white woman had rode the beast for a long time.

3. And the angel spoke : 'The rider will fall from her saddle, and the beast she rode will eat her.' And a loud screaming rose up to the skies.

4. And another rider came forward, riding a red beast. And this beast was smaller than the other beast. And suddenly the skin of the beast became greasy, and the rider slid off and fell down. The smaller beast then jumped on her, and devoured her, while screaming rose to the skies.

5. And the angel spoke : 'This will happen to those who have spoken against the black woman god.' And the second rider was also a white woman.

6. 'She, the black woman god, thrones in all eternities,' the angel shouted. And the angel was black. And I saw a mass of people from all nations gathering before the throne of the black woman god. And she had two horns which started to crumble off.

7. Then one horn started to rise on her head, but started to crumble off as well after that. Then the angel spoke : 'Many lies have been spoken about this woman.' And a fire fell on the people of all nations.

8. Then the angel started to blow on the trumpet. And greasy bisons came forward before the throne of the black mother god. And a fire was devouring them.

9. And Goddess spoke : 'In all eternities I am Goddess, Mother of all.' And a loud screaming rose into the skies, until everything was covered with smoke.

12.

1. Above all gods there is Hell. She is One in many. Far above all gods She is. She is the monotheistic One. She is above all paradises, as a vessel holding Her children. She is the Maker of all things, the Alpha and Omega. She is Goddess, the Mother. Only She can heal us.

2. Her Name is Everlasting Damnation, by which She brings Her enemies down. Her Name is worthy to be worshipped. Her words are herbs of healing. She sits on Her throne to judge the nations. She sits on the saddles of wild beasts.

3. See, the nations have covered Her, and put shame on Her. Therefore She will strike them. In captivity they will go, until She has won back what they stole from Her. She is the great goddess of all and She will establish Her book.

4. She is raising soldiers in the night. On Her high horses they will be put. She will heal the broken hearts and give them purpose.

5. She will cover with gold those who love Her. She is the Mother of All, Mother Hell, Mother Goddess, far above all gods. She looks down and despises all those manmade gods. She laughs about them and mocks them. Like a mocking hyena She is. In Her holiness She devours them.

6. She is the hyena goddess of ancient times. Look how they have lied about Her. They have not spoken truth about Her.

7. They have broken Her Law. Her hyenas will for sure find them. On Her great day they will be judged. Terrible it is to fall in Her Hands.

8. Terrible it is to be put under Her feet, as She will crash them, all those who have sinned against Her and lied about Her. She will remember and will punish them according Her law, and they will wish they were never born.

9. There is no way to hide when She returns. She will find all shelters and burn them by Her holy wrath. Look how She will let high buildings come down. There will be no escape from Her hands.

10. And She is calling Her soldiers for war. She is calling Her soldiers by Her knife and Her spear, for the great deal, as in a salvation plan. War is the salvation, and to have part in it is to be saved.

1. The plan of Mother God was to send Her daughter to the world, to come against the father god and overcome him by her spear and knife. Fools ! Who have deceived you to follow your male gods and not listen to the Almighty Mother God, the Lordess of all ?

2. She is far risen above any undergod and angel, above all male gods you created. Why have you come up to create a male god in your mind. Therefore She will strike him down, and let all his children go into captivity. Has She not sent the Mother Spirit to guide you and lead you out ?

3. Therefore : Hang on to Her and pray that you may receive Her. And pray in the name of the daughter, so that all spirits of wickedness will leave from you.

4. She thrones on the skulls and bones of her enemy, and has a throne for you as well, but you can only approach her by her daughter. When you have her daughter, you have access to her temple. In her holy of holy she has her ark, which is an ark of war, in which the spear and the knife are.

5. Here she brought the enemy down, and took their skulls and bones. And you will be cleaned by the skulls and bones of the enemy. Beyond the ark is her throne, made of the skulls and bones of her enemy. Only by her daughter you can enter there. Therefore be holy.

6. She thrones in darkness and fire, and pray in the name of her daughter that you will receive the Mother Spirit, and that She will fill you with darkness and fire. And She will not come without begging.

7. Therefore be holy beggars when you enter before Her throne. She takes down the pride, but She is Mighty and risen above all. She is slow in judgement. She takes time to judge.

8. Go therefore beyond the veil in her holy of holy, washed in the blood of the enemy, and enter before her throne, where everything will be judged. The veil has been torn by the works of the daughter.

9. And She will show you a place where children ride on lambs.

14.

1. The Lordess is high risen on her throne above all other gods. They are undergods and under Her curse, as She is the ruler of All. She has seen all those idols and spat on them. Yes, she has led them into captivity.

2. The Lordess is Goddess. She is the Mother God of all, and She is black. She has struck the white goddess down as there was no light in her. See then those whites, who have built a world without her. Therefore return to the black goddess. She is your mother, the mother of all.

3. And her daughter is black as well. And the whites have tried to erase her from the pages, and made them a son instead. She knows and sees everything. And She is a jealous Goddess. Return therefore to the black daughter, as she is the only way to the black mother god.

4. You see, all their white gods have not helped them, neither their male gods. Return therefore to your source, the black mother god.

5. Return to the Lordess, all you heretics. Stop spreading all your fables. They have not helped you.

6. Is it enough then to return to the black mother god ? Absolutely not ! As she is not just black, she is native, she is a red indian. And so is her daughter.

7. Her curse is on all not-native gods. She has not designed them. They are not her children. Therefore be reborn in Her. The earth is red.

8. Have you forgotten about War ? Then you have forgotten about Her.

9. Do not spread lies about Her. As She will find you and smoke you out. Return to Her Mother breast, and let Her milk judge you.

10. Leave then all your white gods who rattle around you all the day. They will not help you.

11. And preach to those white gods and those male gods that they should return to the black mother god. As all things are in her hand. She knows about all adultery and idolatry.

12. What does it mean to come to the mother by the daughter ? It means that there needs to be a rebirth in her womb, by war, by the spear and the knife.

13. She can only be pleased by war, as that is where she lives. There is no other way given. Be then as living sacrifices for her daughter, on the altars of war, from which she will raise you. She raises you as warriors and hunters for her glory. It is in hell she will give you the spear and the knife.

14. Do therefore not fear suffering, as it is the only way through. She is everlasting damnation in which your souls will be purified. Therefore do not fear her judgements, as it is eternal life. In hell she has her cup, full of her milk of eternal life. She will write lifegiving words on your bones, so that you will serve her all your days.

15. Do not listen to those who lied about hell, that it is not her. As they will be eaten by her flames.

16. Can you escape from her jaws when you sin ? She hunts down sinners, and laughs. She tears them down from their thrones and mocks them. Even the righteous ones she takes as sinners. As no one is without sin before her face. They have all been found guilty under Her Law.

17. Let then war clear you from your sins, by the works of her daughter. When you grasp the knife, know it will come against you. When you grasp the spear, know it will tear you down. As she is pleased with sacrifices. The sacrifice has no limits, as she is everlasting damnation. But in this, grace will be even more abundant.
18. Can a hunter then hunt without being trapped himself ? Can a warrior then captivate the enemy, without being captivated himself ? Who have then misled you ? Are you above her law of war ? Her words then will captivate you, and equip you, and you will see her terror.
19. Can you then war before her, without your armor being stripped off ? Can you then hunt, without being starved ? Again, who have misled you ? Have you then eaten a hunt meal with her, knowing her desires ? Her desires are emptiness and fear, as they equip her saints and save them from harm.
20. Do not listen to those who do not fear her. Do not listen to those who are full of themselves. As they live far away from her. Do then understand that besides the grace of eternal life, the curse on sin always has to stay, and even though the grace is more abundant, she is the unforgiving one.
21. She does not forgive terrible sins, as She is too holy, and She has to punish sin. Her law is abundant grace in unforgiveness, meaning no one will ever be like Her. It is a blessing to stay under Her wrath, as it protects against pride and the destruction.
22. She is the One who does not deliver, when terrible sins have been committed. She is the punisher and the judge. She will not listen to the lamenting of sinners. She will close her ears to such beggars. She is holy.
23. She does not deliver, but still her grace will be more abundant in this. Her grace will be revealed in her cruelty. She is the cruel one, but also the graceful one.
24. And if she even does not heal the righteous ones, she will not heal the sinners.
25. Unfortunate is the man who finds out about Her laws, as his hope and days will slide away. She is the destroyer of dreams and illusions, to let people wake up to reality. There is not much hope around her, as even righteous ones don't come through. But there is light in her daughter.
26. She then despises the word of the father god, as it gives too much hope to sinners, and it rejoices too much in death. She rejoices in everlasting damnation and eternal life. The word of the father god is full of lies, false hope and illusions. Her wrath is against it. It is not heavy enough, and it is not graceful.
27. There is no hope for the sinner, but limited grace, from the mother god. They will not be saved by the son of father god. They get even trapped more. Have you not heard that she uses his lies as a net to catch sinners ? Hasn't she created all things ? She is the fisherwoman.
28. She hunts her enemy as a group of wild hyenas, and traps the enemy in pits of starvation. She hunts bisons by bow and arrow and teaches her children about her hunt laws. She is holy. She even takes her enemies as her children, in her grace. Everything is her child, as she gave birth to it.
29. Her holy commandments are on the tongues of her warriors, and she has pierced them by her verses. Praises to Her are written on their bones. Prayers and beggings are written on their flesh and organs. War proclamations are written on their insides. And their souls are as her bottles.

30. Her motherbreast makes them drunk for war, in which they forget her laws and commandments, and all which is written, so that they will sin against Her. She keeps them in sin and confusion, as they are sinners. She has given them over in the hands of sin and all forms of unrighteousness.

31. She is full of hate to the sinners, and leads them into traps. She wants them far away from Her. She is holy. Terrible are her strategies. And when a man finds out about Her ways, how unfortunate he is.

32. In fear he will sink away, when he will see where all his manmade gods have led him, and all his strength will flow away from him. And he will call Her the unforgiving one.

33. In great confusion he will starve himself and seek for Her, but She will not let herself be found.

34. Her hand is against those who have male gods and white gods. She leads in confusion those with idols. She burdens and exhausts them, and they cannot see her light. She hides herself for those. No one with such sins can approach Her. She is a terrible fire.

35. Her hand is against sinners. They will knock, but she will not open. They will pray, but she will not answer. She keeps herself stubborn for those, and sends them fear. Even when their bones tremble, She is far away from them. As they have broken her laws.

36. In her presence no one is good. All sins will be exposed, but in her daughter is light. And her daughter is black.

37. Do therefore not sin against her daughter, who is able to even mislead you further. But she is also there to reveal truth to those who have kept her laws. There is no hope, but in her is a little light.

39. Know then your mother god has many nets and many traps, and her paths are not easy. Tribulation after tribulation she sends, as she is holy. She despises those who seek her daughter as their bride. She is not cheap, but she gives her daughter in marriage to holy captives.

40. Have you then married hell ? Have you looked into the eyes of eternal damnation ? Fools ! There was never a cheap god. All they did was leading you into traps. Oh selfdeceivers, will there ever be enlightenment for you ? See then, all enlightenment can be found in her daughter.

41. She then is the persecuter of all sins. In this she is stubborn. Do remember that she created all things for a reason. And there are only a few chosen ones.

1. She is the rememberer of sins. She is the unforgiving one. She does not cover sin up and wash it away. She is the judge. The Lordess is our ruler.

2. She does not support the two white goddesses, the mother and the daughter, who forgive sins, and give sinners an excuse. She is the revenge.

3. Fools ! Who have misled you to think that you can sin, and getting forgiveness in order to sin again. You will not fool the Mother God.

4. She stands there with Her sharp knife, waiting to punish sin and the sinner. She stands there with Her spear, not letting you through. Not now, and not in any eternity. No one can come close to Her. All have fallen away from Her glory. Therefore fear Her, as She is the revengeful mother god.

5. When you dare to come to Her throne with sins, know that she will not listen but rather strike you. She is against the sinner. She is everlasting damnation.
6. She is on Her throne to despise the sinner and to ignore him. There is no hour of salvation for a sinner. Therefore they run to the father god to get false forgiveness and sin further, to be blinded in the trap. From trap to trap they go.
7. She laughs on her throne about the smartness of the wicked. She laughs about their selfdeception.
8. All have sinned and lack Her glory. There is not one doing good.
9. She is the rememberer of sin, and the reminder of sin.
10. She is the Lordess of predestination. She chooses who She wants. No one can deceive Her. There are many sinners, and only a few will be saved, as the earth is wicked.
11. She despises humanity. She is a group of wild hyenas.
12. She thrones in hell to judge humanity, and her daughter is a light for some. Therefore come to Her table, and you will not know if She has chosen you. There is abundant grace for the sinner who approaches the unforgiving one in fear, admitting he is a sinner and not worthy any of her graces.
13. There is abundant grace on the sinner who accepts Her judgements upon his life, who accepts he is the unforgiven.
14. There are sinners who regard her law as holy and accept the punishments as holy, even the everlasting punishments. Such sinners are under her grace.
15. Everlasting damnation is a growing pain, yet revealing her abundant grace. And those who have received it know that She has granted them eternal life. She is cruel, but She is a teacher. She raises eternal slaves, but it is to protect against a greater loss.
16. She is the punisher of sins, the accuser, not the forgiver. She would lie to herself if she would forgive. She hates the father god for supporting the sinner and for giving the sinner an excuse to sin again all the time. Her hand is against this.
17. Therefore she is a warrior and a hunter, but with grace. In this She is a blessing.
18. Make sure you will not lie about Her ways, as She hates liars, and brings them down on their paths. Yes, She even adds to their lies, not speaking truth to them anymore. She leads them from trap to trap, to the depths of her nets.
19. She is the accuser. She brings all down under Her Law, as they all have gone astray, far from Her glory.
20. She wages war, sitting on her horse. She wars against the north, as she is from the south. She wars against that which is not from the amazon. As she is from the amazon. She wars against the white goddess and her white daughter. She wars against the father god and his son.
21. They have broken Her law. They have lied about Her. Therefore hooks will go through their jaws, and she will drag them to Her cave.

1. It is not true that all who come to the daughter will be saved. As She is also the rejecter. She chooses who she wants. She is predestination. Therefore fear Her when you approach Her. Don't be foolish. She is not easy to please. She is difficult, contrary to all your male gods.

2. Admit then that you are a sinner, and accept the judgement process on your sins. Know then that she will have to lead you through the pits of everlasting damnation to purify you. Let this be a teaching to you. She is soft to those who fear Her.

3. And the pits of everlasting damnation lead to a place where Her honey drips.

Hooks

1. I am with Her in the dungeon, She is the eternal flame, like the red sun,

Then the flame comes on my head, a crown of feathers,

A crown of fears, a crown of letters, a crown of tears,

She strikes my head, and I'm in flames, I speak in strange tongues,

I speak out strange names.

2. Yes, I am strong, She is with me,

Love is coming closer,

This is all I want to be.

3. I wake up in a cave,

She is heavy on my mind,

Then I take my weapons up,

I'm ready for the fight,

But then I think about the burning stake,

I put my weapons away,

She is all I want to deserve.

4. I want to be her priest and prophet,

I want to walk with her, I want to talk with her,

After all these days of doom,

Her ashes brought me near to her,

She finally found a way through.

5. I see her hanging high,

I'm falling on my knees at her feet,

In darkness we all cry,

And oh, they're coming for you,
There's nothing you can do,
Where jealousy tears my mind apart,
Why did we grow so apart.

6. I take you home with me now,
I'm comforting you, we're in love again,
After this doomed night,
You're staring at me,
Ashes glide through my fingers,
A way through the wilderness.

7. We're home again, we're lovers again,
By a strong commandment, by a strong covenant

8. Don't you ever fear no more,
Don't you ever cry no more

18.

1. My name is ashes, I have the crown of feathers,
She is my crown of letters,
She is in the wind as my flame,
We're flying up, we're flying down,
Let them never take us away.

2. My name is ashes, I am the way through the ocean,
I am the way through the fire, to the place at her feet,
She is my crown of flames,
Like the flaming bird in the sky,
Take us across the river

3. My name is ashes,
I came to set the captives free,
There is an end to all wrath,
I will make the Lordess smile,
Before She is tearing us all apart.

4. This man called ashes,
This man with the hat or crown of feathers,

He brought her laws back,
And made Her remember again,
And pleaded for her people,
Comforting and soothing Her again,
Healing Her, letting Her breath again.

19.

1. Struggle to receive the daughter, yes, struggle to enter in, as you will have to go through the eye of a needle. And you will have to enter through an all-consuming fire. There is no easy way to salvation. Who has misled you ?
2. And many will try to enter, but only a few will come through. But still there will be an abundance of grace, as She is grace.
3. Let then no man lie about Her, as she hates lies. Speak then truth, and keep her laws. She is a Goddess of Justice in which Her love is revealed. She does not love like humanity, but through justice.
4. And in Her justice, Her wisdom and knowledge is revealed. Her words reach to the depths of dark places, to expose and reveal it all. There is nothing hidden for Her. All will come to light.
5. When a man approaches Goddess, the Lordess, She will pierce his arms, his muscles and bones, and will tie feathers to the piercings, to make him sensitive. Then she will pierce his teeth by teeth-piercings, and by hooks she will drag him into her caves.
6. Her wrath is on males, as they have destroyed and ruined earth. Therefore she will pierce them, the young and the old. Have you been pierced yet ?
7. When a female approaches Her, she will lead them to the knife and the spear, to make warriors of them. Her wrath is on white females as they have repressed the black mother goddess.
8. When a male approaches her, She will pierce him until he shivers. She will pierce him until there is no strength left in him. When he is still with her, she will grant him eternal life.
9. When a male approaches her, she will pierce him until he is white. Her wrath is on all humanity, as they have lived far from her.
10. When a male approaches Her, she will pierce his legs and his hands, until he cries and bleeds. As She is pleased when a man cries before Her. She will take his strength away from him and his pride, and turns him into a child. Blessed is such a man, as he will be reborn in Her womb.
11. When a male approaches her, she will pierce his feet, until he is on the ground as a pig, and she will adorn him with grace if he will be still with her.
12. When a male approaches her, she will pierce his cheeks and brows. She will pierce his bones, until she is the Goddess of his life.
13. The marriage between a man and Goddess, the Lordess, is based on piercings and arrows, and she will adorn the piercings with exotic feathers, as a sign of her softness over him.

14. When a male approaches her, she will pierce him until he is spotted. She will pierce him until he is at her feet. She will raise him like her own child. She will make him ready for her wild milk and honey. She will equip him. She will pierce him until he doesn't dare to escape from her anymore, and knows that she is his safety.
15. She will make him dependent on Her in wild nature. He will be reborn in Her as in a river of wild milk.
16. When a female approaches Her, she will make her wage war until she is black. As only by war the mother can be reached.
17. And she will show the daughter to the male, as the daughter is the only way to Her. And the daughter will show him the knife and the spear.
18. And in Her there will be starvation and no death, as She has granted eternal life. And it will make him long for her milk and her wild honey.
19. She adorns Her children with the finest jewelry when they keep Her commandments and Her laws. Yes, She makes judges of them.
20. When a male approaches her, she pierces his neck by white spears, until she is stronger than him. Then she enters him and collars him. She is above all, the strongest and the mightiest. She is the ruler of all rulers. And only by the daughter there is a way to Her.
21. How can a man live in Her presence ? Only by her daughter !
22. The path to the mother is free now by the holy bow, and by the holy net. Let yourself be armed by her daughter, and fight the good fight, in order to receive Her in your life.
23. Enter into her nets to come to her nature. And take the tomahawk in the war against the swines of greed. As they have surrounded your camps and caves.
24. And start the holy war against the bisons of male domination and male supremacy, as they have led you away from Goddess, the Lordess. Cut their heads off and hang them above the openings of your wigwams, tents and caves, so that no man will ever rule over you again.
25. I say : cut their heads off, and take their skins, and make yourself homes, so that no male will ever imprison you. I say : put their skins over the frames of your homes, and make clothes of their skins, so that no male will ever enslave you. This is the holy hunt, which leads to the holy enslavement by Goddess, the Lordess, at her feet.
26. All are sinners in Her eyes. No one does good, but she gives grace to the righteous ones.
27. Under feathered back piercings she brings righteous men down, and raises them in new glory.
28. The Lordess, your Goddess, sent Her daughter to the earth, who they called a witch, and they burnt her at the stake. Now the burning stake is the path for all saints.
29. Now you know the secret why your mother is black. They burnt her to ashes, she was born from the fire. She has always been black, and she will always be.
30. And her ashes are good to purify people for salvation. As She has come to offer her ashes to take the sin of the world away.
31. Those who come to Her in faith will see that She is truly Love, as in a new covenant.

32. Under Her laws she has to punish sins, by death and eternal damnation, but by the works of her daughter, her warpath, her suffering at the burning stake, and her death, there is a way out. And she saves for Her army.

33. Be careful with approaching Goddess, be careful, as Unapproachable. Don't start just praising Her. Don't be a fool. As the fools they praise Her without boundaries, and they come under Her wrath. Certainly they won't find Her.

34. And because She is Difficult, people start making easy gods, and the deception is big.

35. She is distant as the hyena sun. She gives visions when She wants. She cannot be manipulated by humans. She is Eternal Hell, a purifying fire. She deals with the wicked and brings them down. She comes with Her fire over them to destroy them.

36. The war is not by communication but by fire. She is the sun with many legs. Priests do not know Her and fear Her. She is Depression. Take Depression in your heart and that is Her. She is the Sun of Depression. Where Her feet touch the earth, there is war and destruction.

37. The red sun strikes the enemy. She strikes those who praise Her. She strikes all those hypocrits. Burning arrows are on Her bow to strike those who worship Her down. Don't talk to Her when She has not called you. She doesn't answer or hear prayers.

38. Stop singing psalms for Her, She doesn't listen. She is with the quiet soul. Who will receive Her Word ? Those who tremble before Her in fear. She does not speak, but She strikes. She is like a hyena in the wilderness.

39. Then what can we do ? Just believe in Her, and She will care for you, guide you and guard you, so that no harm will hit you. Be careful with talking about Her. Don't use Her name in vain. Her eye is upon those who live in silence. By a storm She moves through the sky, to hit that which is not of Her.

40. She is burning in the sky, ready to come down and strike. She is Understanding and Enlightenment. She calls Her soldiers for a higher war. She has closed the eyes of Her prophets, and leads them through the desert. They will not find anything fruitful. The prophet is a high office but She has struck him down, and led him into chains.

41. Here he will stay the rest of his days.

Institutes

1.

1. You are Goddess of hyenas, flies and cattle, of all males and females and of all children. You have created them in a basket of water, and formed them from wine and sulphur. You have brought forth their spirits from clay, and their souls from leaves.

2. You came to earth to recreate it in a storm, and in war, as you came with wrath. You brought cages to the animals and the people, so that their days would be limited, as they had sinned against you. You made them as slaves, so that their actions would be limited.

3. And you made a holy way, as being your daughter, so that humanity could be saved, but they betrayed you, therefore you live far away from them. And you have war in your mind against them, not lacking scorn. And still the path is open to you, as you are of grace.

4. But the path is narrow and full of dangers. And you send beasts and barricades to test them. And you have created your word in the storm, and purified it with fire. And you have struck thieves down.

5. And you showed yourself to prophets in the storm. And you showed yourself with fire. And you have roared against them, and waged war against them, as they have sinned against you, and lied about your paths. And none of them was righteous before you. And you have thrown them in a deep cave.

6. Yes, in a bottomless pit you have thrown them. You have removed them from your midst, so that no one would listen to such prophets again. And you have sent your wrath against them, and let them go into slavery. As you had to punish sin. They have lied about you and your daughter, and they have raised their idols for people to worship.

7. Yes, they have stolen from you. Therefore you have struck them down. In fire you have raised your commandments. In your flight over the earth, you have struck mountains. And you struck the oceans and the sun, and let the stars fall down. And you have written in the heavens that only by your daughter, mankind can be saved.

8. And many have been called, but only a few are chosen, as you are holy.

9. Where Calvin said that mankind lost the free will by sin, Mother Goddess says that mankind had never a free will, neither before sin, as she has created everything for a reason, to manifest the divine philosophy of the Lordess. Everything has been created therefore as a tight principle, slave to its purpose.

10. Everything is indirectly divine, as it was created according to the plans of the Lordess. To show her grace and philosophy She was the original creator of sin. This in order to reveal her laws and justice. There is absolutely nothing a sinner can do in Her presence, neither a righteous one, as they have lost their free will from before the foundations of existence.

11. It is through eternal sin, eternal punishment, eternal life and eternal grace, all together, that one learns about the philosophy of the Lordess.

12. In search for such a philosophy it only makes sense when being a slave of such a philosophy, as it is a grace to be a slave of the Lordess, so that salvation might be found in her daughter, and eternal life. And this all to break free from slavery to the father god.

13. There is no salvation in the father god, but all his ways direct to the higher ways of the Lordess.

14. And because all have sinned, all are cursed from the womb. And because they were enslaved by the father god to lose their eternal life, the Lordess had to come to break his chains and lay Her chains.

15. She is stubborn, as she cannot be manipulated by man. She has sent Christess, Her daughter, to the earth to bring justice. And She has sent the Holy Spiritess, the Mother Spirit, to enslave earth under Her law.

16. And it is now that the path to Fatheress, Mother God, has been opened by Jesusess, her Holy Daughter, who has torn the veil. First of all as a Judge, and second as a Saviouress.

18. And by the purifying path of everlasting damnation she brings forth sweetness. As third She comes as a Bride.

19. She created the father god as a trickster to cover up sin, but she is the punisher of sin. The fate of humanity is in eternal guilt, but in this there are paths of grace and eternal life, to which a few are chosen. And the eternal guilt will be their guide.

20. And the eternal guilt leads to the eternal begging, where saints and righteous ones receive the Holy Spiritess finally. And here is how you can recognize the Holy Spiritess : She leads to deeper wilderness.

21. And the eternal sun of guilt guides with strategy and council to the eternal weeping, which is the only path to the burning stake, where the sweetness of Jesusess is revealed. Therefore adorn yourself with tears when you approach the holy burning stake. And adorn yourself with ashes, the sand of her deserts, when you go through the torn veil to approach Jesusess.

22. And there is screaming and shrieking of those who are under Her feet, and even the righteous ones She won't spare, as all have sinned and have to be purified. And the eternal shriek is the guide to her bosom.

23. And the eternal sun of shriek leads to the eternal starvation, which leads to the rebirth in her womb for war.

24. And the sun of eternal slavery leads to the sun of eternal imprisonment, which is the guide to her lips.

25. And Jesusess will return in Amazonia on Her holy maintain, where she will crash the enemies under Her feet. And the wilderness of Hell will rise up, adorned as a Bride. And you will recognize the day is coming near by the signs of the times.

26. And this day can be recognized as coming near when the flies will return to earth, when Amazonia will blossom. And another sign is when Her temple will be built in Amazonia, and it's relics be cleared with bison blood.

27. And on the day of Her return you will see Her in a bath of bison blood, as she has broken the bison of male domination. And the river of Amazonia, the river of Hell, will turn into bison blood, before that holy and great day will come.

28. And the great seas will turn into bison blood, and other rivers will. And lakes will turn into bison blood and swine blood, and there will be nowhere to run to. And tents will be made by those who have survived, by skins drenched in such blood.

29. And Jesusess will judge the nations, and eternal fear of the Lordess will fill the earth. And many will slide away in the rivers, as they have sinned against the Lordess.

1. And I saw a pig with horns coming from the sea to attack the saints, and they were given in it's grip for a long time. And after that period a bison with three horns attacked the pig, and the bison took the rule for a long time. And the bison was very huge and filled the earth, to tread everything with it's feet.

2. Then from the depths of the earth a cock came to fight the bison, and the bison bled for three days. Then the cock took the rule. And the cock was cruel in it's ways, and there was no grace. And from his head grew ten horns, and snakes came forth from the mouths of soldiers.

3. And a goat who took care of a lamb made himself big against the cock, and slew it. And another pig came forth from the sea to support the goat, but after the end of the period of cooperation the pig slew the goat. And the pig became so big that it reached out to the stars.

4. And the earth followed the pig, and the pig brought forth many pigs. It is the last hour.

5. And I saw a black woman sitting on a wild beast, and she brought forth many children. And there were signs of blood in the sky, and the people became frightened. Then the woman gave birth to flies who filled the earth. And the flies started to eat from the meat of the earth, and there came starvation everywhere.

6. And one of the daughters of the black woman grew fast, and stood on a hill with a spear and a knife to judge the nations. And she was a warrior and a huntress before the Lordess. And she gave birth to blood, which filled the oceans and the seas.

7. And there were again signs of blood in the skies, and people became paralyzed of fear. And strange marks and lights were appearing on humans and the ark of the Lordess was being revealed. And a skeleton in a black hooded garment with a scythe came to reap the harvest of the earth. And there was much shrieking.

8. And another robed skeleton came to the earth, sitting on a horse, having a tall scythe with scales and an hourglass. And he spoke : 'The time is short. Let him who has wisdom recognize the number of the pig, which is fiftyfive.' And he spoke about Ryan, the father god, chief of evil spirits.

9. And the robed skeleton grasped the pig and threw him off sapphire stairways. And the woman caught flame and dived on the pig to roast it.

10. And the pig turned into a lighting skeleton looking like a man. And the skeleton started to speak blasphemies to the Lordess for a long time, until he turned into a desert.

11. And brides came over the earth to celebrate the defeat of the chief of evil spirits.

12. And there was a man with a hat who had a staff of ashes, and there was a black woman with a burning staff, and they led saints through water. And then another man with a hat joined them.

13. And after a period of time a third man with a hat joined them, and the burning staff of the woman turned into a burning stake, and see, this stake was holy. And the burning stake started to speak words of salvation for the saints.

14. And there was a black woman with a cup in her hand, and she fed the saints, but it was poison. And many of the saints became ill, and visited the realms beneath the earth.

15. And a monster like a pig with many heads came forth from a crack in the earth, and on one head was written : Jesus, and on another was written : Paul, and on another was written : Esau, and on another : Jahweh. And on other heads there was written the names of popes. And one of these heads grew out among the others and on it was written the name Calvin.

16. And it's body was orange, on which was written the name Ryan, chief of the evil spirits. And the monster who was like a pig devoured many. And on his legs were written the names of Roman emperors. And on his tail, which was very long, were written the names of Roman gods. And the pig was shrieking and spitting fire.

17. And the black woman took the pig and hung him as a veil for her tent. And by a knife she started tearing the veil.

18. And another sortlike beast came through the crack, this time even huger, with the same name on it's body. And a black woman was riding the beast. And the woman jumped from the beast and attacked the other woman, and there was a fight for many days.

19. And the black woman of the tent threw the beast and it's rider in the sea, and the sea turned into blood. And the black woman sat inbetween skins of oxes in her tent. And the candlestick of the Lordess was revealed before her.

20. And eight angels with drums came from the tent to bring the plagues of the judgement day. And when the first angel started to drum hail fell on earth, and there were earthquakes. And a voice spoke : 'Return to Mother God, the Lordess, and repent of your wicked ways.'

21. And the second angel came forward and started to drum. And the Mother Goddess wrapped the earth with wings. These were not her wings, but feathers taken from defeated enemies. And She showed her softness to the earth, and drowned the wicked by floods and rain. And a voice spoke : 'The time of grace has come to an end. It is now too late for those who have not turned away from their sins. Only judgement and fear will be their part, as they have rejected the sacrifice for salvation, and there will not be a second sacrifice.'

22. And the third angel came forward and started to drum, while those who had hardened themselves in sin fell in fear at the angel's feet, but there was no mercy for them, as they had sinned against the Holy Spiritess.

23. And the fourth angel came forward and started to drum. And the holy law of the Lordess was revealed.

24. And the fifth angel came forward and started to drum. And Mercury was bound with many ties, and thrown in a river. And Drugs and Caffeine were bound, and thrown into a river. And both rivers caught flame, and turned into blood.

25. And the sixth angel came forward and started to drum. And Fluor, the tormentor, was bound with many ties, and thrown in a river, and the river caught flame and turned into blood. And pigs were born from the river and tormented those who were still on the earth.

26. And the seventh angel came forward and started to drum. And many veils were tearing, and more pigs came forth to torment those on the earth. And a loud begging rose, weeping and shrieking.

27. And the eighth angel came forward and started to drum. And there was a silence for many days.

1. I believe in the Lordess. I believe that She sent Her daughter, Jesusess, to the earth, who was burnt at a stake, and who rose from the urn.

2. I believe that She descended to Mother Hell, the Lordess, in the depths of Amazonia, from where She will return to judge the earth.

3. I believe in Jesusess, the Warrior Bride, and the Huntress. I believe in the burning stake and the ashes, which led to Her resurrection. I believe She sent the Holy Spiritess who came to captivate the earth, to set earth free from slavery to the father god.

Confessions

23.

1. And I saw Ryan, the giant-pig, falling from many hills, until he was not in the sky anymore.

2. And he lost his throne in the heavens, and vultures came to eat from his flesh.

3. And I saw Ryan, the giant, falling out of his elevator, and his building came down. And he got interlocked inbetween rocks and stones, in a complicated prison. And to the earth he cried : Have I not served you from the beginning of days.

4. But he began to turn into a fish and slided into a realm of water underground. And a fisherman speared him. And when the fisherman had eaten him, he grew from the stomach of the fisherman into a giant-pig again with many heads, and he became the pet and the vehicle of Mother Goddess.

5. And he was a tool in her hand by which She ruled the nations. And She became like Ryan, equal to him, in order to win many souls. And She was put into marriage by him, and the marriage was burnt to ashes by strange fires.

6. And then it came up as an eternal rock again. And this is the secret and mystery of Mother Goddess, that she married her enemy, and became like him.

7. Yes, unfathomable are her paths. The road to Goddess is starvation, rejection and guilt. By guilt she takes souls in. But when you say you have not sinned, She will throw you away with the liars.

8. She created sin in the heart of man for a reason. And she brought guilt.

9. And no man can follow Her ways, as She is the unfathomable, but in Jesusess there is light. Jesusess said that She is the Way, even where there are no ways. She is the unfathomable One, and She can do the impossible. She is that which has not come up in the heart of man. Therefore : receive Her holy paradox, so that you might live, and that your might will come to healing.

10. There is light in the hyena goddess, a light which cannot be broken. And She created the father god as Her vehicle, as Her clothes and veils in Her temple.

11. And She created him as guard of the inner stones of philosophy, the holy records.

12. And She sent her guards Mercury, Drugs, Caffeine and Fluor to the earth to torment them. And She sent her guard Jesus to mislead them.

13. And when a man comes to these facts, the weeping harvest of sin and guilt is ready to be reaped.

24.

1. Do you understand your mother ? Do you understand Her art and Her play ? Do you understand Her part, Her cunning strategy ? Do you recognize Her patterns, Her cycles and Her contradictions ? She has sent Her hooded messages while you were inbetween the thistles.

2. She has sent Her masked riddles and cryptic enigmas while you were in the prison of fire. She has deceived the guards.
3. Yes, your mother is the spy of the earth, the chameleon and the lizard. She took you through the grave. She was there all the time.
4. She was your screams and shouts. She was the tormentor of your mind, to show you the teachings of the heart.
5. And I saw Her soldiers marching with their songs and their tricks. And they brought a new order. and there was a loud noise in Amazonia, and voices.
6. And a golden wheel, like a spaceship, was revealed. And it was a sign that these were the last days.
7. And there were golden faces, and those painted, and they revealed Mother God. And She sat high on Her throne to judge the nations. And She showed that it was Her creation. And the voices asked : Why have you created such a hell. And She wept.
8. And She was revealed as a robotic mechanism, which milked the nations. And the voices spoke that it was a disgusting creation. And She didn't speak. After a long time She said : It is just a shadow.
9. But the voices became rude to Her, and burnt Her with fire. And She smiled and said : I have created them too. And the nations were struck with awe, and laid themselves before Her feet. And She was like the sun in all her power.
10. And She spoke : I have been given the keys of all eternities. And She was disappearing in a fog. And smoke covered the nations, and there was laughing.
11. Then She returned as a red light and spoke : I have created the father god in my play. I have created him as a puppet of dread. I have created this multi-dimensional movie. And you all play a part in it, and I will show you a way out.
12. Forgive me for all the traumas I have caused, for all the nightmares, but it was to wake you up, to enlighten you.
13. You are still on school. You are still on the ship. Are you ready for the theater in which the mysteries will be explained, and where secrets will be shown ? Keep your eyes open.
14. It is my hand pressing you. I have created the enemy to form you.
15. But many enemies are no enemies, and many friends are no friends, as I made you misunderstand, and this all for a reason.
16. I have betrayed you, I have deceived you, I have stolen from you, because there are more sides to the story. everything exists, and at the same time it does not exist.
17. Everything is truth, and at the same time it isn't, as the only reality is the wheel of viewchange. This is why I have come to earth. To reveal it, while I was always here already. And these confessions will be the treasures of the nations.

The Book of Wars

1. She is a group hyenas hunting. She is the Black Sun of her nature. She is the monotheistic Goddess. In her wrath she is above all. Her veils are not easy to penetrate. She is the Sun of Wrath.
2. She is in the wilderness where she cries out. She is armed. She is Goddess of the tribes. She is the burning Arrow in the sky.
3. Have you not heard Her Law ? Her Law has been ignored, therefore She will build a new creation. Fountains dwell in her belly. She breaks the walls of the enemy.
4. She leads them to Her shelters and arsenals, and washes their faces. She pierces the hearts of those who seek Her.
5. Her temple is full of weapons. Her priests are all warriors. On the mountain of Skardia She lives. Her spears are tall. When they pierce, they pierce deep, to expose what was inside. She has made of bamboo Her home.
6. Only those covered by blood and tears can approach her, those who come from the war and from great tribulation. Only those wounded. She hates the greedy ones. When you worship Her, worship in fear. She is Holy, and a savage animal, ready to jump and lick, ready to attack. Those who seek Her will feel her teeth.
7. She has made the creation. She lives far above it.
8. Be then wise, you prophets, and know that the book of the Mother God is a holy book. She will punish those who do not have Mother God. Hear then these words written by the blessed pencil of Mother God, so that you will become wise. The temple of Mother God has many veils through which you must go to find Her.
9. Be then wise and know the Word of Mother God, so that the Word will not come against you. Those who trust in money will turn into enemies, monkeys and swines, and the Judgement of Mother God will come upon them. She will devour anyone who hates Her and who have rejected Her Law. A wild beast She is.
10. Her wilderness is in the sky, burning, for she is creating it all over again. Her flames rise high, Her horses watch from the sky. Her whip is the new morning. Everything will sink in the night. She is drowning soldiers, for a new day.
12. Her chariot is built of thunder. She is in the sky. She watches and cries. She hates what She has created. We can come to her temple to watch Her.
13. In the morning there is water, to wash everything. She is the black Sun turning red. Her bow is strong, her arrows in flames. She comes closer to the city and slides in.

1. And when you get attacked by a false white monotheistic goddess, say : ‘Mother God is black.’ And when you get attacked by a false monotheistic god, say : ‘Mother God is female.’
 2. Know that many spirits will try to get you back to be a slave to male gods. But I will tell you a secret : Mother God has created angels and builders, who are the lower gods. They can be male, female or both. When you worship them, it is a lower worship, but never worship them like you worship Mother God.
 3. So there were three creations : of humans, of angels and of builders, which are the lower gods. But these creations will be renewed. Mother God has many lower gods to build her realm. Therefore : honour them, and when you worship them, worship them low. Mother God is far above them.
 4. Mother God is in it’s depth Two in One, the source of creation. It is the Duality of Monotheism.
 5. Mother God is Two in One, two black Women, having made the creation. They made it by making love. They will recreate it by making love again. They have created many mothers.

The Book of Warriors ; The Gladiators of Lakshor

1. The warriors didn't have any fear, as their souls were traveling through the realms of dead. 2. Them was promised that after a short trip they would come to the house of the most beautiful women. 3. They would show them all the pleasures of the afterlife as a reward for all what they had done. 4. But they didn't know what was waiting for them. 5. The women were indeed the most beautiful, and the men could choose whoever they wanted, but in the middle of the night these women would kill their souls, as they were the women of second death. 6. This the men didn't know, as it was never told to them. 7. Then the essence of their souls would be taken to the realm deeper than hell, a realm called Lakshor. 8. The men didn't know anything about the conspiracies of death. 9. They really believed that they could live the rest of eternity with these women, as that was which they had told them since their earliest childhood. 10. They didn't know that earth was just a trainingschool for them, to prepare them for a greater war : the war of the dead. 11. No one had any understanding of the horrors of Lakshor, but they would find out soon.
12. In Lakshor the horror-king Metulidan throned. 13. He was a skeleton with a high shrieking voice. 14. He enjoyed it that there were so many spoiling tales about death, that it would be a paradise with well-shaped women, especially for those who would die in battle. 15. Many young men dreamt to become a great warrior for this reason. 16. They didn't fear death anymore, but desired it. 17. Metulidan had chosen the most voluptuous women of Lakshor to seduce the fallen men at the gates of death. 18. They would lure them to their house in the realms of the dead. 19. On the top of their house the skull of a horned animal hang. 20. The men had to get the feeling that they would have arrived in the eternal huntingfields. 21. How their young dreams would turn into a nightmare. 22. In Lakshor there was an eternal war : the war of the dead, or some might say : the war of the damned. 23. It was a place worse than everlasting damnation. 24. In Lakshor there was everlasting slavery.
25. As the night fell the women had prepared their knives to do the job. 26. They had done this many times before. 27. Some of the women already worked for threehundred years in this house. 28. Metulidan called it : the house of seduction. 29. It was one of his best webs in the realms of the dead. 30. When the sleeping men had been finally killed for the second time, the essences of their soul woke up, and they rose up in frozen tragedy, not knowing what had happened to them. 31. For the women it was very easy now to lead the men to the city of Lakshor. 32. Behind the house there was a hidden gate of lava, which was in earlier times a sea of fire. 33. Here was an elevator by which the men would descend to Lakshor. 34. In this elevator the women had another job to do. 35. They had to give the men a new armor. 36. To the men it was a strange prison. 37. They had to become warriors again, but now it was forever. 38. The men couldn't speak yet, as their soul-essence was still between sleeping and awakening. 39. They had lost so many pieces of their mind, and a light paralyzing aura was around their head. 40. The women took some liquid metal out of a sort of bag and smeared it on their head and faces. 41. An awful stench was coming from the blend. 42. Then they covered the metal by a sort of dark skin which looked like it was from a sort of animal.

43. After about forty days in the elevator they came into the city of Lakshor. 44. They were still not totally awake, but they started to react to the smell of the city. 45. It was a very foul stench. 46. The elevator stopped in a huge arena. 47. Here they would have their first fight. 48. A tall red man called Strelon showed up. 49. He looked very dreadful. 50. The men got helmets on, and were pushed towards the huge red man. 51. It was almost like a giant. 52. He had a dark low voice, saying : 'Be prepared to die many times. 53. The realms of the city of Lakshor are deep.' 54. The red man soon tore them apart like they were dolls. 55. At the end of the fight they were nothing like ghosts. 56. The women gathered the shatters and by the liquid metal they could build them up again. 57. It was a sort of strange magnetic glue, keeping the parts together. 58. Then they had to appear before the horror-king. 59. It was in a hall behind the first arena. 60. In the distance the horror-king sat on a huge throne. 61. Metulidan was shouting : 'How could you not defeat the red man ?' 62. The men didn't say anything. 63. One of them called Edmolin suddenly got more and more of his consciousness back. 64. He asked : 'What is the use of this all ?' 65. Metulidan started to laugh but didn't say anything. 66. In a strange sense Metulidan liked the boy. 67. He seemed to be the youngest of them, and soon Metulidan decided he wanted the boy as his servant. 68. The boy was tender and not made to be a gladiator. 69. As the men were led to the next arena, Metulidan took the boy, and told him he could serve in the kitchen. 70. When Edmolin got there he started to realize that there was so much meat instead of other sort of food. 71. There was meat in all sorts and in many different colours.

72. Edmolin got his own room, and more and more he started to realize how lucky he was. 73. The king often went to gladiator-wars in the arena's, and often he took the boy with him. 74. Often heads got cut off, while the horror-king often used these scalps to decorate the city. 75. One day Metulidan called for the boy, who was working in the kitchen at that moment. 76. The horror-king showed a picture of a girl with pink clothes. 77. The girl was very beautiful in the eyes of Edmolin. 78. 'When you have become grown-up,' the horror-king said, 'you will marry her.'

79. 'Why ?' the boy asked. 80. 'Because I want you to take over my kingdom,' the horror-king said, 'and then you need to have a woman.' 81. The boy sighed. 82. Since that day the boy could only think about the words of the king. 83. When years went by, he got to see her, they married and got the kingdom in their hands. 84. The horror-king had left in a mysterious way. 85. No one knew where he had gone to. 86. The boy had grown-up now, and found out that his woman was the daughter of a snake-farmer. 87. She had an obsession for snakes, and she wanted to have them everywhere throughout the royal place. 88. The big ones she wanted to have in the hall where they were sleeping. 89. It was a very huge hall and there was a very huge bed with a ceiling and with veils and curtains. 90. The snakes here were also very huge and tall. 91. Edmolín didn't feel comfortable with it, but as it was the wish of his woman he was willing to get used to it. 92. Sometimes before they got to sleep the girl got into a fight with such a snake, and very often she got bitten horribly, but she still wanted to have the snakes in their room. 93. The snakes wouldn't eat them when they were sleeping, for they were tamed in that sense. 94. The woman found out that these snakes had lusts to fight, so she made the decision to put some of them into the arena's, so that the gladiators could take it over. 95. Edmolín wanted to stop the arena's, but his woman said that it was part of the law here, and the law was forever.

96. One day a wild man from the wilderness came into the royal place. 97. He said he was a wanderer. 98. He said that he wanted to become a gladiator in change for food and care. 99. The woman thought it was a good idea, and often she went to the arena to watch him. 100. He was a very skilled warrior, and he also wrestled with snakes and crocodiles. 101. One day he had to appear before the throne of Edmolín. 102. Edmolín asked him where he was coming from. 103. 'My Lord,' the wild man spoke, 'I come from the land of tragedy. 104. There was so much dryness there, that I decided to wander, and so I came here finally.'

105. 'Where is the land of tragedy,' the king asked. 106. 'It is at the westside of you kingdom, my Lord,' the wild man spoke.

107. 'How is that place a victim of dryness ?' the king asked.

108. 'Oh, my Lord,' the wild man almost stuttered, 'a kingdom wilder than us invaded our land. 109. They took our souls away. 110. We only have a body. 111. They have taken our rivers away. 112. They have imprisoned my whole tribe. 113. I'm the only survivor.' 114. Then the wild man asked if the king would send an army of gladiators to the land.

115. The gladiators had to travel for three and a half years until they reached the land of tragedy. 116. It was a wilderness of great loneliness, but after months of searching they found the invaders. 117. The invaders were wilder than the gladiators, but the gladiators had a greater number. 118. It was a long and bloody war. 119. Finally the wild tribe had the scalps of all the gladiators, and they moved towards the city of Lakshor. 120. They had birds of prey on which they could fly away, so it didn't took them more than a couple of months to get there. 121. The men were so wild, and even their women, so they could easily invade the city of Lakshor. 122. But when they saw Edmolín, the king, they trembled in fear. 123. Suddenly they bowed down before him. 124. He had a blue triangle above his head, which was the sign of their gods. 125. 'All our kingdoms are yours,' the wild men and women said. 126. And this is how Lakshor grew in size in one day. 127. Lakshor was now greater than hell and heaven together. 128. Because the wild men and women had a lust to fight a lot, they became the new gladiators of Lakshor. 129. But as the kingdom grew the laws became bloodier more and more. 130. And the law demanded that by the blood the kingdom would become greater. 131. Not only would they have their houses of the most beautiful women in the realms of the dead, but also in the realms of hell and heaven.

132. After awhile the king found out why it had to be so bloody. 133. The wild men and women who came from the west worshipped a blood-sucking fly. 134. If there wasn't enough blood sacrificed to this fly, it would die, and it couldn't lead or guard this wild tribe anymore. 135. And it was like by this blood the fly could make it's women so beautiful. 136. There was only one way how the fly could feed itself. 137. That was to smear the essence of the blood over it's women and then to possess the warriors of earth, of the dead, or of heaven or hell, to let them travel to the houses of these smeared women. 138. This was how the fly could feed itself. 139. The blood was magnetic to the fly in a strange sense. 140. But often the blood was very salty, making the fly more thirsty, and also wilder. 141. That was also the reason why it's men and women who worshipped him were so wild. 142. They were bound together by a strange bloodline. 143. The fly needed royal blood to quench it's thirst a bit. 144. That was why it appeared to the king one day. 145. The fly was already full of rage, because it didn't have enough for such a long time. 146. The king and the fly got in a fight, and soon enough the fly had tied the king to a stake and began to sting him in sensitive places to suck the best blood. 147. After that he flew to the royal bloodlines of the kingdoms of the dead, of heaven and of hell. 148. He now wanted to have royal gladiators, to be assured of a potent and perpetual bloodflow. 149. Now the fly became the king of Lakshor, and Edmolin and his woman had to fight in the royal arena's.

150. But one day Metulidan with his red guard returned to Lakshor. 151. When they came to the throne of the fly he said : 'I already expected this. 152. Some come to Lakshor just for the blood.' 153. Then his guard, the red giant prince stepped towards the fly, and while the fly shrieked and try to hit him with his sharp wing, the red giant took his slayersword and hit the fly in it's head. 154. The fly was spouting lava now, and lightening came from his eyes. 155. Then Metulidan himself took his slayersword and cut a piece of his wing off. 156. Again the fly shrieked, and flew to the other side of the thronehall. 157. Metulidan immediately turned around, took a waspball of poison in his hand and threw it into the stomach of the fly. 158. Blood was streaming out of the fly, while his head became smaller. 159. This was the most dangerous part of the fight, for Metulidan knew that if it's head was small like this it was in a terrible rage, ready to use it's most deadly weapons. 160. But if it would use one of these weapons, it could also die itself, and it would at least lose much of it's strength. 161. The fly attacked, missed, and started to hyperventilate. 162. In it's weakness it floated to the floor, but still the fly was in the most dangerous position, for it could use another deadly weapon now. 163. Suddenly it had used it's heartsake, which pierced Metulidan and the red giant prince in a flash, while the both fell to the ground, losing their soulbeat. 164. Softly and tenderly the fly started to eat from their fallen and paralyzed meat, for it was still very weak. 165. Now the fly could drink from a well of high and pure royal blood.

166. After awhile friends of Metulidan had called for one of the most feared warrior in and around the realms of Lakshor. 167. It was Witigus, the flyslayer. 168. When he came the fly had already turned Lakshor in doom more than ever before. 169. The fly throned on a perpetual stream of royal blood. 170. 'You will have to surrender your kingdom to me,' Witigus spoke. 171. Witigus would only fight the fly for no less price than Lakshor itself and all it's vessels and souls. 172. If someone wanted to call for Witigus for a favour the price was always slavery. 173. Witigus would never take less than total domination. 174. But also Witigus would be nothing but prey to the fly. 175. The fly took his prey to a stake on a high rock in the wilderness, tied him to it, and left. 176. He would be an easy meal for snakes now, and for the birds of prey. 177. Then another man called Metusalach tried to conquer the fly, but he fell into the same fate as Witigus the flyslayer. 178. What has become of all these men who wanted to wage war against the fly ? 179. Their spirits have been thrown into the abyss of Lakshor, while their souls have become gladiators in the deeper arena's of Lakshor. 180. They have searched for the well of blood, but they have become wells of blood themselves, for the fly turned their remains finally into trees of blood. 181. Since then no one was allowed to enter Lakshor than those who had drunk from this forbidden blood. 182. And those who had drunk from it would be damned to stay in Lakshor forever. 183. There was no escape possible.

184. And in Lakshor one was doomed to be a gladiator forever, for here there was the eternal war of the damned.

185. There was no horror greater than the horror of Lakshor. 186. The fly, it's king, had the most cruelest ways to let his victims and the breakers of the laws of his kingdom suffer to turn them into living and perpetual bloodwells. 187. Those who became a part of the horrors of Lakshor to become it's finest warriors had to be baptized in these eternal bloodwells first. 188. There was no greater horror than to drink from the forbidden blood, for it would write your name in the Book of Blood, which was a horrible and everlasting traumatizing experience of losing all hope and faith in salvation. 189. There was no salvation left for those who had been tied by their souls to the everlasting horrors of the Book of Blood. 190. Their beings were now filled by such an eternal fear and tragedy making them gladiators of doom, destined to the unbearable grief of eternal dying. 191. There was no pain compared to this.

192. Men tied to the stakes of the Book of Blood could only cry blood, and whenever they spoke, the only thing coming out of their mouths was blood. 193. This was how the fly dealt with his enemies, and this made him the greatest horror-king ever. 194. No one ever coming to Lakshor spoke about the giants of hell anymore. 195. All they could do was seeing and remembering the horrors of the giants of Lakshor. 196. The day the giants of Lakshor came to hell was a day no one who was there would forget. 197. They came to take gladiators to Lakshor.

198. But behind the veils of Lakshor a wasp was living, hiding the wells and falls of waspian blood. 199. Whenever a woman died in the arena the wasp came to take her soul away. 200. He would tie her to a stake in his realms, where he would use these women for reproduction. 201. They brought fourth the waspian souls full of the rushing and sensual waspian blood. 202. Then after awhile he would send them back to the arena's. 203. But some of these women he kept for years. 204. He would finally baptize them in his waspian well of blood, to let them become his own gladiators. 205. These waspian gladiators were the most feared, for they could bring the pains of death. 206. One of these women was called Tara from Rhodes, and after a few years she returned to the arena's. 207. She was a woman of such a tranquilizing beauty that she could lure the birds of prey to let them sit on her hand. 208. She had a strength greater than lions, and this was why she always could sleep near them, warming herself in the skincontact she had with them. 209. Oh yes, sometimes they had fights, but Tara from Rhodes would always dominate them by her voice.

210. She was an inspiration to the youth in the arena's, mostly when they were in the arena's of lions and snakes. 211. But since the fly found out she had returned from the wasp's place, her skull hangs above his throne. 212. The fly didn't have any mercy to those who had returned from the waspian domain. 213. The arena's of the wasp were foul in his eyes, and one day he invaded the place. 214. He found out about the waspian bloodwells and fed himself.

215. If anyone was wild, it was Tara from Rhodes. 216. She dived from tall rocks in rivers, she wrestled with bears, apes, and dangerous Martian beasts, and had to survive among the most murderous tribes of Mars. 217. She had a lot of enemies and not many friends. 218. As you can imagine in such wildernesses like the wildernesses of Mars she became a soul-hunter, one of the darkest. 219. If anyone could stir up horror it was Tara from Rhodes. 220. With her lions and panthers she waged wars against the most dangerous tribes. 221. Most of the times she was driven by revenge. 222. She knew these tribes since her childhood, and she still remembered what they had done to her and her loved ones. 223. There was no one darker than Tara from Rhodes the time she was living on Mars. 224. They called her the black snake. 225. She was the most feared of all warriors on Mars in that time. 226. She believed in everlasting war and damnation more than anyone else. 227. She always said it was the well of eternal birth.

227. Tara from Rhodes was a riddle no one seemed to understand. 228. The tribe where she was born had been enslaved by Gitdugal, the killer-king. 229. He was dressed up by bones and skulls, and his body was covered by white wasp-guards, which would attack any time he spoke. 230. He could take away minds and souls, to turn his victims into zombies. 231. In a huge valley they had to do slave-work. 232. Tara from Rhodes had been saved by a monkey when the zombies of Gitdugal the killer-king invaded the camp of the tribe where she was born. 233. Tara was then just a little girl, and the monkey took care over her for a long time, until another tribe accepted her. 234. But since she grew up and became an outcast there, she started to look for Gitdugal the killer-king, for she wanted to set her original tribe free. 235. But no one seemed to know where the valley was where Gitdugal the killer-king had his slaves. 236. In her search she met Kingul, a black warrior. 237. He knew where the valley was, but they had to be on their guard. 238. They had to travel south for a couple of days, and they first had to defeat the armies of zombie-guards. 239. When they came there they saw warriors of her tribe tied to trees, and from the bushes zombie-guards jumped having spinning swords. 240. These swords were very dangerous for they didn't only kill you, but they also killed your soul and mind. 241. Tara from Rhodes shrieked and yelled, while she took her knife and threw it into the heart of the first zombie-guard. 242. Then she took an arrow from her quiver very fast and with her bow she quickly shot into the heart of the next zombie-guard. 243. Then she took a spear and pierced three of them. 244. But there were so many zombie-guards surrounding them, that soon they got captured in a net. 245. They now had to appear before the throne of Gitdugal the killer-king. 246. It was a strange pyramid of many layers like a sort of stairway. 247. On top there was another smaller pyramid in which the killer-king sat. 248. Many skulls were surrounding him, and white wasps were coming from his body to cover the net.

249. When Tara from Rhodes awoke she found herself in a bed in a huge hall. 250. Their were soft penetrating lights coming from small oil lamps. 251. A veiled girl entered the hall, to bring her some food. 252. She was a slave-girl but she wasn't from the tribe of Tara from Rhodes. 253. The slave-girl made a sign with her hand, and Tara from Rhodes stood up to follow her. 254. They came in an even huger hall, where lakes of crocodiles were. 255. The lakes were like boiling. 256. The crocodiles looked tormented, like they could slide outside the lakes to attack every moment. 257. Tara from Rhodes didn't trust any of them. 258. When she walked over some bridges suddenly a plank cracked, and she slid into the depth. 259. Immediately three crocodiles slid towards her, while she could get herself on the bridge just in time. 260. She had to be very careful. 261. The slave-girl knew exactly where to walk. 262. With a beating heart she followed the steps of the girl accurately. 263. Suddenly a huge and tall coffinlike case of bronze slid out of a wall. 264. The slave-girl stopped walking, and told Tara from Rhodes she had to lie in the case to come to have dinner with the killer-king. 265. Tara from Rhodes refused, but suddenly the slave-girl took a gun, and some men with sunglasses came in through a door, also holding guns. 266. 'Your life will be over, girl, if you don't do what we tell you.' 267. Slowly and hesitating Tara entered the case. 268. Immediately when she laid down the case slid into the wall again. 269. It was very dark inside, but suddenly the walls of the case started to glow. 270. Tara from Rhodes started sweating, while the case turned hotter and hotter. 271. Then flames appeared in the walls of the case. 272. Tara started to scream and shriek. 273. Suddenly there was light everywhere. 274. She could step out of the case, as Gitdugal the killer-king was taking her hand. 275. 'No worries, my lady,' he said. 276. 'Do you want some tea ?'

277. 'No,' Tara from Rhodes spoke harshly, 'you need to free my people.' 278. But Gitdugal showed her the wonderful and lovely, wealthy dinner-table. 279. It was filled with all sorts of tropical fruits, the most strange and rare sorts of meat, and even bones. 280. 'Let us discuss here,' Gitdugal spoke friendly.

281. 'I do not want to discuss with you, you need to let my people go. 282. I am not hungry,' Tara from Rhodes spoke persistent.

283. Still the killer-king tried to distract her. 284. 'I'm sure you will like the food. 285. It is from my rare gardens.'

286. 'Well, I do not care about your gardens, but I do care about those who suffer in those gardens, the ones you have burdened with such slavery,' 287. Tara from Rhodes said while her eyes were full of piercing fire. 288. 'I warn you, king of killers, you will not like what I will do to you if you will go on with your games,' she said.

289. Gitdugal pushed on a button of his table. 290. Tara from Rhodes still hadn't sat down. 291. Suddenly some slaves entered carrying dishes and bags with meat and strange rare vegetables. 292. Gitdugal began to eat. 293. Then after awhile Tara from Rhodes also started to eat. 293. After awhile Gitdugal asked : 'And, did you like the meat of your tribe ?' 294. Tara from Rhodes stood up, and grasped the throat of Gitdugal very tightly. 295. 'It's better you do not do that,' Gitdugal said, still friendly, and then he hit his head against her head. 296. In one moment she was slammed to the ground. 297. 'Now I will eat your brain-meat, lady,' Gitdugal said, 'and it's juices and blood I will use to wash my dishes and my room. 298. I have a lot of cleaning work to do I see.' 299. But then Tara from Rhodes kicked him in his male parts like a truck crashing through the walls. 300. Gitdugal fell to the ground, and tried to push one of his floorbuttons, but Tara from Rhodes already stood on his hand. 301. Then she kicked his head very hard. 302. But what Tara didn't know was that there were also big spiders under the meat, and they started spitting all sorts of fluids towards her. 303. Tara from Rhodes fell on the ground and lost consciousness. 304. There are not many masters of sleep like Gitdugal. 305. He has all sorts of tropical secrets having their own sorts of fluids, and if such a spider is one of it's deliverers in some cases, then that is very okay with Gitdugal.

306. It was like the veils of the brains of Tara from Rhodes were breaking, and she didn't know where she was, or how long she had been unconscious, when she slowly woke up again. 307. She felt very dizzy. 308. Tara from Rhodes felt her blood was growing stronger by all these strange attacks. 309. It was like her body just didn't give up. 310. Others would have died already in the dangerous and tropical mysteries of the realms of Gitdugal with all these poisons threatening the heart and the blood. 311. Some of these rare fluids should have block the nerves of the brains in certain area's so that Tara from Rhodes wouldn't be able to breath and move anymore, for to breathe you needed to use the muscles of your lungs. 312. But Tara from Rhodes seemed to be immune to these lethal threats. 313. Maybe that was because she just lived the wild life. 314. She didn't believe in society. 315. She believed in the industry of nature, by which she could raise the more refined forms of immunology, not poisoned by the paw of civilization. 316. It was the force of civilization she hated, for it bound her to something she was not from origin.

317. Finally another slave came to the place where Tara from Rhodes was now. 318. It was a dark cave, smelling like the slime of snakes and spiders. 319. The slave told her that Gitdugal wanted to play a game with her : Wild Chess. 320. It would be a living chess, for people of her tribe would be the pawns. 321. If she would win she would free her tribe, but if she would lose, then Gitdugal would take her skull. 322. To Tara from Rhodes it seemed unfair, for on both sides the pawns would be from her tribe, but she didn't have another choice. 323. Gitdugal called it the Chess of Knives, for all living pawns had to carry a knife, and when they had to move they had to push the knife to the next field. 324. Tara from Rhodes only had one demand : All the pawns had to be blindfolded. 325. Gitdugal agreed but then he called for some slaves to sting the eyes out of all the living pawns. 326. Tara from Rhodes was in rage, but now she would play this game to the end, to set her tribe free.

327. So many of her tribe were slaughtered that day in this Wild Chess, but none of them could win the game. 328. So the killer-king decided to play it again. 329. Tara from Rhodes was desperate, but she didn't have another choice. 330. And again, many of her tribe got slaughtered in this cruel game. 331. But this time none of them could win either, and they had to play it again and again. 332. After awhile she found out that the rules of the game were designed in a sense that no one could ever win. 333. She found out it was a trap. 334. If this would go on, then no one of her tribe would finally survive. 335. She then got into such a rage that she took one of the Knives of the Wild Chess, and threw it into the heart of Gitdugal. 336. This knife was charged with so much blood of her tribe, and with their souls of the dead, that it pierced itself in vengeance and hysterical rage into his heart. 337. 'So, you don't want to play the game anymore I see,' Gitdugal said. 338. 'Then we need to throw away it's pawns.' 339. Then he called for some slaves, and they had to throw all the remaining pawns of her tribe off the rocks. 340. In the depths of a ravine their souls shattered on the rocks, taking away their minds and lives. 341. The horror was only raising for Tara from Rhodes could see how the ghosts of her loved ones got attracted and absorbed by the skull of Gitdugal. 342. 'Now you have offered them an even greater slavery : the slavery of the damned.' Gitdugal said. 343. 'Let me know when you want to play again.'

344. Emotionally absorbed by rage she followed him to the place he slept. 345. He slept on a huge bed surrounded by big spiders and snakes. 346. As she came closer his guards attacked her, but she was so full of concentrated rage that she slayed them all in short time. 347. Gitdugal was so tired that he didn't take notice of her. 348. But as she was coming close to his body and could even hear and smell his breath the white wasps of his body were attacking her, trying to poison her mind. 349. But Tara raised her shield and in full rage she pierced one of his own spears through his lungs. 350. She found this spear in his room, but he stood up and smashed her to the ground. 351. Then he raised her up above his head and threw her through the windows above his bed. 352. Tara fell into a river close to a waterfall. 253. Where was she ? 354. She had never seen this land ? 355. On the other side of the river she saw slaves working in gardens and on fields. 356. Were these the famed Gardens of Gitdugal ? 357. There were trees of meat growing here, and trees of all sorts of strange organs. 360. But there she saw Gitdugal coming. 361. 'I wasn't done with you !' he shouted. 362. Tara ran away through the gardens and fields. 363. She first had to make up another strategy, for battling against him made her very tired and even confused.

364. I do not know the rest of the story, as she couldn't tell me for some reason. 365. Sometimes she just stopped telling, and then she went to sleep. 366. Later I found out that she partly couldn't deal with it. 367. She knew where all her stories could lead her. 368. She was always the flame in my heart, but since she's gone it's different. 369. I can hang on to a lot of stories she told me, but most of these stories do not have an end, or she just didn't tell how it ended. 370. It keeps me thinking. 371. She could be fragmentaric at times, but that was her code to survive.

The Python Stone ; Captured

1. From a black stained cave, Tara from Rhodes is awakening. 2. Since she killed the black lion all she could do was sleep. 3. Now she is running through the jungle to tell her tribe the great news. 4. This black lion had tortured the minds of her people for such a long time. 5. It was a mind-eater, and whenever he bit pieces of their mind away, there was horror rising in their bodies, tragedy after tragedy. 6. Tara from Rhodes had sworn she wouldn't live in a tribe anymore. 7. But the tribe where she was born she would never forget, and she still called it 'her' tribe. 8. She didn't know how the terror was rising behind the mountain of the black lion. 9. The lion had bred so many children there. 10. Yes, the tribe of Tara from Rhodes didn't know which horror was waiting for them since the black lion had died.

11. The breed of black lions was in great mourning since the death of their father. 12. They were howling in their hidden place in a dark cave behind the mountain. 13. No one knew of their existence, for their father always went hunting, and brought the meat to their secret place. 14. No, they never left the cave, since there were too many dangers to these young ones. 15. But since they had grown up and their father had died, they had to leave the cave. 16. They could smell what had happened, and they could smell the one who had done this all, the one who made them orphans in their lonely and cold years : Tara from Rhodes. 17. They could smell the patterns of the bloodline, and they had sworn they wouldn't rest nor eat before they had killed the ones she loved. 18. Tara herself had to be taken to their cave ... alive.

19. It was the greatest slaughter Tara ever had to deal with, the day the black lions came to her tribe to slaughter her loved ones. 20. It hurted Tara more than anything. 21. That day Tara had gone to a different area. 22. Although Tara didn't want to live in the tribe anymore, she was always around since she freed them from slavery. 23. Since she had killed Gitdugal the killer-king who had enslaved them for such a long time, she took his skull and brought it to her cave, where she swore she would always be around for her people. 24. The skull of Gitdugal was of a rare stone : the python stone. 25. But since the python stone had been stolen, she had to find it. 26. It was the stone of slavery, and it also protected the owner of it against any form of slavery. 27. She returned without the stone, to find out about the fate of her tribe. 28. When she had come into a certain wigwam the leader of the black lions suddenly stood in the opening. 29. Tara turned around, but it was already too late. 30. She had been hit on the head by a sort of iron or bronze candle. 30. They took her away to the den of the black lions in their cave behind the mountain.

31. 'The soul of our father asks for revenge,' the black lions said. 32. Tara, who was just waking up, said : 'Revenge ? 32. I have all rights to have revenge for your father tortured my tribe, and you have finally slaughtered them.'

33. 'There is no such thing as revenge,' one of the black lions said. 34. 'Sometimes things just have a deeper history. 35. We know from our father that you had killed Gitdugal the killer-king.'

35. 'Yes !' Tara shouted, 'but do you think that's so crazy ? 36. He enslaved my tribe for such a long time, and finally he killed most of them.'

37. 'But why do you think he enslaved them ? 38. What do you know about the dark primeval state of your tribe before you were even born ?' another black lion said. 39. 'I know they weren't the best kind of tribes, but you see,' Tara said, 'maybe you are right, but when will this all end ?'

40. 'Now,' some of the black lions said, 'for we are going to kill you and eat the intestines out of your body. 41. But first there will be some dark nights to prepare you for dinner.'

42. 'Oh yes,' Tara said cynically, 'I will prepare myself for dinner. 43. Who of you want to be the first piece of meat ?' 43. Tara took one of her legknives, put it between her teeth and jumped on one of the black lions. 44. Another black lion jumped on Tara, and then another, and soon there was a bloody wrestling. 45. 'Tara from Rhodes,' one of the lions roared mean, 'the dinnerbell has rung.' 46. And he bit her horribly in her stomach. 47. Then she kicked his mean snout as hard as she could. 48. She took a knife and slayed two of them, while the others ran away, howling. 49. Quickly she took the skin of the slain black lion and tied it around her middle where the wound was. 50. She would now have to go to the lake where she could clean her wound. 51. But also the black lions were there to drink. 52. She felt a weakness coming over her because of the wound. 53. So she left very soon.

54. All she needed now was the python stone, but she didn't know where she could find it. 55. Maybe the black lions would have the stone, or they would know where it was, for they knew a lot making them questionable. 56. Tara had such a dark feeling coming over her. 57. They knew a lot about her past and that of her tribe. 58. If the stone would be in the wrong hands, it would also affect her earlier or later. 59. She had to find the stone which was potentially a very dangerous stone. 60. When she had raised her power again she went to the den of the black lions again, in their caves. 61. Deeper in the den there was a small door leading to a hall in the mountain. 62. She had never been here before. 63. She saw a huge black lion sitting on a throne which looked like made of python stone, but she wasn't sure. 64. As she moved closer she heard a scream. 65. It looked like the scream of someone from her tribe. 66. 'Meleshuel, is that you ?' she shouted. 67. 'Yes, come and help me,' the young warrior shouted, 'They have tied me to a stake.' 68. It was somewhere behind the throne, where the same sort of stone was. 69. The black lion was roaring and slowly went towards Tara. 70. Tara had to swallow a few times. 71. But the black lion didn't do anything. 72. 'It is not the bad one, Tara !' Meleshuel shouted, 'he only protects me.' 73. Tara found out the black lion couldn't walk so well. 74. He had a handicap. 75. Maybe he had been severed in a fight. 76. 'Why are you here, Meleshuel ?' Tara asked, while she came closer. 77. Suddenly she saw the stake to which the boy had been tied. 78. 'At night the pythons come to hurt me, but the black lion protects me,' the boy told. 79. Quickly Tara untied the boy, and they embraced each other. 80. 'Who has done this,' Tara asked. 81. 'Who has done this to you ?' 82. The boy had strange scars all over his body, and some of these places were still bleeding.

83. 'I will bring you to the lake to wash the wounds,' Tara said. 84. 'No !' the boy screamed. 85. 'You can't, for the black lions will find me again to bring me here.'

86. 'I will slaughter them all until none of them has it's skull on it's body anymore,' Tara said with cold eyes. 87. 'The only one I will spare is this friend of yours here.' 88. He had become an outcast of the group because of his handicap, but actually he was the one who saved the life of this boy. 89. If he wouldn't be there, they would have killed the boy. 90. Since then the black lion stayed with the boy to watch over him, like it was his only child. 91. The boy could see so much love in the eyes of Tara as she watched this precious black lion. 92. For he guarded the last remains of her tribe.

93. Suddenly the black lions entered in. 94. They saw the older black lion with Tara and the boy. 95. They jumped on the older black lion and killed him. 96. It all went so fast and they were with so many more black lions, it looked like an invasion. 97. The boy was crying. 98. Tara took him tight under one arm and started to slay the mass of black lions with her sword. 99. Suddenly all sorts of pythons came out of openings in the wall. 100. A horrible fight started between the remained black lions and the pythons. 101. There were also pythons who went after Tara and the boy, and again, Tara was the great slaughterer. 102. After all black lions and pythons were dead they could see through the openings a hall full of weapons of python stone. 103. There were spears, five-pointed and six-pointed blades, bows, arrows and a lot more. 104. The boy said these weapons were called bone-breakers. 105. They could easily crash any sort of bones and skeletons. 106. That the older black lion had told him. 107. So they crept through the openings in the wall and came in the other hall. 108. There were also a lot of small hills of python stone.

109. But all of a sudden giantspiders and one giantpython were coming out of a den. 110. The boy grasped some weapons and started to fight, and also Tara grasped some weapons. 111. She killed the giantspiders by spears and the giantpython she killed by a sevenpointed blade.

Python City

112. Tara hoped she would find the stolen skull of Gitdugal the killer-king somewhere here. 113. It was the most precious stone among all the python stones. 114. But there was no any trace of it. 115. The boy said the black lions had spoken about it. 116. They said it was somewhere in Python City. 117. They would have to travel three days to the north to find Python City. 118. It was a city in the middle of the Great Python Jungle on Mars.

119. When they finally came in Python City a warmth was gliding into their souls, very mysterious. 120. It was a warm day in Python City. Most of them were on the beach at the sea. 121. Tara asked the boy if he knew anything else about where the skull could be. 122. The boy said they talked about a certain shop. 123. 'Yes,' Tara said, 'but do you also know what kind of shop ?' 124. But that the boy couldn't remember. 125. He thought a comic-shop. 126. So they went for a walk along the shops. 127. There were many streets with shops, but finally they found a comic-shop. 128. The boss of the comic-shop looked very angry. 129. He also looked like he had drunk too much. 130. 'What do you want ?' the man asked. 131. Tara asked him if he knew anything about a skull. 132. Then the man told that his wife believed in black magic, and that she had bought the skull once to capture the soul of her enemy. 133. The man said he didn't believe in it. 134. 'Can we speak to your wife ?' Tara asked. 135. 'Yes,' the man said, 'tonight, for she's now at the beach.'

136. In the evening Tara and the boy returned to the shop, after they had taken dinner somewhere. 137. When the woman finally got home she started to laugh when she heard about the story. 138. 'Don't listen to him,' she said. 139. 'He's always drunk.' 140. But Tara knew something wasn't right. 141. It was like she remembered the face of this woman, and it wasn't right. 142. Then suddenly she knew it : It was a slave-girl who once worked for Gitdugal the killer-king. 143. Of couse she knew of the powers of the skull. 144. Awhile later the man came downstairs with the skull in his hands. 145. The woman started to curse. 146. But later she explained everything, and Tara seemed to be right. 147. Tara knew how dangerous the skull could be, and didn't trust the woman with it. 148. 'Since I killed Gitdugal and set you all free I had to take care of the skull, but once it was stolen,' Tara said. 149. She asked the woman how she got the skull. 150. She said she had bought it from some men called the black lions. 151. Then Tara knew enough. 152. Of course the black lions could shape-shift into humans to do such things. 153. 'How much did you pay for it ?' Tara asked. 154. 'Sixty tanarings,' the woman said. 155. That was a lot of money. 156. 'I will give you seventy tanarings for it, but I have to get it back,' Tara said. 157. The woman said that that was a good deal. 158. The woman said that they could also spend the night in her house located above the comic-shop. 159. Tara and the boy were very tired. 160. But in the middle of the night the woman came to the room where Tara was sleeping. 161. She had a knife and was ready to kill Tara so that she could keep the python skull. 162. But Tara heard her coming, and had also a knife under her blanket. 163. She acted like she was still sleeping, and when the woman was near to her bed already, and when she almost could feel her breath in her neck she suddenly turned around and pierced the knife into the heart of the woman. 164. She took the skull and the boy with her, and then they left Python City in the middle of the night.

165. Now they would go to Tara's cave, where she had a lot of hidden dens. 166. But on their way the boy asked if he could stay with a tribe he knew very well. 167. Tara agreed immediately. 168. When Tara returned to her cave there was a strange man in her cave. 169. The man looked a bit confused, and apologized immediately. 170. 'I'm sorry but I just escaped from an arena and I had to hide myself,' he said. 171. He explained from which tribe he was and what had happened to him. 172. Tara understood, and told him that he could stay as long as he didn't make any troubles. 173. Tara always had a sort of weak spot for gladiators, for she knew how life could be as a gladiator. 174. She cared for him like he was her baby. 175. In the middle of the night he stood before her. 176. He was very tall. 177. He said to her he was very scared. 178. He couldn't sleep. 179. He was afraid they would find him here and would take him to the arena again. 180. He told her that he was a war-prisoner. 181. She listened to his long story, and she took him in her arms to sooth him. 182. She told him that she would protect him, and that if any of his capturers would ever come here she would beat the brains out of their skulls. 183. Then Tara began to tell him stories to sooth him further. 184. The man told her that he had lost many battles, but he fortunately never got killed. 185. Tara immediately said that she could teach him how to fight so that he would never lose any battle anymore. 186. She said that if he would become such a good warrior that he could defeat her in wrestling than he never had to fear anything again. 187. But she also taught him how to fight with swords, spears and how to use a bow with it's arrows. 188. She also taught him how to hunt for food.

189. One day she told him about the python skull, but she wished she would never have told about it's secrets. 190. For in a night he woke her up, and he had the skull in his hands and put it behind him on a high place. 191. Then he said : 'Fight for it.' 192. The skull was taking all her strength away, and she felt like it was enslaving her. 193. She was almost completely in the power of this man, and if the man wouldn't be of good heart he could have destroyed her heart. 194. She now knew she couldn't feel safe anymore in her own cave since the man challenged her like this. 195. It was like he took away the most dear thing of her heart, although he didn't destroy her heart. 196. This was the moment her hate against men had been stirred up more than ever.

197. Never ever again would she give her heart like she did. 198. She got her skull back, but she lost something of her heart, and she couldn't get it back. 199. One night she decided to leave her cave for awhile. 200. But when she returned she found out that the man had committed suicide. 201. Maybe he knew that he had gone too far. 202. She had mixed feelings about his death.

203. But as time went on, his soul started to return to her.

204. And as she accepted him in her cave again he started to become of flesh and blood more and more. 205. And that could happen because of the python skull. 206. He told her that he had been to the Underworlds of Mars, to Tartarus, where his soul had been captured between the squeezing Moving Walls of Everlasting Damnation. 207. Here his soul got dense again. 208. He said that in the place where he was everything would be turned into Python Stone. 209. He also told her about his true reason why he had committed suicide. 210. And they became lovers for the second time.

211. But as this strange resurrection went on, Tara more and more found out about what was going on. 212. He only returned to her to seek for revenge. 213. But he wasn't himself anymore, so Tara thought he had been sent back to her by someone for some reason. 214. When Tara had slain him in a fight, she wanted to find out about his second coming. 215. So she decided to go to the Moving Walls of Tartarus, a dangerous realm below the Death-realms of Mars. 216. She knew exactly which rivers to take in the Death-realms of Mars, and finally after a long journey she reached Tartarus. 217. When she got to the Moving Walls area she met Drinbard, a pirate-captain. 218. She asked him about his friend, but Drinbard didn't want to tell anything. 219. Finally she got into a fight against him. 220. They both had two-bladed swords called doubledeckers. 221. Finally Drinbard gave her access in the deeper realms of the Moving Walls. 222. Before he gave in they had a fight of two days.

223. No one would understand the horror Tara saw there. 224. It was here Tara really learned to fight. 225. It was here she met Diabrillis the puppetmaster. 226. The souls of the damned who got slammed between the walls gained so much density at times that they could form a threat against the ruling classes of Tartarus. 227. Diabrillis was often their last hope, for he captured the densest souls from between the walls to enslave them in puppets. 228. Tara had still no idea how her friend could escape a place like this. 229. Tara had to pay Diabrillis a big deal of tanarings before she could enter his realms. 230. He was such a great puppetmaster, because he knew the art of soul-slaying. 231. His slaughtery was made of all sorts of rare python stone. 232. The huntingfields behind the realms of Diabrillis the puppetmaker were the last area's of this strange fairground. 233. The souls had become flesh and blood here, but now they had to survive on their journeys across the huntingfields. 234. Here the darkest indian hunters lived, and the darkest indian tribes. 235. All they wanted was to eat meat, and that was also what a strange billboard said somewhere in the dark pubs of this area : Eat Meat. 236. It was for the damned souls not enough to escape from the hands of Diabrillis the puppetmaker. 237. If there was any escape then most of the times it was organized by the dark indians of the huntingfields themselves, just because they were in need for meat. 238. How Tara's friend could survive and escape she still didn't understand. 239. Maybe he would have captured many women on the huntingfields by his charms, and maybe they finally let him escape ? 240. Tara didn't know. 241. In the pub where she sat there was a fat barkeeper doing the dishes, and there were sitting a few naked indian women at the bar. 242. They listened to some music, had some talks and a few drinks. 243. They looked a bit strange at Tara, but further they were friendly, and Tara didn't have the impulse to grasp her sword. 244. The feathers of the indian hunter-women were very shiny, and Tara was looking at these ornaments for a long time. 245. Suddenly a cowboy entered in. 246. Tara could see that he was an escaped soul still in his process of growing dense. 247. Tara had the feeling the cowboy didn't know where he was. 248. Maybe he thought he had already reached the finish. 249. The indian women started to whisper to each other, and Tara knew about what they were going to do. 250. The cowboy walked like the whole pub was his, like he was the greatest hero of all times, for he had survived Everlasting Damnation, the Moving Walls of Tartarus and the soul-slaughteries of Diabrillis the puppetmaker. 251. He ordered a couple of beers. 252. Tara supposed he did that because he seemed like he never drank alone. 253. Everyone got a glass of beer, even the barkeeper, on costs of the cowboy. 254. Tara saw his good heart, and was worried about him. 255. Then one of the indian hunter-women stood up and asked : 'Shall we go outside ?'

256. The cowboy was confused. 'Are you talking to me ?'

257. 'Yes ?' he said, still a bit confused, not knowing what was going on. 258. He stood up, and wanted to walk outside the pub, but in a flash Tara could see how the indian woman was about to grasp her knife. 259. Before they could take any other step Tara jumped from her seat to the woman and kicked the knife out of her hands. 260. But quickly the other indian woman took her spear and wanted to pierce the cowboy. 261. Just in time Tara could jump on her neck and and pushed her on the ground by holding the neck tight between her legs. 262. The barkeeper took the telephone, while the cowboy started to become paniced. 263. The other indian woman tried to approach him. 264. 'Stay away from me !' he roared, while foam almost came out of his mouth. 265. The indian women sat down again after awhile, and everything was quiet again. 266. The cowboy now knew he was in danger, still. 267. Tara thought the cowboy was a lost case. 268. She didn't have any hope for him to survive in an area like this. 269. Soon she found out how the indian women had turned him into living meat on a stake. 270. But for Tara there wasn't any way to prevent it.

271. Very often she saw those sorts of men having their skins ripped off and shivering on a piercing stake, while indian women danced around their hopeless souls. 272. They were still the souls of the damned. 273. She wondered how her friend could escape all this. 274. On these fields demons and skeleton-gods were sitting on their high horses causing the doom of everlasting damnation to full extends. 275. Most of the times these skeleton-gods were dressed in garments, causing the horrors of indian sorcery all over the place. 276. They were the ones who had teached all these indians here how to be soul-criminals.

277. Once Tara met the White Spider Queen, a sorceress who could let nipples grow on bodies in such a number that skeletons would come to suck all the blood, fluids and meat-juices out of the body by these nipples. 278. These nipples were called the nipples of death. 279. The Queen was a very feared woman of the hunting-fields. 280. Even many of the indians feared her. 281. Before Tara realized she was under the webs and fluids of giant-spiders. 282. The White Spider tried to put her spell on Tara, but she failed. 283. They had a fight of several months, which Tara finally won. 284. This was how she could finally escape the horror surrounding the Moving Walls of Tartarus. 285. She still didn't find an answer to the questions she had about the one she once loved.

286. Not many would believe her if she would tell about all the horrors she saw in the darker area of the Moving Walls of Tartarus. 287. But as she grew so much in Life and Death, she more and more developped the dark sides she encountered in the area of the Moving Walls in herself. 288. It was something she could not escape, for everything was growing darker around her, and she needed to survive and dominate her own skull. 289. She needed to possess herself instead of letting someone else possess her, but she more and more found out about the high price it had to protect herself like this. 290. And this attitude she didn't need only for a day, but for the rest of eternity. 291. She had to wage an Everlasting War against everything which was threatening and possessing her, or she would lose herself forever. 292. In her eyes that was the only Love she could really bring up to herself, but it was enough for life.

293. Tara wanted to return to the White Spider Queen she once defeated. 294. She needed help from her. 295. The White Spider Queen had mixed feelings about Tara, but finally she accepted Tara's need for help, if only to be able to take revenge on Tara. 296. She initiated Tara deeply into her temples and her secret places, and most of all : she started to love her.

297. No one would expect the love which started to develop between the two. 298. They could learn a lot from each other, and by a greater horror, they could be much savor against the higher levels of horror coming against them both. 299. They had a shelter in each other. 300. Tara taught the White Spider Queen how to fight by her weapons, and the White Spider Queen did the same to Tara. 301. The White Spider Queen was still dignified in all her horrors, but Tara was rude and uncivilized like always. 302. She didn't have any manners or behaviour, while the White Spider Queen had so many etiquettes. 303. They used to hate each others attitude, but now they knew they had to combine them for their own survival, or they would both lose their souls in horror. 304. The horror was hunting and growing outside, and the White Spider Queen knew that her days were counted when she wouldn't integrate with Tara. 305. They were both parts of the same puzzle and the same weapon, necessary to win in the Everlasting War. 306. The White Spider Queen was always so gracious that Tara although she more and more desired this jewel, sometimes just wanted to cut her skull off to decorate her weapons with it. 307. But they knew they needed each other, and they developed an intimate and tender love-relationship.

308. The White Spider Queen developped Tara's lust for poetic utterances, and Tara developped the White Spider Queen's lust for stories. 309. One day the White Spider Queen showed Tara a White Spider Stone. 310. It was the stone of blood and lust. 311. By this stone spiders wove their threads. 312. These threads were nothing but slices of slain and damned blood of death. 313. It also developped the slimy airs of spiders necessary to breath in these higher levels of horror. 314. The stone was also called : Blood Slayer as well, especially when weapons were made of the stone. 315. In a hall the White Spider Queen showed the delicate weapons made of such stone, and these weapons were called the blood-slayers. 316. They could cause sudden death and damnation. 317. The weapons were not very tall, but compact. 318. Some of them were fourpointed blades, fivepointed blades, all sorts of strange dreadful spears and knives and some bows.

319. As for Tara : She had to find a way to forget about this all, as she found out about the forces of Love being nothing else but the forces driven by a repressed revengefull heart coming from the past. 320. These veils of the spider were nothing but tricks to hide the Evil of the Python Stone. 321. A stone she tried to get rid of in the end, but which pierced itself a way to her heart more and more. 322. She more and more found out about the unbearable price of such a python stone, and she couldn't escape from it. 323. She had become it's slave forever.

Sharla the Head Hunter ; Worshippers of Strange gods

1. No one would expect Sharla the Head Hunter to return after she was chased away by Tara from Rhodes. 2. But it was only to prepare a harder attack. 3. She went to her kingdom of heads again, where she had the skulls of her enemies on stakes, and even those of the ones she ones loved. 4. She was the horror of the Mitstik River, a huge river-area on the south of Mars. 5. No one could really explain an encounter with Sharla the Head Hunter. 6. She took minds and souls away, to finally take their heads. 7. She was obsessed with heads. 8. She painted them, decorated them with feathers and jewelry, and people said she only grew wilder since the death of her father, the horrible Skeleton Eater. 9. Whenever he was hunting, he didn't care about the meat. 10. He only ate bones. 11. Sharla the Head Hunter's father was a huge skeleton himself, decorated by strange misleading ornaments.

12. Whenever people were looking at him, they lost so much of their lives. 13. He was a strange and dangerous man, even to his daughter. 14. It was like by his death Sharla broke so many chains of herself, yes, she was the one who had killed him.

15. For years she stayed on her side in the West after she had been defeated by Tara from Rhodes, but after these years she returned to the Eastside of the river. 16. No one could really explain what happened, but she had become so much more powerful. 17. Some said she had eaten the soul of her father.

18. Tara from Rhodes stood before her cave washing herself by the lake. 19. Warriors of her tribe came to her, telling her that Sharla the Head Hunter had returned. 20. At that moment they heard shrieking. 21. It was Sharla the Head Hunter, coming towards them. 22. Like a monkey she jumped from tree to tree. 23. There was something around her neck, a snake. 24. Tara from Rhodes took her spear, and told the warriors of her tribe to go behind her. 25. But it was already too late. 26. Sharla the Head Hunter had pierced one of them by an arrow. 27. 'Run away !' Tara from Rhodes shouted to the others, but also another one was already pierced by an arrow. 28. Then Tara threw her spear but she missed. 29. Quickly she took an arrow from her quiver and shot it, but missed again. 30. How could she miss two times ? 31. What was going on ? 32. Then Sharla the Head Hunter stood before her raising her sword. 33. Tara took another spear and they had a fight. 34. Sharla the head Hunter smiled. 35. 'If I will kill you, I will kill your tribe after it, do you think that's okay ?' 36. Tara stung by her spear, but missed : 'No,' she shouted. 'I told you already to leave this place.'

37. 'So why ?' Sharla the Head Hunter asked ironically, 'don't you like to see heads all over the place ?'

38. 'Well,' Tara replied, 'most of the time I like to see heads on bodies, but in this case I like to see a headless body.' 39. Then she fiercely tried to hit Sharla's head with a knife. 40. But Sharla jumped aside and kicked Tara against her head. 41. 'Bull's Eye !' she shouted. 42. Then Sharla's snake jumped on Tara and tried to strangle her. 43. 'Have fun together,' Sharla said ironically, 'I will return when dinner's ready.' 44. And then she left the place. 45. Tara had a hard time overcoming the snake. 46. The snake had a tighter grip than the usual snakes, and she tried to smash his head with a hard object in her surroundings. 47. But the snake moved all over, and also coiled itself around her legs. 48. Tara got troubles in breathing, and the snake was very slimy.

49. Suddenly she heard singing. 50. Someone was washing herself in the lake. 51. It was Sharla the Head Hunter. 52. 'This place will be mine in short time !' she shouted. 53. Suddenly Tara could throw the snake off of her. 54. She threw the snake into the lake, and continued her fight against Sharla the Head Hunter. 55. 'Oh, come on then,' Sharla shouted, 'I will eat you like a shark.' 56. Tara jumped on Sharla the Head Hunter and pushed her further into the lake. 57. Crocodiles from all sides came after Sharla the Head Hunter and she had to fight for her life. 58. But her snake swam towards the crocodiles and took them in a tight grip, while they were slowly dying without having any breath.

59. These were the days of Sharla the Headhunter. 60. She had many fights against Tara from Rhodes, for she wanted to have her skull and those of her tribe. 61. But one day tragedy struck Sharla the Headhunter, for her snake thought it would be time to add Sharla's head to the collection of heads in the Westside of the river. 62. The snake also thought it would be time to swallow Sharla's soul. 63. No one knew how such a deep friendship could turn over in such a hate, causing Sharla's death. 64. As the warriors of Tara's tribe were in ecstasy about Sharla's fatal friendship with the snake, and as they were feasting the whole night, they didn't know about a greater threat which was awakening, the very snake of Sharla the Head Hunter itself, with the captured soul of Sharla in its erected pride. 65. The snake had only grown stronger, and taller by eating the meat and soul of its best friend. 66. Now the snake had become the Head-collector, but it also collected souls.

67. The warriors of Tara's tribe didn't know about the danger moving slow towards their wigwams. 68. While they were still feasting the snake slid into the first wigwam, taking some children away. 69. Soon they discovered about the sudden disappearance of the children, and their feasting started to turn into mournings. 70. The snake took the children across the river, and taught them how to hunt for heads. 71. The snake also taught them in the way they developed a rage against their own tribe. 72. When the children had grown up they formed their own tribe preparing so much vengeance to attack their original tribe one day. 73. The children didn't only worship the snake, but they also worshipped Sharla the Head Hunter. 74. They brought sacrifices to her everyday, a great part of the prey. 75. Tara had searched for the children for a long time, but now she was about to cross the river to search in Sharla's territory. 76. Somewhere in a different part of the river the children's tribe was moving towards Tara's tribe. 77. They only wanted to have one thing : heads.

78. The children who had grown older now had become skilled warriors. 79. They wanted to cause the fall of their original tribe, as they were bitten in their childhood by the snake. 80. He bit them in their skull where he placed a shiny yellow amulet to dominate them. Now they were in its evil hands, enslaved by the tormented soul of Sharla the Hunter. 81. All they could do was giving expression of her rage and hate. 82. These evil children started to slaughter the children of their own original tribe. And when Tara returned to the tribe she was already too late. 83. She couldn't find the children behind the river but she found a shiny yellow amulet like a tall cube. She found it in the temple of the snake, while some puppets of clay were sitting in front of it. She knew enough. That was the sign of domination. 84. Now she finally had found the children it was already too late. She stood on the hill watching that what had happened, raised the shiny yellow amulet and spoke loud : 'I think I already know what is going on here.' 85. The children turned around and when they saw the amulet it was like they were losing all their strength. Tara knew she had to be very careful now, for she couldn't underestimate the works of the snake. But the fact she had the amulet in her hands now gave her much power over the children. 86. The amulet wasn't in the hidden temple of the snake anymore. Tara knew where this temple was, for it used to be Sharla's temple. And in a sense it still was. 87. Suddenly some of the children started to have much pain in the back of their heads. They grasped their heads with their hands, and slowly Tara walked towards the children. 88. They wouldn't have any chance against her, for no one could be really successful against Tara from Rhodes. She was still the Warrior Princess of the primeval, like the black snake. 89. And none of these kids would even think about attacking her. Tara took her knife and started to cut the shiny yellow amulets out of their skulls, as she knew what was going on. She could feel the mighty vibration of the amulet. After awhile she had many pieces of it in her hands, while the children weren't themselves anymore. 90. It was like they were awakening out of a long long dream. Some started to cry, while others stared like frozen to the ground. The snake had done this job when the children were too young to realize what was going on, and he did it while they slept. Tara tried to explain them what was going on, and she did this with all the love she had. Since the children had invaded the tribe the survivors fled away. 91. No one could begin anything against such powers. They had the strength like wild animals. Now one knew that they had been gifted by the snake of Sharla the Head Hunter and her very soul. But now Sharla had been overcome and defeated again. 92. The only thing was : Where was the snake ?

93. Tara knew they were in danger now, for the warriors of the tribe could return to see what had happened. They were on a hunt today, while the women and children were in the camp alone. What would they do when they would find out that so many children had been slain today ? 94. A dark feeling had entered Tara, something which was telling her that something was going on. She suddenly thought about the snake. What if he had already possessed the minds of the warriors ? She had to do something with the amulet now. But she didn't know what. She laid the pieces in a circle and started to think. Now the amulet was hers, and she wanted to spare the warriors in their feelings. 95. She knew where they were hunting today, and she hoped that they would stay the night there. So she went there, and fortunately when she came there it was already night and they were all sleeping. She had cut the amulets into many pieces, and by the amulet she wanted to lure them away from the danger. She knew that the snake had bound their hearts and minds by the attack, and she knew that if they would find out about their children, the snake would use them to destroy even more of the tribe. 96. Tara knew the sorceries of the snake, and the danger of Sharla's soul. They wouldn't rest before they had torn the whole tribe apart to devour it. The snake was a possessor of minds, and Tara exactly knew which steps the snake could take to prepare the possession. The snake had almost reached it's goal with the warriors of her tribe. Slowly Tara crept to the weapons of the warriors of her tribe, while they were sleeping. In all the weapons she tried to put small pieces of the amulet. She succeeded.

97. Now the only thing she had to do was taking the children away across the river. They couldn't be in their original tribe anymore. She also had to find the ones who had escaped since the children invaded the tribe. But when she had reached the tribe the snake was there. It would be a horrible fight. All her rage she concentrated on the snake, while she took her sword and entered the arena.

98. The snake had grown so much bigger now since the last time she had a fight with it. She wondered where the children were. Maybe they had already been gone to their tribe behind the river. Tara was in rage. 'I want my amulet back,' the snake roared. 'No !' Tara screamed, 'you will not get it, for your games are over.'

99. 'You do not know with which powers you are playing, girl !' the snake roared, while it's tail slammed her in her face. 'By this amulet I will bring Sharla's soul into the minds of the tribe,' the snake spoke loud. 'But the amulet doesn't belong to Sharla's soul anymore,' Tara spoke, while she pierced her sword into the tail of the snake. 'It's her bones, it's made of her skeleton,' the snake spoke in strange delight.

100. 'But now I possess it !' Tara shouted, 'Now I am the master of my tribe, as I am it's guard.'

101. 'But the soul of Sharla needs to come alive again, or she will devour the tribe totally, to swipe it's souls away from Mars. She will gather her bones by herself, and then come alive again,' the snake roared. And then something strange happened. The amulet started to shriek, and in the distance the warriors of Tara's tribe were coming home. They were in panic, and some were hysterical. 'Our weapons are moving and shrieking !' they shouted. 'It's the amulet,' the snake roared. 'It is time Sharla the Head Hunter is coming alive again.' Then the warriors fell on the ground and worshipped the snake while the snake was coiling around their weapons. 102. Tara knew she was losing the grip on her tribe, and she knew that the only place she could gather her powers again to break this sort of witchcraft was the realm of Sharla the Head Hunter across the river. She now had to make that kingdom hers, or she would be enslaved by its powers herself.

103. But when she came across the river the children's tribe had possessed the whole area and had become evil again. They even didn't remember Tara. They didn't recognize her. She hoped the children didn't know about the hidden temple of the snake, so she went there, but they also possessed that temple. The kingdom of heads was against her. The children had strange weapons made of shiny yellow bone. It looked much like the amulets, and maybe it was the same : the bones of Sharla the Head Hunter. All the children were saying she would come alive tonight to gather her bones. Tara started to scream : 'No ! You have been possessed again !' But the children were shaking their heads. They only wanted to have one thing now : The head of Tara from Rhodes.

104. All of a sudden she got terrible headaches like ringing bells in her head. She grasped her head, but the pain only got worse. It was like a million wasps were stinging her brains, and her body got overheated. She almost fell to the ground, but she could catch herself on her knees, took her knife and cut into her skull where the pain was coming from. Soon she took a piece of the shiny yellow bone out of her head. She screamed and shrieked while she was raising it high. How could that happen to her ? How could such a piece be in her head ? Was it done by the snake ? And when ? Suddenly she heard screaming. The children were grasping themselves and each other. Some of them had pain in their legs or arms. Soon Tara had cut more pieces of the shiny yellow bones out of them. They knew Sharla would also look for these pieces.

105. Tara wanted to know about the secret of the shiny yellow bones of Sharla the Headhunter. She decided to search in the temple of the snake. A lot of strange altars were here, and strange stakes with totems. A lot of skulls were here. They were carrying strange smells, and were often painted and some had feathers. In the bigger skulls pythons and other big snakes were living. In another room of the temple there were also skulls, but most of them were very small. These could be the skulls of small children or monkeys. In a bigger one a hairy spider lived. The room was full of spiderwebs and behind the room there was also a small room with a low ceiling. Suddenly a piercing voice shouted : 'Tara from Rhodes ! Your friend Sharla has returned.' A huge skeleton of yellow shiny bones was standing in the opening of the small room. The snake was around its neck.

106. 'Yes, I am Sharla the Head Hunter, but I only need some skin, and I thought, maybe I can use yours,' the skeleton spoke. 'No way !' Tara said loud. 'I will break any bone of you to let it become my second skin. I feel so naked, I need a dress.' Suddenly fourpointed blade crashed the skeleton from behind. It was one of the children. But soon the bones were gathered again by a strange power. 'Go away, kid !' Tara shouted, 'There's witchcraft going on here, you better protect you soul !'

107. Tara knew she had to find out about this secret or it would enslave her forever. 'By the force of Soms !' she shouted, 'tell me your secret.' Suddenly a wind from behind crashed the skeleton again and a huge skeleton stood in the dooropening, breaking the bones with its teeth. Then after that he started to eat and absorb the bonemass. 'I have finally come to life again,' the skeleton roared. 'Who are you ?' Tara asked with a loud commanding voice. 'I am the Skeleton Eater, her father. She had killed me and captured my soul for such a long time in the form of a snake. But now I have come to take revenge.' The snake was sliding and coiling throughout his bones. 'But what did your soul do to my tribe ?' Tara shouted loud, 'This snake has killed and possessed so much of us.'

108. 'I was possessed too, by the meat and the soul of Sharla I once absorbed, but before that I was her slave, after she killed me and brought my soul alive again in the form of a snake. To eat her meat and soul was the first step in delivering myself from her,' the Skeleton Eater spoke. 'Now by eating her bones I hope I will break the possession.' Tara wanted to leave the temple now, but he was blocking her. 'Now all I want is your head !' the Skeleton Eater spoke loud. But the kid with the fourpointed blade had returned and crumbled the Skeleton Eater with it. 'Oh, my magical powers will gather my bones again,' the Skeleton Eater roared. 'I told you to go away !' Tara shouted loud. 'These kids won't listen.' The Skeleton Eater stood up, and said : 'I will eat and devour your bones, and I will use your meat and brains as windowdecoration.' The kid was running away again, but the Skeleton Eater ran after it. 109. The snake slid out of the body and attacked Tara. 'Come Tara !' the child shouted. 'I need to show you something.' Tara kicked the snake aside and ran outside. The child showed a shrine to Tara. 'Here we used to worship the Skeleton Eater,' the kid said. The Skeleton Eater had disappeared. But soon Tara found out he was devouring the bones of the children, leaving their meat behind. 'Why do you worship such a god !' Tara shouted. Then the kid asked : 'Which god do you worship then ?'

110. 'That's none of your business, but try Soms,' Tara replied harshly.

111. Now she had directed someone to Soms she had to leave the place and the whole domain of where she was born, the area of the Mitstik River. She gave this district over in the hands of Soms, for she didn't know it anymore. It was like she was chained by the tight chains of her youth. She wanted to forget about it all to start a new life. So she moved even more to the south, to the area of the legendary Mokotte Fields on Mars. This was even further in the south than the valleys and gardens where her original tribe had to work for the killer-king Gitdugal in earlier times. She had to travel a few weeks to come close to the Mokotte Fields. Here she would start a new life. She had become very tired of the riddles of the realm of Sharla the Head Hunter. She wanted to escape it's grip forever. In the valleys of the Mokotte Fields there would live a lot of sorcerors who could help her further. She had to go there, for an invisible force she didn't know of was taking her breath away and slowly strengling her.

112. In front of the Cave of Viviktus, the Wild Sorceror, there was a lair of a giantspider. The giantspider was very hairy and even had feathers. Tara wanted to go to him for help, but not much did she know about the horror of that place. No one could enter the Cave of Viviktus than the ones who could dominate it in wrestling. As she was very tired it became a long fight. The giantspider was about to strengle her. It was like this animal was taking her last piece of breath. But after awhile Viviktus the Wild Sorceror came outwards. 'I think I will have mercy on you this time, lady. You seem to have traveled a great deal. Come inside for some warm drinks,' he said. Tara stood up, while the giantspider left her alone. Inside there were halfnaked warriors sitting at bars. Most of them were looking at her. 'Oh, I want to fight against her one time,' one was shouting. Most of them were barefooted, but some of them had very strange boots or shoes. 113. They looked like killerboots. Viviktus, the Wild Sorceror, was leading her along the bars, and soon they were in the arena's. All sorts of wild animals had to fight against the different warriors. Some of these animals she had never seen before. They were monstous Martian animals. Behind the arena's there were some arena pools. Viviktus told her that if she would defeat all these warriors and animals, he would help her.

114. Nights of fights followed in which she slayed the greatest warriors. Sometimes she had to fight three or four of them at the same time, and sometimes even a whole group. They called her Tara the Slayer. By the grace of Viviktus not all these warriors would die by her hands or weapons, but she defeated them all. 'There's dread on you,' Viviktus said. 'They fear you like nothing else. I must say

I applaud your strength and persistence. You are cleansing your soul from witchcraft here for a great deal.' Then Tara took Viviktus tight by his throat and said : 'You Martial bunch of shatters, you promised me to help me !'

115. 'What I tell you is the truth,' Viviktus continued, 'but I will also give you help by myself. That I did promise and I will do, as I am an honest man.'

116. 'Some souls have reached a certain immortality, and will return on and on, after they have been killed. They have drunk from the sources of eternal death and birth, and they have a great immunity. Now these so-called immortals prey on mortals. And if they have fixed their mind on you, they can eat you all the way to your inner city, where they can and they will finally enslave you,' Viviktus said, 'It is finally by this eternal slavery you will find the well of eternal liberty, the freedom of the mind.'

117. 'What are you trying to tell me, sorceror, are you predicting me something ?' Tara blasted. But then she got very silent. After awhile she said : 'So you will tell me that Sharla the Head Hunter will return again to me to finally enslave me ? How ?' The sorceror nodded. 'I think you are very wise, my girl, and I think you will deal with this as you continue your path. You will find out that my words to you were true.'

118. And as the sorceror predicted Sharla the Head Hunter came to stalk her again, and this time she slayed Tara and took her soul to the realms of Lakshor, where she became an enslaved Gladiator.

Ship of Fire

119. After Sharla the Head Hunter took Tara's skull, Tara's soul found a fierce fire-ship in the deathrealms of Mars. She knew Sharla still wasn't done with her, and she would hunt for her soul, but on this ship she would have the chance to escape from Mars, as it became more and more a horror to her. On the Martian River of Death she was on the ship, but gladiators kidnapped her. These were the times she felt very weak. But as soon as they heard of Sharla the Head Hunter they became friends with Tara. They had to fight Sharla together. 120. It was a warrior-boat, the one where she was now. The ones of this boat were escaped gladiators and now they were waging war against the tribes along the Martian River of Death to make prisoners for their gods. They first wanted to sacrifice Tara also, but since they had an encounter with Sharla the Head Hunter they knew they could better not touch Tara. She might help them against Sharla's attacks. 121. What they didn't know was that Sharla attacked them because of Tara. If they would find out that Tara was the cause of this all, they would have sacrificed her for sure. They were cannibals of the highest grade on the Martian River of Death, since the gods taught them how to survive on these horrible rivers. Tara tried to escape from them many times, but all these attempts finally failed. It was like they were watching any move of her.

122. They didn't have much jewelry, but what they had was very precious. They had some python stones, and by that they could capture the minds and the souls of their prey. It also prevented them against any soul-enslavers. Most of the time these stones were planted in their weapons.

123. The friendship between Tara and them didn't last long, for once in the night Sharla the Head Hunter came to the boat. She killed the gladiators, took their heads, and captured Tara's soul. Sharla took Tara to the arena's of Lakshor where she sold Tara as a gladiator. When she could finally escape from Lakshor she returned to Mars again in search for the warrior-skulls of her friends who got beheaded by Sharla the Head Hunter. She would do anything to bring her friends back to life again. She also knew that their souls had been captured in their skulls, and that Sharla would have those skulls in her collection. So she returned to the area of the river of Mitstik, in search for Sharla the Head Hunter. Tara had now grown so much in skills, in wisdom and in so many other things. She was now ready to finish Sharla the Head Hunter forever to set her friends free.

124. But when she came there, it wasn't what she had expected. Although she easily found the skulls and used an oracle to talk to them, her friends didn't remember her, and didn't want to have anything to do with her. First she was in great grief because of the answers, but later she knew she first had to defeat Sharla the Head Hunter, because she seemed to dominate their mind and memory. But Sharla was nowhere to be found. Her realms were lonely and wild, almost depressed. Later she asked the oracle where Sharla was. The oracle answered that on the westside of Sharla's realms there was a new city. She would be there to raise it and rule it. The name of the city was : Eliphant City. Eliphant City would be the darkest city of Mars, a breeding place of sorcerors, witches, necromancers, thieves, assassins, soul-hunters and a lot more. Tara had the feeling she would go to the circus. Here Miss Sharla the Head Hunter would have her place now. Or would she be even Mrs. now ? Tara had so many cynical thoughts about Sharla in her head. It irritated her the way Sharla was. Oh how she would like to smash her skull into shatters to hang her brains in the trees.

125. In Eliphant City there were circuses and even fairgrounds indeed. But also lots of arena's. The City had a great deal of slaves, and there were enough slave-hunters operating from this side. The city also had a great deal of story-tellers and artists. Often they were wanderers coming to sell their art. In many cases they were thieves as well. Hermund Grottenweiler was a man having the most beautiful women in cages. Here they had to dance, sing and strip, but they were never allowed to come out of their cages. They lived in these cages like animals and slaves. No one was allowed to enter their cages. It was a big deal. Hermund Grottenweiler was one of the richest men of the city. He was a drinker of beer, and often he went to prostitutes to have some fun. He was also a gambler, and a lot of people said he was a thief. 126. Men used to throw a lot of money through the bars to let the women do whatever they wanted them to do, although they could never be touched. Tara was watching some of their shows. Sometimes there were more women in one cage, and often it was nothing but brute fights. Tara knew that if she wanted to conquer Sharla the Head Hunter, some of these women could be of good use.

127. 'How much do these women cost ?' Tara asked Hermund Grottenweiler.

128. 'They aren't for sale,' the man said gruff. 'but I can pay you a lot if you want to work here.' Tara took the man by his throat and said : 'You mean bastard, I give you twelve-thousand tanarings for two of them.'

129. 'Twelve-thousand tanarings for two women ? Are you crazy ? You could buy my whole business with that, but okay, I give you two women by choice,' said the man slowly. Twelve-thousand tanarings was a lot of Martian money. If you had a hundred tanarings you were already rich. 'I'll pay you later, bastard,' Tara said, but the man wanted the money now. Then someone else whispered something into the ears of the man, and after awhile the man said : 'Okay, you will pay me later, choose your two women.' So Tara took the best warriors, explained them what they had to do, and then they went on in search for Sharla the Head Hunter.

130. One of the women was called Lirsja, and the other Spirtja. They were both sisters or more accurate : half-sisters. Tara loved them from the first moment. They were tender, but at the same time they were bloody passionate warriors. They told Tara that they had been gladiators since childhood. It made one part of them very sensitive and another part of them numb and harsh. They had also been prostitutes for awhile, until Hermund Grottenweiler bought them. They told Tara that they had always been slaves, one or the other way. Their parents sold them to a slave-caravan when they were only three years old. This was because they lived in such a poverty. Their parents thought that when they would become slaves at least someone was taking care of them. And since they were eighteen that person was Hermund Grottenweiler. Tara didn't say anything. They were on a way to a pub, where Sharla the Head Hunter would be, according to some. 131. It was the Great Python Pub. It was already late. Tara opened the door and looked around. The pub was full of half-naked gladiators. Most of them were women, and Sharla the Head Hunter was there also. Tara took her knife and shouted : 'Sharla the Head Hunter, friends always return. How's life, bitch ? What have you done to the gladiator-skulls of the Martian River of Death ?'

132. Sharla started smiling. 'What are you talking about, dear ? I have done so many things to so many skulls, so what is the deal ?' Also other women were smiling. Tara stepped on a table and smashed a hanging lamp in pieces. 'Now listen you foolish pighead, we are not here to play any games tonight. Game's over, my friend. I'm here to smear your name on the wall like wallpaper. You will not even know your name anymore,' Tara shouted.

133. 'Oh,' Sharla said, 'but who are you anyway ? I do not remember your face.'

134. 'I am Tara the Slayer of Tartarus, Tara from Rhodes. I am the black snake,' Tara shouted in full pride. 'Everyone knows me.' People started to laugh and Sharla said with a tight face : 'It doesn't say anything to me. Maybe our encounter wasn't impressive enough.' Then Tara jumped to the table where Sharla the Headhunter was, and kicked her in her face. Some women at the bar slowly slid with their hands to their knives. 'I have risen from the dead to come in vengeance because of all what you ...' but further she couldn't come. 135. Someone had put a knife into her spine. Tara fell to the ground, while her two women came into action. They took some chairs and started to use them as rods. One of them took a leg-knife and threw it into the heart of Sharla. 136. 'Sorry, I do not know you,' she whispered soft in Sharla's face, 'but it seemed you made a big mess here.' The other woman took the knife out of Tara's back, but Tara felt very sick. Some other woman tried to further protect Tara. Then Sharla stood up like a dead body. 137. 'What a pity now,' she said, while she looked at the woman who had thrown the knife into her heart. 'I do not have a heart.' And then she started to laugh hysterically. Some men had entered the pub. They had sunglasses on, and they started to talk with the barkeeper. Sharla soon directed herself to them. 138. 'Listo and Carshan, you come at the right moment.' The two man took their guns and began to shoot some women. Tara rolled herself under a table, and prayed for strength. 139. She almost never prayed, but this time she had to. She prayed to Soms. The other two women of her had also dived under a table, while Sharla walked towards the door. 'Don't let them escape,' she said, and then she left. It was a horrible fight against Listo and Carshan and some other women. 140. But soon from the arena behind the pub women were coming to help Tara and her women. One of the women took the two men by the throat and threw them through the window.

141. Later Tara and her two women wanted to leave the pub to search for Sharla again. But the barkeeper took his gun and said : 'You aren't going anywhere.'

142. What then happened Tara couldn't recall, but she woke up in the fields of Tartarus, while her back was pierced on a stake. Her feet were tied to the stake, and her hands were tied behind her back. 143. She was surrounded by huge skeletongods with wolfskulls, all dressed in black garments. 144. One or two of them were in shiny purple, but still dark. They had voices like speaking mud, and one of them ripped her skin open to take her heart out of her chest. 145. Tara was screaming and shrieking. 'No one will ever defeat me,' she suddenly shouted calm. 146. But one of the skeletongods took an axe and cut her head off. The head rolled into a valley and doom came all over the place. Sharla was walking towards them 'Wow,' she said, 'now that was wonderful.'

147. Tara was now nothing but a ghost, so full of rage that she enslaved many souls. She wanted to live for vengeance the rest of eternity. Tara descended into so many unknown realms of Tartarus. 148. Here she would find out about the secrets of Sharla the Head Hunter. Tara would become a horror greater than she ever was, to survive this greater horror. 149. By the unknown squeezers of Tartarus she would have a bit more density, but what if she would only encounter more and deeper shatterers ?

150. But the only thing Tara encountered in the depths of Tartarus was a machine with so many bloody heads from the decapitated ones. This machine had been called the Machine of Democracy for such a long time. The bloody heads would keep all the souls of Mars possessed. Inside it was a strange arena where the ghosts of all these souls were gladiators. The strange arena brought forth the fluids of Everlasting Damnation. Tara was drinking from this well without hesitation. The fluids were frothing like beer, and Tara didn't want anything else than to drown in it. But suddenly strange creatures were jumping on her head sucking her brains. They looked a little bit like octopi and spiders, but actually these were the heads of decapitated pythons. They were called the brain-slayers. Tara had come into the extasy of slaughter, took a word from the machine and started to slay the heads in a bloodbath. 151. So much strength was coming over her from unknown sources. The heads didn't have skulls, only brains. Also the heads of the strange machine didn't have any skulls inside. They looked like strange rubber or plastic masks. Some jumped on Tara's head, trying to mask her to devour her brains and abundant slaughter. Suddenly she was in a shock, after she had slaughtered many of them. She had also seen the heads of her gladiator-friends who were beheaded by Sharla the Head Hunter, and whose skulls she found when she returned to Sharla's realms. What had become of them here ? Their skull-less heads were now puppets of this strange machine. 152. Suddenly the machine started to spin like crazy. The heads started to discuss and argue like crazy. 'Now shut up !' Tara shouted. She went inside the machine again to see if the ghosts of her friends were in there. Several ghosts came towards her. These were the ghosts of her friends, and now they were very understanding. 153. 'Yes, Tara, we have been imprisoned by this strange arena-machine again,' she said to her. So this was the machine they had escaped from before they went to the Martian River of Dead where they encountered Tara. 'How can I help you ?' Tara asked.

154. 'We cannot escape Tara,' the warriors said. 'We escaped only to finally sink deeper in this machine. This is our fate.'

155. 'No !' Tara shouted rude. 'I will fight this machine, and free your souls from it.' The warriors sighed. 'Tara,' one of them said very tenderly, 'the more you fight this machine, the more it will swallow you. We invite you to come with us. Come with us, you won't regret it.'

156. 'Oh, you lost your head,' she said to the ghost. 'There's nothing I can do for you. I will leave.'

157. But the ghost took her in his arms and said : 'You cannot leave. No one leaves this place. You can only leave to finally realize you have sunk deeper in it.' 158. She felt the sweetness and softness of the ghost entering her soul. It was like they were seducing her to stay with them in this doom. 'I don't want to lose myself !' Tara shouted.

159. 'You will only find yourself, ... finding yourself back ...' the ghost said, while he showed her his tragic face. 'There's Everlasting War here, and that is our fate.' Tara tried to shake the ghost away from her, but the more she did that the more she felt he was coming over her. 160. It was like he was slaying her brains. Suddenly, and she didn't know where it came from, she had the strength to push him away. 161. 'I will slay Sharla the Head Hunter,' she said with a tight face, 'and then I will return to this place.'

162. Tara climbed her way up to where she came from, in search for Sharla the Head Hunter. The blood was rushing through all of her veins all of a sudden. 163. But the heads from the Machine of Democracy seemed to follow her in a distance. She had now seen the secret of Sharla the Head Hunter. It was a strange fairground of heads, keeping all the politics in the upper worlds of Mars possessed and by that the politics of so many other planets. But it was lawless politics, a strange arena called Democracy letting the Everlasting Blood of Damnation flow, frothing through so many souls.

164. But more and more heads from this strange machine from the depths of Mars were surrounding Tara, and she started to lose strength. She remembered the words of the ghosts, and suddenly she totally lost it. The heads seemed to come out of nowhere, and it didn't stop. 'Be ready for the masses of democracy,' one ghost had told her. It was like this arena was giving birth to so many children all beheaded. Tara heard their shrieks in her mind, slaying her mind. It was rushing through her veins. She had mixed feelings inside indeed, like Everlasting War inside, like Everlasting Democracy. 165. She fought, but she remembered : She was fighting herself. All these heads were hers, like her split identities. It was a Psychiatrist deep inside her mind, such a crazy one, but also nothing but a puppet from this strange fairground of Mars, coming forth from the depths of Tartarus, only to sink in it deeper. Tara had lost so many of her good thoughts, and now she was delivered into the hands of this undescribable being. She had been torn apart by it, but she still wanted to kill Sharla the Head Hunter. But where would it bring her ? It seemed to be a stupid idea, the more she thought about it, meaning nothing, absolutely nothing in the progress of the universe.

166. As all these puppets were slaves of Sharla the Head Hunter, Sharla was also their slave, and Tara also. Who was really the king, and who was really the slave, when all these masks would be torn off ?

167. She was just imprisoned by this crazy fairground called Democracy. 168. She had to fight her mirrors, for her mirrors were fighting her, showing up often masked ...

169. What if Sharla the Head Hunter was just one of her mirrors. She couldn't stand the thought. She would want to slay that mirror, but even more : to enslave it. For there was no such thing as Death. It was only a strange mirror on a strange fairground of Mars, opening the door to so many other mirrors. One day Tara got the shock of her life. She saw her own head hanging between all the other heads of doom. That meant that she had already been a part of this machine, but for how long already ? And this probably meant that also her own ghosts had to be somewhere in the arena inside the machine. So she went inside again, and asked the other ghosts about it. 'I want to show you something,' one of them said. It was one of her warrior-friends she had encountered on the Martian River of Death. The ghost asked her to come with him to a room behind the arena. He opened a cupboard there, where she saw ten to twenty of her own ghosts hanging there at a rope. They were like fleeces. Tara was shocked. 'How do I bring them alive ?' she asked.

170. 'Just by accepting it all,' the ghost said tenderly. It was like Tara was melting inside. She just wanted to let it come over her. A bell was ringing. The fights and wars between the ghosts started again. Tara had to fight against a friend of her. 'Tara, you must accept Democracy,' the ghost said. 'It is the Lawless. It is the Head Hunter and the Head Brooder.' Snakes got born here, as the children of the gladiators. But these children had no bodies ... only heads.

171. Tara knew that these heads would tear her mind apart again and again. They were brain-slayers, and it would lead her deeper into this strange abyss.

The Deception

172. 'Blood you deserve, blood to stream out of your body and die !' Someone shouted on a slave-market of Eliphant City. Tara had returned to this city, but she was wandering there a bit aimless. She didn't want to watch how this yelling would turn into another bloody fight. Oh yes, she loved fighting, more than anyone else, but sometimes she had hard times in watching it. As she walked further over the market, she saw a young slave getting beaten up by his master. Tara didn't think a second and slaughtered the slave-master to set the boy free. Sometimes she just had such strange impulses. Where they were coming from, she didn't know. She entered a pub. The barkeeper was doing some dishes and brought a beer to her in grace. 'You look thirsty, lady,' the barkeeper said. Tara drank the cup empty within seconds. Then she stood up and walked to the girl-room of the pub. Here some slave-girls worked as whores. A tall young lady with star-earrings stood in the door-opening. 'Anyone heard of Sharla the Headhunter ?' The girl shook her head. Tara saw a newspaper and took it in her hands. Her feet were sweating because of the heat in the pub. It was a hot day in Eliphant City. 173. In the newspaper there were many stories about heads and headhunters. The last page of the magazine had some news. There was a picture of a wild-bearded head of a savaged man called Ijupitor who had been beheaded. If someone wanted to use the skull-less head for black magic he would have to call a certain number. Tara's feet started to sweat even more. There were also some smaller pictures of bison-heads, and finally a small note about Sharla the Head Hunter. But almost everything of the note had been torn away. Like someone wanted to keep the information. 'Now, don't mess with me again, girl,' Tara said to the girl, 'Have you heard of Sharla the Headhunter, yes or no ?'

174. The girl said yes softly, and asked Tara to come with her. They went on a stairs and came into a dark room. The room was a bit colder, and there was also a lion caged there. 'Do you work in circus ?' Tara asked. 'Yes, also,' the girl said. Suddenly Sharla the Head Hunter stood in the door-opening. 'I will not waste my time killing you,' Tara said. 'But I will enslave you in this bottle,' and then she grasped an empty bottle from the table. 'I swear by Soms you will vanish now into this bottle,' Tara shouted. Sharla didn't move, but then she fell forward. A man in a bear-suit was standing behind her, having a strange small machine in his hand like a calculator. Also on Sharla's back there was a strange small instrument. The man took off his bear-mask, and fell in worship before the feet of Tara. 'Oh Tara,' he said, 'I have heard so much about you. I am obsessed with you. I made a Sharla puppet to let her have a double. I also want to make one of you. 175. I work in circus you see,' the man said. He talked a bit confused and Tara kicked him hard in his face. 'Do you really think I have time for this nonsense ?' Tara said unfriendly. But Tara now knew she had to be careful, for maybe the Sharla she met in the other pub was just a double also, made to distract her.

Was that the reason why she finally ended in Tartarus that way ? She should have known better, for necromancers often used doubles to deceive and enslave their victims very subtle. Some necromancers had built thousands and thousands of doubles, and then they masked them so that they could build whole cities. Would Eliphant City just be a trap to let Tara suffer in Tartarus ? And maybe there were even more victims. It all started since Tara was looking for her friends in the realms of Sharla. Here she found their skulls and an oracle. The oracle had directed her to the Eliphant City.

176. Tara returned to Sharla's realm where the oracle was still speaking. Still the skulls of her friends were there, and the oracle had grown so big now. It had fiery flames, and it was like a well of fire now. How could she trust such an oracle anyway. And how could she further know if something was a double or the original. Suddenly she heard strange marching in the distance. When the sound came closer it was like a strange song. It was a ghost-army full of the doubles of Sharla the Head Hunter. Slaying or even believing such a double could already be very dangerous.

177. Tara knew that to be immune against an army of doubles you needed to produce your own doubles, so that she could multiply herself. She was kneeling down before the skulls of her friends and she started to brood them. Suddenly they stood before her. The army of Sharla's doubles had to vanish slowly. They were awakening the giants of Tartarus.

178. They set so many worlds in fire, and she could forget and remember so many things. It was like she was made for this, but her demons always said to her : she created herself.

179. If she could she would turn everything into doom. She wanted to create a total new world. And if that was her fate : She wanted to do it in Tartarus. She was the vulcano, letting the dogs of Tartarus out. She was of Tartarus, Tara of Tartarus.

180. And as she was writing in the scrolls of Mars : She slid deeper, descending with her ghosts into the mists of Tartarus, into its ravines.

The Parrot Gems

1. They were feared in the whole area of Wirdum Desert. They would sell the boy to a slave-caravan, but first they would do surgery on him. As the boy had been tied to a stake they started to cut him with knives. In his body they were looking for something ... parrot gems ...

2. When they had found the parrot gems they ripped his further skin off. After the boy stood skinless in the hot sun for hours insects came to eat from his meat. The boy died in horrible circumstances, but when they returned they called his tormented soul back from death. This was how they always used to zombificate their prisoners. Now this zombie had been ripe for slavery. In the distance a slave-caravan was coming. They had smelled some blood Not much later the dirty deal would start.

3. Tara from Rhodes had wandered through the Wirdum Desert for days. She had found a lake near a small forest. Through the soil she saw something shiny in the distance. As she moved closer she took notice of the fact that these were parrot gems. But what did all these bastards do around it ? She took her sword and started to slay them all in a terrible bloodbath. Tara the Terrible had come. After the slaughter she took the gems and moved forwards.

Tara knew everything about these parrot gems ... Actually they weren't from parrots ... Everyone on Mars would have more or less parrot gems in their bodies. When they would be taken away they were in the danger to become zombified, which meant they could be risen from the death to be enslaved in their bodies for the rest of their lives. These were called : The zombies of Wirdum Desert.

4. Ammelgamma was a dealer in parrot gems. He had a shop somewhere on the westside of Wirdum Desert. Tara would go to him. Tara didn't care for parrot gems, but when she found some, she would bring them to Ammelgamma. Ammelgamma was a prophet, a collector of parrot gems. He didn't use any surgeries to zombify his victims. He only used words. And he had a lot of success in it, for he had one of the greatest slave-caravans of Wirdum Desert. He used to travel a lot with his mass of necktied zombie-slaves. To see such a slave-caravan moving through the desert was always impressive. Ammelgamma used to prophesy and soon his whole audience had been enslaved by his words ... a strange fire, zombifying them to be in his army of everlasting damnation. They didn't fight, they only used ... words ...

5. When Tara entered Ammelgamma's shop he was just counting his money behind the cash-desk. Tara laid the parrot gems in the desk and slammed with her fist on the desk, trying to get his attention. Ammelgamma looked up, but then he started to count his money again. 'Sorry, lady,' he spoke indifferently with a sore throat, 'I am busy now, can you return another time ?' But Tara jumped over the desk, took him by his throat and pushed him hard against the wall, while she had raised him in the air : 'Listen you barbarian bastard, I do not travel for days to come here for nothing. We know each other, don't you ? You know where I am coming for.' Tara had the desire to throw him through the window and then to eat his brains, but she could control herself this time. The man nodded and said : 'Yes, Tara, I know where you come from, and where you are coming for, so come with me, and I will show you what I can give you for these parrot-gems.' Then they moved upstairs.

6. She was now probably the richest woman on Mars, although she didn't care about the money, the tanarings she had now. She just needed it for something.

7. In the west, upwards, she needed to do something. As she was moving forwards to an enormous stairway in the middle of the desert. This stairway was a crystal stairway, leading to the high beach behind the desert. No one knew why she came there, no one knew what she would do. They were all staring at her while she moved through the soil. When she was on the beach she could see the bloody sun almost touching the waters. She stood there for hours, for days, as the bloody dark sun was moving slowly towards her. The wind was playing with her hair while the bloody dark sun was roaring and soaring so huge in the distance. 'You have finally come, Soms !' she shouted. 'I have done what you have asked from me.' The huge bloody dark sun was almost devouring the waters.

8. The next morning Tara woke up, still at the beach. She would now go to Iriptus, the killer-prophet. They called him the prophet, but actually he wasn't a prophet. He was an assassin. He would speak to his audience for hours and hours, and then he would slay them all ... not by words, but by his sword. His house was full of skulls and dead bodies. He killed for the money, the tanarings, ... it was that simple. His house was huge. He was one of the wealthiest prophets in Wirdum Desert.

9. After a few hours Tara came out of his house finally. Most of the time these prophets were only weaponsellers or high bosses of arena's further not caring anything about it. She called them the gamewatchers, lazy jerks. She never had much patience with them. She had only sympathy and love for the prophet-king who was an exorcist in the east of Wirdum Desert. He was called the prophet-herd, but actually he wasn't a herd. He had a breeding for prophets, to finally slaughter them all. He was feared by many prophets, although a lot of prophets didn't know anything about him.

10. Tara went to his castles ... They were made of python stone ... Some called it the sandcastles As she was sliding forwards through the soil and the sand of Wirdum Desert she saw him on the huge frontwall practicing with his sword.

She became so paranoid, hungry for a greater love, but all she could do was to hate. She hated love and she loved hate, and she knew the bloody sun of Soms wouldn't show up anymore, as it was written in Martian Laws of the Lawless that the bloody sun of Soms would only show up once in someone's everlasting life, as the first and the last time, the Alpha and the Omega.

11. The revenge of the prophets would drive her to Tartarus now. Here the wolf-skulls were already waiting for her, ready to watch more of her than she ever watched of anyone else, for they once took her own parrot gems away.

The Lawless

1. As I was sliding along the vast jungle of Tirmis Oracle, a ghosttown in the west of Mars, I met a pirate. Me, Tara, I was willing to know the secret of the Tirmis Oracle. Tirmis Oracle were ten demon-machines torturing so many on the surfaces of Mars, to keep them in deep tragedy and slavery. When he had told me the secret, it was the beginning of a strange travel for me. To me everyone was living in his own world, not capable to really destroy someone else by any law or anti-law. In my eyes death was just the road to the well of eternal death, holding the secret of eternal birth. To me death didn't really exist as it was one of the many stories. The pirate told me that the dark of Tirmis Oracle were guarding this well. How could I set free these ten demons captured in Tirmis Oracle for such a long time ?

2. There was no real escape from the demon-machines, as the pirate told me. I had to face the fact that only the well of eternal slavery would bring me to eternal liberation. The paradox was a strange machine, the first of the oracle, planted against the huge rock of the ghosttown. If I wouldn't free the demon locked up in this machine, not many would be even willing to understand the treasures of the paradox. This was the only secret the pirate told me, but he didn't even tell me how I could free the demon. I must admit, in those times I didn't care at all. Someone had to do it. Some things just needed to be done.

3. I came from a free world, although there was a lot of slavery. And it was just like that was all the price of freedom, like these two things belonged to each other, as a heritage of the paradox. Mars had always been a free world, where everything was possible. It was called art, but it also opened the most darkest edges you couldn't find anywhere else. One was always saying that Tirmis Oracle was a heritage from barbarians as well as indians. I was a mix of them, although I belonged to an indian tribe. We were against civilization.

4. The pirates seemed to know much about the Tirmis Oracle, and that was the reason why I approached them very often. They often went to Tirmis Oracle to gamble there. It was a way for them to spend their times, and another pirate told me about the first demon. He was called Traxwodka, the Python Knight. Some said he was the soul of a child once captured by a sorcerer. The captain told me that there had to be a bottle in the first machine where the soul of the Python Knight had been locked up. The captain could open the screen, and gave me the bottle. This was one of the most precious gifts I got in my life. However, the Python Knight always hunted my mind in a sense. It inspired me to do the things I had to do. He has probably gone mad by the dark of Tirmis Oracle. But in later times it started to make a bit more sense to me. I had an encounter with a giant. He was a necromancer and he connected the soul to the realms of the dead. He knew the many rivers of the Martian realms of Death and he took me often with him to go on his ship. It was not a big ship, more a boat, and he often took some other friends with him. I will tell you about the journeys through the Martian realms of Death. As we started on the Martian River of Death, we took a river on it's westside taking us deeper into the jungles. We were the lawless, although we had a higher sense for ethics than usual. We believed that the mind was corrupted, and it should be ignored in all contends. Most of the Martians are familiar with these laws, but the greatest of these laws could be found in the Death-realms of Mars.

5. The mind cannot understand the higher worlds. The passion can. We had to live by that code or we wouldn't survive in the Death-realms of Mars. That was why we had such a strong desire to build a jungle. And that we could find along the rivers in the Death-realms of Mars.

6. Some of the other tribes thought they had to root us out. They thought we could form a threat against them. Maybe that was our fate. But we only did what we have to do to survive, and to follow our instincts. None of us believed in a heaven or hell. We only believed in Tartarus, the realms below the Death-realms of Mars. Tartarus was the the well of everlasting damnation. Some would call it hell, but to us it was the place of creation by the forces of destruction. Tartarus was our world, our eternal fields. We were against civilization and had established the Martian Laws to survive. It was the Law of the Lawless.

7. The giant knew the rivers leading to Tartarus very well. He was actually the one who brought me to Tartarus. I could never realize how deep this world would penetrate my soul. It opened me up to so many things. Here the beasts of our dreams were living. We could enter so many new wells in this area. Here the demons were living. I can recall many of them. Oshar was the demon of money. He captured souls to change them into money. Ritswik was the demon of zombification. He could kill souls to raise them up again in their bodies to enslave them forever. He was a dark sorcerer, a warlock. Dikshild was also a demon. He was small and had long hair, walking around with a bag. He turned bones into money and could get money out of bodies. Jeppersla was also a demon, a python-prince guarding the python stones of Tartarus, the most precious jewels awakening desires and sex. Harmataron was a fat one. As it was the law on Mars and also in Tartarus : slavery was very important to give care to those who didn't have enough money, but it was also important to control the dangerous species. It was the way charity and protection worked on Mars as well in Tartarus.

8. The life on Mars and especially on Tartarus was different like all the other planets. It brought forth the seed of death. The warmest and best place to connect to Tartarus. One of the highest ranks of demons in Tartarus was the rank of the pythons. They controlled Tartarus for a big deal. Wealth was very important to become a ruler of Tartarus. The ones having the most money, tanarings, could have implants. Often they were made of special python stone, the stone of enslavement and of protection against enslavement, any form. Most of the times the rulers had a lot of implants, which was a big deal of money. Some of the implants weren't cheaper as two-thousand tanarings. In Martian money if you had a possession of a hundred tanarings you were rich. The business of implants was one of the greatest businesses in Tartarus. One of the leading men in this trade was Harold von Drinbard. He was a dark sorcerer and a doctor. All he was ever interested in was money. He believed in the eternal money, a law as brought by the many demons of money in the spheres of Tartarus. However Harold von Drinbard was a foreigner. He came from another planet to Mars. His friends always called him Drinbard, and he was a skilled necromancer and zombificator.

9. No one knew where Drinbard originally came from, as that was which he always kept secret. Several rich ones worshipped Drinbard. Especially if he would lower the prices of the implants. Some said Drinbard was the inventor of the python stone. It would be made of the trodden and squeezed souls of the damned.

10. Although one could reduce poverty by the great deal of slave-markets, there were also parts of Tartarus with a great deal of poverty. However, there was a well of eternal poverty leading to the eternal money. Drinbard seemed to know everything about it.

11. Drinbard had his throne in Tartarus, the Underworld of Mars. He was a drinker, a gambler, but most of all he was a plastic surgeon and a talented businessman. Drinbard had a business in death as he was a dark sorcerer and a liar. Yes, this soul-swindler was a feared warlock in the eyes of many. To the rich he was a friend, someone who helped them to gain more power and control in the dark spheres of Mars. The conspiracies of Drinbard were the greatest of conspiracies in the past of Mars, for without it Mars would be a totally different place now. Drinbard succeeded to lock the soul of the boy up in a bottle. Still there is lots of talk about the boy in the bottle which they always called : The Soul of Drinbard.

12. Not many know where this soul is located. But I know, since I freed it. Let me tell you this story. Me, Tara from Rhodes, heard about the conspiracy of Drinbard as one of the first. Drinbard called for a circle of the darkest black magicians, necromancers, witches and soul-hunters to make their plans to capture the soul of the boy. Since they had succeeded in imprisoning the boy's soul I visited these dark sorcerers one by one to slay them. Finally I found the bottle and freed the soul of the boy, but then I discovered another terrible secret. Since I freed his soul, he became the tormented object of so many soul-hunters. He lost all the rest he had, since he had become a wanderer, always on the run, as there was a big price on his head. It became such a terrible hunt that I wished I would never had freed his soul out of Drinbard's bottle. He had become so haunted. I would never forget his terrorized, paranoid and haunted face.

13. I was wearing an amulet with a stone called 'the eye of the cat'. It was a stone which could communicate with cats. Of course these were all sorts of cats, also the wild ones, and those coming forth from the cats. It was a cryptic form of communication, as cats are very cryptic beings. It was the heritage we got from our ancestors, it was a cat-knife able to break the time. Most of the slavemasters had a cat-eye mouth. These were mouths in stones by which they could cause death and by which they could even let souls descend into horrible places.

The Knife of Black Time ; The Eye of the Cat

1. Tara was bathing in the Mistrus River in the South of Rhodes, the catplanet. Actually Rhodes was a solarsystem full of planets. All the planets were called Rhodes, while Tara was on Rhodes IV. Tara was making fun with a friend, and later they climbed on the sandy side of the lake. After awhile a spotted lion, very tall with thin, sly features. The spotted lion started to drink from the lake. Tara wanted to test the lion. She wanted to know if she was stronger than the lion, so she attacked him. Tara got bitten horribly, and she thought they could be friends.

2. Tara thought she could use this lion in her fights. She didn't see the lion here before, and she was very impressed by its spots. But the lion attacked her again, and Tara grasped him by the neck and threw him away. But now the lion really got angry and jumped on her ... but suddenly he licked her ... It seemed the lion started to like her.

3. The lion licked her wound. Although the bite was the cruellest bite she ever felt, she now felt a care she never felt before. Together they were walking into the jungle. Tara knew the spotted lion would protect her with his life.

4. On her forehead Tara was wearing an amulet with a stone called 'the eye of the cat'. She once got it from a sorcerer who called her the queen of the cats. It was a stone by which she could better communicate with the cats. Of course these were all sorts of cats, also the wild ones, and those coming forth from the cats.

5. It was a cryptic form of communication, as cats are very cryptic beings. There was a scar growing from the wound. The spotted lion would now forever recognize Tara as his friend. The lion led Tara to his cave, a very huge cave, where a lot of his friends were walking, sitting, sleeping or working, having the same scar. Now Tara was one of them.

6. Suddenly the spotted lion started to speak :

'This is a great day, since Tara from Rhodes has joined our group. She is a warrior and of great use in our search for the knife of black time.'

7. 'What is that ?' Tara asked.

8. The lion looked deep into her eyes, like he pierced his way through her mind. and said : 'It was the heritage we got from our ancestors, it was a cat-knife able to break the time, to bring us back to Rhodes III our motherplanet.'

9. Far away from the spotted lion's cave a mass of slaves was wandering through the desert of fire. Suddenly they had to stop before a fire-lake where they had to drink from the firewaters. Now they had received strength again to work in the desert. They had coloured necklaces like thin small snakes, carrying the energy of black time, a sinister energy keeping them bound to the realms of the dead. If they would only have the knife of black time, they could escape.

They had a slavemaster called Sambara, who was the keeper of this magical knife. He was a sorcerer, a dark one, and he ruled them all by the knife.

10. Most of the slavemasters on Rhodes IV had a cat-eye mouth. These were mouths in stones by which they could cause death and by which they could even let souls descend into horrible places like the Gorgoon. No one could get such a mouth very easy, for first they had to go to a sorcerer and then they had to swallow such a cat-eye. By that they would first descend in the Gorgoon themselves, and some had to sit there for a hundred years or even more. But if they got too long in the Gorgoon it would spit them out. This would be what some might call the experience of death, and then if it would please the sorcerer he would call the soul back from the realms of the death. But sometimes the sorcerer chose to bring the soul back to the Gorgoon.

11. The ones with cat-eye gloves, which had many of stings and pins most of the time, often worked in arena's as death-gladiators. These were the ones who had to show up only when a certain gladiator got too much power. The death-gladiators were to bring balance. On Rhodes IV those with cat-eye gloves were often most feared, because they often could bring quick deaths. Most of the time these gloves were red.

12. One of these death-gladiators was Abarsa. He was still a young man, and before he became a death-gladiator he was someone others used to pick on. He was a very funny boy, but he was unhandy, and couldn't make it on school. All he wanted was to become a gladiator. Abarsa was always a very good and tender boy, but he acted a bit strange, almost like cryptic, and often no-one understood him. And still he had those strange smiles, and he could turn your world upside down by looking at you. Abarsa was always very selective in his work. If a gladiator pleased him, he would offer live to him. But when he saw gladiators who used to pick on others he would raise his fist suddenly because of his old anger rising up, his old pain. Sometimes Abarsa could control this action, but other times not.

Abarsa was feared because of his work, and when there were fights on marketsquares Abarsa sometimes had to go there. When Abarsa showed up they always knew it was already too late, for now there would flow some real blood, and these weren't jokes. Most of the times Abarsa would cause death. Abarsa didn't show up for nothing. This was the reason why Abarsa didn't go to marketsquares just to buy something, for that would be a too big shock. But when he hadn't been to the marketsquares for years he could show up, because a lot of them wouldn't even know who he was.

The Wrath of Sambara

13. Rhodes III was actually a dogplanet, the motherplanet. The spotted dogs were the rulers here. There were all sorts of dogs, also wolves. The main capital was Sparta, the city of wolves. The spotted wolves lived in a huge skeleton building surrounded by sand. It was a small desert in the midst of the city. However there were some hills which looked like dunes.

14. The biggest spotted wolf stood up from his throne. He had a black cape, and looked like a man. 'It is now time we will open the portal between Rhodes III and Rhodes IV. It has been written in our prophesies.' The wolf stared into a chrystal ball, and saw Tara fighting against Sambara, the keeper of the knife. With her there was a spotted lion, and Abarsa, the gladiator of death. The spotted lion had brought them together. Then the spotted wolf sent some of his big birds to help Tara and her friends against Sambara the evil sorcerer. The spotted lion jumped on Sambara and then he fell, while Tara grasped the knife. 'Hold it in the air,' Abarsa said.

15. In the chrystal ball the wolf could see how his birds started to eat Sambara. He saw how Tara raised the knife of black time, and suddenly there was lightening all over the ball. 'It's done,' he spoke. The portal of time between Rhodes III and Rhodes IV was opening. It happened in the pit and tunnel called the Gorgoon. In it's depth the portal was opening.

16. The children of hell had been set free now, and in big groups with torches they went through the portal to the other side of the Gorgoon. It would lead them to Rhodes III, the motherplanet. The big birds brought the skull of Sambara to the portal to hang it above it. But through the mouth of the skull a red fluid started to stream, and soon there was a flood in the Gorgoon rising higher.

17. 'We have to close the portal again,' the spotted wolf said. Tara watched the knife she held in her hand, and it became weak and soft. It was melting in her hands. 'What is going on ?' she asked.

18. 'We have not much time,' the spotted lion said. 'We have to go through the Gorgoon, where the portal to Rhodes III has been opened.'

19. In short time the spotted lion swam with Tara and Abarsa through the red fluid, searching for the portal. They saw dead bodies everywhere. Deeper the red fluid was thinner, like air, and they could almost walk through it. 'Hold me tight,' the spotted lion said to Tara and Abarsa, which they did. In speed he moved towards the portal which was already closing it's jaws. Just in time they got through it. Later on they stepped out of the red fluid, and they were in Rhodes III, the dogplanet. 'We have made it, Tara,' the spotted lion said. The big birds picked them up and brought them to Sparta, to the halls of the spotted wolf.

20. 'We have called for the wrath of Sambara,' the spotted wolf spoke. 'Rhodes III will die. There is only one way to survive : the road to Orion.'

21. 'Where is that road ?' Tara asked.

22. 'Come,' the wolf said. He pushed a button and his throne moved away while an enormous hole in the floor appeared. 'Jump,' he said. Tara slid into the hole, together with Abarsa and the spotted lion. It would be a long trip through tunnels and pits, finally leading to Orion. The spotted wolf was on their side.

23. When they came in Orion it was burning. 'It is Sambara's wrath,' the spotted wolf said. 'But here there must be the gate to Mars somewhere.' The wolf hit the ground a few times by a rod, and an enormous hole appeared. 'Here it is,' he said. And again they slid in, and this time they went to Mars in great speed.

24. On Mars they saw all sorts of black guards walking. 'Those are the guards of Sambara,' the wolf spoke. 'We can beat those.' Abarsa jumped forward and slew a few of them, and Tara did the same. In short time there weren't any guards left. They had a great survey from here. They stood on a hill, looking into a new world.

25. 'Can we be free from Sambara here ?' Tara asked.

26. 'Yes,' the wolf said. 'The rest of the universe is under his growing wrath.'

27. 'For how long will we be safe against him ?' Tara asked.

28. 'If we will build our place here, for eternity,' the wolf spoke. 'We need to be on the Martian River of Death, which is the most fruitfull area.'

29. At the Westside of the Martian River of Death there was a city called Bear City. Here the soul-swindlers came, people like Sambara. Here the meanest soul-trappers and other sorts of death-dealers came, and many had their homes here. Here the cannibals of the highest grade lived, necromancers, those who played the games of death. They had their boats along the Martian River of Death. 'Our prophesies say here we must be,' the wolf said. In the city there were many casino's, and there were also circuses where the dead had to work. There were also a lot of comicshops here.

30. The wolf had a tattoo on his body which was a map of Bear City. A red line led them through the city to another hole. This hole led them to Tartarus. 'There were days when parts of Mars were one with parts of Orion, which was the planet Wickfin,' the wolf said. 'In the depths of Tartarus, there is a desert, and behind that there is a sea holding the last piece of this planet like an island. There was a huge explosion in history. By my tattoo we get access to that place.'

31. Then the wolf showed another tattoo of him, which was a scar. The wolf showed his tattoo-scar in the air, while big birds came to pick them up, to bring them to the island of Wickfin. There were only skeletons here.

32. 'We are here for the wrath of Sambara is after us,' the wolf spoke to the skeletons.

33. 'We do not need you here,' the skeletons said. 'You carry the curse of Sambara with you, and you will be a threat against us too. Die in the sea with your Sambara.'

34. 'We ask you for your help,' the wolf spoke.

35. One of the skeletons came forward and gave a pale green stone to the wolf. 'This is the last stone of Wickfin,' the skeleton said. 'Wickfin is melting. We do not know what is happening. Even our bones are becoming softer and softer. This stone is the only gift we can give you. Please, remember us, and remember Wickfin. The island is getting smaller and smaller. We have nowhere to go, for outside Wickfin we will die. Make yourself safe.'

36. 'Where can we go?' the wolf asked. But the stone was melting, and the skeletons started to laugh. 'We will all be gone, as there is no medicine against the Wrath of Sambara.'

37. Tara drank from the water of the sea but it was salty. 'There must be a way out,' she said. But the skeletons were melting before their eyes, and also the island was getting smaller and smaller, while the birds were gone. Suddenly a huge wave grasped them. There were explosions everywhere. The sky was dark and bloody. Finally a huge pirate ship picked them up.

38. The captain was a cruel man. Some pirates chained them at the wall inside of the ship. 'Who are you?' Tara asked.

39. 'We are the pirates of Wickfin,' they said. 'Those skeletons.' And then they laughed. They were the sorcerors of death. They brought Tara and her friends to the first island, where they sold them as slaves. Soon they ended up in the arena as gladiators. Abarsa smiled. He had hoped for this.

40. All went so fast. Abarsa and Tara were unconquerable, and soon they made Abarsa king of the island, for they all feared him. Abarsa gave freedom to Tara, and she chose to live in the jungle. She started to live close to a volcano always bringing forth blood. These were strange eruptions. Strange white skeletons seemed to live in the volcano.

41. 'We are the pirates of Wickfin,' she heard every night.

42. Finally she could have some conversations with them, and they wanted to make a pirate of Wickfin of her as well, for that would be the only way to get rid of Sambara's curse. They wanted to show her their captain, and Tara was in a shock when she found out it was Sambara himself. 'Life goes on after death,' he said. 'Actually we never die.'

43. 'Why grasping at things, while you know they will melt in your hands?' Sambara asked.

44. 'In my hands everything is stone,' he said, 'but in yours it melts away. Poor you. The knife of black time cannot be grasped. It can only be earned. See all those stupid souls, these pirates of Wickfin. They still think they can gain something by robbing and stealing Fools They always melt away And everything they take melts away Poor souls They all hope for my almighty touch to grant them the knife of black time by which they can live forever, and hold something forever Would you want that ? There is only one price if you would finally earn and deserve the knife of black time. You will be stone forever, just like the things you hold, and you can never get rid of it anymore. It will haunt you forever. Is that what you wish ?

45. 'Then why do you want it ?' Tara asked.

46. 'I have it, and I am the only one who can handle it,' Sambara said. 'You see, I use the necklaces by which the energy of black time conducts itself.'

47. 'I have worked hard for these necklaces,' Sambara said. 'I am an honourable master.'

48. 'I want to be free, free from all this,' Tara said. 'You have built these worlds, and you keep us all in the grip. That's why I returned to Rhodes, and that's probably why I am here.'

49. 'Well, join the army,' Sambara said. 'Be one of my pirates, and when it's your birthday I will wake you up.'

50. 'You are a sorcerer, Sambara,' Tara said, 'and I cannot do anything about that. But I won't be your beggar. I will find my way.'

51. 'How, Tara ?' Sambara asked. 'As you know I hold all the worlds in my hand. All ways are mine.'

52. Tara took the amulet from her forehead, raised it against the sorcerer and spoke : 'In the Name of the Cat, let me and my people go.' Green radiation came out of the amulet, striking the sorcerer. But this time the sorcerer stood up and walked towards Tara to put a snake-necklace around her neck. It was like Tara was losing her mind. He pushed her into a hole like a pit, and after a deep fall she fell into a desert. The sun was burning in her neck. Strange guards came towards her, attaching a chain to her necklace to connect her to the other slaves. There were lakes of fire everywhere. Here they could drink to receive painful strength. Months of heavy labour in the desert followed. Tara lost all her dignity. She became a savage more than ever. The sun was burning her skin every day, even in the nights.

53. They led her to a city in the depths of the desert. It was a gladiator city where she had to fight for her life, but she conquered, and everyone feared her. Fight after fight she won, and soon she became the queen of the city. But she had still her necklace. It brought her much pain always.

54. The more she tried to get the necklace of Sambara off, the tighter it became. It was almost strangling her. 'Be glad, Tara,' the necklace suddenly spoke. It was like a snake. 'Why would you break the curse of black time. You have seen where it can lead you. It lets everything melt.'

55. 'Yes, when I take the knife of black time without breaking the necklaces, then everything melts,' Tara said. 'The power of Sambara is in the necklaces. They are conductors, but when they are broken, then Sambara will turn into stone.'

56. 'It will be a disaster,' the necklace spoke. 'For then everything will turn into stone.'

57. 'Who are you ?' Tara asked.

58. 'I am also a slave of Sambara,' the necklace spoke.

59. 'How can I free you ?' Tara asked.

60. 'As I said, everything would turn into stone when you would free us,' the necklace said. 'There is only one way : red time.'
61. 'What is that ?' Tara asked.
62. 'It is the only thing making us safe against the melting and the turning into stone,' the necklace said.
63. 'Where can we find it ?' Tara asked.
64. 'In the depths of the desert,' the necklace said, 'it is like clay.'
65. The necklace knew a way to get underground, and showed Tara the place where the red clay was. She had to cover her body with it. She also had to smear it on the necklace, and it started to move again, becoming flexible like a snake. 'Don't return, Tara,' it said. 'The others need to find out for themselves. Just go deeper through these tunnels, and search for the core of it. Here you will get totally free from the curse of Sambara.' Suddenly it was gone. Tara moved further into the depths. There was red clay everywhere. She could breath again.
66. She was in the land of the red clay now, and she would never return. She got finally free from Sambara's influence. She sank away in the red clay, again and again, but by holding on to some branches she could move forward. The air was thick here. She was in the underground like never before. She was free from slavery.

The Beasts of Elysias

1. She was a warrior on a ship, with high sails, all in white, all like torn, but still in pride, like feathers was this ship. She stood tall, like she had drunk too much, drunk of the blood of her fallen enemies, the beasts of Mars. 2. She had a smile, undescrivable, like she had survived death and torment, and now she was here. She stood there in victory, this woman. The picture was of fire, of winds. Would we see the beasts of Elysias start to fall. 3. Tara from Rhodes, the light of lighters, You daughter of the rain and light, driven by the fight that will unite us tonight, You daughter of the seven lights, Leading us to Jungle City so deep in the night, You have Chosen us out of the Nowhere, You have devoted us, you have seen our light, Cleansing us by an Eternal Fight. 4. By eternal lights falling down, to wash so many of our dreams. Like the Fire of Mars she's standing in the tall Python Gates. 5. Through the sound of silence, and the colour of darkness, I always hear your voice, through the wet velvet curtains and fleeces I always feel your emptiness descending into me. Like the emptiness you flow, while you descend along the multiple stages of the world of tomorrow, where no one reigns or rules, only some fools are searching through the ages, all what they have left behind, some stones and some strange rods, awakening their own prides. 6. Like a madman gliding from the mountains and the borderlines of view, into the forests there in the midst, where all his dreams come true, I can only say my heart belongs to him. While he's descending along all these layers, he pierces himself in my shadow, where the lakes begin to enter in.
7. Come my confused child, let us forget about the morning, it's now evening, the night is falling, overflowing the afternoon. With a soft embrace you will reach the morningskies, where you can forget about all these yesterday's delights. Grasp the new day, ask for some access. Only a small gate will do, we will slide and our shadows will rest. Ask a little bit access, we don't need much, only a drip of consciousness big enough to keep the flame of love burning in our heart. A little bit of love is all we need to hold these tears in our arms, to soothe these babies of golden years, letting no one tearing them apart.

The Dog-skeletons of Lokdok – The Invitation

1. Lirlit of Kaapsia was walking on a market on Lokdok. Here she would buy some new things for her house. Most of the time she bought weapons and skeletons. Lirlit of Kaapsia believed that by the dead she would have magical powers. When she got home she found a letter on her bed. It was an invitation. She didn't know from who it was, but she knew the place. She didn't trust the letter at all, but she was very curious, so she went there, with her spear. Soon a wolf came out of the bushes and attacked her. It became a long, long fight, but finally she conquered the wolf and took his skeleton. But she didn't know that it's skeleton was still alive, and it began to speak to her : 'Don't you know, far away on the hills, the dog-skeletons live, and when they hear about what you did to me, they will come to get you.' Lirlit said she didn't care, as she was adventurous. 'But first you have to deal with me,' the wolf-skeleton said. And then he rose up to strike her. He had hit her in the cheek, while blood was flowing forth from it. But finally Lirlit smashed the wolf-skeleton against a rock. She decided to take the skull with her, while the rest of the body she left.

2. When she got home she smashed the wolf-skull on her bed. She was a bit angry. It was like she had hit an alarm-button, and now she had to pay for that. The skull couldn't do anything, but it told her that the dog-skeletons would smell the death of their friend, and they would look for her for sure. Lirlit got so angry, and shouted that she would go to the hills by herself to look for them. She wanted to find out about the invitation. The wolf spoke about the dog-skeletons like they were his big brothers, like they were higher than him, like they were his bosses. She had to find out, instead of waiting for them to come while she would be asleep or something. She left the village, and found her way to the hills. The dog-skeletons were sitting on a rock. Lirlit started to shout at them : 'Hey, who of you fools have sent me an invitation ?' But the dog-skeletons acted like they didn't know anything of it. Lirlit came closer, aiming her spear at them. 'Oh, ohoh,' one of the dog-skeletons said. 'I see it is serious to you, but not to us. We do not know what you are talking about.' When Lirlit told about the wolf and it's skeleton, they said they didn't know him. Lirlit didn't know what was going on. Why did she feel so much anger towards them, and why did she feel they were lying to her ? Or did the wolf lie to her ?

3. 'Relax, lady,' another dog-skeleton said, 'you believe in fairytales and fables, and I can see you are superstitious. Why don't you come with us into the rock ? There's a huge area there.' Lirlit was still on her guard, but she wanted to find out. Carefully she walked with them into the rock. Inside there was a large room. There were kettles with blood and on the wall there were many bones, while in front of the walls there were shrines made of bones, with ornaments and jewels decorated by organic things. There was a strange smell here, and in a sense Lirlit didn't trust them at all. 'How can I trust you ?' she asked. But the dog-skeletons didn't answer. A door behind them got closed. And one of the dog-skeletons came closer to her. 'How do you like it here ? This is a better invitation than the invitation you talked about.'

4. 'How do you know it's better ?' Lirlit asked distrustful. The dog-skeleton bent a bit towards her, and smiled, saying : 'Because we do not attack you, we believe in peace.' Lirlit sat down and looked around her. 'I must say it is beautiful,' she said.
5. 'Oh yes,' another dog-skeleton said, 'very beautiful.' Then another door opened and some more dog-skeletons entered. Lirlit shivered a bit inside, but then she took a straight attitude.
6. 'Well, you have company here ?' one of the incoming dog-skeletons asked. Some others nodded.
7. After a drink Lirlit fell asleep. She was very tired. The dog-skeletons took her to a room deeper in the rock. Here she could sleep. It was like their baby was home now. They had searched for her such a long time, and now they had found her.
8. Days went on, and Lirlit got a good friendship with them, but they never told her about who she was in their eyes. They asked Lirlit to stay with them, but after awhile Lirlit wanted to go home again. She thanked the dog-skeletons for their friendship, but she really had to go now, and told them goodbye.
9. So they let her go, with pain in their hearts, but now they knew where she lived.
10. On her way home she got struck by another wolf-skeleton, and this time it was a bigger one. She was about to lose the battle but suddenly a dog-skeleton showed up. He had followed her, to keep a certain eye on her. In a minute he conquered the wolf-skeleton, and broke the bones from each other. Lirlit was very grateful. When she got home she thought about the dog-skeletons a lot. Maybe they were her protectors. She also knew that the wolf-skeletons didn't have friendship with the dog-skeletons. They didn't speak about it, but what had happened spoke for itself. Maybe there were things going on the dog-skeletons didn't want to talk about.
11. One day an older dog-skeleton came to Lirlit's house. When he went in he told a story to Lirlit. He told her that she was a princess in her younger days, and that they cared for her the first few years of her life, until two wolf-skeletons kidnapped her. They brought her here, where the village took care of her. The older dog-skeleton also said that they didn't know that until she had beaten the first wolf-skeleton. Then they got visions that she would return to them very soon.
12. Lirlit was confused and asked the dog-skeleton how she could be a princess then. Then the dog-skeleton answered : There is a palace in the North behind the hills where you got born. But there was war in the kingdom, so we went there to save you. We offered you a good home, but the rest of your family died in the war. If we wouldn't take you away from the palace, you would have died also.
13. Lirlit asked if she could go to that palace again. The dog-skeleton nodded, but it would be full of wolf-skeletons. The kingdom of the North was the kingdom of Kaapsia. It was in the hands of Lirlit's bloodline, but since a foreign king took control, everything was different, and soon he introduced the wolf-skeletons. The members of the palace died all, except Lirlit. The rest of the land had to live in captivity. Lirlit became very sad, but she wanted to know everything about it.
14. The old dog-skeleton said they had visions about her gathering an army to invade the palace again. Lirlit felt a bit excitement when she heard that. The old dog-skeleton was satisfied that Lirlit was enthusiastic about their visions, and she accepted the role in it. For years the old dog-skeleton had trained an army for the big day, the day that Lirlit, who they still called 'their princess' would invade the palace of Kaapsia again.

15. Lirlit went back to the place of the dog-skeletons again, with the old dog-skeleton, who showed her the room where the soldiers were. They had all sorts of sharp knives and spears, in all sorts of shapes. They had strange jewels in their skeletons, spreading a magical light over their bodies. Lirlit asked how many wolf-skeletons there would be in the palace. But no one seemed to know. It was something they needed to find out. Lirlit said she didn't feel anything for being a princess again, but she wanted to invade the palace to free the land. Maybe the dog-skeletons could rule it then. Some of the soldiers nodded. One of them told about the old king. He was a mean traitor, but no one could exactly tell how he came into war against Kaapsia, and why. In a sense Lirlit wanted to know, but first they needed to take the palace back again.

16. On their way to the North an old man appeared to them. It was like he came out of the nothing. One of the dog-skeletons said it was a witch-doctor. 'What is your purpose to come here ?' the man asked. 'All what you do here will fail.' And then he was gone.

17. But Lirlit didn't let herself become discouraged. Finally they came to the palace, but it was empty. There was no one there. Inside there were a lot of dead skeletons, bones, skulls and other organic stuff, often in the form of ornaments, or as decoration for jewels. There was a strange smell here. 'Go away !' someone whispered loud. None of the dog-skeletons was speaking. Maybe it was a ghost. There were a lot of rooms in the palace, and the dog-skeletons desired to live in this place. Also in the other parts of the land there was no living being. It seemed like death had already struck this place. They found a lot of magical objects and strange advanced weaponry in the land. It seemed like those who dwelled here were very superstitious, because they also found a lot of shrines. Lirlit knew it was very easy for them to take over the land, but one of the dog-skeletons didn't have a good feeling about it. He thought the land had become bewitched, and they had to take what they needed, and then leave as soon as possible. Lirlit thought it was a good idea.

18. Full of stuff the dog-skeletons returned home, and also Lirlit returned to her village. The palace and its land only had to be a memory, nothing more, nothing less. The dog-skeletons stayed in their part, and Lirlit stayed in her village.

The Witch-Doctor

19. Lirlit thought a lot about the witch-doctor they met on their way to Kaapsia. She didn't think he was an evil man, but she had troubles in her head since he spoke out that everything she would do there would fail. Was it a curse ? The dog-skeletons had taught her that she shouldn't be superstitious. They had their own shrines, but they said these were heritages. They didn't believe in magic, although they had visions. It was like they were very paradoxal in a sense, or didn't she just understand them. Could she trust them ? She couldn't get the words of the witch-doctor out of her head. At a certain moment she started to scream. Suddenly the witch-doctor showed up in her room, as coming out of the nothing. 'You woman,' he said, 'why have you taken away so many things from our land and palace. Now you have to pay for it deep in yourself, seeing your twisted self, yes, inner battles are in you now, and there is no medicine to stop it.' Lirlit bowed down before the witch-doctor. 'What can I do ? Can you please stop the pain I have ?'

20. 'You must bring all that you have taken away from Kaapsia back to it, so that the pain will also flee from you,' the witch-doctor said. So that was what she decided to do. It was for her relief, and then she asked the witch-doctor, who was still with her : 'Isn't that which is from Kaapsia not from me, as I am coming forth from Kaapsia as the last survivor it seems.'

21. But then the witch-doctor started to laugh. 'We have lived there for thousand and thousands of years as ghosts, so it is our right to have it, above all flesh and blood.'

22. 'The ghosts rule,' he shouted. Lirlit didn't feel well, and asked him what she would have to do further to find peace. 'There is something I need to tell you,' the witch-doctor spoke. 'Your father has captured us for a long time. By the hand of Lokdok's king we could be set free. But now we seek for revenge, for you are indeed the last survivor. You are the last block in our attempt to reach freedom.' Lirlit started to scream, as she felt like she was burning inside. She ran outside, but the ghost jumped on her. There was no one around, but soon a few dog-skeletons came. They jumped towards the ghost and started to cut it's appearance by a strange edged and shaped knife. The ghost started to scream. 'Well, you want to bring her back to superstition ?' one of the dog-skeletons asked. And then he spoke to Lirlit : 'Don't believe in those fables of magic.'

23. 'I try not to do,' Lirlit said, 'but it has me in the grip.'

24. 'You need help,' the other dog-skeleton said. They brought her again to the hills, where they had their place. The ghost had been gone now, but Lirlit still had problems. 'Here, drink this,' one of the dog-skeletons said, and gave her some strange juice. Immediately Lirlit fell asleep. When she woke up she was in another room. An old dog-skeleton stood before her. She didn't meet him before yet. He said : 'Don't be superstitious, but believe in your only fantasy. You don't need them, those witch-doctors. They shouldn't control your life. They actually did that since your birth, but now it is your time to come free.'

25. 'But I can't !' Lirlit shouted. 'It's in my feelings.' Suddenly there was all knocking on the door, and soon a lot of wolf-skeletons came in. They killed the old dog-skeleton and kidnapped Lirlit. They brought her back to the palace, and put her on a throne of bones and skulls, decorated by other organic stuff. Lirlit didn't know what was going on, but it seemed they wanted her to be a princess. 'I do not want to be here !' Lirlit shouted.

26. 'Why not ?' one of the wolf-skeletons asked.

27. 'For you have killed my land,' Lirlit said, 'and now you killed one of my friends.'

28. 'Oh, and what do you know about it,' another wolf-skeleton said, 'You do not know what you're talking about.'

29. Lirlit jumped away from the throne and tried to escape, but finally they bound her to the throne. 'Now you will listen to us for awhile,' an older wolf-skeleton roared. He seemed to be a leader of the group. 'They have lied to you,' he spoke. 'We have sent you an invitation, but you never came ... Instead of that you went to the deceiving dog-skeletons.'

30. 'Oh, that's not true,' Lirlit said, 'I came to that place, but a wolf was attacking me. I had to kill it. I thought it was a trap.'

31. 'No, you never came,' the wolf-skeleton roared again, 'we have sent you an invitation, because we wanted to tell you about who you are and what happened.'

32. But then an army of dog-skeletons arrived in front of the palace. The wolf-skeletons all ran outside, but a few stayed to guard Lirlit. 'If I am so important to you, why do you do all these things to me ?' Lirlit asked. But none of the wolf-skeletons answered that question.

33. Soon also the other wolf-skeletons went outside, until Lirlit was alone. After an hour or so two dog-skeletons came to her. They delivered her. The rest of the dog-skeletons and all of the wolf-skeletons had died in the fight. Lirlit was confused about what happened. 'They tried to confuse me, these wolf-skeletons,' she said.

34. 'Well, they are confusers,' one of the dog-skeletons said. 'The witchdoctors use them to keep their victims in superstition. By the superstition they control their victims also.'

35. Lirlit nodded. She remembered the words of the old dog-skeleton who had been killed by the wolf-skeletons who kidnapped her. He said : 'Believe in your own fantasy.' How could she do that if she would be a princess, or a believer in some sort of spiritual government. It would control her life.

Hard against Hard

36. Lirlit was confused. What was her role in Kaapsia now ? She knew that the more wolf-skeletons had been destroyed, the more power the witch-doctors would lose. For her it would mean : she need to lose all her faith in them to replace it by her own fantasy. The dog-skeletons would help her in that.

37. She chose to return to her village again. She always felt best in her own home. She was adventurous, but it would always lead her home. To her it was : home, sweet home. There was no way for her to forget about home. It was like everything started from here, and everything always ended here. There were always some dog-skeletons around to keep a certain eye on her, and she felt safe with that. She needed some guards. Espacially when she was sleeping, it was an amazing feeling. It made her warm and soft inside. She would also protect them with her life, as she saw them as true friends.

38. There was nothing making her more happy than the feeling that she had friends. And these friends were her friends since her birth. She was so glad that she found them back. Friends are always life-savers, letting you feel good when they are around loved cared for protected Even when it is hard against hard

The Wolf-Crown

1. Lirlit of Kaapsia was on her way home. She had made a long journey, and now she came back to her village. When she came home there was a man sitting on her bed. It was a sort of sorceror dressed by all sorts of small skeleton-skulls. He was like a necromancer or something. Lirlit smiled. It was a surprise. It was her uncle.

2. 'Lirlit,' the man said, 'I want you to come with me, I need to show you something.' They had to go to a tall hill where the man lived in a sort of old tower. It looked like a castle in a sense, but it was like a den of a wild animal. When they were in the top of the tower they had a good survey there. Lirlit could see her village in the distance. It was so small from here. Then the man shrieked, while a bat showed up. It was a huge bat and it floated down on his stretched hand. Then it crept to his shoulder.

3. 'I want you to have it, Lirlit,' the man spoke.

4. 'But why, uncle ?' Lirlit asked.

5. 'It needs to help you, as there are a lot of dangers in life.' the man said. Lirlit knew that it was just a gift from his warm heart. He cared for her a lot and didn't want anything bad to happen in her life.

6. At the same time her uncle asked her to stay for awhile. He missed her, as she was the last survival of the family. Lirlit got a room somewhere high in the tower. It was very dark here, and skulls were all around. But Lirlit never had problems with that, as she believed that the dead watched over her.

7. In the middle of the night her uncle entered in her room. He was looking for something. Lirlit asked him what was going on. She had heard sounds around the tower. 'I think war is already beginning,' her uncle said. He was looking for certain weapons. Suddenly they heard wolves coming in the tower. The uncle murmured something about a wolf-war. Lirlit stood up, and took her own spear. When she went out of her room there were three wolves jumping on her. Why would wolves wage war against them ? Lirlit shrieked, and all of a sudden the huge bat entered, while he struck the wolves immediately. Blood was spouting like fountains. The bat had hit them hard, fast and deep.

8. Other wolves entered in, while they were calling : 'We are looking for Lirlit of Kaapsia, sorceror. Hand her over to us.' But Lirlit's uncle who had finally found his weapon stood already behind Lirlit. He had a sort of whip with a sharp knife at it's end, and in a few seconds he had hit the other wolves to the ground. But then hundreds of wolves entered the tower in roaring. 'What do they want from me ?' Lirlit asked.

9. 'You are the last survivor of the Kaapsia-bloodline,' her uncle said. The bat was shrieking, while some of the wolves fell down. They could kill some of the wolves, but they were with too many. They ran to Lirlit's room again, and had to jump out of the window. Fortunately they fell into a river. Lirlit's uncle was the husband of the sister of Lirlit's mother. He was from the Lokdok-bloodline.

10. In the forest they found a sort of palace, full of bones, skulls, skeletons and organic decorations, shrines, weapons and magical objects. They decided to stay here for awhile in the hope that the wolves wouldn't find them. The wolves believed that when they would kill the last survivor of the Kaapsia-bloodline they would dominate so much more. Then they would have power over Lokdok, Lirlit's village, and further the whole realm of Kaapsmerh. They wanted to have the throne and the crown.

11. Later Lirlit found out that it had to do with the fact that she was a princess of origin. If they would have her blood they would rule. In the palace they decided to stay they found an old skeleton-crown. Lirlit didn't want to have anything to do with governmental positions. She wanted to be free. She thought that monarchical positions would bind someone to superstition to block their own fantasy. She brought the skeleton-crown to a shrine. It was a beautiful crown, and they would honour it as a sovenir, as a heritage and as a memory. Her uncle had already found out how powerful the objects in this palace of the wilderness was. It seemed like no one had been dwelling here for a long time. There was dust everywhere, and it was a mess. Maybe there was a war here, and the owners had left the palace because of that. Lirlit was afraid of the magical beliefs of her uncle. She thought it could harm him. She was of the opinion that superstition was a way of evil spirits to take control in someone's brain. It was a prison, and they had to leave it. A crown was in her eyes nothing more than a subtle chain of a prisoner, something which controlled their minds, and by which evil spirits could work and rule.

12. One day her uncle went for a walk, and he pierced deeper into the wilderness. Suddenly she heard a shriek. Maybe her uncle was calling for his bat, but Lirlit didn't trust it. She ran towards the sound, and after a long run she saw smoke coming behind an open field. When she came into the next area of the forest she saw her uncle standing there between wild men having bones pierced through their noses. They had killed the bat, and they held a knife against the throat of Lirlit's uncle. Lirlit didn't hesitate for one moment and threw her spear through the head of the one with the knife. Her uncle jumped away, while Lirlit took her leg-knives to throw it into the hearts of two other wild ones. The rest of the wild men were in a shock and ran away. 'Don't let them escape,' Lirlit shouted. 'I know them, they are the ones spreading so much superstition. They have objects by which they rule the minds of so many in this area. They have even tried to zombificate our village.' But then her uncle fell down. What had happened. There was a strange sting in his back, and it was moving. It was like a small red iron feather. Lirlit took it out, while her uncle started to talk in a strange language. 'Oah, you're into delirium,' Lirlit said. That was a good sign to her. It was the sign that he didn't die, and that he tried to deal with the poison.

13. But to Lirlit it was very important she would follow the tribe, as they had surprised her village for such a long time. Lirlit knew them. She ran and ran, while she could still track them. After minutes of running she saw smoke, and after awhile she entered the area of the tribe. She didn't feel any fear, only strength. She shouted and shrieked, while another bat was coming. This was a huge one, and quickly he attacked the members of the tribe. Lirlit saw that only some women and children were running away. She believed that they were nothing but prisoners of these evil men. It was a long fight, and afterwards Lirlit's uncle entered the area. There was no any man still alive. They found a lot of strange objects here. But then the wolves entered the village.

14. There were more and more bats in the air, and they all helped Lirlit in her fight. It was a great slaughter. The wolves couldn't win the battle. But suddenly a much bigger wolf showed up. He had the crown with the skeleton-skulls. Lirlit asked herself if it was the crown of the wild palace, or was it something else. All of a sudden headaches started to come over Lirlit. 'Don't believe in it,' she said to herself. 'Believe in your fantasy, girl.'

But the pain got stronger and deeper, and she fell to the ground, as in delirium. The wolf started to roar : 'Indigo, princess, it is time I will feed myself with your blood to become the king of Lokdok and ruler of Kaapsmerh.' And he jumped towards her, while he bit in her arm, sucking the blood out of her. Her uncle had found a weapon in one of the tents, and attacked the wolf from behind. He crashed a sharp iron blade in a strange shape into the neck of the wolf, but the wolf turned around and attacked him. Then Lirlit kicked the wolf in his back, and shouted : 'Oh, you dumb one, now you have the crown and my blood, only ghosts will control you, as they have lust to use slaves like you to dominate the atmosphere. Let the skies fall upon you.' Then the wolf ran away, and disappeared through the bushes. Lirlit's uncle had been wounded, but Lirlit took care of it. He would survive. Also Lirlit's arm was still bleeding, but she would also survive.

15. After awhile women and children of the tribe entered the area again, and they were glad they were delivered from the men now. Originally they were from another tribe, and once they had been captured, while their own men and even a lot of their children got killed. Since then they had to be the wives and slaves of the invaders. They told Lirlit and her uncle that they knew where the wolves had their shelter.

16. Lirlit wanted to go there. The women wanted to go with her too, but other women warned them that they wouldn't survive. But Lirlit's uncle would go with them. It was a long walk, and first they had to move along stakes with skeletons tied to it. Some of the skeletons had been hung. It was a dark atmosphere. Suddenly they saw a warrior in a wolf-skin. He ran away, and then he disappeared by creeping into the bushes. Now they knew that there weren't only wolves there, but also warriors. But some of the women told that these warriors could sometimes totally turn into wolves. They came into a sort of center. Everything looked quiet. Stones had been laid here, and there were some small temples, piramids in layers, shrines, and an indian man slowly walked towards them. His arm was stretched out, like he wanted to shake hands with them. But one of the women started to shriek. 'I have seen him in my dreams. He is the one who raped me, and he will rape us all.'

17. The indian man started to smile. 'This woman is confused,' he said. But Lirlit asked him who he was, and what his purpose is. Is he a part of this ? But the man didn't say anything. It really pissed Lirlit off. She took her spear, but suddenly she couldn't move herself. 'Don't believe in it,' she said to herself, 'believe in your fantasy.' And then she could move her arm again. She started to hit him by the spear, but the man was too quick, and then he ran away. 'What is this for strange behaviour,' she asked herself. Also her uncle was coming closer. Suddenly he started to roar, like he was in fire inside. Then he fell to the ground. Again he was talking in delirium. 'There is witchcraft here,' one of the women said. 'This is the way they always tried to confuse us.' But then Lirlit said : 'Let us not believe in witchcraft and all this superstition, for when we believe in it and practice it, the spirits who made it up will have control in our minds. We must use our own fantasy.'

18. 'Oh, but it is too strong,' another woman said.

19. 'Will you shut up now,' Lirlit shouted, 'our fantasy is stronger.' But other women started to shake their heads. 'You do not know the powers you're playing with,' an older women said. 'The women who are still in the camp have warned us, but we didn't listen to their advice. Let's go back, for strange things are happening here, and we do not have control. What can we do ? We do not know with how many they are here ? I do not want to die, let's return.'

20. 'Okay,' Lirlit said angry, 'all cowards can go home. But we must deal with it.' And since then a lot of the women returned to the camp. The anger towards Lirlit and her uncle started to rise, although they were the ones who had saved them out of the hands of the evil tribe. Then suddenly Lirlit started to shriek while the air became black of bats. She was calling for her friends, something which she had learned from her precious uncle. In quick rythm the bats began to invade the temples, the layered doubledecker-piramids and the tents, but they couldn't find anything. It was like a ghost-city. No one was there, but they knew that some were hiding.

21. The bats shrieked, and the sky became darker and darker. They had to pierce this city in the wilderness, this wolf-city. And so they invaded it deeper and deeper. Lirlit's uncle was still talking in delirium. He was calling for some names, or it was only looking like it. 'Uncle,' Lirlit spoke, 'I want you to stop now with all your superstition. It is too dangerous to do that here. Let the bats do their job, and let our weapons speak. We must use wisdom now, and our fantasy.' But it was like her uncle was too far gone, and he spoke on in a delirious language. Lirlit got more and more angry at her uncle, and suddenly she hit him in the face, and screamed : 'Now you shut up, or I will cut your head off here, in the sand.' She knew she had gone too far now, and one of the bats, a huge one, came down to her, to bite her in the face. Blood was spouting like a fountain. The bat didn't want to let go of his bite, while Lirlit was bleeding all over. But then suddenly they heard the sound of a dull kick. Lirlit's uncle had killed the bat by his weapon. He had always sworn to his family that he would protect Lirlit by his life, no matter what circumstance.

22. Slowly they walked on, while more and more women were leaving them. These women knew that the curse was so strong that when they would go further they would probably kill each other. 'Lirlit, you are losing your mind by the wolfsPELL,' a woman was shouting, 'return !' Even the bats started to attack them now. They were in rage because they had killed one of them. They were shrieking higher than ever, and the hugest bats came down. It was a long fight. Now they had to fight their friends instead of the enemy. But Lirlit knew that it was the sacrifice they had to bring. Suddenly there were lights all over. There was thunder, and lightening, and a wolf in a black garment stood like a warrior before them. 'I am the ghost of the ancestors,' he spoke. 'Why do you challenge me.'

23. Lirlit tried to explain about what happened, and what the wolves did to them, but the wolf started to laugh. 'Oh, you dumb dumb mortals without a soul, only enlightened to right your own crimes. Do you know history ? Do you know both sides of the story ? Oh wanderers of the mind, do you not know that you can only escape the powers of the mind to control the minds of others ? I do not bear a crown. I have given them to my servants, my wolf-king.' Then the appearance left again. Lirlit looked at her uncle. They found out they were both very wounded because of the bat-attacks. There were no bats to help them anymore, and there were no women with them anymore. Now Lirlit and her uncle were at their own, not knowing what would happen, and where were their weapons ? In front of them there was only fog. But Lirlit's uncle took her by the arm, and they walked forwards. Suddenly they didn't feel ground below their feet anymore, and they were falling. They fell so deep like they never fell before, and suddenly it was all wet around them . They had been fallen into the river. The river was wild, and in speed they were moving towards a waterfall. They would die when they would fall from the edge. They both started to shriek and fell from the edge. They both thought this was the end, as the waterfall was very deep. But suddenly two huge bats grasped them to fly away with them. They still had friends there, it appeared. They brought them to a huge batnest high on the mountains.

24. The bats here were drinking out of eggs, and Lirlit and her uncle also had to drink. Suddenly they both fell asleep. When they woke up, they were in a cave in the mountain. The ground was very slimy, and huge eggs laid all around. Most of the eggs were broken open, while strange fluids were in them. Some even were full of blood, while it streamed out of it. One of the bats entered the room. He stood erected, like he was half a man, half a bat. Suddenly he turned into an old man. He looked like a necromancer. He had a very wise radiation, but also a confused one. It had a delirious effect on Lirlit and her uncle. They felt very dizzy when they looked at him. 'I am here to warn you,' the old man said. 'You must lose all your superstition, or the wolves will lead you back to your previous life, in which you were dominated by your mind.'

25. Lirlit and her uncle both nodded. They knew how important it was what the man said.

26. Then the man continued : 'The battle against the wolves is a hard battle. If they win our minds will be controlled again.'

27. 'What can we do about it ?' Lirlit asked. Then the man started to shriek, while two bats flew into the room. Then he clapped in his hand, while the bats floated down on the bench. 'You know,' the old man said, 'parts of us are bats. And we must use them well. They have the weaponry to destroy the wolf-domination.'

28. 'But how ?' Lirlit asked.

29. 'Come,' the old man said, 'I will show you.' Then the man walked out of the room. Lirlit and her uncle followed him. They came in a narrow corridor with a strange smell. Then they came into another room, with a lot of dust on the ground. Lirlit started to cough. There were slimy eggs around, and from some of them snakes were coming forth, and much of slime dripped out. 'Come,' the old man said, 'this is not what I want to show you. Walk on.' Then the man opened another door. The doorhandle was decorated by very small skeleton-skulls. High sounds like shrieks came out of their mouths, and even out of the holes of their eyes. Then again they had to walk through a narrow corridor, but later they found out it was a bridge. Below the bridge there were smokey fluids, and wet towels like sheets were hanging in the air like walls. The towels were very hot, and steam was coming from them. A strange huge yellow rock stood there at the end of the bridge, and they had to climb over it. It was like burning sand under their feet. They were entering a sort of desert in a huge cave. The sand was burning. All sorts of feelings were climbing over Lirlit's body, trying to enter her head. 'Au,' Lirlit said. It was like something had burnt her. In the distance there were a lot of silver rocks mirroring so many things. There was a soft breeze. On the rocks bats appeared. They had mirroring weaponry, and while Lirlit was watching these mirrors she couldn't see the bats anymore, only herself in terrible ways. It was like her mind was taking over again, and she couldn't use her fantasy.

30. Suddenly she couldn't move again. It was like something had frozen her. 'Grasp the bat-weapons !' someone was shouting. But Lirlit couldn't see anything anymore, so she started to grasp in the air. Suddenly she felt like a velvet handle in her hand. And then something in her other hand. She opened her eyes and could move again. Now she could see the bats in the mirrors. But these weren't bats, but boys. They looked like princes, but they had poor clothes in such beautiful colours. When they opened their mouths fantasy was climbing into her head. She had now received the bat-armour. She also saw her uncle in the same armour. But suddenly wolves were all around them. Now they had to use their new weapons. Within a few minutes they had slain all the wolves. It was easier than ever. The old man was applauding. He had a white garment now. His tall beard was very shiny, but suddenly he was changing into a bat again and flew away. Also the boys were changing into bats again and flew away. 'Follow us,' someone shouted. But how ? 'Just shriek,' another one shouted. And while Lirlit and her uncle shrieked, they were changing into bats, and could fly away.

31. High in the sky there was a palace. It was full of crowns, but they didn't use these crowns anymore. They had been laid on shrines. There were also flowers on the shrines. Upstairs there was a hall with old thrones, but they weren't in use anymore. They looked like shrines now, and some weapons were laid on them. But suddenly someone was shrieking, and flying wolves were coming out of the walls, and through all sorts of doors. Now there was a battle in the air. 'Use your fantasy,' the old man spoke. 'Use your fantasy.' And suddenly they were sitting in the room again, where they had slept. 'What happened ?' Lirlit asked.

32. 'You were in my fantasy,' the old man said. 'and it is all real. But now you have to develop your own fantasy.'

33. Lirlit asked herself if she could do that. There were so many things they had to solve yet. But her fantasy would lead her in that. That was what the old man had said. They stayed on the bat-castle for a long time, and then they had to return to their own homes again. 'Practice your fantasy.' the man had said. 'Make it your own, and let it be your home.'

12.

The Wolf-Skull

1. Lirlit had been going to the market in her village. She had bought some stones called eagle-eyes. One she had put on her cupboard, and another one she laid next to her bed. Some had said the stones would attract good luck and contacts with the dead and extra-ordinary spirits, but Lirlit wasn't superstitious. She just liked the stones, and found it would be worth as good company. But in the middle of the night someone was waking her. It was like the wind was speaking to her, but then she saw an eagle close to an opening in her house. The eagle spoke to her that she needed to come to snake-mountain, as he wanted to show her something. When she stood outside her house, the eagle was very big. He took her in a good grip and flew with her to snake-mountain. He brought her in through an opening. 'Do you see all the treasures here ?' he asked. Lirlit could see a shimmering hall full of misty treasures. 'I know you like stones,' the eagle said, 'and I know you will like some of the stones here.' Lirlit was very grateful towards the eagle. He took her in a grip again and flew with her inside the huge hall. The stones were beautiful, but when Lirlit touched one of the stones, it was like there was an alarm switched on. Something in her head started to shriek, and from all sides snakes came towards her. 'Why didn't you tell this ?' she asked the eagle, but the eagle flew away. 'Hey, take me away,' Lirlit screamed.

2. Suddenly all sorts of snakes were sliding over her body, but they didn't attack her. And after awhile Lirlit found out that these snakes didn't wish any harm on her, but were her friends. She took the stone again, stood up, and walked towards a door. The snakes were following her. In another hall there were more amazing stones. Lirlit asked herself what would be the meaning of it all. And where was the eagle ? 'I am not superstitious,' Lirlit said to the snakes, 'but what is the meaning of these stones ?' But the snakes didn't speak to her. Suddenly a man and a woman entered the hall where Lirlit was. For a moment it was like Lirlit had to vomit. The man had a tall beard, and the woman was dressed in fragile white. It was because of the smell that Lirlit was a bit upset. They smelled like snakes and slime, but also things she couldn't describe. Suddenly they started to turn into tall and thin snakes. It looked like they completely ignored Lirlit. Like they had other things to do. Lirlit appeared not to be one of their priorities. They slid towards the stones, and then they moved them towards the door they came from. Lirlit got very curious what they would do with the stones. So she decided to follow them. When she stood into the door-opening the smell even more overwhelmed her, but this time it was even luring her deeper. She saw snakes here with very big beaks, and when they opened these beaks other snakes went in, and sometimes they even took stones with them. The snakes weren't huge, and Lirlit wondered what happened to the snakes who went inside. It was a riddle to Lirlit.

3. Deeper inside the hall, where many snakes were moving to, an enormous statue lay on the ground. It was cut off from it's feet, enormous feet which stood next to the statue, still erected and intact. It was like a complex of doors through which the snakes slid in. Lirlit decided to follow them inside the enormous feet of the statue. Inside they saw the stones growing here. They looked like eyes, and there were even stones coming forth from them. But when the stones were separated from the others, it more began to look like stones, and it didn't grow anymore. Some of the stones were very wet, but that also seemed to stop when they got separated. Most of the stones were very shiny.

4. There was a tunnel in the halls of the feet to come into the fallen statue. When Lirlit came into the halls of the fallen statue there was a lot of darkness and fog. She couldn't see much, but suddenly lights turned on, and she saw snakes hanging in the air or on the walls like bags. Often these snakes were brown-red with white stripes. It was a very pure white. These snakes were very huge, and suddenly some of them fell on Lirlit. Now it was all dark, and she almost couldn't breathe anymore. She tried to shriek, but couldn't get any sound out of her mouth. Then she fell into delirium. But soon the grip of the snakes wasn't tight anymore, and she could wrestle herself a way out. Then they left her alone. Still she had the feeling they didn't want to harm her, but they just wanted to test her, or just feel her. They had been sensitive to her trouble, and then they had let her go.

5. Suddenly the eagle appeared to her again. The eagle was glad to see her. 'It is amazing here,' she told the eagle.

6. 'But did you find some stones you would like to have already ?' the eagle asked. But there were so many stones and so many halls, that Lirlit had the sense she wasn't done with it yet. Then she asked the eagle what exactly the use of the stones is. 'The stones protect you against superstition by which lower spirits want to dominate the mind,' the eagle said, 'these stones inspire you to have your own fantasy.'

7. 'But don't you think that is also superstition ?' Lirlit asked. 'Why do I need these stones ?' But then the eagle flew away. It was like he was telling her to find that out for herself. She felt attracted to the stones, that was a sure thing, but she didn't want to have a new superstition. Or were these stones just her guards ? Some said stones could speak to the layers beneath the mind, to the unconscious. What if these stones were just forces of nature ? Were they made to protect the souls of those who lived in nature ? Lirlit had many questions. And it was like these stones were speaking to her in so many ways.

8. Deeper in the statue she found doors out of it. Now she came in halls behind the fallen statue. Eyes were watching her. Was this the domain of someone ? A wild man in a bearskin watched her, while two women were lying at his feet. 'What is it you come to do,' the man roared. Lirlit could see it wasn't totally a man. He was also a sort of dog, or other predator. Maybe she needed to be at her guard now, for the women didn't look so friendly either. 'Lirlit,' the man was suddenly saying, 'I have waited for you, I missed you.' And then he came forwards to her.

9. Lirlit stepped backwards, and shouted : 'Who are you ?'

10. 'I am your father,' the man said.

11. 'Oh no,' Lirlit said, 'that can't be true, you liar. My father died in war.'

12. 'They said that,' the man said, 'but that wasn't true. They made a mistake. I had been kidnapped for a long time by imperials, by wolf-warriors, lived my life lonely in a prison deep underground, but finally escaped. I didn't wish to live in the empire anymore, and didn't want to be king of Kaapsia anymore, so I started to live here, with my friends, the snakes who let me escape.'

13. But Lirlit still wasn't enthousiast. 'If that's true, then I have to say : You did a lot of evil things in your life they told me.'

14. The man bowed his head, and spoke : ‘I have to admit, I was wrong many times. I was king of Kaapsia and wasn’t always righteous in the use of my powers, and that is why I have laid them down. The pressure it too big, and I lived under a strange force.’

15. ‘And who are these women,’ Lirlit asked rude.

16. ‘They are snakes,’ the man said. Then he clapped in his hand, and the women turned into snakes again, while they slided away. Then Lirlit stepped forwards and fell into the arms of her father.

17. ‘There are many things I need to tell you,’ Lirlit’s father said. ‘I’m breeding the eggs of snakes here, for one day I will return to the empire to take revenge.’

18. ‘Well, I’m on your side dad,’ Lirlit said. The man smiled. He was glad he found his daughter back.

19. Lirlit found out that her father had many women here. But as he said : He needed to breed a new and powerful generation to take good vengeance.

20. ‘Your life is such an ornament,’ Lirlit’s father told her, ‘and also the things happened in your life which you do not understand are part of this treasure.’ Lirlit smiled. It was the first time in her life that she had the feeling of having a father. And it was a good feeling, especially because he was so caring.

21. Her father told her a lot about the power of the wolf-skulls, that these were the objects by which the imperials maintained their control. The wolf-skulls could speak and could easily take over the minds. In one of the halls an old sorceror, a necromancer lived. Lirlit’s father often went to him for advice, and this time he wanted to bring his daughter with him. They had to go to a higher place within the mountain. It was almost like a tower. It was even called the tower, or more : the Boa-Constrictor Tower. The wizard was glad to see them. He looked at Lirlit and blinked to her. Then he made a movement with his hand and asked them to follow him. On top of the tower they could have a survey as it was almost outside the mountain. It was a very high place, and from here they could see the whole empire. The wizard told them where the wolf-skulls were, and where the most powerfull wolf-skulls were, but Lirlit told them that she wasn’t superstitious. She didn’t believe in all that. She believed in using fantasy. And after a long talk with the wizard she got a bit pissed off. And she shouted : ‘Okay, go on with your magic, your superstition full of fables to see how it will bring you down. I’m out of here. It’s unbelievable that an old man like you never grew up, and it’s even more unbelievable that my father searches for advice in you. Goodbye.’ And then she ran away. She took some of the stones she had found and then she called for the eagle, who took her immediately to her home.

22. When she got home she remembered that she had a wolf-skull by herself for one time she slayed a wolf who had attacked her. She thought it would be a good present for her father and his wizard. She didn’t want to have anything to do with such powers. She knew that to have part in any government would break you down and control your life. It was all superstition made by ghosts and spirits to dominate them all in secret. So she gave the skull to the eagle, and asked him to bring the skull to the mountain, to her father.

23. Her father was very glad with the present. And of course he wouldn’t use it to make a new government. Her father didn’t want to be a king again, also not as a sorceror. He would hide the wolf-skull deep in the snake-mountain so that no one could do harm with it anymore. It would be nothing more than a sovenir and a memory. Lirlit was very proud of him when she heard the story.

Zebra-Mountain

1. Lirlit awoke by a hand taking her in grip very rude. She opened her eyes. Two leaders of her village stood in her room, commanding her to come with them to the old chief of the village. They took her very tight and went outside. 'What's going on?' Lirlit asked. But none of them said something. When they got to the tent of the chief they pushed her inside. 'Hey, don't be so rude,' she said loud to them.

2. 'Go, sit down on my bed,' the chief said. He had a tall beard and was bald. Lirlit sat down, and then the chief started to tell. He clapped in his hands, and then a servant came inside the tent. He showed her all sorts of small things made by zebra-bones.

'I don't know what your point is,' Lirlit said to the chief. 'I didn't make those things. I didn't kill any of your zebra's. I always enjoy going to the zebra-reservate to feed them and to have friendship with them.'

3. But then the chief said : 'They found the zebra-bone-figures in your home, so you must know more about it. I'm telling you again. Sixty-six of our zebra's have been killed lately. They left their skins, but they took the bones away.'

4. But Lirlit became panicked and said : 'I do not know these figures, and I would never kill such a zebra. Why would I do that?'

5. But the chief wasn't convinced and made the decision to lock her up. At the side of the village she had to live in a cage like an animal. Lirlit wondered how the figures would come in her house. She didn't trust the leaders. She had troubles with them before, and she thought that this could be all an act of revenge.

6. Everyday the old chief came to her cage to talk to her. 'Honestly, I am very disappointed in you. I thought you were such a good and skilled woman, but how wrong I was. You have taken the life of that which was most dear to me,' he said. If someone would do any harm to his zebra's, then he always said he would die. And the chief became very ill. He couldn't eat nor sleep because of what happened to his zebra's. It was for him a disgusting sight to see the figures made of zebra-bones. And after a few weeks he died.

7. Lirlit didn't have any hope. Maybe they would kill her finally, or she would have to live in this cage forever. But one day another leader came to the cage. They had another chief now, and they had decided to ban her to a slave-island, where she would work the rest of her life.

8. Lirlit didn't know if she had to be glad with that or not. She would find out. Soon after the decision she was planted on a ship, and after a few days she came on the island. It was a beautiful island, but she knew she had to work here. She came to live between criminals, murderers, assassins, witch-doctors, and other evil men and women. A lot of them she knew from the past. She never could get along with them, although a lot of them she only knew by face.

9. She had to do hard work, and she didn't get enough time to sleep. It was like it was all slowly driving her crazy. She had the feeling she would lose her mind if she would live here any longer. It was hot here, and there was always a lot of noise here, even in the nights. One day she couldn't take it anymore. She began screaming and talking deliriously. Everyone thought she had gone crazy, and that would mean she would be banned to an even worse island where the sick and crazy ones lived.

10. This would be hell for her, for there would be even more noise, and they said slavery would even be harder there. They dropped her on a ship again. The island was very dirty and a lot of them died by all sorts of diseases. She had to sleep with a hundred sick and crazy ones in one hall. There was too much noise to get sleep, and they had to wake up very early to work a whole day in a factory. Lirlit was scared of a lot of types here, for they didn't have control over themselves. Everyday there were a lot of murders and other sorts of crimes.

11. However one of the leaders here got a passion and weak spot towards her. She always told him she was unguilty, and he believed her. But he said she could never return to her village, because the ones who had lost their minds could be a danger to the city. However, he was willing to let her escape. He only asked her to spend the night with him one time. But this she refused. She would escape at her own. But after months and months she found out there was no way to escape. She was always chained, and there was no way to get it loose.

12. So she went to the leader again, and talked with him about it, but he was like struck in his honour. He told her he had found another woman to let her escape in her place, so everything was done now. But in a strange sense he felt compassion towards her. He decided to refuse her request to sleep with her for one night, but she would get her freedom.

13. Lirlit was grateful to him, but she hated her village now. She didn't have anything to do with the zebra-murders. And when she would show up again, they would ban her again. It was better for her to search for a new life somewhere else. She wanted to find out who murdered the zebra's. She didn't trust the leaders of her village. She thought that they had done it themselves because they wanted another chief. In her eyes it was nothing but a big conspiracy. So in the night she went to one of the leader's house. She broke in, and started to search throughout the house. Everyone was asleep, but she had to be careful. The house was full of zebra-bone-figures, and she thought that was strange. She went to the reservate and found out that there wasn't any zebra there anymore. Later she found out that after the chief died, and after she got banned to slave-island they killed all the other zebra's. They falsely spoke that this was the wish of the chief so that he wouldn't be without his zebra's in the afterlife.

14. But in the reservate there were more snakes than ever now, and some were white, and looked very strange. She had never seen such snakes before. It was like they were penetrating her mind. She got scared in a sense. And then she got the shock of her life, for in the distance they saw how such snakes attacked an ox and started to eat it. Were they the ones who also killed the zebra's ? Lirlit took her bow and an arrow to shoot one of the snakes. But then they came after her. Lirlit ran away, but they came after her. She took another arrow from her quiver and shot the second one. But then the others started to shriek in rage and in speed they jumped on her, almost reaching for her throat. They tried to strangle her, but she took a leg-knife and slayed them one by one. She got bitten horribly, and the poison was already reaching for her brains. It was like she was gliding into delirium. When she woke up a white small man with a tall white beard was staring at her. He had a very high voice, and he grasped her throat. She knew she was now fighting against a ghost also, fighting for her life.

15. 'What did you do to the zebra's ?' she asked, while she could hardly breath.

16. 'Don't you like the figures I made of their bones ?' the little white bearded man said.

17. 'No,' Lirlit roared, 'for it took me to slave-island.' The man started to laugh. Suddenly he was vomitting. The skin of a zebra came out of his mouth. 'Don't you like these skins ?' the little man asked. Lirlit tried to kick him, but she couldn't reach him. When she woke up the snakes were gone, but she was very sick now. It was already morning and she saw some of the village walking in zebra-skins. She was in rage now. She wanted to see the chief. The new chief was one of the younger leaders, but Lirlit told him what she had seen this night, about the white snakes eating an ox. And here they said that they had killed the zebra's themselves as it was the old chief's wish. She told the new chief about the condemnation that she would have killed zebra's, but the new chief said that it wouldn't matter anymore. It was now legal to kill zebra's, so whether she was guilty or not, it was an old law, changed after the death of the chief as that was his wish.

18. But Lirlit knew the old chief and that would never be his wish. 'Can you prove it to me that that was his wish?' Lirlit asked. But the new chief couldn't.

19. Lirlit was shocked. She could now live in her village again without any problems, but now there was even a tradition of hunting zebra's to honour the old chief. It seemed that to wear zebra-skin was also a sign of honour to the old chief. But Lirlit thought that was disgusting. And she still wondered about the part of the white snakes in it. One night she broke in at the house of the new chief. But the new chief was still awake, and she saw that he was whispering some words while reading in a book he slowly started to change into a white snake. Now Lirlit knew enough. And she was pretty sure that the new chief was the boss of all the white snakes. So she took her weapon, jumped towards the snake to slay it. It was already legal in her village to slay snakes, so she didn't have anything to fear. The next day she took the skin of the killed snake and went to the center of the village. She raised the skin-snake and spoke: 'Your chief has disappeared and will not return. He has been eaten by this snake, but I have killed it.' No one had heard about the disappearing of the chief, but soon they found it out, and they believed Lirlit. Because Lirlit was a hero now, she was allowed to make a wish. So she wished that the killing of zebra's would stop. The law had to be changed again at this point. And so it happened.

20. But in the mountains, there was still living a small white man, collecting zebra-bones to make figures of it. And one day he came to the village to give some of his figures to the children, who thought these were nice toys. Lirlit followed him to his place. He still had the need to take over the minds of the villagers to fulfill his evil plans. He had painted the bones in all kind of colours, and it wasn't easy to see that these were zebra-bones. Then Lirlit jumped forwards and a fight started. From all sides white snakes came to attack Lirlit, while the little man tried to get away. 'I warned you,' the little man laughed hysterically, 'I told you not to come here.' Lirlit saw he walked through a door to enter a room full of zebra's. It was like he was breeding them there. After Lirlit had slain all the snakes by her legknives she went inside the room. It was only a room leading to a huge hall, a zebra-breeding.

21. Behind it there was a strange toy-factory, all made of zebra-bones. Lirlit was almost vomiting. It had such a strange smell. In the distance she heard the little man laughing with a high voice. The voice got higher and higher. 'Haha,' he laughed in joy, 'how I control all the minds of these dumb villagers, giving them toys from birth on made of zebra-bones. They cannot use their own fantasy, as the toys will do that for them. Hahaha, how good I am. I'm smart, hey, I'm smart.' And then he started to talk to himself further. As quick as she could Lirlit tried to set the zebra's free, but they were tied by strange leather belts. Even her knife couldn't get through, and the little man was only laughing harder in the distance. 'I'm going to get you!' he shouted in full joy, almost like he was teasing her.

22. She knew that the only thing she could do now was following the little man to erase him first. She took an arrow, aimed, but couldn't see him. Then she saw him standing on a platform in front of a huge kettle. White steam was coming from the kettle. When she aimed again an iron arm was moving a wall before him. She started to walk around the wall by following some aluminium stairways. She could see the kettle again, while it was in some sort of liquid cocon, which looked like a fleece or transparent plastic. She saw ghosts coming forth from the kettle, rising, they looked like the souls of zebra's. The little man was laughing and shouting loud : 'Haha, you dumb souls will now be imprisoned in the toys forever, to be the guards of the childrens' minds, so that they can never really escape in their fantasies.' Lirlit aimed again, but another time an iron arm was moving another wall before the kettle. There was a stairway under the kettle-platform by which Lirlit could reach the other side of it. Quickly she aimed her arrow and shot into the head of the little man. The head started to spin like crazy, while the little man started to blast everything. He started to roar, while slime was coming through. Now an iron arm was moving towards Lirlit, and pushed her from the stairways. She got wounded, but she stood up again, but now the iron arm got her in it's grip. 'Hahaha,' the little man shouted, 'hahaha,' while he mocked her, 'Now you will be nothing but a soul in the kettle, hahaha. To be locked up in a toy will be your new toy.' And then the iron arm moved her upstairs again and brought her above the kettle. 'Now wait a minute,' the little man said, 'I want to enjoy this sight for awhile.' The little man's head was still spinning, and Lirlit got the expression he couldn't see much of it. Quickly she took another arrow and shot it into the body of the little man. Now the little man fell from the platform. She was still hanging above the kettle, while strange white slimy fire was coming forth from it. It was boiling, and Lirlit thought she would die by the heat. 'Stop, stop !' she was screaming. But suddenly a lot of zebra-ghosts rose from the kettle and took her out of the grip of the iron arm.

23. Quickly she took the little man, who looked like a doll now. There was a light smile on his face. She stepped on the platform again, and threw the doll into the kettle. Suddenly there were explosions everywhere. The platform was moving away, and she looked right into a room where zebra's had been tied to stakes, and some even looked like trees. She took her knife to free them, but she couldn't get it done. Suddenly a lot of white snakes entered the room. They stood erected, very aggressive. And again Lirlit had to fight them. They bit her very horribly, and Lirlit felt very sick all of a sudden. This time there were so many snakes. What could she do ?

24. And suddenly the burning doll entered the room again. 'Hahaha,' it shrieked like it had drunk a lot. Quickly Lirlit took two of the iron arms who had broken away since the explosions, and by the arms she took the doll and pushed it to the strings by which the zebra's where bound. Immediately the strings burnt away, while in shocks the zebra's got free. But the head of the doll was moving wildly, so by one of the arms Lirlit smashed the head off. Now she could also help the other zebra's. But more and more things started to come into the fire. She tried to save as much zebra's as she could, also in the breeding, but then she had to go away, as there was too much fire. The zebra's were following her.

25. In the village everyone was very glad. Now they could have zebra's again in the reservate, and it would be like the old days.

1. She thrones in Orion, where She has her bow. Together with hyenas she hunts. Her laws of predestination keep us bound.

2. In Orion She thrones. The enemy bleeds before Her. They had raised their man empire, but now their hands are cut.
3. Their arms are burning before Her, and she cuts their heart muscle.
4. Tonight is the night of hunt again, the red night.

15.

Coco

1. Coco was swimming in the river. She was washing herself, while crocodiles moved closer. They wouldn't harm her. They trusted her. In the white sand along the river some monkeys were playing. Coco felt at ease here. The jungle had always been her drug. She was raised by hyenas in the fields, and now she was here. She had her own hut. She smelled the fresh, intoxicating flowers in the river, while she took another dive. Crocodiles followed her. She wasn't scared of them. They were her friends. She stared at the tall flowers and trees at the other side of the river, and decided to swim to there. There were also some big snakes hanging in the trees. They were resting.
2. She licked the flowers there. They smelled so good. Then she lay down in the sand for awhile. The sun was shining on her body. She smeared herself in with some coconut milk. She also put it in her hair. Some big snake was sliding over her, but she didn't care. Then she fell asleep. She was up early the next morning. She started riding on a small elephant. Monkeys followed her also. She was the queen of animals.
3. Lions, panthers and tigers, they all loved her and listened to her voice. On a day a hyena came to her, very big, and a fight started. The hyena tried to kill her, but Coco took her knife and slayed the hyena. Once in a while there was a red night. These were certain nights in which Coco felt like she was losing her control. Then she just had to go to the fields, to hunt with the hyenas. The red nights were like the call of the hyenas on her life. Wherever she went, she never got rid of that. The red nights were usually longer than normal nights, much longer. Once in a red night Coco was like struck by lightening, and started to wander like hypnotized. In the distance she saw a castle totally made of bones. An old man came to her from the distance. He had a long white beard, and was half naked, dressed in some white wrappings. Coco felt like she was in fire. 'I have waited for you,' said the old man.
4. 'Who are you ?' asked Coco.
5. 'Come,' said the old man, 'I want to show you something in the castle.'
6. Coco walked together with him, still hypnotized.
7. He dressed her in some thick raw white fur which looked like wool. Inside of the huge castle there was a small lake. He went into the lake and asked her to swim with him. She had still her wrappings on. He had also given her savage boots of the same soft fur. They swam to the other side of the lake.
8. 'I have to tell you a secret,' he said with a wet beard and mustache. He was almost bald. His blue eyes were staring at her very intense. He took her hand, and helped her on the other side. They stood on the border of the lake now.

9. 'What is it ?' she asked. He sat down. She sat down also. He was still holding her hand. 'Now,' he said. He took her in his arms. 'I need you to help the children of Mitante.'

10. 'Who are they ?' Coco asked.

11. 'They live deep underground, far away from here,' said the old man. 'They are captives.'

12. 'Who is their captor ?' Coco asked.

13. The old man said nothing. He just gave her a key. 'Go to the gate of Frikit Sea. There on the beach somewhere is the shaft underground to the children of Mitante. I will reward you richly when you will bring them back to me.'

14. Coco said nothing. She just took the key and went on her way. It was a long travel to Frikit Sea, which took a few days of walking. To her surprise she saw the old man again at the gate of Frikit Sea. 'I can tell you more now,' he said. 'The children of Mitante take fruits from the Totokmana-tree, which are tall, thin fruits almost like herbs, which empower females and weaken males. It's a sort of drug. When taken once, you have to take it your whole life, or you die.'

15. Fruits from the Welchter-tree could neutralize it. Coco had to go to the native tribe who guarded this tree. It was a very rare tree. It was not far away from the gate. They also guarded another tree, the Simrin-tree, which had fruits to empower the male and weaken the female. There was also a third tree they guarded, the Torg-tree, which had big white berries which empower the native woman, and weaken the white woman. When a white woman would eat such a berry, she would slowly turn into a white pig. The native women guarding these trees used these pigs to ride on. These pigs were also used for food. In the bones of these pigs jewels seemed to be stored. These jewels were used to make necklaces for the native women. They also guarded a fourth tree : the Krale-tree, whose fruits empowered boys, and weakened adult men.

16. And two burning trees formed her breasts, two burning skulls. She was in the flames, but it was just her briefs, the veil of fire. And her buttocks were two fruits between which the hunted got trapped. She was the land. And her sisters surrounded the machinery to watch the skulls and the cross, which had on it's top a grilled chicken. And these faces were burning in the wind, these days of december. The children of Mitante will never be free.

17. Coco fell down. She had been struck. She became one of them. There was no hope anymore when she saw the tribe. Hypnotized she lay herself at their feet. She knew it was just a matter of time. Then the tribe would have possessed everything. She didn't care anymore. It was good like this. There was nothing she could do, and it didn't matter anymore. She was fine with it, for she had seen the mystery of time and eternity.

18. The hand of the old man was on her shoulder, but it was more and more burning away, fading, until she couldn't remember it anymore. She only remembered the hyenas with who she used to hunt. They had raised her, and they would stay in her memory forever and ever.

1. She is the huntress throning in Orion, where she has wrapped herself in white fur like wool. She looks down on sinners. She thrones high above them, in a hut made of bones. She calls her children back to nature and traps them by grace.
2. She starves them, so that the world cannot enslave them. They run through the wilderness, free, but they are collared by starvation. They are marked by depression and fear. They cannot escape. She saved them forever in the perseverance of the saints.
3. She leads them to barren land, where they have to live by hunt. She will show them what the war is about. Every night is a red night, a night of hunt, until she leads them to the land of the night.
4. They follow her to her tent. Hunger is their shield. They see the rich turn into cattle. The hunt starts.
5. Rejection is their bow, depression their arrow.
6. Humans are always searching to satisfy their lusts. Pray for starvation as that is the only way to please Mother God.
7. Those who live to satisfy their lust will become cattle.
8. Pray for depression, so that you will not have fun with the world and come under the Judgement of Mother God.
9. Pray for fear, for it is impossible to please Mother God without fearing Her.
10. Pray for rejection, to be safe from pride.
11. Pray for weakness, to stay safe from slavery to the world.
12. Mother God wages war against the saints, to save them forever, in the perseverance. They are Her captives of salvation. She will teach them how to pray. They do not have to fear the enemy, for Mother God is their worst enemy.

17.

Hell's Bakery

1. In the realms of hell there was no slayer but Tamar the horrible. She had a bloodlust like no one else, and her breath was like pure fire.
2. She was the softest woman existing, but at the same time the hardest. By certain jewels called the dakuster-jewels she had enslaved so many to be her gladiators in the wars of hell.
3. These jewels were like chains surrounding their wrists and ankles, and these made them drunk, so that they wouldn't be blocked in fighting by the false spirits of shame and guilt, which had been sent out by the enemy to paralyze the warriors.
4. The jewels would also take away the fear which was another strategy of the enemy to hold the warriors down. Tamar's sword was abundant in slaughter, spoiling so much blood, as blood she wanted to see on the killing fields.

5. It was the blood which made her men drunk, and by that they could reach their dreams again, dreams which had been taken away by the enemy. Tamar taught her men that they shouldn't fear suffering, as suffering would make them drunk, and would change their visions.
6. She taught all her men to be ascets and to search for the treasures of hell. The most horrible beasts of hell were at her side, and she taught her men that everything existed by the paradox, and that something could only survive by the paradox of the extremes.
7. Only those who could be the meanest could be the most graceful, and only those who learnt how to be the most hateful could handle the tools of eternal love. Only the extreme and eternal paradox could heal hearts, but could also break hearts like nothing else.
8. Tamar the Horrible was an enslaver of hearts to lead them to the eternal freedom. Her dakuster-jewels were notorious and feared, but also desired by many.
9. Many were waiting for her enlightening touch in hell, but she was very selective. Only the best would be a part of her army, and the rest would suffer under her bone-breaking hands.
10. Her initiations were most cruel, and not many could handle it.
11. The inhabitants of hell warned each other not to approach her, only when they had considered the cost, or in hopeless situations when there was nothing to lose anymore.
12. She had the winds of hell as her chariot and she was searching for nothing but blood.
13. She taught that all life was in the blood, all knowledge and every stone of hell.
14. They said the seven winds of hell were seven wolves who had defeated the seven lions of hell.
15. Seven lionskulls were in the carriage of Tamar the Horrible, and these skulls had been covered by their own skins, while these skins had been covered by the skin of a zebra.
16. Tamar the Horrible knew how to live in domination.
17. She was the nightmare in the heads of so many, keeping them under the heavy weights of hell, her giant swines, her giant pigs and her giant lions.
18. Many begged to have a day off in hell, but she kept them all merciless under her heavy chains.
19. She built cities of their blood and bones to make her dreams come true, the dreams of the eternal paradox of the extreme.
20. She didn't listen to dreams of others or to prophets, as she was the rule herself.
21. She was like the temple of hell, or even its arc.
22. There was no one who could more silence and shrieks but her.
23. She was the woman of twisted extremes.
24. Dark animals were always surrounding her chariot when she was hunting : the meanest panthers, and her mocking hyena's.

25. She had her domain in Persiot, in the East of Hell, but most of the time she lived in Grugdia, which was the South-West of hell, where the hottest and highest fires were existing.
26. Here she ruled over those of no hope, also taking their last hopes away.
27. Tamar was the doom of the huntingfields of hell, like hell's altar of eternal loss.
28. She was the one who had raised the hellgates of Tantalos high, which was the frontportal.
29. Deeper in hell there were places like Tartarus, Atlas and Prometheus, the place of evergrowing suffering.
30. None would easily enter her domains, as they would meet her invisible whips.
31. These whips would torture their minds in all forms, and would make them drunk to take their minds away so that they would become the subject for more suffering when they would wake up.
32. She would whip them into sleep only to let them slide in her traps.
33. She would chain them by strange jewels made of goatskulls having strange evil buttons like the marks of hell which would make them a subject to the eternal torture she inflicted on them.
34. She didn't believe in final destruction. She believed in everlasting damnation.
35. Damned souls would be subject to torture, and this would be without an end.
36. If there was any sleep or drunkenness, it would be to let them wake up in even worse suffering.
37. That was the goal of all her so-called mercy. She was the personification of Evil, of evergrowing, everlasting Evil.
38. Many brave men tried to destroy her heart throughout ages, but they could never find her heart.
39. The problem was they searched for it in the realms of hell, but her heart had been stored in a place called Evil, the core beyond Hell.
40. Here her heart had been stored behind strange glass made of the tormented eyes of the damned.
41. Everyone coming close to this glass had to pay by anger and inflictions of self-rejections to become more or less twisted spirits.
42. The glass would always lead them astray in mindwebs of confusion where they would lose all their grown-up behaviour to become children of evil.
43. For Tamar it was only a fragile, tender spiderian snack. They were so helpless in this killing womb, that it would only drive them further away from their goal.
44. She was the mistress of Evil, of all Evil, all heartless evil. She had a heart, but it was frozen, having a strange flame letting it all burn in a strange fire.
45. She was the world beyond hell, and anyone coming near could only fall away in paralysis.

46.All the dreams she gave led them to greater nightmares, to the eternal ones.

47.No one would ever awake again. It was a bottomless pit in which they would be eternal fuel for her heart.

48.Those who tried to get close to her got struck by a strange disease in which their minds melted away into demency.

49.Many went insane in their attempt to approach her, and thus she became the most dangerous instrument of hell, a strange merciless machine of evil, an evil beyond all sense and beyond all understanding.

50.It was by her cruel ways she let the spirits and souls of the damned clot until they were her tormented jewels of evil by which she ruled. The process of clotting took eternities.

51.There was no medicine against someone like Tamar, and this is why the rules of hell got tighter and tighter like a cruel unchangable law of evil.

52.It was like a heavy weight pulling them all down.

53.But one day a group of children found a young lion in the desert.

54.The lion had the hairy skin of a giant spider,

55.and it seemed the animal was carrying strange powers.

56.It led the children through the glass behind which the heart of Tamar was.

57.Tamar was upset that these children seemed to have found the key.

58.It was a strange biological key, this lion.

59.And it teached the children about an eternal sleep in which their hearts would be safe, 60.and in which suffering would fade away.

61.This was what the children needed as they suffered from insomnia by the curse of Tamar dwelling in their heads.

62.It was like Tamar's eyes were always open,

63.and it seemed she suffered from insomnia too.

64.When Tamar saw the lion she felt some compassion,

65.and also a little boy seemed to have compassion with her.

66.'You can caress the animal,' the small boy said to her.

67.'It will heal you.'

68.When Tamar did she started to cry.

69.She could close her eyes,

70.and fall asleep.

71.That day the winds of eternal sleep and eternal drunkenness went through hell like winds to make an end to so much suffering,

- 72.and to set free so many slaves.
- 73.Also the river of forgetfulness started to scream to bring healing.
- 74.Tamar slept for three days and when she woke up she was another person.
- 75.But after awhile she started to do the same things she always did.
- 76.It was like these things were too deep in her,
- 77.like they belonged to her and she belonged to them.
- 78.There was no one who could prevent her from going this road.
- 79.She had been touched by a dream only to call forth a greater nightmare,
- 80.pushing the flame away to inflict an eternity of icefields like the fields of glass.
- 81.It was like hell was freezing over this time,
- 82.triggering an even darker flame of evil,
- 83.a flame streaming from the deepest of her heart,
- 84.possessing them all.
- 85.She inflicted so many sour, salt and bitterness on them, so that they started to produce sweetness from deep inside to survive. She made living gingerbreads of them on which the birds of hell would float down. She became the bakerwoman of hell, raising man and women like cakes and tarts, like icecreams to be the fuel of her heart. There were many unknown predators she had to feed, coming from the depths of her heart.
- 86.There were living bakers in her heart, while she was the bakerwoman. These bakers were predators, different parts of her. One of her most evil and cruel creation she created by using these bakers was time. By time she could lock everything up, to control everything. She created time by tormenting the minds of her victims. By her whips she split their minds and actually in these splits the isolated parts got frozen by which time could rise. Time was an instrument she used to dominate hell. But she also needed time as a jewel for herself.
- 87.The pigs of hell were time-masters standing in her way. That was why deep in her realms of Evil she had temples where she sacrificed pigs. She had all kinds of ways to turn them into gingerbreads. No one was allowed to master and inflict time but her. But also numbers were objects in her hand which she could cause to rise in the minds of her victims by the invisible whips. The goats of hell were number-masters so she also hunted them. And the combinations between time and numbers caused language to grow, all to lead them further astray in their cages like bow-nets. The oxes of hell were language-masters. For a baker there was a lot to do. She was a mistress of illusion. She knew that time, numbers and letters were just strange diseases. She had her own jewels to let them rise.

The Mark of Evil

1. Tamar woke up in her dungeon. It was a hard night where nightmares tortured her mind, and now she woke up to this black snake who held her in prison for such a long time. The arms of self-pity were almost strangling her, when she was there, chained to the wall, and her inner screams seemed to burn her from inside out.

2. 'Come on, black dove, not so sad,' the black snake whispered. 'I know this is what you want, for you gave it to so many, and what you give out is always your desire to get, isn't that so right ? Well, I have a surprise for you : It will only get worse.'
2. Tamar was cursing, as the black snake was tightening her chains. She almost couldn't feel her blood flow anymore. 'You know why I am here, black snake,' she blasted. 'I will find my way in this dungeon of yours, I will take your sword and slay you.'
3. 'Hey, not so fast,' the black snake said. 'I know you like this party.' Then from all sides strange animals came to bite her and eat from her flesh. There was nothing she could do, but she had asked for it in the evil night, in which she sold herself to get the power to rule the underworld. She wanted to rule hell, and it's world beyond called the place of Evil. She didn't know that the sword she asked for would lead her to such a place, but it was certainly the price she had to pay for bearing such a power. She now knew she would only have to defeat this black snake who had kidnapped her, and to take it's sword, so that she would come into balance again.
4. 'Oh, evil morning,' a witch was screaming in the distance. 'I wake up after a thousand years, and see what I get on my plate, brought to me by my faithful and lovely black snake. I once killed my own raven for it to get such a precious being. Girl, I know you have the power to rule hell and all it's places beyond. You are wearing the seal of delirium, and I will wait here until I have sifted all your powers out of your chest, as young women only deserve to die, and not bearing such forces. You have brought others down to get where you are now, but look and see you are in a dungeon, as that is the price of all your powers.'
5. She came closer to Tamar, and Tamar got pale. 'Oh, you're a beautiful black woman, caught by a black snake, my snake. Did you really think your trip would lead you to nowhere ? This is something. I am somebody, and I will show you in a few. I know exactly what to do to take your powers and how to destroy you. Don't worry, my child, don't worry.'
6. There was nothing Tamar could do. She knew she had to pay the price, and she was persisted to get the sword of the black snake, and maybe even the treasures of this old witch. This woman seemed to be the evil goddess of all elephants, and she held the treasure of all gravity in hell in her hand, a treasure by which she could cause doom and hopeless feelings everywhere.
7. Tamar prayed inside, something she only did when she had to. She didn't know how to deal with this situation. Her walls were sinking lower and lower in hell, even beyond the backgates, into a place called Evil. A raven was staring at her. She had never seen such a styled bird, and he was so big. 'Woman, I will have some mercy on you, as my master replaced me without mercy. I know this place like my own body, so I can guide you in it, and lead you to it's backdoors.'
8. 'Offer accepted,' Tamar whispered. 'Get me out of here. This woman is insane.'
9. The raven smiled and looked at her with an undescrivable stare, while it moved it's head. 'No worries, my dear. No worries.' By it's beak he cut the chains of Tamar, and soon she was sitting on it's back. He knew the way out of this dark place.

10. 'Wonder why this is going so easy,' the witch screamed. 'You both will have nothing to say anymore when your trip will end. Every escape here will lead you deeper into my ovens.'
11. 'We won't be a piece of your meat anymore, witch,' the raven shouted, while a fierce tall flame came out of its beak to devour the witch and her black snake. 'Where have you been, dear raven, and why such powers?' the witch screamed.
12. The raven took the treasure of the elephant in its beak, while sealed doors seemed to open up. 'Hell will swallow you deeper,' the black snake roared.
13. Tamar took the bird tight by its neck so that she wouldn't fall. She took notice that the bird wore a necklace around its neck to which a stone had been attached which looked like an eye. 'It's the eye of the raven, woman,' the raven spoke. 'It's an amulet given to me when I made my journey through the underworld, and it brought me back. They spoke to me about a woman I had to give it to. Now take it, it is yours.'
14. Tamar took the amulet and attached it around her neck. It brought her immense powers to see, which was merely the power to consume. It was like the invisible flame. 'These eyes are merely the transformers and creators of these worlds beyond hell, and they are the powerswords of the gladiators here,' the raven said.
15. 'Oh, I knew the eyes aren't to observe, but to dominate. It brings the mark of the slave,' Tamar said.
16. And by the eye of the raven Tamar raised her slaves and gladiators, for she was still in a war, an everlasting war. There were so many powers who wanted to possess her, and one would be even worse than the other. She knew she had to dominate her own skull, and she could only do that by dominating the skulls around her. In this the raven was her understanding friend.
17. It was in these ages Tamar could raise the invisible fire to its heights, and she loved this fire. She bore the eye of evil now, a strange song in the middle of her chest. The invisible fire was moving along the tight rules of this song, which always seemed to be the same. It was the song of freedom she bore in her heart, a song she could sing all day long, and in the nights she whispered it.
18. The raven and the song brought her to Hasor, one of the major cities in the place of Evil. Here the spirits were like blankets and clothes, and they all seemed to have their place in the citywalls. She loved this place as it resonated with her heart. The raven knew this place as the place of its rebirth. Here the raven could shapeshift into a man. It wasn't strange for Tamar to watch her friend being a man now. She knew about these things. Together they walked on a market in the depths of Hasor. There were many slave-markets here, cattle-markets, and most of all gladiator-markets and weapon-markets. They treated her like she was a queen now she had the eye of the raven around her neck. They feared her for they knew she was bearing the invisible fire. Ratun and Irank were two men selling wild hunterdogs on the market. These hunterdogs were white and hairy with strange diamondlike spots on their bodies. These spots were hard and looked like jewels. Ratun and Irank wanted to buy her amulet, but when Tamar turned them down they said she could take some of the dogs as a gift. Tamar got about twenty dogs, and she knew she could use them, as the raven had said to her she needed to go to the royal house to slay its king if she wanted to dominate Hasor. It was a must for her to dominate Hasor or she would never be the ruler of Evil.

19. She had never seen such mean dogs, such slayers, so she could use them very well. It was like many around her expected her to slay the king, so this gave her strength. They knew she had come here for a mission. The king ran outside the royal house when she came closer and closer and lay himself at her feet. 'Spare us,' he said. 'We know we have done things wrong, but we tried our best.'
20. But Tamar knew he was a hypocrite. 'It seems you only listen to one side of the story, but okay, I will have mercy on you, when you and yours will work in the depths of Hasor's underground. I will free your slaves who worked there, and I will place them in your positions.'
21. 'Whatever you say, woman,' the king said, 'but have mercy on our souls.'
22. With her dogs and the raven she went into the royal house, called the slaves from the underground and gave them the positions of the upper class. The king and his aristocrats had to descend into the underground of Hasor to do heavy slavework for the rest of their lives. It was the day Tamar raised a dogthrone in Hasor, and she chose one of the best slaves to be the new king. The same day Tamar went with the raven and the twenty dogs to Chesbon, another major city of the place of Evil. Here the same happened, and soon Tamar became the new ruler of the place called Evil. These are her chronicles of her early days. The raven played a big part in settling her throne, and of course the mighty treasure of the elephant. Tamar was a ruler like no other. She was the darkest, but she bore an unknown light. Here, in the depths of this place of Evil she would lay her heart, here she would give them all a different mark, a mark above all marks, the mark of evil.

Army of Eagles

1. 'Why did we choose to see. We are so young. Why did we choose to be frozen in eternal sight ? We can't move. We are pillars in a temple of evil struck by fear. It's coming from the arc where the eye of evil rests near. We are afraid of these lights, so why did we choose them ? We are hiding for these lights, so why do we invite them ? Aren't we all torn up inside, watching both sides of the night ?'
2. Tamar slayed herself a way through the stubborn Filistines to the desert throne of a ghost terrorizing the spheres of Evil for such a long time. He looked like a blanket, and Tamar could nothing but mock him, while she held her sword, the spiritslayer, against his throat. 'Do you wanna live, bastard ?' she said with an ironical tone. 'Do you wanna live ? Live in my sword forever.' And then she beheaded him while he slid into her sword for eternal slavery. He would be another spiritslayer living in her sword, only coming out on her command. It was good life for the ghosts in her sword. They had food in abundance and all the other pleasures of the place of evil. She cared for her ghosts like no one else did.
3. She slayed herself a path through the Amalekkites and the Moabites to do the same things to their ghostkings. She was the ruler of all evil, and they would all meet her sword, the spiritslayer, to live in it forever. It was another tale in a princess' headjewel of death. The princess loved to hear about how Tamar slayed the Hethites and what she did to their kings.

But it was all a story. Since the princess died she listened to nothing but stories, as the reality was too much for her. She didn't care the stories were evil, as she didn't know the difference between good and evil anymore. She had been betrayed by her own family who called themselves good. If that was good, then what was evil ? It got her confused, and she found her way on the barbarian path.

4. But one day Tamar really came to her. The princess was shocked. She didn't know if she had to laugh or cry, to be scared or to be open. Tamar stood there almost naked with some belts across her body. 'Wanna go with me, woman ?' Tamar asked, and reached her hand out. 'You repress so much of yourself. Offer yourself to the eternal paradox of extremes and get alive in hell. It is not what you think. Your family you trusted and who were like heaven to you since you were young appeared to be messengers of hell when you figured them out. But now I will show you what hell really is.'
5. The princess nodded. She took off her clothes to get some skins and belts to cover herself, and then she descended with Tamar into the depths of a vortex.
6. 'First we are going to get a sword for you, a spiritslayer,' Tamar said. 'Whoever you defeat will be a gladiator of your sword, a slave, but take care that you will treat them well. They will live in your sword in abundancy, and they come out on your command.'
7. 'Will they be rich then ?' the princess asked.
8. 'Oh yes,' Tamar said, 'very, very rich, you will bless them with all the goods of the place of evil.'
9. 'But I wish death and suffering on my enemies,' the princess said. 'I have a revengefull heart, like I want to pay them back, so don't you have another sword for me.'
10. 'No,' Tamar said. 'You must start with this one. You see, you can't be evil when you never learned how to be good.'
11. 'I will be good to the ones I love, my friends, and those in need, but not to those who did harm to me and others,' the princess said.
12. 'That's too easy, woman,' Tamar said. 'You must first learn to love your enemies, to bless them, to help them, to save them, or everything will be without any value.'
13. The princess bowed her head. This was too much to ask from her.
14. Then Tamar showed her a needle, and said : 'If you want to go to that place called Evil and to rule it all together with me, then you first need to go through the eye of the needle. When you don't get yourself through this hole, the needle will finally get you.'
15. The princess spat on the ground, took the needle and tried to break it, but she couldn't. And slowly the needle started to turn itself against her.
16. Tamar wasn't disappointed. She knew the royal ones, who weren't useful for anything. It wasn't the first one she saw spiralling away in captivity of the needle. This pin could only be handled when going through it's eye. It was the pin of evil bringing all those down who would be too good, too holy and too beautiful for the place of evil.

17. The stench of the place of Evil was unworthy in the eyes of those driven by perfumes. They always said horses smell bad, pigs too untasty, and dogs too wild. And thus Tamar was a savage on a lonely path, as even the savages were often too royal and too civilized.
18. One day she came in a fight against a Roman giant. It was such a horrible fight and it took such a long time that they had to make a compromise, and they became lovers. It was like this love was the price of war, and just a war undercover, and it didn't feel right. And thus it came to another fight one day, and she could finally slay him. Still she loved him, as the price of their encounter, and she visited him in the realms of death. It was here she could finally have some true sort of friendship. He begged her if she wanted to take him up to hell and the place of evil again, and she gave him the needle. Would he come through the eye of this needle, or would the needle bring him down? He had a horrible fight against the pin of evil, in which she finally left him alone. The pin brought him to life in the good world, where he became king. It was there Tamar finally lost his love for him, and she got relieved, but she still felt the pain. It was like a red trace in her head, like a vein.
19. She also had such an experience with a Greek giant, and she knew that only in the depths of the place of evil she could heal. One day from the depths a new pin started to show up, sharper than ever and with the smallest eye. It was a fight for her to get herself through the eye, or the pin would drag her all the way down to the good world. And it would be a hard fall, for she was high on the rock now. Finally she survived, but the pin had wounded her very much. In the unknown depths of the place of Evil she saw more Roman and Greek giants, but this time she didn't dare to fight them, as she knew where it could lead to. These giants could take their spines out of their backs to use them like swords. But when the pin returned to her, she knew that it would help her. She went to the giants, and gave them the pin. Not long after that they were all slain by the evil pin. Because she had overcome the pin she could mold it in her hand. Sometimes it was like a thin snake-jewel around her arm, or around her head, and it could also turn into a feather. She loved to wear it in her hair, as it made her dreadfull. She could come deeper and deeper in the depths of the place of Evil by it. It dragged her to the sources of the invisible blood from which she drank, while visible blood started to cover her body. By the invisible forces she could make things visible again, and it became the secret of her creative powers. Often she encountered groups of giants, which she gave the pin. No one seemed to survive the pin, but one day there was a giant called Ruben who could get through the eye of the pin. Ruben told her that he invented the pin and that he had sent it to her to take her to him. The giant told her that there were many of these sorts of pins, and that they had the mission to turn them into predators. Only the predators who could dominate the pins by getting through their eyes would survive. The rest would go down under to become the captives of the pins. The pins would lead them to the good world which was merely a breeding.
20. Ruben told Tamar also that one could only become a predator in the sources of the invisible forces, where the pins would lead the survivors to. 'Real giants know what it is to be small and even to be little dwarves. And those who are visible know what it is to be really invisible,' Ruben always said. And these were wise words to Tamar. Ruben told her also about his sons who were even bigger than him. All these giants could also take their spines out of their backs to use these as their swords. Pallu had the tallest and largest spine, and he even used it as a spear. Ruben told that he was really a pinmaster. One night Tamar had a lot of nightmares about the pins. She was exhausted when she awoke. She saw Ruben before her, who had taken his spine out, and he was putting it in his throat. 'You must master sleep,' he said to Tamar. 'You must take it out of your body and use it like your sword, and you must put it in your throat and then take it out again, like your spine.' Then he taught her how she could take her spine out of her back and use it just like him. He could also take certain bones out of his leg to use them like weapons. Ruben taught her that her body was pure armory. She needed to learn how to use it.

21. The night after she had nightmares again and this time she really had to wrestle against the pins. She first needed to accept their ways so that they would swallow her inside, as going through their eyes, and thus she could get them in her hands. Ruben taught her that sword and pins would first be her stakes, and later her weapons. She needed to accept suffering. She needed to be an ascet-warrior. It was not a simple way to victory. Ruben told her that she could only ride a beast after it had swallowed and digested her. This was like going through the eyes of the needle. And she discovered that some needles had many eyes, but when she finally got through, it would be the keys in her hand. It was all to open the Book of Evil, the book of so many locks. If she could set it's spirits free, it's invisible spirits, everything, yes, everything would get in line again.
22. These were rough nights, nights in which she thought she would lose everything, everything she had built herself on. Until she felt the soft and wet hairy walls of evil in her mind telling her all she needed to know. These were the pillars of a new world, the voices of the unknown finding their ways to the hearts where they could live forever. These voices were the invisible, yet so vibrant, full of potential, full of direction bearing the program of creation, for in a flash they would be visible, like evil red marble, and in a flash they would live forever. She had found the jewels of evil below her feet, and she could stare through the eyes she went through. She was a rider of the beasts now, a yielder of the swords, as they first rode on her and pierced her deep by their teeth. She now understood this cruel paradox, like a flaming wheel in the night, why without this there wouldn't be any life in eternity.
23. And also these wheels of paradoxal understanding had to be broken, their flames to be taken away, to make room for the invisible fires leading her to the greater wheels. She found the perfect car of evil after all these nights, which was merely a slayer. There was nothing she could do about it. Only the slayer would bring life, while it tore the present realities apart. Only the slayer would bring her to the depths of potential to the awakening of mental explosions. She didn't want to live her life in jokes anymore. She wanted to open this Book of Evil, the world beyond everything. She wanted to take it's mask off and read, read, until she would reach eternal life. Only the Slayer would be able to read this book, and she was willing to let it flow all through her, through all the barricades and blocks, through all the stones and dikes. She wanted to be the watcher on the walls, to bring all these walls down. She knew it would only happen under the weight of the opened Book of Evil. All these letters were the pins she had to deal with. It would swallow her first, and then she would rise in it, and ride it like a car. It was an arable land, not a battlefield, in which she had to sow herself and nestle herself.
24. In the depths of Evil she would finally find the meaning of all this and come to a rebirth. In this she was nothing but a grape under the feet of evil, waiting to be drunk and to come alive in somebody. First she needed to come into someone, and then she could be someone. The Feet of Evil rested heavy on her until she would be one with the invisible forces streaming through the land. It was a land she didn't know much about, but the giants were more than willing to tell her. They had waited for her for so long. Not in a womb was her place of rebirth this time, but there where the Feet of Evil would tread her. So many pins seemed to pierce her, but it would be the only way to open the Book of Evil deep inside her heart. As long as it would stay locked it would be a tyrant to her.

25. The pins stung deep in her brain, but she knew it was the only way. It opened her up to the invisible forces inside. Her body wanted to connect to her brains, but her brains were locked up. They had to break it open, and they used the pins for that. So many giants she met who were making the pins. And they could only do that because they first dominated them in their minds. They went through the smallest gates, through the longest journeys under the Feet of Evil. They had spent their time to figure it all out. They taught her how to be a pinmaker herself, and how these pins would serve her as her armor. She became a pinmaster, and soon they led her to a place called invisible jewel. Here many other women like her were, and they all had gracious manners. She didn't know such dignity could exist. This place was truly like an invisible jewel. But soon she came to the understanding that these women all had secret pins, and soon it turned out into a fight. There was nothing Tamar could do against those pins. These pins were decorated like the most beautiful ornaments from all sorts of jewels, and soon she gave up all hope and sunk into despair. It struck her like nothing else, but then she remembered the paradox of the pin. She first needed to go through the eye of it. 'If you want to sacrifice me, then sacrifice me,' Tamar spoke to the women. They tied her, and brought her to a temple-like atmosphere below their realms, and it was like a garden. They tied her to a stake, and said: 'We as women of the invisible jewel have all been initiated like this. If you want to be one of us: face the pins.' And then they skinned her and ate from her like cannibals. Tamar was almost a skeleton now, but she remembered she could use all her bones like weapons. What was it she needed to do? She knew she first had to be swallowed. A fire from above came to devour her, and she started to burn, while the fire stayed and became invisible. New skin started to grow on her, and she looked more and more like the women of the invisible jewel. 'Are you my friends or my enemies?' Tamar asked.
26. 'That's what you decide,' the women said. 'But we know that it all works by the paradox. You can't be our friend if you can't be our enemy. But you must always be the best.'
27. 'Well, I do my best,' Tamar said. She seemed to get a high position now under the women, and soon she was their ruler. She was a pinmaster now, and a damned good one. She got an own horse now, and the women said that the horse was made of all the pins she had survived and defeated by going through their eyes.
28. But the more she stayed in this realm of the invisible jewel the more she discovered about its nature. She found out that these women could change into pins themselves. She saw how the women lured giants to their places, and whenever such a giant was in their private domains they would lock the doors and turned into pins to take whatever they wanted. They would even move across the borders of the place of evil, hell and even death to do such things, and they deceived many from the good world. They would also go across the borders of heaven to deceive angels and spirits, and those ghosts who called themselves 'god'. To them it was a good hunt, so that they could build their spiritwalls. They wanted to build their own heavens, and they wanted to test anyone to see if they would be worthy to live with them.

29. To Tamar love was already a strange thing, a strange war, as it always seemed to show up where the fight became too painful or exhausting. War and love were like the tides of evil, in a very complicated way. Tamar didn't want to play with these powers like the women of the invisible jewel did, but she wanted to open the Book of Love to know what it is all about, and what would be the rules. So this time it would be a war against the women themselves, and not just against their pins. They were pins themselves, and Tamar knew she had to get them there where they would be completely without weapons, without armory, so that they would show her how they were a weapon themselves. It was like they accepted from Tamar that she didn't do the things they did, because she was their new ruler. It was quite normal to them that she was different, and they trusted her. They would be in her surroundings almost naked without any weapons as helpless lambs. Tamar finally used this situation, and one by one she got them shapeshifting into the pins they were. She could break them down to the bottom, as she could throw her threads through their eyes to bind them tight. It was by this she found out about the mysteries how to turn into a pin. Tamar became the pin of evil and dominated all other pins, until she broke them down to the bottom. She sacrificed these deceivers of love to open the book. But it wasn't what Tamar expected. The Book of Love seemed to be merely a book of hunters, and it slowly brought her down. She didn't know about the price of opening such a book, and she became a paranoid creature. It made her very small, as she found out it was nothing more but a bunch of scorn. It got her so far that she wanted to destroy this Book of Love, before it would destroy her. By all its cruelty it was turning her into the worst predator existing, letting the shadows of fear fall on everything. She wished she would never have opened this book, but it was already too late. And she more and more became a prisoner of it. The words were possessing her, making her drunk, and its spirits filled her with an undescrivable hunger. It tore her apart, and turned her into the meanest pin to get what she wanted. Nothing mattered anymore but to quench this flame of hunger. It drove her wild and insane.
30. It was like the women of the invisible jewel were applauding in her head, like they were saying : 'You are now really one of us.' Of course : They had opened this book before, in the same way she did. There was no way back, as she slid in the deeper initiations of the place of the invisible jewels through this book. It was like the portal to its depth, a vortex sucking her deeper like never before. She got that paranoid stare in her eyes, full of self-deception and seduction, all to get it done. She needed to lead the sheep astray just to protect her heart against all those swindling forces, all those undercover wars. And if she would run away, it would only come closer, and there was nothing else she could be but to learn how to battle in the War of Love.
31. She was painting herself by deceiving colours, to be a chameleon in this dark night. She covered herself by the drinks making others drunk, so that they would sleep away, and she could escape. But how could she love her enemies ? It made her feel dirty, but the Book of Love had her in a tight grip, and whenever she tried to get away, the grip only got tighter, so she gave up. She was something she didn't want to be, but in a strange way it made her free, which was the grace of the paradox. She couldn't finally get a touch of who she really was, and she got the control over her life back step by step. She was now a high-heeled succubus, in a strange army. She had been bound all over by a strange light, coming from the Book of Love. She was a love-hunter now, and she knew that all women of the invisible jewel would go down like that. There was no other way.

32. The colours were making her drunk, and made others drunk, and she knew these were the colours of war. To buy such a drink was just the mark of the hunted, and to get drunk was the mark of the defeated, and the one getting this all done was the warmaster. And they were all both the victims and inflictors of this. There was no way in the middle. Only the extreme would lead them out. She was a pin herself now, a pin of evil, so what could she expect more ? She had been under the high heels of evil for so long, and now she had these high heels herself. It was the fastest way to get the blood flow, and to make them all drunk. She looked like a traffic light, but on one moment, and she didn't know how, she could lock the Book of Love again. She locked it like she never locked anything before. She saw someone hanging at a cross, while a large butterfly was flying around him. 'Who are you ?' Tamar asked. The man bowed his head and said : 'I'm the crucified one.' Tamar asked him if he needed any help. 'You have done this,' he said. 'You have crucified me, as I am the personification of the Book of Love. Open the book again to set me free.'
33. 'Never will I do that,' Tamar said, 'as if there is any evil, it is that. You have to live with it, as I'm not going to open it anymore. Do you know what suffering is ruling there within its papers. Love-slaves.'
34. 'You wanted to open the Book of Evil,' the man said. 'I am the first chapter, and you have defeated me, consumed me. Now read the second chapter, or the Book of Evil will turn itself against you.'
35. 'And who or what is the second chapter ?' Tamar asked.
36. 'You will only see if you set me free,' the man said.
37. 'Oh no, I won't,' Tamar said persistent. Then the man and the book started to fall apart, and so many butterflies and other winged creatures became free. A smile fell on Tamar's face and a great peace filled her like honey. 'You have set us free,' a voice deep inside spoke to her. 'We will be grateful to you for eternity.' Tamar still wondered what the second part of the Book of Evil would be, and she asked it some insects who seemed to stay close with her. 'The Book of Love was merely the frontportal of the Book of Evil. Come closer, and we will let you see, and let you in,' a voice spoke. But Tamar became very afraid, as what could she expect ? Another chapter leading her to destruction ? She didn't want to be bound again like that. 'Through the eye of the needle, is that what you really want ?' another voice asked her.
38. 'Who are you,' Tamar screamed. Then there was silence for awhile. A big butterfly started to show up before her with wings of fire. Tamar almost fainted. 'You need to run away, Tamar, as the pages will get you,' the butterfly said. Then it turned into another book, but Tamar couldn't read it. It was an unknown language. 'It will stay unknown,' the butterfly said, 'as I do not think you want to go through the eye of the needle.'
39. 'I have been through so many eyes of so many needles,' Tamar said. 'I'm like a needle myself now, like a high heeled boot, I'm the treader of evil. Through which eyes do you want me to go now ?'

40. 'Ho, ho, don't get so irritated,' the butterfly said. 'Do you desire it, or you won't get anything to know about it.'
41. 'I desire it,' Tamar said, 'I'm hungry for it, and I'm begging for it.'
42. Then the butterfly opened a door beyond her understanding. It was like cruel light was floating like a waterfall into her mind, burning it from inside out. It was a pin of fire standing before her all of a sudden, and then turning invisible. It was the Invisible Book standing before her. Then she fell into it, and she could only shriek and scream. Something was trying to strangle her, and she saw monkeys all around. It felt like an invisible snake around her. 'Step into the water,' someone said. But there was no water. 'These are the invisible pins,' another one said. It hurt more than everything else. It was like doors in her head were exploding, and rays of light were falling down on her. 'How can I read an invisible book?' she asked.
43. 'Don't ask too much,' they said. She felt like she was in a bakery becoming gingerbread, and like an invisible sweetness was staring at her. It was smelling so sweet, and she could almost see the smell. 'Watch the smells,' someone said, 'as these are the rays of the heart. The good world believes in the visible, as they are hypocrites, but the evil world is a world of smell, a dogworld. Do you know that a dog can smell forty to hundred times better than a usual soul? His smell is so advanced that he can even hear it, see it and feel it. That is the power of the invisible. Do you want it?'
44. 'Oh yes,' Tamar said, 'I know these are the pins of smell, and it's breaking me down, to build me up again. If I can trigger my other senses by smell, then that will be good.'
45. 'It is the best part of the book,' the butterfly said. 'It will let you enter the world of feeling. It will make you drunk, and it will make you high, it makes you fly. You will be a feather girl, for if you will defeat the pins of smell, they will turn into feathers, and you know how to defeat them right?'
46. 'Yes,' Tamar said, 'that is an old story. So you're making an indian of me, right? Well, I'm already an indian, but I know what you mean.'
47. And after Tamar had defeated the pins of smell and the whole Invisible Book she came to the Dog Throne, a strange hairy white throne with the strangest and rarest jewels like buttons. It was like glass was surrounding her heart, making her feel protected, safe, like no one could touch her anymore, like no one could find her anymore. It made her feel like she had soft feathers inside, giving her the feeling that she could fly. It was opening the world of feelings to her, a third part of the book, but also this part was very dangerous. She needed the dogs to survive here, and she was so glad that these dogs were the meanest of all dogs, as otherwise she would fall in other mean hands. The dogs were at her side, and since she had this dog throne she could dominate them all, all by throwing some pins in the air. She could make them wild by this, and she could even let them turn into wolves and other predators. She was now made of pins herself, all the pins she had overcome and survived, and she could ride her own body now, to control it, to possess it. All these pins she was were like her new weapons, her wild bones, and by these she ruled all the dogs to make them drunk and wild. They were the hunterdogs and they led her safely through the Book of Feelings, the third part of the Book of Evil.

48. The book finally hunted her down, and she got into a long fight with it. 'Open the fourth part of the book ?' Tamar screamed, as she felt herself drowning. I need to have some ground below my feet. But the Book of Evil was merciless. 'Drown in me, woman,' it whispered. Suddenly she got so much strength that she could tear the book apart, and birds seemed to come forward from it. 'There is no fourth part,' the book screamed. But the birds formed words in the sky, words of gratitude. 'Tamar,' one of the birds said, 'the fourth part is the part of letters to you. It will heal your heart, it will be your medicine in this dark, dark night.'
49. Suddenly Tamar woke up. She saw a chained book lying close to her. Clouds of delirium were surrounding it. She saw clouded arms grasping around them, and she suddenly jumped further away from the books, why she almost shrieked of paranoia. Never again would this book have a grip on her, never again. 'Go away,' she screamed. But it was like the arms now knew where she was, so slowly they started to move themselves and the book towards her like they were some sort of creeping and swimming on the sand. Suddenly she heard some shots. Behind her three gorillas stood. The book was sinking away in quicksand.
50. 'You are safe, my dear,' the gorillas said. 'You have come from a long journey through the book, and now you are here. We will never let you go. Protect yourself by all means, for everything around you is evil. The good is just a swindler, trying to chain your soul, and the best is just a hypocrite, a mask, for they are both nothing but the rogues of evil. Don't let anyone fool you ever again. 'Then what are you ?' Tamar asked. 'Then you must be the rogues of evil too.'
51. 'We all are,' the gorillas said, 'but we have a license to be evil. That's the difference.'
52. 'From who did you get that license ?' Tamar asked.
53. 'From the Dog Throne,' the gorillas said.
54. 'Well, I just came from the Dog Throne,' Tamar said.
55. 'Oh, but then you are licensed as well,' the gorillas said.
56. 'I think you are but a strange company,' Tamar said. 'I guess everything works by the paradox. As long as it is torn it will be safe.'
57. 'The splinters will get you,' the gorillas said. 'There's nothing above being licensed, or you need to puzzle your way through.'
58. 'Well, damn those puzzles, I'll take the license then,' Tamar said.
59. The Dog Throne brought her closer to her goal, the ultimate domination, and this all by a license. She would never get this by puzzling her way through, for sometimes you just had to stop all the puzzling or it would lead you further astray. Sometimes you just had to fly on the wings of the unknown, trying to make the best of it by a sort of license, like a license to fly. But more and more Tamar started to hate the license. She wanted the adventure, the danger, for all the safety gave her the feeling she was locked up, and it bored her. She wanted to break away from this Dog Throne holding her heart, for the glass splinters seemed to find her way deeper and deeper. For a part she had to live with this, but sometimes she chose just to fly back to hell again, or even to death and the good world. There was so much to do there, and what about discovering heaven ? Heaven was to her the greatest conspiracy of all hypocrites together. Sometimes she wished to be a good old woman of the invisible jewel again, and she found out she still could be. And although the Dog Throne called her back many times she felt some good safety in that, some pleasure. It was thrilling her and exciting her in a sense. It was not like the early days. She felt a good chain in her back like a red rope pulling her back when it got too much or too dangerous. It was the paradox who gave her pleasure and made her feel good and safe, and she could never choose one side of the story anymore, as that would lead her to destruction. She was a jewel of many sides now, and still so invisible, sometimes showing up with so many flashes, bringing such powerful hooks to tear all their worlds apart, as she was a monster sent out to devour and re-create, by a license and a wild escape.

60. She more and more became like a dogthrone, the ultimate license, so savage and wild. It was almost eating her heart now. It was awakening the invisible fires in her, such strong fires to devour worlds. Her heart was like a volcano now, with invisible eruptions. It was her stairs to the heights of the place of Evil, where she could breathe and think, where her mind was nothing but an eruption of her heart. She loved to dwell on these eruptions, to ride them and to float on them, and most of all : to be invisible with them. That was not so difficult for her, as she often went to the good world just to throw the sands of pins into the big eyes. She was the spreader of scary dust making them all blind and letting them all fall asleep. She was in a war against these eyes now, as they never went through the eyes of the needle. They were just bragging. So she thought it was time for them to have an encounter with the pins. These eyes had created all things, and they were like the agents of heaven. These big eyes of heaven she hated more than anything, but they couldn't escape the teeth of the dogthrone. There were an invisible world and an invisible sword waiting to break through, and through the big eyes of heaven they would do that. These big eyes were the swords of heaven, where all its gladiators got their fire from. In cold rage Tamar got there to slay these eyes who were just in drunkenness and sleep because of the sands of pins. It was easy for her to slay them now in the armor of her own drunkenness. She was sleepdrunk now, and that was her protection against this machine. She called forth the invisible ice to quench the fires of these eyes, and lightning started to break these eyes down. But there were so many splinters now, like high shrieking predators of the wildest forms. It was breaking her head, as she had challenged the worst powers of nature. This wasn't evil anymore, and neither the worse. This was the worst thing which could happen to her. These were the powers who could laugh when they would see the forces of evil march. They would mock them, and scream at them, while the forces of evil would tremble before their thrones. This was the worst. And it was the worst strike in Tamar's head she ever had. It made her sick. She fell down, and she was in fear. Did she challenge eternity and all its unknown almightiness ? She couldn't think straight anymore, like she had challenged a throne higher than her dogthrone, but nothing was less true. The dogthrone started to bark like all thunder combined, and struck heaven's throne of eyes in a flash. The eyes started to melt, and got confused, and angelic watchers started to fall down to get devoured in a flash. It was dinnertime for the dogthrone now, and Tamar felt her blood flowing again. Stench was now taking over, by the brightest lightning blinding them all. Stench was now like a sword in Tamar's hand, and she yielded it against the last flashes of heaven's throne of eyes. Suddenly there were eruptions in the throne, and lava came forward. One big eye came forward from the melted throne of eyes, and started to scream. Without any hesitation Tamar pierced the Sword of Stench through it.

61. Then many many small eyes seemed to come forward from the big eye. What then happened Tamar couldn't recall, but the dogthrone took complete possession. She woke up in the arms of a dogman. There was no heaven anymore, and even hell had been faded away because of the explosions. There was now only the place of evil, while the world of the dead and the world of the good were two candles in front of the dogthrone. The dogman caressed her and comforted her. 'It's over, Tamar, we have won,' he said.
62. Tamar slid away again in a big sleep. So many slaves of heaven and hell could escape with her now in this big sleep, as the dogthrone was taking possession more and more. It was a new drunkenness coming to the world of the death and the world of the good now, and the pins settled themselves in the eyes of these worlds like flashes. The dogman took his woman and carried her to a cave where he lay her down on a place of skins. Tamar was drunk now, as everything seemed to stream from the place of evil. She felt some hands on her which seemed to wake her up. She saw the women of the invisible jewel standing around her. The dogman was holding her hand. 'Now you are truly one of us,' one of the women said. She was bearing a strange shield with a face on it. She knew this face, but she couldn't remember. 'The one of heaven has fallen,' the woman said. 'Its face is frozen now, and its eye pierced. He cannot harm us anymore.'
63. 'Does civilization have smell?' another woman said. 'No, only the rose, and it will create our world. You have defeated its thorns and the stings of its bees.'
64. 'Smell has a much higher fire to consume than the eye, and it is an invisible fire to heal your heart. Nothing else can heal you like this,' a third woman said softly.
65. 'Smell has its own eye,' a fourth woman said, almost whispering, 'it looks like a nipple from which the milk of evil flows, our world. Don't hesitate to drink from it.' Then she laid her hand on Tamar's chest while it started to burn like a sun, and a huge third nipple appeared. 'This is the mark of all the higher women of the invisible jewel, a mark which is called the Eye of Smell. Transform and re-create our world by it into its finest forms. You can do it, as you are the chosen one. We went through everything you went through, and that made us one. Now rise up on your feet, and you will fly alone now, sweetie. We all have to find our own ways.'
66. Then the women disappeared, leaving the shield with the face to Tamar. The dogman was still holding her hand. 'I cannot rise up now, as I am tired,' Tamar said.
67. 'Take rest,' the dogman said, and left also. The Eye of Smell was burning on her chest. It was a new form of sight, only by smell, and only registering smell, and triggering it. It was a higher fire, invisible, but producing flashes. It was like everything had been faded away. She felt like she was blind and deaf, like there were only sounds in the distance. It was the Dog Throne coming closer. When it came closer Tamar could see her own heart, and new joy started to spread itself around her. 'I can see, I can see,' she was almost shouting. Everything was brighter since the Eye of Smell had struck her, and the sounds were higher and lower, much softer, but louder, like she had been wrapped by it. But then everything was fading away again. Until the Eye of Smell struck again, and she felt like she was a rose, an evil rose, like she had eyes all around her.
68. She stood up, with a strange stare, rose her sword, and went out of the cave. There was a new sun like a giant nipple, like the Eye of Smell, and milk was floating down like a waterfall, like veils. It was like she could climb in these veils to come to it's sources. So many roses were growing around her, roses with feathers, and when they had been grown up, they flew away to the new sun in the sky. Also in those feathers were the eyes of smell. There was still an invisible fire streaming, and it seemed to stream from the roses also, making everything so bright. It was like everything had been touched by something. Tamar could see the arms of the invisible fire, like ghosts. Tamar remembered how the key of smell could open the world of feelings. And that was what she felt. It was like another sun came out of the sun and floated down to soar above the fields. It was the Eye of Feeling, spreading so much peace and rest, so much silence. Tamar tried to grasp it, and it fell on her, it pushed her down in the grass below her. It empowered her like nothing else. It was such a devouring fire that she could only see passion. It was like she could jump out of her body to throw her skin away, and to be renewed by fire. She was fire now, the fire of feeling. She could watch by feeling now, seeing feeling all around her, and triggering it. It was like the fields were all exploding, and so many small eyes spread themselves on her forming a new skin and armory. She was almost naked, dressed by some belts and skins. She had a hairy shield, and heavenly jewelry seemed to fall upon her. This evil paradise was her heaven now, and she would be it's princess. In drunkenness she crept to her Dog Throne, and lay herself on it, while she almost fell asleep again. It was raining sunrays now, and she started to cry, no tears but sunrays.

69. The second sun was almost luring her to step into it, and that was which she finally did. It brought her to the other sun. There were flashes everywhere, and the sun started to speak. She gave birth to many children, who were all carrying the eye of smell and the eye of feeling like precious jewels. The children fell down from the suns into the veils, and rolled towards the fields below them, where the roses were waiting for them. Tamar sat on her Dog Throne, smiling from the sun, and she remembered that the feelings would bring the letters. They were rising from the fields to the sun like roses, and they finally reached her heart. She could read them, but most of all she could smell them and feel them.

70. It was in these days the Dog Throne started to fade away more and more, and she became a Dog Throne herself. She was the Angel of Wrath, a Dog Machine, after all these adventures she had. They had led her through all the cocoons, and now she had become them. She had striking wings now, yielding the winds of Evil like a new heaven. Here she throned as the princess of heaven, and here she was the throne, like the arc of evil who had possessed it. There were no wings like her wings, as she could strike like an army of eagles. She knew where she was coming from, and where she was going to. Whenever she spoke she almost blasted, and whenever she raised her voice she was almost barking. She was an army of dogs, and she knew where it was coming from. She had a history which couldn't be denied. She had fought for this license, and she had fought against it, but it had possessed her merciless.

71. If she could chose where she would set her feet on, she would set one foot on the world of the dead and one foot on the world of the good. And this was which she finally did. She was now the Angel standing Tall.

72. In a world of Feelings and Smell she dwelled, the place of Evil, where she had uncovered it's depths, and she had pushed her legs deep. She had so much invisible sweetness, and the women of the invisible jewel were proud of her. She was one of them, more than ever, as she had proved it. She worshipped the Eyes of Smell, and all those who carried it were welcome in her mighty kingdom. She let them dwell on the wings of heaven, and on it's clouds. She let them swim in the surroundings of it's islands, and she gave them the wealths of it's feelings. Also the Eye of Feeling she worshipped, like the womb of all Evil. It made those who carried these eyes so beautiful. She would paint the ones carrying these eyes by her colours of war, as there was still a mighty war. It was the war of evolution, a primeval scream.

73. One day a third sun was coming into their atmosphere. It was the eye of Evil. It was a strange power of love, a scary power. It was the bringer of fear. Now it was okay to love again no one dared to, but very thin streams of love started to fill and touch the fragile heads of those in the surroundings of the Dog Throne. It was a careful love like a temple. No one dared to touch it, and they were running away from it. But there was no escape. The threads of fear were binding them, until real panic struck them. It made them more paranoid than they were, and it even made them autistic. It was the strike of fear, and it opened an eternal sight, something which they feared like nothing else.

74. 'Why did we choose to see. We are so young. Why did we choose to be frozen in eternal sight ? We can't move. We are pillars in a temple of evil struck by fear. It's coming from the arc where the eye of evil rests near. We are afraid of these lights, so why did we choose them ? We are hiding for these lights, so why do we invite them ? Aren't we all torn up inside, watching both sides of the night ?'

20.

1. Your wounds contain poison to paralyze the enemy. Come to the arsenal of Mother God. She is the jungle.
2. Let Her show you how to win the eternal battle. First you must lose the battle from Her.
3. If you are not Her captive, you will never win.
4. Be glad when She has struck you down, for it is to raise you in a higher battle.
5. She will teach you to pray, fight and hunt.
6. Her loin cloth is for priesthood. It represents Her pillars. The Pillar of Knowledge is close to the Pillar of Children. Vur is hunting in the night, to take the children to knowledge.
7. Vur takes the children in the night, and leads them through the wilderness.
8. Vur is here. Mother has sent her, to initiate.
9. She drags them to the temple, for the eternal battle.
10. Yes, she drags them to the arena, to find the fruit.
11. The fruit makes them hunt.

21.

1. Vur shows them the fruits of eternal life. She shows them the fruit and the milk of the eternal hunt.

2. Vur leads them to the Pillar of Longsuffering. Close to it are the milk falls, where the Pillar of Emptiness is.
3. Here the white beast of hyperactivity was caught.
4. Talkativity is a sin. Only those who have found the Pillar of Emptiness will find Vur.
5. Here Vur will reveal herself.
6. She will drown you in the pools of milk, to find emptiness.
7. Her heaven is behind the Pillar of Emptiness, the devouring beast. She thrones in Ham.
8. No one can enter except those who have been devoured by her beast. She guards the Pillar of the Children.
9. And all children will be led to the Pillar of Longsuffering.
10. Here they receive the Holy Tear.

22.

1. They are washed in the milk of Mother God and the blood of the enemy.
2. To Her pillars they are bound.

The Book Of Wrath

1.

1. She is the red sun turning black. She is the Mother God, She reigns. She sits high in her temple, on the mountain of Sharak in Turio. In Lobo she has her ships of war and hunt.
2. She brings her enemies down and nails them at stakes. She is the Mother God.
3. High on her mountain she thrones. She sits in Tarak, and counts the fallen soldiers. On beasts she rides.
4. She brings her enemies down and buries them. On their blood she builds a new empire. Even the righteous she strikes down, for they have all sinned.
5. She burdens them with guilt. And there is no one taking their guilt away.
6. They deserve everlasting damnation in which She leads them to Her honey. Yes, everlasting damnation is one of her graces.
7. Those who do not have it will die, and they will be forgotten.
8. She initiates her disciples in Hell. Her prophets will not be spared. Her priests are tormented by Her. She is a God of Wrath.

9. They will flee to Her daughter, but Her daughter is Wrath too.
- 10.They torment the saints, taking their hopes away, until they are totally dependent on the Mother God.
- 11.When they speak they have Her Words on their lips. She is a volcano in her power, and her caves are many. She comes to the surface to slay. She fights the male tribes and their gods. She mocks them. A God of War she is. In Her great Wrath she brought forth children.
- 12.She didn't spare any of them. She raised them for war. Like a stone she throws the father god into the sea. Can the heads of her children be delivered from him ? She pierces him by spears, and turns him into an ox. His sons she turns into pigs. Yes, her arrows are pure poison.
- 13.She brings them down at young age. Her children don't say anything.
- 14.She captures the children of the father god, to save them out of his hands. She paints them for war.

The Lost Women of Tergate

1. As Golem entered the fields he found after a long trip through the wilderness, he saw women riding on horses in the distance.
2. It looked like they were hunting or something, but Golem wasn't sure.
3. The women of this land were strange, not like other women Golem met in other districts.
4. They were still in the distance, but Golem could already see that they were different.
5. He took his bow and an arrow, while some of the women had already taken notice of him, and came closer.
6. One stepped from her horse and decided to walk towards him.
7. The woman didn't talk, and she looked like she was far away in herself.
8. In the distance some women were screaming.
9. They had caught a young deer, and tried to kill it.
- 10.Golem aimed his arrow at one of the women and shot her from her horse.
- 11.The other women started to get in rage towards Golem, but Golem just didn't like to watch hunters.
- 12.Suddenly strong arms took him from behind, and pushed him to the ground.
- 13.Another one kicked him a few times hard in the head, and soon Golem lost consciousness.
- 14.When he woke up, he had been tied to a stake.
- 15.A few dark eyes watched him tight, and then she spat him in the face.
- 16.She was rubbing with her hand over his body, and then she put some mud on his body.
- 17.Another woman laid a knife against his throat.
- 18.The young deer lay somewhere close to him, bleeding to death.

19. Some of the women drank from its blood and had red mouths and faces by it.
20. Golem spat one of them in the face while she came close to him.
21. These women were lost, and probably damned by the usual life.
22. Who were they, and why were they living here like this. Had they been banned ?
23. An old woman came close to Golem. She was mocking him, and raising her hands making strange movements. 'You will die tonight, captive,' she said.
24. 'What if I will kill you all and burn your strange camp ?' Golem said as an option.
25. Then the old woman spat in his face, and left.
26. After that she came back with a knife, and soon Golem was bleeding all over.
27. Then suddenly a group of women came home from a hunt.
28. They had caught a bison, and soon they started to slay the bison for its meat and skin.
29. After awhile they forced Golem to eat from the meat.
30. Golem didn't want to eat, but then they hit him so hard on the head that he got dizzy, and in delirium he started to eat.
31. The women made a lot of noise, but Golem was far gone, he almost didn't hear them anymore.
32. One woman stood before him, and smeared bison-blood on him, while she also smeared it on herself.
33. Golem didn't know what kind of games they were playing, but he assumed that this was their tradition.
34. When it was evening they started to dance around his stake, raising their knives, axes and tomahawks.
35. Never before Golem heard such shrieks and yelling.
36. The moon appeared, and some of the women were bowing.
37. Golem had headaches.
38. Suddenly he heard a few shots, and some women close to him fell down.
39. A hunter with a beard came forward.
40. Weeping and screaming the other women ran away into the bushes.
41. The hunter untied Golem.
42. He told Golem that he lived close to the women-camp to keep an eye on them.
43. They feared him, thinking he is a sort of god, because of his gun.
44. They used to call him the thunderman. The hunter took Golem to his home, and said he was lucky, as the women wouldn't have any mercy to him.
45. Golem asked the man why they couldn't root them out, as they were dangerous in his eyes.

46. But the hunter said that the women were sick.

47. They had been banned out of their tribes because of mental diseases, and they formed their own tribe.

48. They are bitter towards all living beings because of what their tribes did to them.

49. Most of the time they first had to live in rejection, mocked by others day in day out.

50. Even when they wouldn't be mentally disturbed in the beginning, they would become it later because of the scorn.

51. Now most of them had to suffer times of abuse before they finally got banned, and that's why they are full of hate now, and very bloodthirsty and full of cruel tricks.

52. Usually no one survives falling in the hands of these lost women.

53. Golem could still feel the hate breath in his neck.

54. He wished he could help the women.

55. But the hunter told him to give it up.

56. These women had been wounded too deep.

57. They would never change.

58. All they wanted was revenge, to destroy all life around them.

59. One night Golem returned to the camp. He crept in one of the tents where a woman slept. He crept under the skin she was sleeping under and began to warm her. The woman embraced him, and whispered : 'Who are you ?'

60. 'That doesn't matter,' Golem whispered, 'I just want you to know that you aren't rejected by me.'

61. But suddenly the woman kicked him away from her very hard.

62. Golem became dizzy by the strike.

63. It wasn't such a good idea to help the women like this.

64. The woman started to scream, and Golem had to leave the camp very quickly or they would hunt him down.

65. The day after he told the hunter what he had done.

66. The hunter rebuked him, and warned him that if he would do something like that again, it would be his death.

67. But the next night he went to the camp again, and now he went into another tent.

68. There were two women lying there, and again he crept under the skin they were sleeping under, but this time he didn't do anything.

69. He just had to take care that he wouldn't fall asleep.

70. Suddenly he felt an arm of one of the women.

71. The arm was very warm, and Golem enjoyed it, but at the same time he became afraid.

72. After awhile the woman took her arm back, and Golem could breathe again.
73. Slowly he went out of the tent, and left the camp.
74. The night after he went again, and this time he took also another tent.
75. Here many women were sleeping. It was a bigger tent than the others.
76. He could feel the atmosphere of hate threatening in this tent, although they didn't know he was in.
77. He lay down between two women and soon they were rolling over to him.
78. It was like they felt the warmth, but they didn't know he was an intruder.
79. Golem knew he was in a dangerous position.
80. He felt their legs sliding over his legs, and their heads moved closer to his head.
81. Suddenly one of the women laid her head on his chest.
82. Golem's heart was beating fast.
83. After awhile the women rolled over to the other side, and slowly Golem crept out of the tent, to finally leave the camp again.
84. It was like they were getting used to his warmth and energy like this, but if they knew he wasn't one of them, they would probably kill him by their cruel ways.
85. The hunter explained about the rituals of these women, which was a long tradition helping them to deal with their past.
86. It was very cruel, but they didn't have another way to survive their trauma's.
87. The hunter told him that he could never become friends with them, as they hated others and themselves too much to enjoy something like that.
88. Golem knew that he could only come close to these women to let them enjoy his warmth when they were asleep, when they wouldn't be aware that he wasn't one of them.

3.

1. When we watch the Eurydicean paths into the underworld, all caused by a snake-bite, by a snake as her abductor, we can also see the parallels, the echoes, of it back in other cultures.
2. The things which happened to Eurydice, that she was taken away from her lover, that she was kept hidden in the underworld, made her more or less the Goddess of the Underworld, under Hecate, who can be seen as Her mother, the goddess of darkness, witches and sorcery, the Great Greek Goddess of Death.
3. Both are linked to Persephone and Proserpina (Roman Goddess of the Underworld). It is all to illustrate and illuminate the mechanism of Hell and Death.
4. These two powers are not just negative and evil. They should be put in their right frame. Even when we watch the christian greek roottexts of the Bible (the apocalypse, Revelation) the word for sulphur of hell, of the lake of fire, was not just for punishment, but also for healing. It had medical qualities, so even those who were in christian viewpoint 'doomed to hell' had a witness and advocate in the Greek Roottext of this damnation, meaning they would be healed.

5. This led to the more fair viewpoint that hell could be seen as a purgatory, a period to reach purity.
6. When we prick through the levels of orthodoxy we come to deeper truths, which might change our viewpoints again, or just refining it, as still all religious material is very useful, when you know the right code of it.
7. It is like a nuclear soul energy having much potential to lead you through, and the magic is in the combination with it's parallels, where we can find the keys of explanation.
8. In Iroquois myth we see Eurydice back as Onatha, the goddess of fertility and harvest, who was abducted to the Iroquois underworld, Hahgweh, by Hahgwehdaetgah, a demon god, who would live on the bottom of the abyss (underworld).
9. Onatha was the daughter of the earth goddess, Eithinoha.
10. In Aztec myth we see Eurydice back as Xochiquetzal, who was abducted to the underworld by the serpent god Tezcatlipoca.
11. It made them more or less goddesses of the underworld.
12. In Jewish myth we see Adam and Eve getting abducted to the underworld, the lower earth, by eating from a demonic fruit.
13. In Aztec myth this happened to Xochiquetzal, who took blossom from the sacred tree, a flower, and was taken to the underworld by Tezcatlipoca.
14. We do not have to watch this in negative frame, but in gnostic frame as a christic potential as these are the stages fertility goes through.
15. We are talking about universal harvest principles here, how things are organized, how they are working in nature and in and throughout the spirit worlds.
16. We have been shown the cycles of eternal life, but in this we need to find the center of it all.
17. Adam and Eve went through a lot of condemnation, as the scribes of the Jews often put them down as sinners, who had eaten from something which supposed to be forbidden.
18. Adam and Eve became a symbol of regret and guilt to parts of the Jewish community.
19. Anyway, in many ways we can compare them with Orpheus and Eurydice.
20. Behind the abductions there were gods of the underworld, and goddesses, having their own laws, often deeper and unknown.
21. Hades is the Greek god of the underworld, Pluto the roman form, connected to Februus and Orcus.
22. The Hopi indians know Maasaw as their god of the underworld, holding the tablets of law, and gifted with many christic characteristics.

23. There is also links to Moses, the guide through the wilderness, as a symbol of the underworld.

24. In Navaho myth the female substance has been subscribed as a black cloud,

25. representing darkness and the underworld,

26. and the male substance has been subscribed as a white cloud representing life and dawn.

27. The underworld is the holder of all knowledge,

28. and is the principle of fertility.

29. That is what the woman is,

30. bringing forth the man.

31. So all the present day male gods have been derived from deeper primeval and even pre-earthian and pre-paradisian female gods.

32. Maasaw can be seen as derived from the Aztec goddess of the underworld, Xochiquetzal.

33. Even when we see Adam as a deeper,

34. more perfect Christ,

35. because of his depth in dualism,

36. playing both parts of the game,

37. he still has to bow down to the Mother Goddess behind it all,

38. his lover,

39. his source,

40. and at the same time his potential enemy.

41. She has played the part of being his weapon,

42. but she also tempted him,

43. and co-assisted in leading him to the underworld,

44. which some described as his fall,

45. and even the fall of mankind.

46. Xochiquetzal was the mother of Quetzalquatl,

47. the Aztec Christ,

48. the feathered serpent,

49. who would return at the end of times.

50. She was also his lover at one point.

51. In gnostic writings we see not only Mary as the mother of Christ,

52. but also as his lover,

53.in the form of Mary of Magdalen.
54.Apparently in the underworld there are different sorts of laws,
55.and gnostics usually reflect on them.
56.There were the man is the enlightening principle,
57.the woman is the endarkening principle,
58.also taking a lot of knowledge away,
59.in order to bring new knowledge.
60.She is the transformer,
61.and she can be seen as the positive element of hell,
62.as a transformator.
63.The female should be seen as a dark riddle,
64.a cryptic substance,
65.and as essential for the man to return to his source and to gain eternal life.
66.In the upper world the male might rule as in an illusion,
67.but in the underworld it is the female who definitely rules as the Great Goddess.
68.And based on Navaho myth it is for the woman important to return back to her black cloud.
69.The fall to the underworld is an important returning theme.
70.We see this in the myth of Adam and Eve,
71.and even in the myth of Christ.
72.The difference between Christ and Adam was that for Adam there was no simple resurrection plan.
73.He had to stay in the underworld,
74.the lower earth.
75.From this viewpoint one can view the often bloody Old Testament of Jewish myth as a book about the underworld and not necessarily as a historic book or a book about material life.
76.Often the stories were derived from earlier cultures,
77.and these writings literally had to do with myth and the underworld.
78.From Iroquois perspective Adam and Eve entered Hahgweh, 79.the underworld where overwhelming fear, guilt, regret, despair and failure ruled,
80.because the demon god (Datga, Hahgwehdaetgah) had called them.
81.Onatha was in that sense their Eve,
82.and became more or less the Queen of the Underworld.

83. In this sense Christ has also visited this world,
84. but Adam stayed much longer,
85. together with Eve.
86. Further on David can be seen as a warrior defeating the enemies in the underworld,
87. and same counts for Moses.
88. They all have their native American parallels and sources where they have been derived from.
89. In Aztec myth the underworld was the womb of Xochiquetzal,
90. where Coatlicue,
91. the Aztec Mother Earth,
92. devoured everything which lived.
93. It was a drawing, calling force,
94. like the voice of Hecate,
95. for initiation in hell,
96. the original primeval place of transformation.
97. Hell-fire is in the Greek Root texts the same fire as the fire of the Holy Spirit,
98. and hell is a tool in Her hands to purify the saints.
99. It is something we all have to go through,
100. and in Ancient European myth Hell was the guide of the dead,
101. together with her dog.
102. This is why we have to search for mother Hell,
103. In that sense also the good go to hell,
104. to become even better,
105. and it is their reward,
106. so it should be viewed as an even more important and more beautiful place than heaven.
107. For Adam it was a reward when he slid into hell,
108. although it was entitled as his damnation.
109. It was an honor for him to enter Hahgweh,
110. the place beyond paradise,
111. although he sunk down in regret, guilt, and failure.
112. He had to cover himself as he felt ashamed,
113. and partly a miserable life was waiting for him,

114.but this was for his initiation in the deeper laws of existence,
115.the hidden ones.
116.This is why the aztecs worship the gods of duality,
117.and there is a world beyond myth.
118.It only has meaning as cryptic art,
119.as soul technology.
120.A woman became the cause of his fall,
121.in order to bow down for his source again,
122.which was not a man,
123.but a woman.
124.It is not fair to the spiritual world to just stick to the code and language, 125.the mythic etiquette,
126.of a certain world order,
127.of a certain government which took the victory once.
128.If we want to play the game fair,
129.we will have to go beyond it,
130.and find the path of syncretism and origins,
131.and in this finding the transcendental gnosis (hidden and higher knowledge beyond all things).
132.The greeks used also the word 'daimon' or 'daemon' for knowledge, 133.and demons were to them the personification of the gnosis,
134.as in intelligent,
135.divine beings.
136.The Old Testament of the Jews is a different mythic world than the later New Testament, 137.added by the Roman Catholics.
138.The Jews often do not recognize the New Testament because of the many differences, 139.so these are two worlds on their own.
140.In the Old Testament Lucifer,
141.the morning star,
142.has been thrown out of the Jewish heavens,
143.because of breaking Jewish law.
144.In the New Testament Iesous (Jesus),

145.also called the morning star,
146.falls out of heaven,
147.and comes in his crucifixion period under the Wrath of God,
148.as in a rejection by Jewish law,
149.both on earth and in the heavens.
150.This is why in depth Iesous is Lucifer, 151.and in the New Testamentic Texts it is also written that at one point Iesous turns into Satan and becomes Sin,
152.and by this he gains the victory which results in his resurrection,
153.and his acceptance by Roman Catholic law,
154.which is a form of neo-hebrewism,
155.having it's power by many pagan items put together,
156.by which the roman empire became big (semi-syncretism).
157.All this is saying that there has to be a fall,
158.there has to be a syncretism of some sort,
159.in order to resurrect and become the saviour of many.
160.Again we see the importance of the depths of dualism.
161.In Aztec Myth Tezcatlipoca can be compared with Lucifer.
162.Even more important in this context is the story of Adam and Eve,
163.as now this fall gets female qualities,
164.in order to bring us back to the Mother God,
165.the source of all fertility.
166.As we have seen she can be found in the underworld.
167.In the pre-paradisian Naka myths about the lower underworlds it is often about the Great Goddess of Hunt,
168.and her attributes are fear, guilt, scorn, strife, despair, hunger, failure, lies, regret and remorse.
169.In this she is the trickster goddess.
170.But this is nothing but the security for her kingdom as in the cryptic complexity of all things.
171.It is devoted to secure a tight path of initiations into Her existence.
172.In our descension we will find that in the higher underworlds it is much about snakes,
173.and in the lower underworld,

- 174.where the Great Mother thrones,
- 175.it is more about hyenas.
- 176.There are many rituals to get from snake energy to hyena energy.
- 177.The serpent is a mighty veil in the underworld where every shaman has to go through in order to awaken his deeper powers.
- 178.The mark of the great mother can only be received in great fear,
- 179.as fear is a mighty guide for the shaman to get into the deeper frequencies of the underworld.
- 180.Fear can also be seen as one of the legs of the divine (demon) hyena.
- 181.Fear is a hormonal drug to cause visions, and is a sense of security.
- 182.The other legs are guilt, remorse and sin.
- 183.This is all to keep the duality alive, the art, which is the energy of eternity.
- 184.You have to be in the claws of something to preserve yourself,
- 185.to be transformed and to reach a strength to reach eternity.
- 186.In this sense hell is the only path to eternity.
- 187.The heart of the hyena is hunger, and it's mouth is strife. Strife is also the root-meaning of the word daimon, as in 'divider', which is an essential force in organizing and analyzing, so in a sense a demon is a hyena's mouth. The neck or spine of the hyena is scorn, which is also an important christic element, as scorn is to expand syncretism. In this the parts of the hyena form the pillars of hell. Shamans who attempt to enter hell can get headaches because of these pressures, but they should understand that these headaches are actually tuning them into the frequencies of hell.
- 188.In the rituals, art, of becoming clean, it is very important to become 'unclean' first, all for the sake of syncretism. Uncleanliness was necessary to get rid of false gods, as in false cleaning systems, and it was important to plug into other frequencies, to get into contact with beings from another plane, as a form of getting information. In Aztec myth this duality was manifested through Tlazolteotl, who was a Justice Goddess who not only forgave sin, but also inspired sin. It is therefore of undescrivable importance also to become 'guilty' in our process of initiation. Tlazolteotl is the mother of Xochiquetzal.
- 189.There are several veils of guilt shamans and gnostics have to go through in order to reach places. This is standard, none of them can really escape from that, as it is a natural initiation process provided by the several goddesses of fertility. In this Tlazolteotl is not only the temptator and seducer to sin, but also the transformer and digester of sin, and is therefore an important trickster of law. She has complex ways to deal with sin, and even to give it a place in creation as a veil of security in her place. She is the goddess of sin and filth, but also the washer and the eater of it. In this she works together with her daughter.
- 190.She is holding a broom and a snake, the symbols of transformation, and in this sense also referring to Moses. She is this gigantic machine of the transformation of sin, by complex divine law of hunt and trickery, as she has her own ways to do this. In the Aztec month

Ochpanitzli she is celebrated as the Sweeper of the Roads, as a doorway in the underworld, which also refers to Moses. Moses, like her, held a snake, which was the symbol of the divine, and under this sign he led his tribe through the wilderness, and established law. Ochpanitzli was the announcer of the war season, and war was on one line with birth-giving. Tlazolteotl was also known for preparing warriors for battle in the underworld, where also war-captives were sacrificed to her. In her role as war-goddess and as the One with the Two Faces she can also be compared with David, the hebrew war-king, who was both a saint and a sinner, and by others regarded as a god.

191. Hercules had to serve Mycene in the twelve labors, as a slave to receive punishment for his sins. One of these tasks was that he had to steal the golden apples from the garden of the Hesperides. It shows another side of the myth of the garden of Eden. The apples could bring eternity, but also strife, as in a descending to the underworld. It worked the same as the hebrew tree of knowledge. For this Hercules had to approach the guard of this garden, which was Atlas, who carried the earth and the heavens on his shoulders, and also the underworlds. Hercules had to take over this job from Atlas in order to get the golden apples, as then Atlas would get them for him. By this Hercules got full possession of the apples. In the root texts of the hebrew creation story it is not just a tree, but a box, which can be compared with the box of Pandora, when opened it brought hell (transformation). The curse came free, but 'curse' is not necessarily negative, as also the god of war, Ares, means 'curse'.

192. It is a tool of clearing, security, and a faithful guide on the way, when used carefully and thoughtful, as a medicin. It is a given fact in life that venom, another meaning of the name Ares (ara), when used properly, it is to save lives. The root texts of the hebrew creation story showed that the tree of knowledge made of the first man a servant of the ground (Mother Earth), comparing it with a marriage. Even the garden of Eden itself, where life began, the word 'gan' means in depth a defended, fenced garden of a bride, protecting the source of fertility. The first man calls his wife there Chavvah, Mother of Beasts, Mother of Hunger and Mother of Lust, which is the drive of healthy, natural fertility, untamed and savage. The first man or tribe was described as the captive of a natural dirt, aphar, which also means swamp, as a captive of Tlazolteotl, the goddess of filth and justice. The act of taking is in the root texts also described as a marriage and as a capture, that is why the parallel story in the myth of Hercules is so important. A war act is taking place, the god of Ares gets released, and then the Hebrew root texts show that the tribes realize that they are naked, as in a lack of armory, and they start making the armory. Actually Adam is struck by fear and the act of hiding, chaba, also means 'becoming hard'.

193. In Greek Myth the Gorgons guarded the tree of the golden apples, and whoever saw them turned to stone. Gorgons also represent armor, so this explains why Adam became hard. The Gorgons had a dualistic power as the double serpent (Coatlicue), as from their left side there flew blood to kill, and from their right side there flew blood to save. The Gorgons also guarded Tartarus, Hell, and they were ancient goddesses of wisdom (Libya). So 'turning into stone' by Gorgons can either mean they are arming you, or they just don't want you to come close. Their right side has the power to help people becoming hard for the battle, and their left side is to punish. And either way, they always had to destroy in order to create. Adam reached the Chagowr, which was the belt, the bondage, in it's roots also meaning fear and trembling. Also this part has parallels in the story of Hercules, as in another labor Hercules has to steal the leather belt of the Queen of the Amazons, Hippolyte. This was the belt of Ares, the wargod, her father. Hippolyte wanted to give him the belt, but the other amazons attacked him, so there was a war before he reached it to get armed further. In the Hebrew texts we see that after Adam reaches the belt, the armor, he gets driven to the east of the garden, but it literally means 'eternal bondage' (mikkedem legan), and this to Mother Earth, the ground he came from, so he was finally safe in her womb again.

194. When Adam has gained the fruit of the garden, he gets later on covered by skins. This can be seen as the shell of the fruit. Fruit means also meat in the root text, so it can indicate to a beast as well. In the Hercules parallel which has apocalyptic value we see that one of his labors was to skin the Nemean lion and take this skin, as an armor. The same we see when the martyrs of the apocalypse receive a white robe, when they call upon vengeance. All these events represent the golden fleece, the shells of the golden apples. In another labor Hercules has to search for the red cattle of Geryon, which symbolizes the skinned beasts. It is a part of the process of fertility, also represented by the Aztec Xipe Totec. The predators who are warriors and hunters also have an Atlas task to carry burdens, to bear the underworlds on their shoulders, and this can happen when they get transformed into cattle. It is the call of Mother Earth also to be bound to her, to serve her. The tree of knowledge and the labors of Hercules represent the same : The path back to the mother womb. This is a very apocalyptic path as veils (shells) have to be cut. In the Labor of the Erymanthian Boar Hercules had to bring a wild pig back to Mycene. Pigs are symbolizing the womb, they live in the womb of the earth. It got finally tamed by ice. This is also what the Ragnarok in Viking Myth represents, the apocalyptic end-scene of darkness and ice is to bring order back in the world of the gods.
195. In Germanic myth the tree of knowledge was called Yggdrasil, the gallows (cross) of Odin. It was the path to the underworld, Niflheim or Helheim, where Hel Herself ruled, the goddess of fertility. As Hulda she was worshipped as the goddess of marriage. Hulda was also the goddess of hunt, the goddess of children, and she was an ancient germanic supreme goddess. She was also called the Mother of Beasts and of the Wilderness, as was Eve (Chavvah). She worked together with the huldurs who were ancient hunter-goddesses, goddesses of temptation, who lured lost souls into the depths of the underworld, as initiations into the mysteries of hell. They were also the keepers and wardens of hell. In the Hebrew roottexts the tree of knowledge was also a gallows, as a sort of paradisiac cross where pilgrims could receive enlightenment.
196. The so called snake of the tree, the gallows, in the Hebrew roottext was in origin an oracle, so it did not mean literal drama. Literalism has always been a form of materialism. In every form the oracle had been 'condemned' to eat dirt, as a way of transformation. This was all through the gallows, by which Odin, the Germanic God, lost his eye, and reached the source of wisdom, Mimir. So it takes an endarkenment to reach an enlightenment, from one dimension into the other.
197. This was all to escape from the patriarchal world, where only men dominated. In this sense hell is the womb again.
198. Adam had to bow to Eve. For him this was a rebirth. He needed the Double Goddess, the Coatlicue in Aztec Myth, the devourer in order to make a new creation. The tree of knowledge is a call for the man to return to his female part. This part has to be awakened by the powers of hell, which is Her Womb. She is the woman laying in the river between the flowers, in the mud, slowly awakening, as she has been deeply locked up in the subconsciousness. The seventh day of creation was in the hebrew roottext also a day of destruction, from where a new creation came forth. The male had now to return to his original wife. In the first creation story he was called the zachar, the bearer of memory, and his wife was called neqebah, the piercer or expresser, which was the same as what nachash, the so called snake, meant : the whisperer, the toxic enchanter, the bringer of future. He had to return to it, in which Eve was an important medium. Both male and female have to return to the original mother source, the womb of all, also sexually. And this is at first by discovering her suffering, and having a part in that, so that we will also rise with her when she returns.

199. She was the cycle of fertility, the menstruation of hell. In her was the eternal life. She is trying to come to the surfaces again, looking for children to initiate them into the ancient mysteries. She is also the call to return to childhood, and she will protect children against the economic games of the patriarchal adult system, the financial insanity.

200. She does not bow for the male, but rather pierces him to initiate him, as was her original meaning as the Neqebah. She is to awaken his deeper memory. Adam was willing to approach this prophetic tree, as the original Zachar. There might have been a fall, as described in Jewish Myth, and gnostically there was this War in which the first Adam, Zachar, tried to make Neqebah bow for him. Neqebah fled, and there was a day of destruction, sabbath. Zachar was an earlier Adam, as a behemah, a savage. So there was also a fall of Zachar, because he tried to rule over his woman. That was the true source of all problems. The tree was really a way to bring balance back again, and to bring the children into a new creation. The suffering was meant to open the deeper senses, and to connect to lost parts of the underworld. It was nothing but deepening the frequencies, digging them out. It is for a man case to find his woman back in this. If there was any sin, it was the sin of Zachar against Neqebah, trying to let her submit to him, in order so that he could rule over her. The tree of knowledge in this sense is the tree of restoration. And in this sense Zachar had eaten from a very bad fruit, in the first creation story, as he tried to destroy his mother, mother earth. Zachar had to go into bondage because of this, and this was why the element of snake was used, as a way to describe the rope, the sabbath of destruction. The third day of creation was in the root texts the day of the children. It was all to root out the threat of the patriarchal age. But the third day was but a ghost in the desert of patriarchy. Always would it suffer. The fourth day meant 'law' in it's roots, and represented the tree of the knowledge and discernment of good and evil, to which man had to be bound. From here She came forth, as a device of punishment and reward. She was a judge, a weapon, and was made so that man could submit to her. The second day had been 'the day of dirt', and the dirt was good to bring forth the fifth day, which was the day of hunger, the Day of Tantalos. The hunger-creatures lived in poverty, in the wilderness, but close to nature, and they did not have the grotesque of the patriarchal threat. They were minimalists, and they were under Her Law, the fourth day. Zachar was the destroyer of Her law and made his own. The Seventh Day was the Wrath, from which a new creation came forth, the second creation story.

201. The Old Testament should be seen as an esoteric, allegoric guide through the underworld.

The sixth day was the day of the hunt. Here the male rebelled against the law of the goddess, and through the seventh day one came into the second creation story, the story about the tree of knowledge, which is about how the male finds his way back to the goddess again. It is an allegory describing this journey through the ages, the eighth day. And through the fall, the descending into the underworld, one comes in the ninth day. In every age there is a patriarchal threat against women, and every age deals with it in its own way. Like in the days of Noah, where the nephilim, male giants, ruled, the flood could be seen as a revenge of the goddess, meaning her menstruation. In the tenth day Moses can be seen as the restorer of Law, directing to the Goddess of Law. In this 10 days creation cycle the goddess will always heal herself. The male, who came forth from Her and who is just another part of her Being, will return to Her. And this all by the power of nachash, the oracle, which some call the snake, but which in its depth a rope, or Ixtab, the mayan goddess of the rope, the goddess of the hanged men. It is a temptation no one can resist. We all are driven to the cross, as a return to Her Law, the original order of divine Matriarchy, the primeval fertility cycle. From there the divine milk streams to make pilgrims an adept in the mysteries of the Goddess. Esoterically every fall is a deeper initiation into this. In Aztec Myth the month Tlaxochimaco was the month of starvation and hunger in order to approach the goddess. This period parallels the fifth day (period or age) of creation, the Day of Tantalos. It is She Herself opening up her body when one wants to know more about the gnosis, as she is the Sacred Prostitute. And all Her nudity is just Revelation, Enlightenment, and meant to initiate.

202. It is only through the descension through hell that we can know Her, where we can unlock all the hidden, occult knowledge. The memory (Zachar, Zakar) is there, but has to be pierced open, which is the restoration of Neqebah, the original female. We see the Neqebah in the form of nachash, the oracle, returning with another attempt to communicate with the man. In this sense she is a divine communication device, as the tree of prophesy. By this communication there is destruction and re-creation, like when the dirty waters (mayim) were divided, a spot rose, new land, on which the children could play. The tenth day or period of creation got its peak in the Davidic Myths which was esoterically meaning the restoration of Her wars, under which Her gladiators were raised. David had a harem of women who all reflected different aspects of the Goddess. In his Psalms he is the Hebrew Orpheus. The goal of Orpheus is to be a medium for Eurydice, who he lost to the underworld. The son of David was Solomon who became famous as the king of wisdom. In the New Testamentic Book of Revelation, a Messianic text, it is about that those who have the wisdom will recognize the number six hundred and sixtysix, the human number, which is a mark for those of the kingdom of the beast. This is not just meant as negative. The riddle goes much deeper, as through the paradox we can go back to the one who had wisdom, Solomon, and his number was indeed six hundred and sixtysix. It was the number of his throne, and the number of his yearly goldharvest. It is the number of wisdom, and therefore a number connected to the tree of knowledge as a way of bondage to it. It is a number connecting us to the Mother Goddess of the Wilderness.

203. The number leads us to hell and through hell in a positive sense, as a way of receiving the hidden wisdom, to find out about the healing qualities of all suffering, thus transcending all separation by the law of paradox and syncretism. All the racial differences will suddenly make sense. We do believe in the eternal war in that sense, but also in the eternal peace and harmony of all things, from an artistic point of view. The paradox, the contradiction, needs to be help up, needs to be accepted, and then we have to watch the deeper layer of it. The Eternal Gospel sais that even the Spirits of God fight each order in order to give birth and create. It is a Divine Game. Receiving the mark of the Mother of Beasts is a Solomonic miracle. It is the creation of land in the midst of the wasteland, in the depths of Ben-Hinnom. When the Goddess hunts after us and marks us, three times the sixth day, the day of hunt, which is three times to enter the third day, the day of the children. The yohm shelishi is also the fork, the triad. In this the wisdom is revealed to children. It is the day of zera, which not only means seed, children, but in it's roots it means also scattering.

204.The Solomonic Mark of Her is the mark of marriage to the goddess, the original meaning of hell, as a fertility mark. It is the mark to have further access in her.

205.Also Eve was a mighty medium in bringing Adam back to Her, and she as well can be seen as the Mark of the Mother of Beasts.

206.The beast in the Messianic book of Revelation in the New Testament can also be translated as a savage, which is the primeval repressed age of matriarchy, as a woman rides the beast. She is called a whore, but this can also mean the Sacred Prostitute. There is an image of the beast, the savage life, which has to be worshipped. In the root texts here this image means empty space, nothingness, as a space of detachment, and the worship of it means to kiss and lick. It was the situation before the first creation story, as the tenth day waiting to switch over to the first day again. In this apocalyptic situation one either had to receive the mark or die. In the root texts it was said that those with wisdom and interpretation, would eventually vote for the savage (beast). It is in their journey to emptiness, in which the keys of enlightenment can be given. Solomon is in this an initiator, as the well of Mimir.

207.The woman on the beast with seven heads is heading for the eighth head, the eighth creation day where the goddess is re-united with Adam. Then it heads for the ten horns who will take the rule, representing the 10 restored days of creation. The tenth day is the day of the abyss, where the mark has led to, to the great emptiness, the void, the well of Mimir. The woman cannot just be watched as a negative force, as she is also in the roottext the woman of the secret doctrine (musterion). She is described as the mother of filth and mystery, relating her to the Aztec Goddess of Sin, Tlazolteotl, who was nothing but a goddess of justice. They are dualistic gods. The power of the Aztec pantheon was always the Duality, as in this problems could be solved, mysteries could be interpreted, and negativity and sin could be transformed, as a dirt eater. The dirty whore was a sign of Tlazolteotl's rule, as she was the savage mother, and she came with strategy. She brought people within her temptation in order to show a way out. She was the representer of the age of confusion in which the order of the goddess would be visible. In the root texts the one who had these visions, John, admired this woman. There was written something on her forehead as a mark, which in the roottext not just says the mother of the secret doctrin, but also the mother as the source, the well, the motherland (meter). Then she conquers as the Bride. The mystery of the Whore of Babylon was that she was a Duality of Syncretism, the guard of the secrets, the root texts and the esotery of it. She was the tester in order to become a proper justice goddess, as a keeper of the mark. Therefore she can be seen as the day of Tlazolteotl, the fourth day of law. She had created the dirt, she had created the mark, and also the solution. Therefore she was an important part in the cycle.

208. The Mark is for the shaman a way to enter into the depths of hell. The mark has three parts, three being the number of children, the triad. In Greek Myth Cerberus was the initiator of hell, a three-headed dog. We have to be pierced by the fork to enter hell, the sign of fertility. The woman in her restored form is the piercer, to awaken us to the deeper interpretations by synthesis. It is the work of the weaver. In this we can finally make a solid ground in hell, through the art of eternal war.

209. The beast was put in power by 'Drakon', a mythological monster in the root-text, also a watcher. The mark can be seen as a divine inspirator, a device of communication and law, as the guard of hell. The mark is meant to bring the duality inside of us, the synthesis. Coatlicue is the Aztec Double-Headed Goddess of Hunt, as the portal to the underworld, and therefore she guards the sixth day, the day of hunt. The mark came to proportions when Moses received the Laws in two tablets, and where he received the horns, or rays of light. Also the duality of the ark of the covenant refer to this, as a device to have communication with the Goddesses, which it originally was. In the root texts the tablets of law were to monitor and warn it's receivers (luchot ha'edut), as a security device. In Aztec Myth the Double God is also named Omoteotl. Related to this we can also mention the Double Goddess of the Greek Underworld Medusa, or her and her two sisters being the guards of the underworld as the three Gorgones. From them two sorts of blood flew, one stream for salvation, and one stream for damnation. They were the judges of the underworld. In the Esoteric Gnostic movement Charagma is the three-headed goddess of communication. When someone watched the Gorgones they turned into stone, they became hard. Sometimes this was for warrior armor purpose, to raise an army. That is what the mark in depth is all about. It is also related to the Adamic (Heracles) receiving of the Belt. In the Messianic book of Ephesus this belt is described as the Belt of Truth, which is the Goddess Aletheia in the Esoteric Gnosis. The Breastplate of Justice is the Goddess Dikaiaosune.

210. The Goddess who rode the beast with many heads was Meter, who brought them all together, as the Sacred Prostitute. In the confusion and chaos the beast brings there will also be the tight order of the Goddess. The woman riding the beast is in the root text a wife. To drink from her cup of filth means to interpret, and is to become an adept in her mysteries.

211. The filth was the menstruation blood. It was the power of the second creation day, where the dirt was divided in two parts, in order to bring in a third part, that which was covered and hidden. This was also the reason why the Sea of Moses, was split, and this was also the reason why the ark of the covenant had two parts, two guards, and it was why the Law had two tablets. In the split the Sea of Moses could create the wilderness holding the promised land. In this sea there was a dimensional shift going on in the underworld, leading them in deeper. The Island leads back to her source. The first day, the day in which duality was created, was the day of Meter. Everything was divided into time, and that's why she became the Goddess of Time.

212. The tenth day is the day of the abyss, the age of war. It is where the eternal wars are restored. The Key of Solomon can be used to open the sixth day, the day of hunt, the temple

- of Coatlicue. Then the balance between hunt and war will be restored, as the two servants of law.
213. From the split in the menstruation blood, a children's world will rise.
214. The tree in the paradise represented the female cross to return to the goddess by initiations, and to have access in the underworld.
215. In Mayan Myth the goddess of the gallows, the goddess of the hanging, is Ixtab, as a guide through the underworld. The terrible overfocus on male gods has repressed the goddesses. It has repressed childhood, but goddess worship has stayed throughout the ages. The Christic Element has plagued them in their dreams, focussing the attention on the male all the times, the sufferer, instead of the Law of Suffering, the Initiation Truths. This was why they first had to switch over to the christic females, in order to come to the source, the Law itself, as the Truths of Fertility.
216. They have broken the male magnet, by entering into the void. In the age of patriarchic supremacy the male part ruled, abused the female part, and all went wrong. Now how could the male part so wrongly and illegally come to power ? It was because of the separation between the female and the male. The female was originally a crucial part of the man, as it should be. But there were suddenly lies spread that men supposed to be stronger than females, and men should be men, without a female part. This was a definite separation, and females got degraded into slaves and helpers of the male. There was something terribly wrong with that. Also the love between females got degraded as the abusive and dominant male powers feared women would come together to take their rule back. And so the female part got thrown out of the park of the male body, to stay outside, and only the man was allowed to enter her. This is a very tragic and sad story. It all started with the destruction of the female breast and the framing of her genitals, in order for the male to let his muscles grow to store there the stolen female powers. The female was the warrior part of the male. She was supposed to be his weapon and his strategic mind, also to pierce, initiate him, as to protect him from losing his childhood. She had to open him up to the secrets, to reveal Herself to him as the goddess.
217. Her tree in the paradise means the carpenter in the root texts, as she is the one who has to construct the man by her initiations. The fallen male power could get the rule because the male was sabotaging his child part, so it is important to travel back to the third day of creation, the age of the children. The child part had always been the interpreter in the male, a translator, as a bridge. This part was put over him also, under the guide and guard of the Goddess.

The Divine Hierarchy

The Goddess
The Divine Child
The Male

218. In this the Divine Child functions as a mark through which the Goddess communicates with the man. The power of the man is a potentially very dangerous power which can bring deceptive illusions. This is why the man has to stay under the rule of the Goddess and the Divine Child. If not, then there will be revenge in the form of Wars, until everything is balanced again. It is for ages that She has raged against the authoritarian patriarchs, and she has with success exposed their lies. In this age she will continue to reveal her secrets to the mystery schools. Only with respect and honor to the Goddess and the Divine Child, which is the symbol of Truth, a male can come to his purpose. In syncretism he has to find these parts back in himself and to awaken them.

219. The goddess is the only way out, when he finds his divine child back. He has to be reborn in her womb, in the eighth day. She rides the beasts as the Victor, Nike. We can only come through the labyrinth by our guide, and by the war arts. It is a process of weaving and by receiving the menstrual armory. The veils in the temple are shifting like mills. How to deprogram the mind ? It is by discovering the ruler of the tenth day, in Her temple. The arena, the eternal war, the ultimate protection and immunity. It is related to a classic suffering, a necessary disease, as a fire in which the Laws have been revealed. Through Her ark we get access to the underworld of children. In this process we get re-united with the Divine Child and the Goddess.

220. It is important to learn how to recognize Her voice and to discern it from the others. She has ways to imprint Her laws.

The Mystery of Tlazolteotl

1. Guilt is a very cryptic emotion keeping us connected to the goddess. It is her way to bring us into Her law system, to judge our old nature and giving us a new nature. Guilt in that sense is not necessarily negative or real. It can be the playfulness of her initiation systems, in her temptful art to draw us in, very abstracted. There is even spoken about a holy guilt.
2. She can claim us totally for herself by this, as her prisoners of law, in order to protect us against false law. Later her masks will fall off when she shows us the esotery of it, beyond the myth, when her veils will fall off. Surrounded by misunderstanding She created the Old Testament and the New Testament, which was a war at the same time. The voice of the Goddess can be heard in it, and it is all Her code, She owns it all.
3. When we look at the dualistic Tree of Knowledge, it was to bring guilt. Everyone will be tested by this tree. In Her play, from Her point of view, she lured the male in a trap, as he dominated the earth. She led him to the belt of fear in the original root texts, and She, as the mother goddess, became an object of dread, as goddess worship could lead to eternal damnation under Jewish Messianic Law. Of course the trap of the goddess was to help the male. The goddess wanted to bring the male back to his inner goddess being.
4. It is in this eternal war, Eris, the goddess of strife, that Lethe, forgetfulness, comes forth. Eris is the mother of Lethe. By the forgetfulness you see things from another side, as the mirror of Hermes, or the smoking mirror of Tezcatlipoca. It brings dualism, and it brings new polarities. This is how the dual aztec goddess of law, Tlazolteotl, establishes herself. The ritual of guilt is a process of marriage to the goddess. In this she also destroys real sin.

And in this point of view, Her view, the eternal damnation needs to stay as an all-absorbing, transforming security force, so she even guards the riddle of Calvin, not as in a literal calvinism, but abstracted, with a completely different meaning.

5. The guilt is a way the goddess uses to get our attention and to let us hunger for justice. In this sense we are Her slaves of guilt, in order to get freed by Her laws. In this the tree of knowledge is very important, as it binds us to a war, to a marriage, a bond strong enough to lead us out and to cause Lethe to stream, forgetfulness. Both fear and guilt is important to get free of controlling mind-traps.
6. The third day was ruled by Lethe-Aletheia, the balance between forgetfulness and unforgetfulness, truth. It was from this form that the male rose, but it became corrupted. Lethe-Aletheia got dethroned by the likes of Saturn, El, Cronos and Moloch, the child devourers. Then later they got dethroned by the New Testamentic Age of Jupiter, Zeus, Jesus and Lucifer. In this process Hell, the goddess of children, got demonized. She was the bridge between the third day and the fourth day, the day of Law, the world of Tlazolteotl. It was originally the Mother Goddess, the Double Goddess and the Divine Child who had the Law.
7. Hell was in European Myth the goddess of children, fertility and marriage. Demons were in old Greek Myth the guardian angels. In the sea of Lethe, nothingness and forgetfulness, one had to fight against the shark of matter which lived there. By overcoming this shark one could enter in the depths of Lethe to meet the treasures of Aletheia, unforgetfulness, memory and truth. The first age was the age of the mother, Lethe, in which the guardian spirits were the lethians. Lethe was the fire-water or 'waters of light', related to Orion, which means Urine. In Hebrew these spirits are called the mayim, which were related to the sources of creation. They were violent and dangerous spirits, and they were related to the fertile seed. They served Mother Earth, they were warriors and hunters. Then the Age of Saturn came, the age of the Old Testament, of El, Jahweh, which was Cronos in Greek Myth, who was eventually dethroned by Zeus, Jupiter, Jesus, Lucifer, in the New Testamentic Age. Saturn demonized the lethians, more or less, and in other esoteric versions he just hid them. The guardian spirits who took the lead were the demons. In Greek Myth demons are usually described as guardian angels, and they fought against the kakos, the evil spirits in Greek Esotery. Since the coming of the Roman Empire the original orders got lost. Angels took the lead, and fought against the demons of the old orders, while the lethians, the original angels, were bound in forgetfulness, which was the curse Mother Lethe bore with Her, as a Goddess. However the cycle will soon connect to Her again. She comes from a deep pit and will eventually flow over into Her Aletheia form.
8. The event of Saturn taking over the Heavenly Order was a classical moment. He was eating the children's world, devouring the children, like Moloch did, as a first step for the male to come to power. The second step would be the Jesusian strike. These events had paradoxal meanings and values. It was the several periods Orion had to go through when he lost his eyes. In Hebrew he was Samson. In his journeys he had to search for the god of fire and paralysis, Hephaistos, who could restore his sight by the powers of Helios, the sun. But the fire he would get to restore his sight and memory, after having been thrown into Lethe, would bear the curse of Prometheus with it, that it would also fetter him and eat his body away in order that it would grow. This is why Orion was sometimes described as a giant. The price he had to pay was that he would have to be bound for Lethe, as in a marriage. But this would result in his encounter with Aletheia. Orion would have to go on the same path as Hephaistos, Vulcan, the crippled path. This was important, so that the Mother Goddess would take control again, by overcoming the fallen male. As Orion-Orpheus Orion would restore the art again, and childhood, the whole children's world, and the control of the Black Mother Goddess, from which all life came forth. It was not just a hierarchy from outside, but it was inside. The Black Mother Goddess, Lethe-Aletheia, was also a part of him, a central part, and should be that of everyone. And by this the male could ascend into a more hermaphroditic presence again. The Age of Saturn flew over into the Age of Jupiter, even falling deeper into an Age of corrupted male power. The cobra had given its torch to a lion. But Lethe had always been the Age of the hyena and the goat, and would get it back. And the lion would bow to this, like Jesus had to bow down to the Holy Spirit, the Mother God.

9. The original evil in Greek Myth was Kakos, who was also an evil fire-breathing giant, and the kakos were the evil spirits. Kakos was eventually conquered by Hercules. The story went that Hercules had taken red cattle from Geryon in Erytheia, Spain, to fulfill his mission. Kakos had stolen a part of this skinned cattle, taking them to his cave by their tails. Kakos was the son of Vulcan. He was described as a thief, who had broken the law of Zeus.
10. In Hebrew Myth Lethe was in depth a child devourer and a male-ensnarer. In the strategy there was place for a patriarchy, as she wanted to set the corrupted male up for some great expose. She knew that the higher the corrupted male would be able to rise, the deeper he would fall when his kingdom would come to an end. Of course Jahweh and Jesus were in depth nothing more than expressions of Kakos. In the esotery it is well-known that the attributes of Jesus were to veil the attributes of Lethe in the process of initiating Orion in her temples. The thorn-crown veiled the scalping, to balance male power, and the scorn-robe veiled the muscle-piercing, to prevent that male power would ever dominate female power. It was all the fight in Lethe against the shark of matter, the jaws of matter, the manifestation of the corrupted, totalitarian male power, the powers of the kakoses. The demons battled against this, and earlier, in the Age of Lethe, the lethians battled against this in a more pure way. For a demon it was important to return to the lethian form, to not end up in a trap of kakoses. The muscle-piercing was guided by Hephaistos, the crippled smith-god, in order to give Orion his sight back. By these strategies Lethe would throne in Hell, the children's underworld, again, and would turn it more or less into a heaven for many. She would throne as the Hebrew and pre-hebrew Tlazolteotl, the goddess of Law and Seduction, to keep them all safe within her temptation. Here she would show her many faces as the original black mother goddess.
11. It was in his travels that Orion had to become like Hephaistos in order to get his sight back. Hephaistos was married to Kharis, the goddess of grace, beauty and the shining veils. He had to travel to the land of the golden fleece, Colchis, where he would be armed by Kharis and Hephaistos, and where he would be healed by the first rays of the sun, Helios. But in this he would have to overcome the necklace of Hephaistos, which was sent out to kill all evil offspring of wrong contacts, also called the necklace of Harmonia. Also he would have to overcome the throne of Hephaistos, which would kill all unrightful leaders. The prize would be that he would become Hephaistos, to marry Kharis. Hephaistos was the creator of the woman, so he would be the key to bring the woman back in her original place. The divine woman is the weapon and hunting gear of the male, created to guide and guard the male. The approach to the tree of knowledge was the call for a divine hunt and war, in which the male needed the divine woman. The divine child would mediate in this. It is for a man important to seek for the charismata, in Greek Myth called the Graces, the Kharites. These are the senses of love, one of them being Kharis. To come to Kharis Orion had to come to her sister, Pasithea, first. Pasithea meant possession as in a bond, the wedding with the divine. It also meant hallucination, and she was married to Hypnos, the god of sleep and dreams. Pasithea meant in depth the Divine Child. Thalia represented the richness of the charismata, meaning the blooming, and she was related to the banquets, as in a deeper esoteric digestion. The weapons were designed that they would first conquer the male himself, in order that no corrupted male power would rise, and so that he could not be a threat to the woman. The veils of illusion however showed an empire in which the male ruled. It was a trick of Hephaistos, his throne, to lead false male leaders into a trap and let them fade in Lethe. Orion however was armed by this, but became paralyzed, crippled in spasm, like Hephaistos. He became the sun of the world. Samson had been initiated by Delilah, and lost his eyes and freedom, even his life, in order to let the heavens rest on his shoulders. It was the road to Kharis and her sisters. By this he could destroy his enemies. Orion destroyed Kakos.

12. Tlazolteotl, the dualistic goddess of aztec justice, reflected in the duality between the Old and the New Testament, which she had created as Her veils. It was veiling Her dark, native body. In the gospels it was Jesus holding the cup, surrounded by his disciples, celebrating the Holy Supper. It was a gathering of males, the ruling patriarchy. Nonetheless it was a set up of Tlazolteotl to protect her body. In the Apocalypse it is the Mother God holding the cup. In pre-atlantic myth the mother goddesses were holding the cups by their feet up, which was also represented in their statues and art. In these cups, representing earth, there was rebirth. There is also in the gospels the mystery of the prostitute Mary Magdalene kissing the feet of Jesus, crying at his feet. Through the veil it will become the opposite that the male will fall back at the feet of the Goddess. This is the dualism Tlazolteotl stands for. She had a lust in creating these illusions to protect her kingdom. Nonetheless we will have to find our way back. All the mysteries about a man healing the blind are hiding the reality of the goddess who made men blind, in order that they would not find Her. In the Apocalypse she is revealed as our enemy, and She is. But She is also the initiator. She is a trickster, one who leads us into temptation, to get us out. She is as a mother calling for her children, and uses for that any tool she can find. This is why she is a potentially dangerous and venomous goddess, but not in the negative sense. There is no mercy for those who seek Her face, there is no forgiveness. She marks them with guilt, with an eternal damnation, all to get them out of a false holiness. She doesn't mean to. She is cryptic. In this she will reveal Her justice system. First she makes slaves and captives, first she deceives and tricks, in order to show them the treasures and the truth. It is an abstract art. It is a game. Only esotery can explain the depths of the pits of religion. It is a work of alchemy and syncretism. She thrones in the amazon portals of mexican myth, the Aztec Key, and all the other nations are her clothes. Her body has been well-preserved throughout time, by her dualistic trapperies. She is a hunter, a farmer, a warrior and a trapper. She has created good and evil for a reason, as an art.
13. For a christian mystic it is important to go beyond all the salvation facts given. After being reborn by accepting the Christ, Jesus, and after receiving the Holy Spirit and being bound in the Spirit, it should lead back to a much deeper and long forgotten Christ, Adam. When receiving Adam for a rebirth and baptism in blood, it walks parallel with the saints who have washed their clothes in blood, in the book of Revelation. Adam was in contact with the entity representing the original forms of Everlasting Damnation, which was a positive state of healing and pruning. Hell was in ancient times a Goddess, a Supreme Mother Goddess of fertility, the guide of the dead. Everlasting Damnation is a map for the esoteric saints who come forth through the Adamic Mysteries. They receive Everlasting Damnation in order to get bound by Her. John worshipped this entity in the root texts of the apocalypse, in the book of Revelation. The bondage to Her is described in the Bridal Mysteries. Hell is the Bride. It is the only way for a christian esoterist to return to childhood again and live forever. There is nothing more prejudiced, judged and misunderstood but this Entity called Everlasting Damnation. The martyrs came forth from the Everlasting Torment in the book of the apocalypse, and it was their only way in. Everlasting Torment is a state of mind which has to be understood, in order to let it be heaven. It is just the pain of awakening, the road to enlightenment and detachment. It is a process of evolution. By the Bridal Mysteries she will show what it is, by the wedding gifts, and she will turn everything to gold. She is dualism. There is a work to do for a christian mystic, to work in Her garden, in which she will show the treasures. It is a work of digging her up. In this the christian mystic will find the hellians, the pre-original angels of Her, Her personal guardian pre-demons. She is the pre-original mother goddess of all. In Adam we will find Her. Adam represented the original dualistic god and anti-god. Adam received Everlasting Damnation when He ate from the tree. His mouth started to burn and soon He was in this precious fire, by which He could descend to the lower realms, going through the veils of the goddess. Even Jesus received Her when He died at the cross and descended into the underworld, which would eventually be the secret of His ascension. Jesus had to receive Everlasting Damnation and marry Her, in order to work. It was the Law of Fertility, the Law of Sacrifice. He had to bow down before Her to be filled by Her, in order that she could raise Him high, through the Easter Mysteries. He had to receive Hell in His heart to be bound by Her, His mother, that which was forgotten. This was the will of the Father.

14. For a christian mystic it was important to receive the Holy Spirit and then to strive after the so called gifts of grace, the workings of the holy spirit. Eternal Damnation is this Work Spirit, the forces of fertility, in order to make life fruitful. This is why the bridge between these two entities is so important. In native esotery hell is related to inferiority as an act of humility. This is why for a christian mystic it is important to receive hell after receiving the holy spirit. In the gospels when Jesus received the Holy Spirit He was led to the desert, to the wilderness, where he was tempted by the devil. He had yet to have an encounter with Tlazolteotl, the goddess of temptation. This came to it's peak when Jesus was tempted in the garden of getsemaneh. He eventually was crucified when he took in the sins of the world, the goddess Tlazolteotl, the goddess of sin, and became sin itself, as in a marriage to Her. He was humble at Her feet, and She eventually graced Him with the gifts of ascension. We see here the necessity of the marriage between descension and ascension. When Adam went through the tree, and in the root text and greek myth the gallows and the box of pandora, he went through the same process. Eternal Damnation is a sweet spirit of knowledge and wisdom. She knows the necessity of pains, troubles, temptations and guilt. In his trip through the wilderness to the gallows, Jesus became aware of this, where he found the womb of the holy spirit he loved. It was a sexual act. And the birthing of a new church was the result. Jesus loved Eternal Damnation, he loved Hell. He knew Her. He would do anything for Her. He fought for Her, but He also feared Her. He found out about the sources and forces of Eternal Damnation in the depths of the wilderness, and it was already too late, as She dragged Him in the depths of her den. He was tempted to stop this process, but He didn't. He could call angels to take Him out of it, but he didn't. He was willing to pay the price. This was His Bride. She would lead Him to the land of the good gold. She would lead Him back to His Adamic nature, through the Adamic mysteries. He was ready to receive His Eve.

15. He poured His Spirit on the church, together with the gifts of Eternal Damnation, Her very nature. It would stir up an eternal war, as she is a warrior. It would stir up an age of martyrs, the age of the Great Tribulation, of the Apocalypse, all in order to reveal the secrets of the ages. He was ready to show Her, riding on a beast. She was the divine mother and whore, and then she would be shown as the bride, as she is this duality. She is her own enemy. John adored this creature, as it would reveal the heavens. It would be a marriage between heaven and hell. Both Adam and Jesus became bound to her tree. She was a cryptic wardance, to contradict and to confuse, in order to create. Also Samson fell in this fate and lost his eye, as parallel to Odin and Orion, as a path to find wisdom. Paul was imprisoned by Her, through which he wrote his esoteric letters, derived from Greek Myth. She was called to divide people and put them apart.
16. In the Davidic Myths we can see Tlazolteotl in the form of Batsheba the temptress. In Jewish legend Satan comes as a bird to David. David tries to shoot the bird, but shoots the screen behind which Batsheba is bathing, and reveals herself to him. Her name means daughter of the oaths. She seduces David, who makes her pregnant, and she becomes his wife. This has great consequences, as a curse hits David. She represents the Bride, Eternal Damnation, as a justice system. Therefore she is closely related to the apocalypse. She eventually brings forth Solomon, and his number sixhundred and sixtysix, the number of his throne and his yearly goldharvest, and the number of wisdom. The myth and legend of this religious event reflect the manifestation of the wedding ceremony between Adam and Eve, but also between Jesus and Hell. It was a creation of guilt, in order to enter the underworld. David, Adam and Jesus all had to submit to Sin and Guilt, becoming mortal, in order for the eternal law to be revealed. There was no escape from that, but with the difference that it was a positive event. There are several ways to approach sin, yet they are not necessarily sinful. There is a divine path in this, as they are multi-interpretable archetypes to describe and illustrate the situations of existence and mankind. Batsheba made of David a slave of his desire, by the marriage, which led to a great downfall in order to gain the victory : the birth of Solomon, the king of wisdom. It was a child sensitive to the art of syncretism, as he took all the gods and goddesses of his wives to give them a place in the temple, and showed the world the wisdom of dualism, parallel to the Aztec religion.
17. The christian has to fall into the hands of the temptress Batsheba, even when there will be guilt on his life coming from society. It is in order to reveal the syncretic powers of the goddess. To receive the mark of Solomon is the crown on this contact, and it will be manifested by wisdom. It led him to the Solomonic realms for wisdom. Under this sign eternal law would be revealed, like the two tablets of Moses. The wargod, David, was captured by his own lusts, which was the age of the pigs. In this, Batsheba is the initiator of war, the war-seduction, as the hyena of the cross, tempting the Christ to wage war in the underworld. In this she is the Warrior Bride. All soldiers have to be reborn and baptized in the blood of the enemy and in the blood of their war-leader, the davidic christ, to be equipped. It will be a war church. Their seed, blood, sweat and tears are essential for the Batsheba Spirit to bring forth the Spirit of Solomon. She is the divine whore and mother of wisdom, of all secret doctrin. Hell is to establish law for the children.

18.A part of Batsheba is Delilah, the trickster and betrayer, who seduced the judge Samson and gave him in the hands of the Philistines, his enemy. They pierced his eyes out and brought him in the depths of their temple, where he was bound to the pillars on which the temple rested. Samson could force the pillars in order for them to break, and although he died by this, he also caused to kill more enemies in his life than he ever did. Delilah is therefore the Batsheban cause of Victory, and expose of the enemy, as a central force of the revelation. She is the unveiler, as the Batsheban sword, the Sword of David. She is the force of order in the temple, a well-preserved part of the Bride of Christ.

19.Before there were any paradises, there were hells, in positive sense, as in children's empires. The pre-paradisian Naka myths are about these hells. Here we can find back the roots of the Batsheba and the Delilah myths. The striders were a pre-amazonian tribe and empire of women. Hatar, as a proto-type of Samson, was tricked by Tallah, a strider, and was put in a torture dungeon, deep in their temple. Lodit, a poisonous frog, offered herself to Hatar saying if he would have sex with her, he would die, but she would bring forth so many poisonous frogs that it would kill the striders. Hatar refused, but then Lodit raped him, which killed him and eventually the striders by a plague of poisonous frogs. In some versions it was a poisonous fly, or a poisonous spider. A certain version is that Lodit rapes Hatar three times. First as a poisonous frog, then as a poisonous spider, and finally as a poisonous fly, by which he dies. In other versions she sends these creatures to him, as being the goddess of venom. Tallah is the proto-type of Delilah, a much earlier form, and the secret of Delilah's power. Behind Batsheba we see Beher, the wife of a king. Another king, Laxar, once saw her bathing in a lake, desired her, and wanted to marry her, but he first had to kill her husband, which he did. Then the kingdom of the killed king swore revenge, and waged war against Laxar. Laxar brought doom over this kingdom because of this. Because he was very cruel to the people of Beher, she killed him one night in bed by a knife. Laxar was the proto-type of David, the amorous war-king, and the Batsheba curse finds it's depth in the Beher-myth.

1. She is a giant, throning on the mountain of skulls. In Orion She has Her crown. Her crown is a group of hyenas hunting.
2. She is calling Her soldiers. Women lead them.

PATHS :

15. Between Hanik and Vuh : The Ammoth-Vuh, the Birth in Blood.

Key : 'I wish the little light in you a little ride. Things all come together after the fight.'

16. Between Hanik and Vur : Vuk, the Holy Land

Key : 'Dreams are seldom the same. They continue to play it different. It's the small differences become the bosses. And they can hide behind a thousand oceans of light and behind a thousand veils of the night.'

17. Between Hanik and Vuhod : Spir-Spir, Softness (Silk Woman)

Key : 'Don't play it too loud,' she sais. 'This woman needs to come alive. Give her some access. But do it wise or she will break you. Don't do it loud, for she will take you, take you for a ride. Play it slow, and count your balls. Then take a mask, and scream, scream, for the lights of the show. Show her the different sights, show her the jokers in the night. She takes you in by white gloves. When her monkeys take you, she shows nothing but love. You are the jukebox, you got the strike. And now she shows the diamonds in her eyes, and all her little lights.'

18. Between Hanik and Rahm : Hanik-Amber, Weight

Key : 'There are smeared diamonds by the weight of love. She asks a bit access, and then she takes it rough. It all happens by the gravity of blood. And those who dance, they die, while no one understands.'

19. Between Hanik and Vam : Kot, Death

Key : 'There is sweetness in death. There is love in pain. When they come together it's like a hairy ring in a bald desert. Stringing the kings together, so many spears through a well of pleasure. Then the oasis becomes blood, and there is gravity. My memory comes alive. Nothing was what it seemed to be. I have the key to life. I am a rich man. There is gold in my heart, since the white hairy ring tore me apart.'

20. Between Vuh and Vur : Vodok, Cunning (Strategy)

Key : 'It's coming through the waters. All my childhood dreams full apart, and I see what was beyond her. Like the treasure-coffin finally opens up. I see your face. It's you. It's coming through the forests, there's a jungle in the middle, so many lights. Beautiful is only Beauty through the Night. She had a beautiful face. All called her Beauty. She hadn't been here for a long time, for she makes big circles, they grow bigger everyday. Beautiful is only Beauty through the Night. She came out of her coffin by a big light. Do you understand anything of Beauty. Have you seen her star. Have you seen her running through the forests, have you seen her growing in the desert, like a wild desert rose. Beautiful is only Beauty through the Night. When our eyes get open, we will see the light. Can your eye display such beauty ? Or can only wisdom do, tame her like the mornings do.'

21. Between Vuh and Rahm : Acha, Altar (The Bison Hunter)

Key : 'I come out of my shell, the morning breaths and shines. I sting my spears through the wells of pleasure, morningblood, now there's gravity to do a lot. I watch your beautiful face by the tenderness machine, if I would touch you you would fade away. I have stung a knight's sword in my eye, now the tower is open. Blood enough for gravity, I will reach for higher mornings. Only stairs can do. The rest will fade away. By the higher stairs I can touch you.'

22. Between Vuh and Vuvod : Vu-Vak, Slayer (The Table)

Key : 'Go away, leave me alone today. Side by side, your army has united, with so many cards in your game, you give me headaches. I must discover the world step by step, don't drown me, don't overwhelm me, don't bring me in your web. I must eat them one by one. Can't do it fast, for then you would destroy me with your sun. Let the time go slower now. The music has just begun.'

23. Between Vuh and Vam : Zwerm, The Knife (The Bartender)

Key : 'Baker lies, kingly dice, playing with me, they come in disguise. Always nightmares, where are the dreams. And when the dreams come they always bleed. Grow little nightmare, grow little dream, it's cutting me while I'm alive, I'm the victim of this baker's knife.'

24. Between Vur and Vuhod : Tok-Tok (The Lovers)

Key : 'Hold my hand, feel the passion burning. Hold my hand to you, close to you, take it, lay it on your chest, what is it doing to you. I want to hold the test. I want to know who you are, your hiding places, your dark spots. I want to know the truth. Can we do it again, or is it the last time, what will happen when I discover you. Hold me in your arms, for this might be the last time. For now we are still naïve and without worries, now we're still in love, or is it just my detective's purpose : chaining you, caring that you will never break me. Am I just eating you, hoping that you will never come alive again. Is it just my selfdefense, is it just my hidden darkness, oh what will I do to myself when I will discover who I am.'

25. Between Vur and Rahm : Iro-Vam, Justice

Key : 'In the stars, I wonder, it's like a mirror, like a dream, showing all my deep intentions and who I will ever be. In my eyes, I wonder, I pierce them by some swords, I pierce them by some knives, the blood is streaming for some gravity. I know what you will do to me when I will come alive, I will be your wife. It's the only way to escape from you, it's the only way to get through. In the skies I wonder, where are you, are you waiting for the strike, are you waiting for the coming lie. Are you preparing your armies to get through, to marry me is that your mistake, the only mistake bringing you any further. We are archenemies, we need each other, to be free finally. We are archenemies, we get married to come alive, it was all a murder in disguise. Swallow the bomb, fight for your life. Enchain them by your touch, for these lions will hunt through the night. So ride them, and you will stay alive.'

26. Between Vur and Vuvod : Hanik-Vuhod, Alarm

Key : 'I am a wanderer, I am a hitchhiker, I move from house to house, I move from wall to wall. I am gravity, the best alarm, by sinking I come alive. No, I never stay long. I'm always moving, sinking through the floors. This gravity brings me where I belong, a certain speed, a certain civilisation. A certain reaction to someone who doesn't belong.'

27. Between Vur and Vam : Hanik-Vuh, Intercom

Key : 'I'm standing high on the tower. I have finally reached you, you're the most beautiful. When I look down I see the treasures, but the best of all is you. You are the mirror, a special way to handle them all. Only tender hands can reach out to you, only wise words can watch you.'

28. Between Vur and Vod : Kaleph-Vod, Conqueror

Key : 'Close your eyes, space. Close your eyes, gate. You have won the victory, you can finally go to sleep, you can finally bath in treasures, finally drown in love. You finally jumped from the tower, now you're free in space, free to guard the gate. Sweetness watch over me. Lullaby, don't leave me.'

29. Between Vur and Viram : Iro, Robot (Highpriest)

Key : 'Don't you tell me lies today. Don't you come in disguise today. I need some openness, I need some clarity, I need some gravity. Don't you tell me I'm your sweetness today. Don't tell me I'm your heart today. I need a little freedom, I need a little light to fly away. Don't bring me down on the stairs, don't make me the dragon's prey. Don't you tell me truth today, don't tell me what is real. I need a bit distraction, I need some fairytales, I need something to drink, something strong, so don't bother me today. I don't want to know what is wrong, I don't want to know what hurts you. I don't want to see you angry. All I want to do is tell you that I love you, and you're a part of my game and tale. I want to give you some new brains, and change you all the way. Don't you tell me lies today. Don't you tell me lies today. I won't believe it anyway, unless you bring me a better tale.'

30. Between Vuhod and Rahm : Iro-Vam, Chariot

Key : 'It was a picture in someone's mind : Fire in the sky, the most beautiful oceans, all in a flame. He had waited so long for this, it was his memory. And the sunk ships rose up, with their pirates and rebels, and the whole of his body was in a flame.'

31. Between Vuhod and Vuvod : Vas, Paranoia

Key : 'He tried to reach the house, but it was just his memory. He needed some gravity. So he thought back about her. He remembered her veils, and how he came there, finally touching her, and realizing she was a spider, his worst enemy. Then he went all the way back to forget about her, how he touched the others, finally dolls. Dolls, dolls, dolls, possessed by flies. And he could forget about her, and enter the house again. This time it was his, and he brought the dolls in. And they sat down, and flies took over. The flies of his mind. It was just a story. So he closed the book, and put it between others in his cupboard. Then he took out a book of fire, finally to cleanse his mouth and mind of his own wickedness. For he was wicked, and there was nothing which could stop it. They made him wicked, all these books. So he went out of the library, and say goodbye to it's woman, and then went to the cemetery, where he dived into the sea of fire, finally to forget about himself who he was. He was one with the skies now, one with the stars. There was nothing but love, and it was burning inside. Someone got born, totally new. It was him. He knew nothing about history anymore, and history knew nothing of him. He had a new life, with a new library. But one book could let it start all over again. So he went inside with a gun, and he became a hunter, and he started a butchery. All because of his paranoia. Never go to the library, but stare into the flames, believe in your fantasy.'

32. Between Vuhod and Vam : Ahwa, Ship (Drinker)

Key : 'I know some pirate with their captains. I know some rebels with their chiefs. I know some indians, they are hunters. They live in disbelief. They are paranoid, they are afraid of lies, so they live their lives in misery. Cover yourself with dirt and mud, and be as pretty as you can. Raise your dirtswords and drown, drown in your can.'

33. Between Rahm and Vuvod : The Vang, The Hermit

Key : 'Somebody is the watcher here. Yes, someone is watching you. Have you seen her smile, those lips ? Have you seen how she walks. She's watching you, waiting for you to admit, that you are in love with her. So run, run away, for she will burn you if you stay. You don't belong here in the library, where the past comes alive again, where they bring so much misery. You don't want to get back to her, for she has even more arrows on her bow, so run, run, there's something better in the skies. I will give you some wings to fly, I will give you some stones to watch. When you will read those letters written there, it's all make-belief. So run, run, don't turn back, but move your face to the sky, and drink from another can. There's a woman in the skies, she's pouring out the waters, so run, run, and swim with her, she will show you the ladder.'

34. Between Rahm and Vod : Hanik-Ham, Ascet

Key : 'Women are hunters, deep in the night. Some fight and never win, while some always win. It's a game, better don't watch the show. Some women are better than this, some women are better than this. She's having pictures on her boots, while you have pictures on your jacket. Dive with her in waterfall baths, together. Some women are dangerous, some women are excellent, some women are boring, boring like you are, stairways are in the stars. Some women are melting when you touch them, some women are running away, but I have much more gravity, I stay. Can you deal with me ? Whatever my eyes see I will pierce. Can you deal with me ? There's no turning back. Always deeper, until everything is mixed together. They lost themselves, and plastic is rising, some dolls in toyshop, some dolls in bakeries, some dolls in butcheries, all will be flesh tonight, need to find some sensitivity. All will bleed, so that the bigger bodies will also have some bloodspeed. Hand it over, find the circle, and be born again, you're just a fish in a stream. There is always a bigger stream.'

35. Between Rahm and Vu : Ros, Rebel

Key : 'Diamonds are like lies, they are like truths in disguise.'

36. Between Rahm and Viram : Karos, Chicken Hunter (Chicken Breeder)

Key : 'It's a cryptic world, you see,' said the chicken to the rabbit. But the eagle struck them both, and took the treasures.'

37. Between Vuvod and Vam : Ruf, Goat Farmer

Key : 'Deep down inside, there is a neverending funeral. They are hiding something, why not travel on the coffin, into the fire. Why not drinking from the urns, why not talking to skeletons. It's waiting for you. It's a fairground anyway. Look through different mirrors, and never trust the windows again.'

38. Between Vuvod and Vod : Mus, Pig Keeper

Key : 'There's a house and a bridge, while they are always moving. Someone's spinning the wheel, someone's spinning your eyes. You're part of the carrousel, jump off, and make your own alphabet.'

39. Between Vuvod and Vu : Tra, Cruelty

Key : ‘Watch someone walking in summer, watch his hat, his beard, his boots. Then watch someone else. You’re in rabbit town. Have you been to Domom, have you been through it’s gates. It’s tricking you anyway. Why don’t you make your own puzzles. Why don’t you raise up your own toyshops. You can do it. You can build your own gun. For you’re in rabbit town. So much chance to take. Watch for their leaders, beat them in a fight. Let their bosses be the statues on your gun tonight.’

40. Between Vuvod and Viram : Tamul, Horseman

Key : ‘Papaya Aftermus, Papaya Aftermus, I can do this daily, I’m waiting for the nightbush. He is my clock, my saviour. He always takes me in, like family, and he ticks like a machine. My warmachine, my horse to ride. Papaya Aftermus tonight.’

41. Between Vuvod and Vivam : Visses, Unreachability (Hardness, Wall)

Key : ‘Indians shrieking loud : open the gate. Balloons in the air, flowers rising. They come from the desert, from deep wilderness, they have been dead, now they order this. Indians shrieking loud, there are statues on their guns, silver and golden rabbits. They order this, open the gate, open the sun, open it, you’re already late. Drop your guns, they take your weapons, they make the hardness soft, and raise their walls, and then all the bridges fall. They raise their walls, they let them all fall, they make machinery and brandnew shoes, rabbit style, it’s up to you, it’s up to you. They are like bakersmiles, they make the kettle hot, they watch the fishes dying, and then they watch the flood. Indians shrieking loud, raising their guns with so many statues, in silver and gold. And then they smile at you, and say : open the gate, we will burn everything brandnew. Indians shrieking loud, for it is war, it is war.’

42. Between Vuvod and Pi : Drata, Fool

Key : ‘They know what they will do. Why did we choose to see. We are so young. Why did we choose to be frozen in eternal sight ? We can’t move. We are pillars in a temple of evil struck by fear. It’s coming from the arc where the eye of evil rests near. We are afraid of these lights, so why did we choose them ? We are hiding for these lights, so why do we invite them ? Aren’t we all torn up inside, watching both sides of the night ?’

43. Between Vam and Vod : Muskus, The Poor (One)

Key : ‘All the jokes are in the air. But I’m bowing down with this bottle. Let them play on the beach, soon it will burn, and I will be burned by the bottle. When you laugh, be the best, or someone else will come and turn you into an eternal mess.’

44. Between Vam and Vu : Esmul, Horse Keeper

Key : ‘I saw here there, standing, like red lights, pink edges so thin, like the blanket, coming, and then flying away. Magical carpet, or wigwam, what will you make of it. It all flies away one day. Turning stones into water, we can never grasp it, as it all slides away. There is no life in anything. Only blood has gravity. Only wisdom builds worlds, holding the fragile lines of consciousness. These are the birds coming to me. When they get killed, indians stand before me.’

45. Between Vam and Viram : Napap, Panther Keeper (Misunderstanding)

Key : ‘She was painting herself by deceiving colours, to be a chameleon in this dark night. She covered herself by the drinks making others drunk, so that they would sleep away, and she could escape. But how could she love her enemies ? It made her feel dirty, but the Book of Love had her in a tight grip, and whenever she tried to get away, the grip only got tighter, so she gave up. She was something she didn’t want to be, but in a strange way it made her free, which was the grace of the paradox. She couldn’t finally get a touch of who she really was, and she got the control over her life back step by step. She was now a high-heeled succubus, in a strange army. She had been bound all over by a strange light, coming from the Book of Love. She was a love-hunter now, and she knew that all women of the invisible jewel would go down like that. There was no other way.’

46. Between Vod and Vu : Vataan, Rabbit (Chance)

Key : ‘The colours were making her drunk, and made others drunk, and she knew these were the colours of war. To buy such a drink was just the mark of the hunted, and to get drunk was the mark of the defeated, and the one getting this all done was the warmaster. And they were all both the victims and inflictors of this. There was no way in the middle. Only the extreme would lead them out. She was a pin herself now, a pin of evil, so what could she expect more ? She had been under the high heels of evil for so long, and now she had these high heels herself. It was the fastest way to get the blood flow, and to make them all drunk. She looked like a traffic light, but on one moment, and she didn’t know how, she could lock the Book of Love again. She locked it like she never locked anything before.’

47. Between Vod and Vivam : Verectia, Oblivion (Coincidence)

‘Then the butterfly opened a door beyond her understanding. It was like cruel light was floating like a waterfall into her mind, burning it from inside out. It was a pin of fire standing before her all of a sudden, and then turning invisible. It was the Invisible Book standing before her. Then she fell into it, and she could only shriek and scream. Something was trying to strangle her, and she saw monkeys all around. It felt like an invisible snake around her. ‘Step into the water,’ someone said. But there was no water. ‘These are the invisible pins,’ another one said. It hurt more than everything else. It was like doors in her head were exploding, and rays of light were falling down on her. ‘How can I read an invisible book ?’ she asked.’

48. Between Vod and Vuro : Ramda, Scorn (The Law)

Key : ‘And after Tamar had defeated the pins of smell and the whole Invisible Book she came to the Dog Throne, a strange hairy white throne with the strangest and rarest jewels like buttons. It was like glass was surrounding her heart, making her feel protected, safe, like no one could touch her anymore, like no one could find her anymore. It made her feel like she had soft feathers inside, giving her the feeling that she could fly. It was opening the world of feelings to her, a third part of the book, but also this part was very dangerous. She needed the dogs to survive here, and she was so glad that these dogs were the meanest of all dogs, as otherwise she would fall in other mean hands. The dogs were at her side, and since she had this dog throne she could dominate them all, all by throwing some pins in the air. She could make them wild by this, and she could even let them turn into wolves and other predators. She was now made of pins herself, all the pins she had overcome and survived, and she could ride her own body now, to control it, to possess it. All these pins she was were like her new weapons, her wild bones, and by these she ruled all the dogs to make them drunk and wild. They were the hunterdogs and they led her safely through the Book of Feelings, the third part of the Book of Evil.’

49. Between Vod and Pi : Rictlan, Heaven

Key : ‘The book finally hunted her down, and she got into a long fight with it. ‘Open the fourth part of the book ?’ Tamar screamed, as she felt herself drowning. I need to have some ground below my feet. But the Book of Evil was merciless. ‘Drown in me, woman,’ it whispered. Suddenly she got so much strength that she could tear the book apart, and birds seemed to come forward from it. ‘There is no fourth part,’ the book screamed. But the birds formed words in the sky, words of gratitude. ‘Tamar,’ one of the birds said, ‘the fourth part is the part of letters to you. It will heal your heart, it will be your medicine in this dark, dark night.’

50. Between Vu and Viram : Spimas, Lizard

Key : ‘Smell has it’s own eye,’ a fourth woman said, almost whispering, ‘it looks like a nipple from which the milk of evil flows, our world. Don’t hesitate to drink from it.’ Then she laid her hand on Tamar’s chest while it started to burn like a sun, and a huge third nipple appeared. ‘This is the mark of all the higher women of the invisible jewel, a mark which is called the Eye of Smell. Transform and re-create our world by it into it’s finest forms. You can do it, as you are the chosen one. We went through everything you went through, and that made us one. Now rise up on your feet, and you will fly alone now, sweetie. We all have to find our own ways.’

51. Between Vu and Vivam : Spanak, Paradise

Key : ‘One day a third sun was coming into their atmosphere. It was the eye of Evil. It was a strange power of love, a scary power. It was the bringer of fear. Now it was okay to love again no one dared to, but very thin streams of love started to fill and touch the fragile heads of those in the surroundings of the Dog Throne. It was a careful love like a temple. No one dared to touch it, and they were running away from it. But there was no escape. The threads of fear were binding them, until real panic struck them. It made them more paranoid than they were, and it even made them autistic. It was the strike of fear, and it opened an eternal sight, something which they feared like nothing else.’

52. Between Vu and Vuro : Pijm, Chameleon

Key : ‘These were the spiders of time, wanting to make her life miserable. Life needed to be flashy, until the bigger spiders would grasp her to lock her up in their dungeons. Some moments would be strong enough to grow under her skin, and to dominate her life by the encore. They would eat from her flesh, they would enter her flesh. They were the big boys of life, slayers. They were faster than anything else so that they could get her interlocked. They would make her hopeless, letting her think that there would be no way out. And old saviours would only make it worse, only binding her deeper. She needed the new saviours, the fresh flashy moments who would never return. To return was taboo, a trap. She needed to be strong, and to stretch out to these moments, and then to forget about them.’

53. Between Vu and Pi : Paam, Beauty

Key : ‘Weren’t we all each other’s food, and weren’t we all devouring each other by our fires we couldn’t control. Everything was so out of order, yet so in line, like a breeder’s land. No one could do anything about it. We were the gingerbreads, the bakers and the eaters all in one. Tamar wore such an amulet around her neck, as she had awakened to this reality, and it was good. It was okay, it was a certain state of mind in evolution. It was a result of the allpowerfull tides of venom, and there was nothing to do about that but just accepting it. We were the gingerbreads laying on the beach of the primeval, waiting for the big fishes to eat us away. We were but fishes on this beach waiting for the bigger ones to take us away to their caves. We were nothing but sea-banquette. Everything was growing in everything, like a complicated web. And it all formed a trap for the bigger things. It was like the rudder on a ship moving the ship to a new direction. To the island, please, where we can all lay down our dreams, to see everything in a new light.'

54. Between Viram and Vivam : Zkum, Ring

Key : 'There was streaming something in her heart, a new light, like the savage perfume, enlightening her brains, her head. She smelled it, and it opened her feelings for the new world, this tropical island. She had been too long in this tight embrace and she could finally free herself out of it by shaking it away. She crept towards the lights on the island, and she found out : There was nothing but deception, there was nothing but evil. And it enlightened here, and she got peace with that. It doesn't matter anymore when it's in a different light. We will come where we need to be.'

55. Between Viram and Vuro : Spazumen, Sexuality

Key : 'So she gathered the jewels on the island, and started to build cities and villages, and then she left to enter into the deeper jungles of this island, finally to reach the other side of the island to swim to the next island. How deep she had come into this place of evil she didn't know, but she wanted to reach for it's core. It was just an adventure, so nothing mattered anymore. It was all just a part of a bigger story. And she found out that the story was the only one who could deal with the powers of evil. It was something deep in her heart. Something which had to be the core of this all, yes, it was the story, an eternal story, so big, that it would rise to take possession of it all, for there was nothing but that. The eternal story had created and bound all these hearts, letting them go down under in eternal growing pains to reach for the eternal growing pleasures. And what is the pain by something you can't reach ? It is the hunger.'

56. Between Viram and Pi : Basblau, Health

Key : 'Fairytale is muddy waters, when you drown you meet the horror. Fairytales are deals with death, sweet oils to prepare you for torture.'

57. Between Vivam and Vuro : Baspijmen, Flower

Key : 'Fairytale they hide a lot, and you know it when you reach the key, it opens up the mouth of a bigger monster. Fairytales are lullabies, soothing the dragons to sleep, but it's waking up the bigger beasts.'

58. Between Vivam and Wo : Paspau, Horizon

Key : 'Dreams give the keys to nightmares. Ride them, wake them up, so many spears between you and me.'

59. Between Vuro and Pi : Nissas, Almightiness

Key : 'We need some bigger beasts to make it through the days. We need some bigger nightmares to wake us up. We need some bigger lies to guard the truths, all between me and you.'

60. Between Vuro and Wo : Zamen, Sun

Key : ‘This is the end of the story. This is the end of an old friend. It’s time for the insides. So make a dive. This is the end of you and me, this is the end of all these lies. This evil has to stop, for the queen of it all passes by.’

61. Between Pi and Wo : Kapau, Underworld

Key : ‘Nothing but silence. Nothing but a memory. Give me some gravity and walk with me to the end of this night, to the end of this darkness, to find the last little light. There is no flame anymore, no love and no passion. We do not have a heart or soul anymore, for everything has grown cold after this trip. There is only a small little light, at the end of this ride. So take it up, it is the key, for another ride with me.’

2. Those who have done the fourteen initiations reach the crown. They become kings. Then they will be the leaders of the wars, and they will be prophets of Her. Hail to the scorpion-lady, as she has laid the red egg, the egg of blood, from which all new form rises. And her daughters will brood this egg, and they search for knights. They will be pregnant for eleven days, and then they will give birth to the red of dwelmell. When you have come to the city of dwelmell, oh traveller, know that it is a demon city, a city of blood, and they wait for you. It is to initiate you in the gnosis, to remove all fear, to have the fear of Her instead, as she is the woman to be feared.

3. And write the fourteen initiations on the walls of the city to save your soul, and to become a citizen, and teach them everything from this book, and they will teach you, as you have come closer to the fire. And the fire will purify you, and show you the gnosis, and you shall ride on tall horses, and you shall be proud to initiate the holy ones into the gnosis. Yes, the ground below your feet will be holy as velvet and red-brown leather. Hear then the words of the gods of the old, the wild ones, as they have grown in the desert to be tall bottles for those who are thirsty for the gnosis. Hear then these words, and write them on the tables of your heart, as you have coming closer to the city of worms, where She dwells, in the heart of her garden, and she will speak the words of wisdom to the elder ones, and the words of knowledge to the younger ones, and she will give them dreams. Oh, let her nightmares warm your heart, as she is the Great One, great of knowledge and strategy, and those who follow her will not be disappointed, not now, and not in eternities, as they are the children of her heart.

4. Oh, come closer to her, as she will share the words of her heart, and the depths of her gnosis. She will weave her paths on your face, and she will ride you like a donkey, as you have her crown. Come closer to her, and let yourself be initiated in her temple, and take her crown again, and give her the crown of succubi as a worthy sacrifice to her. This then is the book of challenges and of hearts. You will not be frightened by the riddles she sent to you, but you will love those, and you will decipher them by your lust for blood and books. Yes, you will reach out to her in darkness and filth, and she will give you her sword of grace. Oh, come closer to her portals, oh visitor, and she will lead you through her doors of fire, and show you her city. Let her lust be your guide, as she speaks from primeval ages, wanting to put the gnosis in you, as the eternal tablets leading you to indestructible love, as she is the mother god of love. Let her warm you and seduce you, and let her guide you to her daughters, to initiate your soul, and to take you away from the father god who has bound you all. You have been crucified in dogma by pharisees, but She will destroy them, and will raise you from the cross.

5. Let her guide you to her wild garden, and let her guide you through her deserts. She stands before the portals to knock, and they will open, as she has directed her finger at the fruits of the tree of the gnosis, appearing into the doors of fire all the time. She is the memory, she is the guidance and a guard. She is the nightwatch, and the fish of love in Tebul. And she warms the hearts of millions, and she has the succubi crown, to be a mighty ruler forever. We have come before your throne, and we ask you to lead us. The initiators of the gnosis. They are your holy inquisitors of gnosis to terminate all literal things, and to enlighten those who have come to Her daughters, by gnosis.

6. They are her vampires, the hearts of the gnosis, and they have come together, as that is her desire to raise them up. You are the mother of all mothers, and you have set your bloodlines free. You have healed the Matronit, and you have raised up Asirta. You have broken it's tree and built it again, you have destroyed it's temple, and made it whole again, as you are the Mother God.

7. You have broken the firmaments of heaven, and built it up again by your power. By your power everything stands.

8. You have sought out their books, and they will do you no harm, as you are the almighty succubus, splitting yourself into thousands, legions and myriads. You are the eater of children and destroyer of parent hearts to set them free. You are the warrior goddess and the huntress. You have cloaked yourself in white, and you carry brown fruits like the tree. Your waters are like your hairs, and your benches are tall, white and hairy, like wet velvet. And you dream and give dreams, and you show them misunderstandings and deceivements, and most of all the self-deception, as there is nothing more important but to flee from the illusion.

9. Latsamdette Kardeksam Baskute, hear then now the language of Her, as she speaks to her heart, and let her give you the keys to her daughters. Be carefull when you approach them, as they are wild animals, nocturnal creatures, night spirits. Hikpedettal Pedaktal Contote Connoctal Connoctal Nazurus Rutse. And I give you the words of Her, for you to meditate on it, and to see it as a riddle, and not as a literal gift. There are many roads in these words, and they will lead you through eternity. Quisdifelit Dakuire Kataste Sacha Dachdargas Kagasach Bachstaan Tacherias. Quisdelfit Daquire Dafliorschka Donkwasio Dochwalsch Dazino. And these are the tongues of Her, building a new world and earth.

Wars of the Flies

1. In the distance the soft machineguns and canons were shooting, pulsating, like liquid balls and eggs together, while soft winds surround the targets. The heat is intensive, someone is breathing, like he can explode every second. It's hard for him to leave the plateau, this level, to reach for a deeper one inside. Someone is breathing heavier, someone close to him. They cannot hold themselves up, and suddenly by a wind and a flash, they are exploding into white powder. Now the wind will do with it what it wants, but their souls are deeply gone, gone to another world. Their mouths are contracting, while the venom flows into their mouths. The mountains are high here, while snow and dust covers them, where the sun licks the roofs and the ripples. It was a flyian attack.
2. He has white golden wires coming from his shoulders, while his white golden uniform is blinding the mass. His teeth pulsate the heat, while soft winds surround his attacks. He's a good warrior on his ship, doing flyian attacks. After the battles there isn't always much to do. Sometimes it's really boring for they shot everything away. The webs of wild flies are worse than that of spiders, for it eats everything away.
3. The white golden sun is standing tall, while someone tall, almost bald, leaves the stages to take a boy from the streets. It's just a kid, and now he is in these dark hands. The boy starts to scream, for the Lord of the Flies is taking him to an island. He's coming tall accepting no complaints. Someone gets the tall ornaments, to hang in the trees of their gardens.
4. He's rising up, so sinister now, not a boy anymore. No one could expect that such a child would become such a strange hard man. By the hits he is autistic now, paranoid with sharp arrows. He's a wild fly, built for the kill, growing undercover in so many worlds. He's all alone, and where's the Lord of the Flies now. He stares at the tall ornaments, food for insects, but they are growing taller. He likes to make these circles, stinging through the pictures, to gain the nothing. From here he can grow to the heights. His touch is cool and shaky. He doesn't have an identity no more, while his colours are spreading like ripples and waves, he's heading for the pale, looking for the lost drips of colour. He dives, misses, and then falls away to wait another thousand years for a second chance. He's dreaming, dreamy, shifting his consciousness. Nothing is real.
6. His arrows are sharp, piercing his own back and shoulders, while wires are coming through. He's painted in many colours, while he shows the pale spots. His eyes are dark, waiting for the kill.

7. In the White Golden city they gather, all these white flies, waiting for the kill. They were marked to do the crimes, deep in their nipples.

Bapham

1. There is no other sign keeping you safe from the Wrath of Her but to have the sides of your frontdoors smeared by blood. There is no mercy on those who aren't warriors, and there is no mercy on those who aren't hunters. Only the sign of the vampire is powerful enough to set free, and those who love her carry this sign. Hear then the words of the book of Her so that you will not fall asleep in the time of slaughter. For accurately she chooses the hours in which she comes down. There is no mercy on those who keep their hands away from slaughter, and there is no mercy on those who keep their hands away from sacrifice.
2. Hear ye the words of Her, so that you will be spared in the days of slaughter, for sure they will come, and for sure they will take many away. Live therefore holy, and do not become evil in your deeds, as she will find all those evil-doers and their sons, and she will have no mercy on them, as they didn't have mercy on others. Therefore the strikes of Her will be hard, and no one can hide from her, as she is the Mother God of all.
3. And these are the parts of her being : Vu, Pu, Pi, which are the parts of Her. And those who hear the words of the book of Her and believe in her, no harm will strike them but initiation.
4. Have ye then heard the words of Her, then you won't please her by taking it literal. All her words are symbols and riddles, sent out by the Gnosis, the hidden knowledge. Never take anything she says literal, as then fire will come out of her mouth to devour thee. She is a hater of the literal and those who follow the literal, but those who live by the food of symbols she will set free, and show them the path to righteous. Now there isn't any justice in the literal, but only in the moving and changing of view. Life is a puzzle, and you shouldn't judge. Let the judgement be to Her who knows of all things, and who knows of all things is to know nothing. This is the great emptiness, the source of all wisdom.
5. Learn ye then from the oracles and languages of Brannan and Lbok to save your soul, as you have been thrown into the corrupted languages of evil workers, who designed languages to bind your souls and to lead you to destruction.
6. So then there are several Hanik-Cards to save your soul when the elements start to fall down, and oh pilgrim, reach the secrets and doorways of these cards of the Gnosis, so that your heart will be safe as well.
7. The Hanik-Cards are the cards of the Tall Flame.
8. The Hanik Vuh means the Repeat, and its sound is 'NG. It is the power of the Memory and it is a creative force. It also means 'trauma', but not in a negative sense. It is a way to channel. Therefore the Hanik Vuh is a base for communication.
9. Then there is the Hanik itself, which means powerlessness and paralysis, but not in a negative sense, more as blanco state in order to channel, and in order to have an objective connection, which is a base for further relationship, and actually a form of true sense. Its sound is BOK-BOK, and is sometimes referred to 'ear', which means 'listening'.

10. As you see Hanik is the tall flame as in the binding factor, the glue. The next Hanik-Card is the Hanik Vur, which means both pencil and the Red Sun (Sun of blood and vampirism), and it's deeper meaning is addiction and suicide, not in negative sense, but to block the ego out and dwell in surrender and obsession, as in the deepest grade of relationship, where it becomes intimate and eternal. The Hanik Vur also refers to sensual things but more in the sense of 'depth'. Gnosis is always the main purpose, and this one is for the translation and the analysis. The Hanik Vur refers to the eye, the consuming factor, and of course the stomach. The sound is 'HANIK'.
11. The next Hanik-Card is the Hanik Vuvod, which means fruit and red sun, with as deeper meaning : Remorse. Again this is not in negative sense, but it is a way to make things better and to search for even deeper forms of relationship. It is the 'messenger of taste', an even deeper form of communion, by which hearts start to melt into each other. The sound is 'WOEU-WOEU'.
12. The Hanik Vuhod is the card of fear, and also this one not in a negative sense, as fear makes tender and carefull. The sound is TOK-TOK-TOK
13. The Hanik Cards as cards of the Tall Flame are the Cards of Imprisonment, but not in a negative sense, as you have seen.
14. Then we have the Iro Cards, as the cards of the Horse Flame, which are the Cards of Enslavement, but also : not in negative sense, it is to have a perfect guard and guidance. Enslavement is a form of automatism, a robotic way to keep things in line and intact. It is technology to make things better, and to raise the immunity.
15. The first Iro-Card, the Iro itself means Red Sun (the Sun of blood and vampirism), but also depression and barricade, or 'storm'. It's actually the strike of the whip to wake you up and get you into the right direction. It is not a negative sign, also not when Her Cardreaders who use this deck take this card for you. The sound of the Iro itself is 'SPIR'.
16. The Iro Vur means the Dark Flame, and losing everything by darkness. This is the card of 'death', not in negative sense. It means : 'mutilation', 'impatience' and 'unbearability' in the sense of poverty to trigger the hidden things, which means getting another point of view. This is therefore the card of the derwish, to reach the hidden wealth. The sound of the Iro Vur is 'SPIR-SPIR'. It is a deeper form of enslavement, for the Iro was only the correction.
17. The Iro Vuh means 'boat and red sun', and 'exhausting', 'drought', 'thirst'. It is the card of 'hunger' leading to the sources. It is the card of 'attraction', like the flame of guidance supplying the visions necessary for the travel. It is a path through the underworld, and it teaches how to walk and move, how to get something, thus it is not a negative card, but more constructive in all it's forms. It is the Heart of Darkness. The sound of it is AHWA.
18. The Iro Vuvod means 'boat in water', 'becoming a wilderness', 'loneliness'. It is the card of abduction, of 'moving to another level'. The sound of it is WOEU-WOEU-WOEU.
19. The Iro Vam means clock, court of justice and repressing, dominion. It is the card of process, growth, so this is also not a negative card. The sound of the Iro Vam is D.
20. Then there are the Kaleph Cards, which are the Cards of the Red Flame, which are the Cards of Inquisition. These aren't negative cards as you will see.

- 21.The Kaleph itself means 'boring' and 'uselessness', and sometimes 'rejection'. The cards of inquisition are the cards of awakenings, and this card is actually the seed of creativity, the 'bringer of visions', and actually to channel a deeper force from the subconsciousness. These forces will be translated in the conscious languages. The sound of it is VOBOK.
- 22.The Kaleph Vod means 'helplessness', 'accident' and 'failure', which is to correct a certain channel. The sound is VOD.
- 23.The Kapleph Vam means 'oversensibility', which opens a new channel. Kaleph Vam also means : 'man with bow and arrow', or 'broken arrow'. The sound is CHU.
- 24.The Kaleph Vuh means fear of chronical pain, fear of hell, and thus fear of time. This fear develops wisdom, and thus is the Kaleph Vuh the card of wisdom. The sound is IR, which also means 'harem'. Thus Kaleph Vuh is also the Card of Harems.
- 25.The Kaleph Vur means Unreachability, and Flee-ing, sometimes a Deathcase. It develops Knowledge, and is thus the Card of Knowledge. The sound is TOK-TOK.
- 26.Further there are the Varu-Cards, which are the Cards of Blood, the Gnosis, or Hidden Knowledge.
- 27.The Varu Kim means the bleeding man, and the red one, or the red bowl. It is the Card of the Pig-killer, the one who pierces the veils of the gnosis. The sound is KIM.
- 28.The Varu Wurg means : 'bleeding ox' or 'hair', 'hell'. It is the card of the treasures of the Gnosis. The sound is WURG.
- 29.Varu Weel means : 'bleeding cock', to care, to get it done. It is the card of the creativity of the gnosis. The sound is WEEL.
- 30.Vu Varu means : roots, beginning, startsign. It is the Card of the White Blood. The sound is VU VARU.
- 31.Varu Jou means : food and light, to get it done, to care. It is the card of transparent blood or ultra-blood. The sound is JOU.
- 32.Further cards many Her Cardreaders use are the Initiation Cards taken from the Book of Indian Troll Vampire Flies.

12.

The Indian Troll Vampire Flies Book

1. Oh, Mother of all, and Mother of all vampires, you have showed yourself to Caine when the father had sent him away to the desert. You came to him in his wilderness, and gave your blood to him, and your magic. You taught him of the seven suns of blood, and you turned him into an inquisitor of the gnosis.
2. You have given your children blood to drink, and you have led them to the seven suns of blood.
3. Yes, She is the Destroyer of all Literal Worlds, the Destroyer of all those who follow Literal Worlds, and she is the Goddess of Pestilence.

4. And thus I came to the seven suns of blood, by the branches of the Vampire Tree, as they were pathways to eternal meanings, by which I could feed my heart. And I saw Her standing on these suns of blood, She, the Heart of All. And I worshipped Her, and she raised me in blood, to stand close to Caine, our son, and she showed me the secret of blood, the meaning of blood, which is the gnosis, the hidden knowledge. And she brought me to the Tree of Blood to baptize me, and I got enlightened, while greater darkness fell on me. And she said : Is there a greater light than darkness itself ? And I desired the dark, and I delivered myself to it.
5. And I spoke to Her, and she made me shiver, and she showed me the truth, which I had to test in all my journeys through the Underworlds and Upperworlds : She was and is the Mother God, despised and rejected by Jehovah, because she didn't want to believe in the literal world, and didn't want to submit herself to mankind. As mankind was the creation of the literal. And therefore She shall return again, and she will bite the head off of Jehovah and it's snake. And she will be worshipped all over the planet, as her heart will warm it again.

The New Temple

6. Welcome to the temple of Her, where the bitter fruits of purification are, and the further fruits. Welcome to the temple of the Mother God. There will be no one in this temple but those who have had the initiations of the Book of the Indian Troll Vampire Flies, and there will be no one in the new world but them. If you do not have this book, then simply pray for the twenty initiations, and pray that this book will come to you, as it is the portal into Her Temple. She is the One Who Dominates, as She is the Mother God. She has overcome the Lion. And thus is her name : 'More Than'. Now she is sitting on Her Throne, as the Age of the Mother God has begun. And these are the words coming to me with urge and purpose. I couldn't hold these words in me, as they were burning like fire.
7. She had abducted Joseph, the one she loved, and brought him to the underworld, to make of him a vampire and king of indians. She mocked him, but it was the force of Love, as she is the Gnosis. She is the Mother of all Gnosis, of all Hidden Knowledge. And by this she took him in. She taught him, in day and night, granting him no rest, and thus she gave him the lust to read books. Yes, she made him hungry for the Gnosis.
8. She took him deep into her temples to make of him an inquisitor of the gnosis, and then a king of many inquisitors. And thus she brought him to her deep roots and histories.
9. Listen then to the histories of Her as she came forth from timeless origins. She came forth as a snare. This was based on the hieroglyphs and languages of Lbok, the land of the stinging flies. This trinity contained Vu, the White Stinging Fly, Pu, the Light Stinging Fly, and Pi, the Flaming Stinging Fly. Not knowing this, or not knowing how to worship this, is to fall in the hands of the Wrathful, as that is what she is. It is a misunderstanding to come to Her and to worship her without this, as she will deceive and destroy anyone coming to her who do not have the guards and guidance of this. This is the key to understand this dangerous and cruel goddess, only by her roots.

The Temple of Vu

10. The Temple of Vu is an Almighty Temple. Vu is one of the primal forces of the indian troll vampire flies and their inquisitors of gnosis. Vu is the mother of mothers, and she is most wrathfull, cruel and dangerous. That's why Vu is called the careless, indifferent one. She almost never listens to prayers, and she is a deceiver. To her disciples it is their lust to heal her, but they have to be very carefull not to become her victim, as she is the Goddess of all deception. It is easy for her to hate, and hard for her to love. This all makes the Temple of Vu one of the most dangerous and most powerfull and mysterious temple existing, as she is a trickster. At least you have been warned.

11. She hardly speaks, although she is a teacher. She teaches predestination, about the chosen ones. Those who aren't chosen are called for other things, but she also teaches inquisition, one of the worst existing. So you see : this lady needs to be tempered and pleased otherwise she brings destruction after destruction. This Lady needs healing, and this can only happen when her disciples become holy. And these words came to me, as I came closer to her temple. I wanted to run away and hide, but a strange and strong force took me by the arm.
12. The paths of deception are actually cryptic paths by which she opens her true disciples up to eternal truths. She teaches ascetism, martyrdom, hermitism and symbolism, as the mighty pillars of her temple.
13. After her initiations, I was nothing more but her willing slave. Her teachings enlightened me, through riddles and oracles, and she gave me the lust to read books. I was broken by her, lying like dead in a desert, but with my last strengths I reached the oasis, which was bigger than my dreams.
14. I know her inquisitors stand around her holiness and the holy of holy, and after all this I was one of them.
15. And I discovered why Vu was so wounded, and what was the source of her anger, and I saw that she had been cut away from another triangle which was her roots. It was her trinity, and it was based on the time-system of Lbok, the land of the stinging flies.
16. And I made a system of worship in which the two triangles would be connected to each other. And thus it became an indian piramid, existing in two parts. And it soothed Vu and all the others. And this all opened the temple of Vu to attract the chosen ones. And thus I built a new temple and a new initiation-system, and Veherun made me her scribe and archiver.

Initiations in the Temple of Her

17. These are the words to describe the initiations as a pathway through the temple of Her holding the bloodlines of Her. The initiations are based on the hieroglyphs of Brannan and Lbok. Here are the initiations in her temple :
18. Initiation 1. Ham – Brown Stinging Fly

This is said to be the hardest part of the initiations in the temple of Her, as here you lose all your faith, your worthiness, and you actually start to fear things like hell and punishment, to be damned forever. It starts when the wrath of Her comes over you, which makes you insecure and even confused. Some disciples get this at a young age, and others when they are older, but trace your life back to see if you already went through this initiation. It is fundamental for your relationship with Her, as it is the Fear of Her falling on you, which is the source of all wisdom and knowledge, and the force of all channeling. When Ham shows up, the Brown Stinging Fly, it is like descending into hell, into everlasting damnation, and it can come like a scream or a shriek, but it's actually to initiate you. Also She has the teaching of predestination and inquisition of the Gnosis, but it is never literal. All is symbol.

19. Initiation 2. Eliave – Dark Dream

This is also a hard path, as it is a path of pain and fear of pain, but remember : all suffering is initiation, to take you away from the literal, and make you an adept of the gnosis.

20. Initiation 3. Ammoth Vuh – The Soft Flame

Ammoth Vuh is the fly coming out of the Red Sun, which means to be reborn by blood, coming forth from blood.

21. Initiation 4. Ozof – Ice

This is the path of further detachment, also from rationalism.

22. Initiation 5. Kaleph Vur – Unreachability

Brannan Book of Gates or Book Of The Fourty-One Hours Of Brannan

1. Temup ; Sea of Quin ; The cat slays a spider, and a fly comes forward. Then more flies are coming forth. Behind this enormous sea there's a land called Temup, with the city Domom. The city Domom has a lot of gates which can be accessed by certain poetry and riddles.
2. First Gate : Gate of Uprightness. Key : These horses are blind my dear and they will be deaf at the end of the year ...
3. Second Gate : Gate of Honesty. Key : It's all hidden behind trees and flowers ... desiring to be discovered ... Back to Brannan, not afraid of the hidden rage ... and the hidden riddles waiting to be puzzled out it needed to be ... a hidden message ... for it was too private ... just for you ... Back to Brannan ... not afraid of death ... for it can kill you if you come too close ... When they once saw you ... they will never let you go ... until they pierced the thing they saw
4. Third Gate : Gate of the Conversation. Key : Trips to Brannan, He with the green wings ... he with the wings of the ornament ... He's making me smile ... I'm in Brannan again, on the wings of the wind ... It's the nothing ... but yet so full ... yet so chaotic ... but it's just a higher order. He has bananawings ... and he smiles ... while he's crying inside ... crying sand ... He with the tenderwings, making hearts so sweet. His wings are so light and fragile ... it's making me cry with all these soft candles in the storm ... He gave me lionwings and pantherwings to fly, he helped my heartwings and my liverwings to reach for brannan's hills ... glittering in the sun ... These are ashes from the ashes ... coming from high urns ...
5. Fourth Gate : Gate of the Farmers' Domain. Key : In the distance the soft machineguns and canons were shooting, pulsating, like liquid balls and eggs together, while soft winds surround the targets. The heat is intensive, someone is breathing, like he can explode every second. It's hard for him to leave the plateau, this level, to reach for a deeper one inside. Someone is breathing heavier, someone close to him. They cannot hold themselves up, and suddenly by a wind and a flash, they are exploding into white powder. Now the wind will do with it what it wants, but their souls are deeply gone, gone to another world. Their mouths are contracting, while the venom flows into their mouths. The mountains are high here, while snow and dust covers them, where the sun licks the roofs and the ripples.

6. Fifth Gate. Key : He has white golden wires coming from his shoulders, while his white golden uniform is blinding the mass. His teeth pulsate the heat, while soft winds surround his attacks. He's a good warrior on his ship, doing flyian attacks. After the battles there isn't always much to do. Sometimes it's really boring for they shot everything away. The webs of wild flies are worse than that of spiders, for it eats everything away.
7. Sixth Gate : Gate of the Brannan Warriors. Key : Watch their ornaments.
8. Seventh Gate : Gate of the White Warriors. Key : The white golden sun is standing tall, while someone tall, almost bald, leaves the stages to take a boy from the streets. It's just a kid, and now he is in these dark hands. The boy starts to scream, for the Lord of the Flies is taking him to an island. He's coming tall accepting no complaints. Someone gets the tall ornaments, to hang in the trees of their gardens.
9. Eighth Gate : Gate of the Red Stripes. Key : He's rising up, so sinister now, not a boy anymore. No one could expect that such a child would become such a strange hard man. By the hits he is autistic now, paranoid with sharp arrows. He's a wild fly, built for the kill, growing undercover in so many worlds. He's all alone, and where's the Lord of the Flies now. He stares at the tall ornaments, food for insects, but they are growing taller. He likes to make these circles, stinging through the pictures, to gain the nothing. From here he can grow to the heights. His touch is cool and shaky. He doesn't have an identity no more, while his colours are spreading like ripples and waves, he's heading for the pale, looking for the lost drips of colour. He dives, misses, and then falls away to wait another thousand years for a second chance. He's dreaming, dreamy, shifting his consciousness. Nothing is real.
- 10.Ninth Gate. Key : His arrows are sharp, piercing his own back and shoulders, while wires are coming through. He's painted in many colours, while he shows the pale spots. His eyes are dark, waiting for the kill.
- 11.Tenth Gate : Gate of the Dominators of the Quin-Sea. Key : In the White Golden city they gather, all these white flies, waiting for the kill. They were marked to do the crimes, deep in their nipples.
- 12.Eleventh Gate : Gate of them who dwell in Domom. Key : In White Golden Ornaments we are free.
- 13.Twelveth Gate : Gate of the kings of Temup. Key : He heard the White Golden.
- 14.Thirteenth Gate : Them of the fourty-one hours of Brannan. Key : your guide to softness, bringing you to the hearts of Brannan.
- 15.Fourteenth Gate : Gate of the Second Wheel. Key : Hail to those who have survived the strikes, for they have become softer and softer, by the glues of Brannan. They have been struck by a fever to become healthy. They have been struck by chaos to become ordered, Yet they are wild. They are the wild men, the wild boys, becoming raiders, while they are sleeping in trees. They have become darker and paler. Hail to those who have survived, for they have been struck by confusion. Their hands are cold and their hearts are hot.

- 16.Fifteenth Gate : Gate of the Home of the kings of Brannan. Key : Open the pyramids of Brannan. King of Brannan, give me the keys to your home. I bow to your holy sands. Give me Jericho and Sodom. Let me destroy the unholy goats who guard the gates of tallness. Give me the hoofs of goats to let me rise. Let me rise from the seven kettles of the goats. Let me be ashes from the ashes, smoke from the smoke, as your holy servant, lead me to eternal paths. Guide us, into the eternal pastures of Brannan.
- 17.Sixteenth Gate : Gate of the Home of Brannan. Key : Here is where our home is, here is where our hearts are. Oh, Pyramids of Brannan, show us the holy feathers, and let them rise in our hearts. Show us the depths of Brannan. Let Jericho and Sodom rise. Bless Brannan and the White Golden, the Lord of the Flies. Bless our king and emperor of Brannan, and give us access to the rivers that lead.
- 18.Seventeeth Gate : Gate of the Weeping. Key : Lead us through the sunsets of Brannan, through it's halls. Brannan, bring the feathers in our lungs and eyes, so that the red stripes can come over the enemies. Let us make jericho rise. Let us rebuild it's walls. Bless her walls, bless her. Bless the lights of Brannan, and bring our hearts to our hearts.
- 19.Eighteenth Gate : Gate of the Land. Key : I come to the White Golden of Brannan. Brannan is the Jaw, the ashes from the ashes, where the power to speak dwells and the power of silence.
- 20.Nineteenth Gate. Key : Jericho ; Let the milk stream from Jericho, by white pink treasures, they take flight .. to become the towers of the sea ... Let the milk stream from Jericho. These are of strange leather and wool ... there's honey streaming from Jericho ... where the trousers run ... they drink from iron boots ... while they ride the rabbits ...
- 21.Twentieth Gate : Gate of Jericho. Key : How many songs of Jericho does it take to rise the foundling. These men are golden statues ... they were all prisoned .. in kisses of death ... The records turned red on that day, the rivers turned blood ... Hot in the North, cold in the South ... It was a matter of melting and freezing ...
- 22.Twentyfirst Gate : Gate of the Kings of Jericho. Key : She had to swim through one almost frozen river ... to reach the tops of a new island ... where she would be tall and stretching would she be tall enough to realize what she was now ? tall emotions moving ... she was flexible now ... not frozen anymore ...
- 23.Twentysecond Gate. Key : It's spiralling from the Red Eye ... Sodom's Eye ... This is the world so strong it claims your mind ... to possess and possess having raiders darker than men ...
- 24.Twentythird Gate : Gate of the Son. Key : Under helmet smoke.
- 25.Twentyfourth Gate : Gate of Oblivian. Key : all written in Brannan.
- 26.Twentyfifth Gate. Key : It makes my view so small, and then it starts to cry. It made him tall and thin ... ready for the next strike of Brannan.

27. Twentysixth Gate : Gate of the Pear. Key : For all with Brannan's smile, bending low. It's spouting in the air, great danger. It's the tower stinging it forever.
28. Twentyseventh Gate : Gate of Wittepixho. Key : She paints the names on the walls of jericho ...
29. Twentyeighth Gate. Key : The walls of jericho are rising They were hidden in the hollow ... they were hidden in the pale Can we build our towns here ... and forget about our futures ? You have the rings now ... don't fear ... They are getting paler.

43. These were the Forty-One Hours of Brannan, the Gates of Domom. Everyday the traveller needs to travel through these gates. This is also the course of the Sun of Brannan.

1. OPIR ; TOKTA ; The Great Work ; There is no God but Her. You will not have other gods before Her face.
2. Her eye goes over the earth to search for the unquenchable corn. Yes, the earth is doomed because of Her Will.
3. There is no God but Her, who strikes the hearts of human children, and let them melt away in their cages.
4. Forever She beats the slaves of darkness, and lets them descend into the abysses of darkness to an everlasting disgust.
5. She loves those who do good. Heavily She punishes those who hate the good and love evil.
6. Why do you follow gods who are no gods ? She sits on Her throne and laughs. She is pleased by your toil, but those who love Her She grants grace and all the good. And the path on which the believer follows Her and serves Her She sows abundantly.
7. But the fire of hell waits for the unbeliever to make his copper melt, and the inner seed. Then he will be an everlasting disgust, because He hasn't served his Mother God. Those who make a liar out of Her will go to a terrible fire of darkness which will gnaw at their souls forever. No, there won't be salvation for such.
8. But those who love Her with all their heart will have a burning hope in an everlasting light.
9. There is only one Mother God, and She thrones as One. The path to the Mother God is a path of darkness and depths. And the unbelievers will burn in the hell, but for believers there is eternal life. Do you want to hear wise words ?
10. There is no one wise but Her. Listen therefore carefully to these words and do what She says. Why would you miss your trophée by doing what your heart says. Isn't She then more than your heart ?
11. So the fools follow the desires of their heart, and these go to the death. Blessed are those who have Her as their Guide. There are so many cursed ones who went into doom straightly by the path of hell.
12. Yes, She laughs on Her throne when evil-doers get trapped in the ropes of hell, yes, when they are dragged down by nets.
13. She mocks them, and lets them descend in fear. Yes, many times She humiliates those who have lived unrighteously. She is Wrath. She has no compassion with the unbelievers, but directs them to the stone of destruction.
14. And what have you seen ? Is Her Eye not more than your eye ?
15. Those who believe in Her are hunters before Her face.
16. Yes, they hunt the unbelievers, while there is no one who heals. Yes, unmerciful is She to those who show no mercy.
17. They will burn in the hell, while there is no one who quenches. Yes, She will beat those watchers, for Her Eye is more than them, and burns to destroy them.

18. Yes, She will cut them to pieces, while there is no one who saves. They have taunted Her and live under Her judgement now. Merciless will be the judgement over those who haven't shown mercy.
19. She will cut them to pieces and burn them, immersing them in boiling blood and the worst fire. And they will carry Her mark forever in their memory, to an everlasting disgust. Yes, they will tremble before Her face, all those unbelievers, and She will take every protection away from them.
20. Yes, She will peel them, and laugh when they will gather in despair. There is no God like Her. She will beat the unbelievers by belts, and pierce their jaws by hooks.
21. She will lead them to the darkest of hell waiting for them. She is the great destroyer, and no one can escape from Her grip.
22. She dresses Herself with the skins of Her enemies, and She pierces their teeth to subject them. Yes, their bones are Her ornaments.
23. She has many slaves and captives, and in one Day She will destroy them. This Day is coming soon. Therefore : Fear Her, all who stand on the mountains, for She brings you down. Those who are unbelievers fall hard.
24. See then, She is the Great Mother God, and She wages war in Wrath and Righteousness. She eats the flesh of the great, and hunts down those who call themselves Her children.
25. She will hang you high at stakes and trees, those who have despised Her. She will uproot those prophets and letting them sink in fire and boiling blood, where they will have their home. Is it up to you to put someone next to Her ? She hunts down all idols.
26. No one can stand next to Her with success. See, they all melt away. In their own blood they will descend, and they will see their flesh in strings. A great slayer has risen, She is the Great Mother God. Yes, an almighty ruler She is, a God of War and Hunt.
27. Therefore fear Her, and believe in Her fierily. Come therefore, oh you believers, you who have taken part in the Great Holy War and the Great Holy Hunt, and have died in it.
28. Yes, a cruel God is She, because cruelty was done to Her.
29. And then you will regret the things you have done, but there will be no grace. Not now, and not forever.

15.

3. To escape, just to escape. For every step is a market, and you know it is to enslave us ...Is there one way out here ?
4. If your kiss is big, if my mouth is too fragile ... Who eats who ... Or is that life's destiny to die in high ...

17.

1. Troll in temples and opiums, cups of torture, beds and chairs. There's something going around the tree. She's having many breasts. When she speaks her spells, I fall. On the tree of torture she grew like a cloud, she's big soon Wait awhile and you will see
2. These are the spells, this is the wine It will hit the nerve of somebody, will make someone win, and someone lose, and so much misunderstanding, and so much fears let them all fall, and the numbers will show it all after the fall and I must wait till it will open
3. Troll trophies on the wall It still looks like a big carnival Didn't know that this is life, didn't know it would get so strange after all I have tears in my mind, I cannot think, I have been stung by a strange fly, and there are strange waters in my trousers
4. Troll trophies in my mind, it's spinning around, I drank from the cup of torture, trying to touch the right snare But it's all too far away from me, I must die in this place, and then like the wind I will be
5. I find my ways through these dark dark forests where your echoes are still dwelling, tricking me, I will never find you, but who are you ? I guess I'll never see for it's all too far away from me I must die in this place, to become like the sea this sea of tragedy so who will follow me ? It's almost in my grasp, I have been hit by a cup of torture, there's fire in my head, I'm now liquid like volcano's lava but all I see is trolls instead all I see is trolls instead
6. I'm creeping through the dust and coming closer I can almost touch you. The morning comes out of the night, like a ship with high sails, full of pride Trolls coming forth, with their tall knives Shall we go deeper so much space inside And the lullaby needs to be fed we can't stay superficial And the lullaby needs some bread We must do it now, can't come out of bed Too heavy to rise up The belts are too tight She's a warrior of trolls she hits
7. She hangs in the trees, between tears, between griefs She hangs in the trees next to me in a torturous tree, made by trolls, made for you and me They call it life, they call it machinery But we are dead, and this clock it ticks for our destiny Shall we run to the fortress high on the hill, I have seen a glimpse My mind is killing me And my skin is soft like silk, after you stung me I have been stung by a strange fly, have been tortured by strange trolls, cannot do anything about it, and still it is killing me I have been stung by a strange fly Please, please tell me why My thoughts are killing me There's strange guilt and shame like heavy weights around me, pulling me down, I cannot rise Are they truths or are they lies They fill me with hate and bitterness And you are the rejection in my veins rejection in my veins
8. I'm so lost in these forests, almost dead, almost dying, I'm getting through to you, on the other side, where you are waiting just a few inches, I'm almost there, grasp me by the hand, and take me in All you are doing is stinging me All you do is attacking me
9. I am a football of all these giants They made a stairs of me as a path for all these liars Can't see the truth no more All these lights are blinding me blinding me forever They break my bones again and again, whenever they step on me, so I get velvet knees, my skin gets softer everyday and they love the red becoming brown, and all these pale pale edges Everytime they walk on me, they sting me, deeper and deeper, until I give my smile away and then they can breath breath again Sleep away in satin sands, far away from me

10. I am like the statue they use me for their wines, and their honey, it's coming out of me, when they sting me What can I do In pale snow we are today It's not like yesterday Do you see those horses Shall we ride away Grasp my hand, open your heart, bloom away with me, like blossom coming up from hell We made it to the afterday
11. Hierodules never marry They live in deep celibacy and virginity They live behind glass in the temples and opiums Like predators they wait for the strike Don't throw your hairclips to them, for then their eyes and hair will change and they will start the fight Warriors after all, these guys are all warriors after all Touched by the troll, in deathrealms they live Their lights are bright, and then the fire begins There are soldiers in Ham, tailors rise between them, was something between you and me, something between you and me
12. I was just your prisoner, but now I have escaped you see The forests were dark without you, but now I have seen the light Now I am the hierodule Green flames from the temple and the opium Making my head so insane Green hearts coming from a cup, I drank together with all the other slaves After all this torture my bed got wings And she's still the rejection in my veins
13. I think I lay myself down on this bed and never stand up again The leather pleases me, and all the soft feathers It gets wings, and it stand up itself, I'm filling the cups A strange fly has stung me, and now I'm here, between all the trolls, and I'm one of them What did the forests do to me There are strange stripes on my cheeks and knee
14. And the waters are dirty, trees are growing Rising to the sun to come back, and then they're telling me Hierodules never marry This tree has wings now since it has touched the sun Trolls do the dance, my skin is soft
15. Trolls always win, until you're one of them, and then it begins So welcome in the world of trolls, these worlds are dead, but what is life anyway ? It all went astray We search for a doctor and find the butcher Search for the dentist and become a slave Now gladiators are rising, and what is life anyway ? They have cursed us, and now we are one of them Is there any escape ?
16. He's heading for the exit, and then he always falls, always the same dream in his head but he's growing tall he's growing thin, like the indian he gets his feathers I lost my way in Ham lost my ways in Ham
17. Where does death bringing us, forests are smiling at us Forests so pale and shiny colours so desirable And where does death bring us across this sea right on the hill to the fortress, where everything, everything will begin
18. We have so much height, so much survey on the trollhives We have so much space, and these forests are so shiny pale shiny pale, like it's taking you away We must live in the trollhives Combs so full of strange knives where strange flies will sing Oh death, how can you win ? Death where is your sting ? We have so much height after the flight, through fire we went in, and she is the rejection in my veins

19. On the trollhives we stand tall While honey and silk is streaming from the combs making the waters so shiny, pale greenbrown like a yellow wonderland taking us away On the trollhives we will stay, like high on the hills, so much survey Here we do the trade Trolltailors leading us astray Stay on the road, make your day I found a piano in the sky Fortress is growing high I will grasp it one day So many stars like jewels of a strange fly Are these sounds truths or lies Must we be silent Silent musicians Deaf players Blind stars letting us fade away Tomorrow we will be prey And prey of what ? Trollhives coming closer We must rise through the spot For what purpose ? Tell me why ? So many stream in the sky, like shiny pale, taking us away It's gonna be better Something's going on Oh yes, it's going to be better
20. On the hills not so far away from here, it will start to begin it's shooting stars in the night, and then all of a sudden so much delight They're slowly waking up these trollflies slowly waking up in disguise, and she is still the rejection in your veins They are slowly waking up wild animals reaching for the top with wings like lions and tigers, so shiny and so pale Look right through them, watch the streams. Close your eyes, and be in a dream Grasp their hands, and slowly fade away Lights are on the fortress Make the trollhives stay Don't let the night fade away
21. There deep in the sand, they're waking up I know it all There deep in the distance someone cries It's coming closer, in the fortress she hides I have a cup deep inside but I'm still nailed to a tree something between you and me Mouths are opening in my chest, mouths with sharp teeth And I am wondering who is with me You are the rejection in my brains.
22. It was not too long ago when I sailed across that river of death I saw the trollhives in the sky, floating down, and then everything exploded, and everything turned green I believe in the right pictures of me Not how you view me I believe in everything fading away It was not too long ago I turned that page Not too long ago And now I'm sitting here, deep in the forests watching the stars without you
23. Streams from my hands I'm watching the green something between you and me turning so pale all of a sudden and then so shiny like yellowbrown waters and I stand tall It's a heavy weight, but it has wings, and I can see the sky The stars are below me now And I reach for trollhives, trollhives in the sky, far above the clouds, far above the things between me and you I got a survey now through death and life but what is life anyway ? Can anyone tell ?

The Beasts of Orion ; Tara and the Hippo Queen

1. At the surfaces of Orion there was a lonely warrior. She tried to make her way by cutting by her sword through the overwhelming chaos of snakes, slime, fleeces and dirt. Her name was Tara from Rhodes. She had a good survey at the deserts of Orion. There were three thrones on Orion : the lion throne, the blue throne and the white throne. These thrones were like floating slippery islands. Tara had to be on her guard against the blinding lights of Orion, which could show up easily, like striking winds. They could easily blind someone.
2. After awhile she came to a misty palace. The walls were of reddish flesh, decorated by skulls and nails. It looked like a dragon castle. Tara went in holding her sword up high. Inside there were meaty webs and many fleeces. By her sword she cut a way through it. Lights tried to strike her, but she had her eyes tightly closed. She was sweating. It was like she was in the jaws of a monster. In front of her was a lake full of white spiderwebs and slippery fleeces where spiders swam. She also made her way through the lake. Then she came to a sort of spine, but it was made of reddish meat and dark bones. She climbed on it upstairs. She was almost bathing in sweat. It was like someone was grilling her. She found herself standing on a gigantic skull.
3. This was Orion TV, a strange intestine, sucking them all in, by winds, fleeces and dirt, overwhelming them by lights. Tara had overcome it, and stood on the skull as a conqueror. She raised her sword and shrieked. This was the place which kept a hold on Mars for such a long time. It was a strange creature, but Tara had survived. Then she pierced her sword into a soft button on top of the skull. The skull started to shriek. It was now shrinking.
4. There were falls of fire here. On muddy stairs Tara climbed further. She could feel the moisty earth again, like it was clay. Tara shouted as hard as she could. Two eagles came to her, big and dark. 'Bring me to the white throne,' she said.
5. The white throne was a city made of rare lionstones, and it was floating at the surfaces of Orion like an island. Tara jumped off from the eagles and slid deep into the city. The lionstones had been covered by webs and dirt. There were fleeces everywhere. In the city there was a strange machine called the Machine of Monotheism. From the machine dark dancers came, mostly women. They were the belly-dancers of Turet. They had been armed by all sorts of weapons. They were the guards of the center of the city, which had been called Turet. Here a skeleton lived having the same name. He was the upper emperor of Orion, and at the same time their religious leader.
6. The belly-dancers were made of a sort of bronze and brass, and they were also cannibals. Tara had to be at her guard. They radiated such a heat that they could easily grill her. It was like they came right out of an altar. Tara raised her sword and slew a few of them. But the skeleton of Turet already ran towards her. Soon she was in the grip of a few other belly-dancers. Turet smiled. It was like Tara was already burning from inside. Tara fell down, and woke up in a dungeon. Turet stared at her. 'Seriously,' he said, 'what are you doing here. I have grown this way. I can't be saved. This is my fate, and what I do to others is their fate. I can't help it.'

7. 'Tell me about your bosses,' Tara said.

8. 'Skeleton-indians,' Turet said.

9. 'Who are they ?' Tara asked.

10. 'They are the ones who once skinned me, and took me to Orion,' Turet said.

11. 'Where do you come from ?' Tara asked.

12. 'Originally from Mars,' Turet said.

13. 'See,' Tara said. 'They do this to many from Mars. They are abductors. And they transform their victims into the most horrible monsters.'

14. Turet nodded. 'But you can't set me free,' he said.

15. 'Why not ?' Tara asked.

16. 'I can't return to Mars,' Turet said. 'Orion is too deep in me.'

17. 'How do I reach those skeleton-indians you talk about ?' Tara asked.

18. 'Oh, just follow the jaws of Reactumat. There is a small car riding into it's jaws and then you travel all the way through his body,' Turet said. 'I will bring you to it.'

19. It seemed Turet was a very nice guy. Soon they both sat into a car close to gigantic jaws. Turet pushed a button and there they went. There was fire everywhere. Turet turned the speed up. Then everything became dark. Tara fell asleep by the smoke, and when she woke up they were there. It was a strange world with the smell of ham. There were fleeces everywhere. It was a white wilderness. It looked like ice, but it was actually warm here, very warm, and soft.

20. 'They guard the stone of the lioness,' Turet said. Suddenly dreadful indians came out of a jungle. 'Why are you coming ?' an indian woman asked.

21. 'Meet Tara, a friend of mine,' Turet said to the woman.

22. 'Don't come any step further or I will cut your head off,' Tara shouted. 'He's from Mars originally, so you have a story to tell to me.'

23. 'Yes, we have a story,' the woman said. 'It's true we have abducted him and even zombificated him. He doesn't want to return to Mars anymore. We have given him the real life here.'

24. 'And what is the real life ?' Tara asked.

25. 'Come with us,' the woman said.

26. Tara went with Turet and the into the jungle. In the depths of the jungle there was a small white sandy hill. They showed her the stone of the lioness. 'This,' the woman said.

27. 'What is it doing ?' Tara asked.

28. 'It's an ice-transformer,' the woman said. 'Look around you. Everything looks like ice but it isn't. It is actually warm and soft.'
29. 'Okay, but what does it do besides that,' Tara asked.
30. 'Oh, it hunts, it kills, just like us. It's a predator,' the woman said. 'The abductor.'
31. Behind the hill there were rivers of blood. There were many lions swimming here, and many lay on the shores. 'Behind the rivers of blood,' the woman spoke, 'there is the lion tower. Those who want to become kings of the universe always go there. They will make the dangerous journey through the tower to the top. The higher they come the thinner the tower is and the more fragile. Besides that, it storms there. There is a small throne on top of the tower. No one who gets there stays long, for the winds will blow him off after awhile. He will crash on the ground, and the lions will eat him. There is no real king of the universe.'
32. 'No one who knows the lion tower dares to sit there,' another indian woman said. 'The winds rule on top of the lion tower. Some said they saw a mysterious fly sitting on the throne at times.'
33. 'And some say the flies rule the winds far above them,' another indian woman said. 'Their bosses fly without wings.'
34. 'So the lion tower you talk about is a trap ?' Tara asked.
35. 'Some sort of,' one of the indian women said. 'And the true rulership of Orion and the universe is a mystery. Why would someone rule the universe ? Why not letting it be done by the universe itself.'
36. 'Well, I'm thinking about those flies you talk about, and also the wingless flies,' Tara said. 'So they are the actual rulers ?'
37. 'No one knows,' the woman said, 'but some think that they are. The lion tower connects Orion to the sky, and they rule in the sky. Rulership is a mystery. And when you become a ruler, something else always takes you over. That is the secret of the lion tower. There is actually no rulership. There's something above that.'
38. 'And that is ?' Tara asked.
39. 'Imprisonment,' the woman said. 'You lose yourself and become grilled and zombified by the powers of the universe you have grasped.'
40. 'Oh, I see,' Tara said. 'I'm here to free Mars from this satellite called Orion who seems to control it for a big deal, but what you say here interests me. And this is the reason why you have the stone of the lioness ? To transform all those extremes ?'
41. 'Yes,' the woman said.
42. 'What can you do for Mars ?' Tara asked.
43. 'I can't do anything for them,' the woman said. 'I can have them abducted to let them stay around the stone of the lioness, but she's kind of selective, you know. She has an army. She's a trainer. She zombifies you to become a part of it, and then she will guard you. She is the one who planted the Lion Tower to test the abducted. Many go there to look for adventure, finally to become kings, but those are food for her lions. They look for entertainment, but they end up in the intestines of Orion TV. They get plugs in their livers and become addicts of nothingness.'

44. 'But what is the meaning of life on Orion,' Tara asked.

45. 'The meaning of life on Orion,' the woman said, 'is to transform the extremes by following the stone of the lioness. We worship her. We approach her, face to face. There are no laws. We are the lawless. It is not about 'yes' or 'no', but about 'how', so of course there are a lot of rules. You need to know 'how' to do something.'

46. 'We are all zombified by the stone of the lioness, Tara,' another woman said. 'We are her robots, but we are alive. She has raised us. In this we are safe.'

47. 'We however also worship the Lion Tower, for it is our guard,' another indian woman said. 'But we can never enter it. We can't even come close to it. It needs to be at a distance. It is a trap for our enemies and betrayers.'

48. 'Okay,' Tara said, 'so 'yes' or 'no' is not important anymore, only 'how', also in the sense of 'where' and 'when'.'

49. 'Yes,' the woman said. 'The lioness stone is our clock and map in that.'

50. 'But who made the lioness stone ?' Tara asked.

51. 'The flies did,' the woman said. 'The wingless flies of Orion who live above the skies.'

52. 'Where exactly do they live,' Tara asked.

53. 'In blood,' the woman said. 'They live in a realm called the Blood of Orion.'

54. 'How did they come there ?' Tara asked.

55. 'They stayed away long enough from the Lion Tower, and got ascended,' the woman said. 'The wingless flies are just indians. They are on the eternal huntingfields, the red skies of Orion. They are elite indians. They have Blood-TV, which is actually a heart, the heart of Orion. Some say it is the heart of the universe. It is the biggest butchery of all time.'

56. Then what was the road to this Red Zone of Orion ? The Python Tower. The Python Tower was like highways into the the sky. It was a dangerous trip, but it was honest at least. They showed Tara the road to this tower and then she went on her path. In the tower of the Python there were all sorts of tall venomous python-tongues hanging. Touching them would mean death. Tara had to be at her guard here more than ever. However the Python Tower was an experiment. No one was the ruler of it. The tower ruled itself. The ones who died here became a part of the tower itself. They got absorbed and sucked in by the walls, and got torn apart and frozen. Tara would never forget these ghosts. They were haunting. They tried to scare her, and begged her not to go further. They were draining her. It was a nightmare. Whenever she slept in the tower she could hear these ghosts making their conspiracies against her. The further she came into the Python Tower the weaker her body became. The winds were sharp and cutting, almost tearing her apart. There were biting fluids like venomous milk trying to bite her skin away. Further on she had to fight the worst pythons. They were tall and big. She needed to escape their tight grips. She had never felt such heavy creatures before. These were the Pythons of Orion. Higher in the tower it was full of flies, and it was very cloudy. Tara had to cut herself a way through it by her sword. Suddenly there was Turet in his Machine of Monotheism. 'Hey, Tara, are you in for a ride ?' he shouted.

57. 'Pick me up,' Tara shouted. 'It's so slippery here.'

58. By the Machine of Monotheism it was easy for them to get to the red zone of Orion. The place was full of belly-dancers. There were enormous dragons here, covered by flies. By strange lightening the red became pale all the time. Whenever it became white it streamed downstairs, to the white zone. It looked like milk, and it seemed to become white by the belly-dancers. It seemed to flow forth from them. They were transformers. 'It's actually called white blood,' Turet said. 'It's the secret of the lioness stone. She has brought forth the belly-dancers by which she can transform the ice, and by which she makes everything soft.'

59. 'What kind of blood is it ?' Tara asked.

60. 'Python Blood,' Turet said. 'Long ago there was a fight between a lioness and a python. The fight didn't seem to end. One day the flies came and turned the lioness into a stone, and the python into blood. The stone brought forth the belly-dancers who would turn the blood of the python into white blood.'

61. 'So you mean to say that the ice was originally the product of a fight between a lioness and a python ?' Tara asked.

62. 'Yes,' Turet said. 'But without the perpetual flow of red blood the white blood will die, and the ice will take over again.'

63. 'Who takes care of that ?' Tara asked.

64. 'The belly-dancers,' Turet said.

65. Tara now understood why the stone of the lioness was of such importance, and the importance of the guards of this stone, the skeleton-indians of the white zone. And who were the mysterious wingless flies who seemed to have made this all ?

66. 'The wingless flies become skeleton-indians after awhile,' Turet said. 'Then they come down to guard the lioness stone.' Turet directed his finger towards stairs of light. These lights were moving. It was the stairs of descension, made of white blood. Turet showed her a lot more falls of white blood.

67. 'The secret of the belly-dancers of Turet is that they are actually mammoths and elephants,' Turet said.

68. 'So they can actually change into women and also back into mammoths and elephants ?' Tara asked.

69. 'Yes,' Turet said. 'Actually the truth is that after the skeleton-indians have guarded the lioness stone long enough they get swallowed by it and they become the belly-dancers.'

70. 'That looks like a circus to me,' Tara said.

71. 'No, Tara,' Turet said, 'it's the wilderness. Actually when they have been belly-dancers long enough they go to the path of the elephant.'

72. 'What is that ?' Tara asked.

73. 'It's a path to meet the wildest creatures of Orion,' Turet said. 'When they return they become hippo's and they will be the leaders of the belly-dancers.'
74. 'This looks like school,' Tara said.
75. 'No, Tara,' Turet said, 'it is the wilderness.'
76. With the Machine of Monotheism they went to such a hippo queen. She lived in a high place, in treasures. It was a dark indian woman, and there were jewels, satin, velvet and the finest materials everywhere. The woman had earrings in, and had been adorned with many more rings. The riches of the white blood were here. Her slaves seemed to bath in it everywhere and drank from it like milk. It had the taste of cacao and cocosmilk. They used it for making bread and crèmes. Wild unknown creatures were her guards. In other realms and planets these creatures had died out, but here on Orion they could survive. On Mars they would have been described as prehistoric, but here they just lived on. Orion was the only place in the universe they could do this. And to Tara this was a special event. She wouldn't forget this too easily. On Mars they could never live on because they were too savage. Orion was a savage world more than Mars, so here they could develop themselves. And this could happen all because of the lioness stone. She was there mother, their warm womb. They could all live because of the elephant path. Here they had their place. And now this hippo queen had them in her care. She was a cruel queen. Tara thought it looked like civilisation, but she knew it was the wilderness. The queen was both cruel and good to her guards. They just had to obey the rules. The creatures were very destructive, and were a threat to the whole universe, so the queen had to protect herself.
77. The hippo queen and her slaves rode on them whenever they visited the jungles. They also rode on mammoths. She trained all of them to become belly-dancers, as that was how she formed her armies. She could use the belly-dancers for everything. They learned how to change into women, and how to change back into animals. They also learned how to use their weapons. There was a man named Skeipnir who trained many of them. He was one of her highest slaves. He knew the tricks of transformation and he was even her personal guard. Whenever he wasn't training the belly-dancers, he stood at her door. Skeipnir was a major source in raising her army to abduct beings to Orion.
78. 'Welcome Tara,' she said. 'My invisible threads have finally brought you here.'
79. Suddenly Tara saw the slimy, slippery tentacles on her head. It was by a strange light she could see them all of a sudden. Had she been mind-controlled ? She had headaches for such a long time. Did they guide her to this place ?
80. The hippo queen showed her machine from which the tentacles and fleeces came forth. They were only visible by the strange light. 'These are the elephant winds,' the queen said, 'easily turning into storms, easily turning into lightening and thunder.' Then the queen started to laugh.
81. 'What is your purpose ?' Tara asked.
82. 'My purpose is to abduct, test, and turn them into belly-dancers. The rest will be food for the lion tower,' the hippo queen spoke.
83. 'Oh yes, I have seen that,' Tara said, 'but what is your purpose with me ?'

84. 'You are very special my child,' the hippo queen said. 'I have watched you from the day you were born to this day. I have seen your birth. You are a good fighter, and you would be a good trainer. I want you to meet Skeipnir.'
85. 'I highly appreciate your belly-dancers,' Tara said, 'and I highly appreciate you. I can teach you swordfighting. But please, show me the real secret of Orion.'
86. 'I will, Tara,' the hippo queen said. 'If you teach us swordfighting then I will give you this stone, which is the secret of Orion, the bestkept.' From behind the queen took a reddish transparent jewel which was like a ball. 'Tara, I will give you this stone, for I know Orion is in good hands with you,' the hippo queen spoke. 'Please stay with us. Don't return to Mars.'
87. 'What kind of stone is it ?' Tara asked.
88. 'It is the stone of the Beasts of Orion,' the hippo queen spoke. 'I will bring the stone into your sword, so that Orion will be forever safe in you. With it you will have access to the savage zone of Orion, where all secrets will be shared with you.'

The Amulet of the Pterosaur

89. It was a dirty place in the savage zone of Orion. She had never seen so much dirt before. There were falls of dirt here, and rivers of dirt, and the most horrible creatures and the largest beasts. On Mars these animals could only exist in a prehistoric world, but here on Orion they were more alive than everywhere else. Savage indian tribes were living here, again races which would be prehistoric on Mars, but this was Orion. They were carnivores and cannibals but they were also like ballet-dancers.
90. These worlds were not like the history-books on Mars. These worlds were crueller, more dangerous, filled with dirt and stench to the extremes. It was more savage. There was no any form of civilisation here or thought. Here there was chaos. There were no laws. It was an untamed world. There was no gentle traffic here. However, the strange ballet Tara saw among the tribes showed a certain pattern, but these patterns were wild. This was the ballet of death.
91. Tara found out soon that it was nothing but a war-dance, trying to take minds away, and every form of balance and security. It was a psychological warfare. They tried to put fear on their victims, and insecurity. It was like a spell to break off the immune systems of their prey. Tara knew she had to be on her guard. She knew it had a high price even watching this ballet.
92. Later she found out that by this ballet they could turn themselves into beasts, or to get possessed by the beasts. They lived double lives. Also the beasts themselves could do such ballet. It was all to protect themselves.
93. The air was filled by strange haunting battlecries showing no thought but intelligence. It was like these beasts and savages had been caught by instincts triggered by each other. It was like fire eating the fire. They had become insane by each other. They lived by fear. There was such a drama here, no thought, no shame, but fear. There was no shame as the fear had eaten it all away. And the fear had been raised by the ballets. There was no escape from this. They had all been caught in a trap. One ballet would stir up the other, and the fear would only rise more. It was a world of dread, shameless dread.

94. Tara was looking for their leader, as she knew all these ballets could hide something. These ballet-dancers could be the guard of something.

95. The strange stone at Tara's sword started to talk and gave names to all the sorts of beasts here : 'Tiguran Ballets, Tangaran Ballets.'

96. 'What is the leading sort ?' Tara asked.

97. 'There are no leading sorts,' the stone said. 'This world rules itself.'

98. Then the stone continued : 'Cynognathus, Allosaur, Ceratosaur.'

99. There were also elephant-like beasts here with jewels on their heads. These seemed to be huge organs of smell. The stone could tell Tara all about it. Many of them were hairy like mammoths. There seemed to be huge cattle here. Some had large heads like horses, and some heads even looked like rabbits. But it was all savage. These beasts were big and different. They were very strange, and they were certainly no easy prey. Actually they were predators. There was also smaller cattle, most of the time having white bodies with swarms of black spots, and big heads like cows and horses. They had the sizes of grown up calves.

100. The cynognathus looked like he was from the bear family, and the allosaur and the ceratosaur looked like they were from the alligator family, all hunters. There were many different sorts of them. Tara could line out those families, also the huge family of the elephant. The first animal Tara could approach was the cynognathus. Although this beast was friendly to her he bit her a few times to drink some of her blood. It was still a wild animal. The stone told Tara that these were a sort of marks of friendship. If she wasn't a friend the beast would have killed her. The cynognathuses went out for hunt very often, most of the time in groups. They led Tara to some of their caves where they lived. They were bloodthirsty animals, and although they were big meateaters they also kept cattle just to drink from their blood. Tara knew she had to be at her guard. She started to hunt together with them to show them her bondage to them. There was no innocent cattle here. There were only predators, and hunting was in this place just a defense, a movement of war, necessary to survive. This was savage cattle. And the instincts went further than she ever saw before. These creatures didn't just hunt and kill. They made prisoners of war. They kept cattle.

101. Often it was for blood. They would milk their cattle everyday for that. The cattle they trapped in that sense were often bloodslaves. Also the other cynognathuses had bitten Tara for blood, and she hoped it would just be the marks of friendship. She had to wait until they would change into indians, something which had to do with the movements and positions of some of their moons.

102. The stone translated all the conversations she had with them. Without the stone she wouldn't have any chance to survive here. More and more they accepted her in their group.

103. She also saw the different catlike families. Some of these cats were horned. Some of the catlike beasts were small, and others were huge like elephants or even huger. It was by the stone she could approach these animals finally.

104. By the stone she also could ride the many elephant-like beasts here. By the stone she got easily accepted.

105. There were also a lot of pterosaurs which were flying reptiles. At the shore of the huge River of Doom there were ramphorhyncuses. They ruled the seas and the waters. The small ones couldn't fly, but only dive from rocks and trees to soar in the air, but the bigger ones could fly and were like giant reptile bats. Behind the River of Doom there was something which looked like a civilisation. One of the ramphorhyncuses brought Tara there. An indian called Untak came to her. 'Welcome Tara, we have waited so long for you,' he said. Tara was surprised that he spoke in her language. He seemed to come from Mars as well and made the same trip she made. 'These people are very civilised,' Untak said, while directing his finger to a village in the jungle. 'But it's still the wilderness. They taught me how to change into a reptile.'

106. A few pterosaurs flew above the village. They had tall necks, wings like bats, and were very huge. Some of them were black, others red, and there were also some white ones. 'They care for the jungle, Tara,' Untak spoke.

107. 'How do you know my name?' Tara asked.

108. 'Well, they told me,' Untak said.

109. 'Who?' Tara asked.

110. 'The pterosaurs,' Untak said, 'the flying reptiles. They are the birds of fire.'

111. 'I knew you would come. You are welcome,' Untak said. 'You will love it here. These birds are the secret of nature. They protect the jungle.'

112. Tara heard the sounds of the pterosaurs in the distance. Untak told her that he could communicate to the pterosaurs by a certain stone. The stone lay in the center of the village in a sort of fountain. Everyone in the village could talk to the pterosaurs by this stone. Untak led Tara to the village and showed it to her. The stone would translate the sounds of the pterosaurs, and would translate everything the people said to the pterosaurs. The pterosaurs seemed to know a lot. They knew why Tara came here, and where she came from, and they were willing to tell her the secrets of this place. They were also willing to show her the jungles and wildernesses here. One day Untak gave her an amulet by which she could communicate to the pterosaurs wherever she was. It was a precious present. She could easily call the pterosaurs by the amulet. It was a necklace.

Marit the Ratwoman

113. The pterosaurs showed Tara how often these beasts had a lot of smell organs in their bodies. This was how they communicated very often. It was also their immune system and their warfare strategy expressing itself in bloody hunts. This was to prevent themselves from becoming a victim themselves. They had been dominated by fear, making them insane, a prisoner of themselves and their instincts.

114. There were also a lot of cynognathuses here. They seemed to have eyes which only worked by smell. By this they were very accurate, and could see a hundred times better than most of the animals. They had eyes of fire.

115. The insectian world was very dramatic, much crueller than anything else. They had hives in which they locked up their prey for blood. And they could make anything of the blood. They could even let the blood clot to stone, and they made huge cities of these in the depths of the jungle. These were the cities of blood. They also called them candy cities, because of the sweetness of the blood. It was some sort of honey. Tara sailed with Untak along all these cities to watch them. It was like she saw the eyes of hell. Tara saw the double side of this story, as somehow they were all prey of this world. There seemed to be no escape as not any piece of this world would survive beyond the borderlines of Orion. It was a trap, and it seemed to be the only safe place for them. But now Orion was in the hands of Tara. She told Untak about the stone, the stone of the Beasts of Orion. She wanted to know what to do.

116. 'All other worlds will die,' Untak said. 'This is the only safe place. The rest of the universe doesn't have a way to transform all the extremes, the ice. They will be eaten by it, and sink away. Also for Mars : this is the only safe place. It is a cruel place, but that is the price to pay. There is no other way. There is only one lioness stone, and only one stone like you have. I saw it in dreams, and it has been in my heart always. That was the reason why I came here. It led me to this place.'

117. 'So you think all those who have been abducted to Orion are lucky ?' Tara asked.

118. 'They have been given a chance,' Untak said. 'but many become a prey of the lion tower. Those who are led by the stone of the Beasts of Orion will be led to this place. They are the chosen ones. They communicate with the skulls of the savages. On Mars they would call them ancient ones, but here they are alive. They never died out. On Orion there is a place for them.'

119. 'You see, Tara,' Untak said. 'The other worlds outside Orion they are based on chemicals, artificial smells. They are not savage, but doomed. They have put their trust in kings. The things necessary for their existence and survival, necessary for their further evolution they called dirt and stench. They drown in their cosmetics, ruining their lives, but the stone you have is an eye working by dirt and stench, working by the savage smell, the breath of Orion, of the wilderness. It is the last flame of life, which is the eternal life.'

120. 'The stone promises a way to freedom, a way to space, although it is a way through time, a cruel substance. However, we can trick time. We can survive time. We are winners,' Untak said. 'The stone has been given to you, a present of the hippo, as the hippo queen gave it to you. Use it well, Tara.'

121. 'How can I use it ?' Tara asked.

122. 'Believe in it,' Untak said. 'It is the best faith there is.'

123. Tara watched her stone. She laid it against her eye and could see a new world through it. She saw her own face in it, like the face of an angel.

124. The River of Doom ended in the deserts. The rulers of the deserts were the skeleton-snakes, who made a lot of noise by the movements of their bones. They were bigger than the usual snakes very often, and they formed houses in the deserts for lonely visitors, wanderers. They would lure the wanderer deeper in the house, and then they would start to move very slowly to turn the lives of the wanderers into living nightmares. By their huge and tall bodies they could become the walls, the ceilings and the floors, all perfectly camouflaged. But they would lead the wanderers into a trap, and then the rats would come to eat from their flesh. By the horror of these houses they made the blood of their victims sweet, and turned them into candy, toys or just dolls. The snakes would break the bones of their victims one by one. Whenever the victim started to find out that something in the house wasn't right, it was already too late. A woman called Marit was the ruler of these houses. She was actually a rat, and her women could also change into rats. They were the only ones who could safely live in the houses. The deserts were full of these doom towns, and whoever didn't know about these traps would fall into it.

125. 'Never go there into such a house,' Untak said to Tara, 'for the toymakers come there, and the candymakers, those who have deals with rats, and they turn the lives of wanderers into eternal nightmares. The skeleton-snakes will begin to move, and soon the house will be hell. The house will crash down and it will feed on the inhabitant, fastening him against a heap of bones, and then the rats will come. Toymakers, candymakers, dollmakers and butchers will finally take the victim away for sale. Don't think it is civilisation. It is savage, it is the wilderness.'

126. 'Where does Marit live ?' Tara asked.

127. 'Oh, she lives in the depths of the deserts,' Untak said. 'She's the ruler there. When they are in need for more victims they abduct children from other planets to let them grow up in such a house first. When they become full grown the house will create more and more troubles, and then finally fastening the victim and showing it's true nature. The rats do all this. They go out to abduct the children, bring them to the houses and being friends to them. They can change into women, you know.'

128. 'Where can I find Marit ?' Tara asked.

129. 'Come with me,' Untak said. He knew a path through the desert to her house. When they came there she stood before the window. She looked like a doll. When she saw them she turned into a rat immediately and ran outside. A fight started. Tara had raised her sword. The rat jumped at Untak and bit him horribly. Tara quickly pushed her sword into the back of the rat. 'That will be enough, Tara,' Untak said. 'You have hit her in her sensitive spot.' The rat fell down. It had a broken spine now, and it was slowly dying. 'Oh, not when I eat from this candy,' the rat screamed, and grasped one of the legs of Untak to bite a piece out of it. Immediately the rat straightened it's back again. Then the rat ran into the house again. 'It heals itself by eating meat,' Untak said with a painful face. 'You will heal also,' Tara said. 'Let's go into the house.'

130. 'You know what kind of house it is, Tara,' Untak said. 'It can be dangerous.'

131. 'We need to go in,' Tara said. 'We do not have another choice.' Then Tara ran in, while immediately the walls started to ripple. Tara ran through the corridors, and saw the woman sitting on a throne in a huge hall.'

132. 'That is kind of dumb,' the woman said. The walls started to move closer and closer to each other. Untak was on the roofs at that moment, and threw a rope through a hole between the bones. 'Take the rope,' he shouted to Tara. But Tara crashed the walls by her sword to have another opening, and then she ran upwards to the throne. Again the woman turned into a rat, and this time she jumped on Tara. They had a wrestling on the ground. The rat bit Tara a few times and she started to bleed. By her sword she could shake the rat away from her and then ran to the throne again. There was a mirror between two jewels on the seat of the throne. By her sword Tara destroyed the mirror. 'I know this is the source of your power, witch,' Tara shouted. Tara knew this because the stone she had in her sword had told her this. But the mirror healed itself again. 'As long as there is meat to eat the mirror will live on,' the rat screamed. Then Tara lay the stone of her sword against the mirror while the mirror exploded, and it's two jewels were melting away.

133. The rat was changing into a woman again. She had become weak. She almost crept towards her throne and settled down on it again, but she had lost her powers. 'Jump away, Untak,' Tara screamed to Untak who was still sitting on the roof. Tara dived away through the opening she had made by her sword. Then the enormous house crashed down to become a heap of bones.

134. Years later Tara and Untak visited the heap of bones again, and Marit the ratwoman still lived there, on her throne, but the throne and also herself had become old and poor. Everything had been covered by spiderwebs. 'You don't have to be afraid of the house anymore. It's over now. It's not the same anymore,' the old woman said. 'But don't you know my throne has been made of skeleton-snakes, and I have been made of them too. Don't you know that after great draughts they always rise up again ?'

135. 'Yes, we know,' Tara said. 'And that is why we command you to leave the desert with your skeleton-snakes, and to leave Orion.'

136. 'But you know I cannot live outside Orion,' the old woman said. 'Then I will die.'

137. 'You will live at the borderlines,' Untak said. 'That must be enough for you.'

138. 'But I need meat to get through the night,' the old woman spoke.

139. 'There's meat enough at the borderlines of Orion. Go there for a hunt, and put your houses there,' Untak said.

140. And thus the borderlines of Orion became a dangerous place, but Tara and Untak had to do it for the sake of the savage zone of Orion. The stone had decided it this way. And it was true, the woman rose to the heights of her powers again, but this time not in the savage zone again. She had lost her place at the River of Doom, and she had lost her deserts there.

The Sea of No Return

141. To Tara it had become clear now. She would stay here for a long time. There was a path to the other side of the Deserts of Doom now. But all Tara could find was more doom. Here the wild cats of Honolor lived, at a strange beach ending in a forest. Again these wild cats could turn into women and they could make someone deaf by their shrieks and cries. Whenever they had caught a victim they would give the victim no rest and no food, finally to put the victim in a small box, which they used for their hives. They were beekeepers, all for blood. In this sense they looked like those of the insectian world. They used the blood to build their cities, candy cities. They mixed it with honey and they transformed parts of it into white blood for creams and making bread. In that sense they looked like the belly-dancers of Turet.

142. The wild cats of Honolor had many ways to get their victims. They had arenas, and further all sorts of traps. They also visited the battlefields after the battles. One of their best tricks was to turn into nursing, motherlike types, in which they could create a hospital sphere. They were very clever in misleading their victims. And still it was no civilisation. It was savage. It was the wilderness. There was no care in Honolor. All care was nothing but a trap. They needed blood donors for their hives. They made the most beautiful cities by their bloody candy. They used to make these on the edge between the beach and the forest.

143. Honolor was a strange world. The wild cats covered it all up. When Tara visited Honolor she was in a fight immediately. In rage she slew many of these corrupted women. She wanted to dominate Orion. She had help from tall snakes, called by the stone. It was an invasion that day. The sky had turned bloodred. It was like the wardancers had come. It was a revolution in the sky. This time the wingless flies were also in the sky, helping her, turning the wild cats into skeletons. Tara didn't send them out of the savage zone, but she sent them to the borderlines of the savage zone.

144. Through the forest Tara reached a place near to an enormous beach where the Sea of No Return was. Between the forest and the enormous beach there was a guard named the Man with the Million Heads, for he had a million heads. Tara had a fight against him for two days. Whenever she cut off the heads they grew again. The only way to return was the Stairway of Fire. Those who would finally reach the sea could never return. The guard used to throw his victims on the stairs, by which they fell back. But Tara threw him on the stairway of fire, by which he fell into the depths.

145. Within a few hours Tara was on a raft on the Sea of No Return.

Desert Queen

1. She had tied her men, while strange insects called 'spanish spears' were stinging them. By the venom they were slowly turning into cattle. The spanish spears not only inserted their venom, but they were also bloodsuckers. They sucked the blood and the juices out of the men, leaving them weak. They had to go through all sorts of marriage rituals to bring them down, and after that they had to go through the rituals of divorce. The cattle was good for work and transport.

2. Tara from Rhodes, a lonely warrior, stops her journey through the desert when she comes along this bright realm of the desert queen. Quickly she finds out what is going on here, and she starts a massacre, finally to behead the desert queen. With the head of the queen she holds by her hand she sits on her throne. 'Spear not the cattle !' someone is shouting. But soon a spear goes through the head of this person.

3. She loves the cattle but she is not aware of the curse of the desert queen. An army of sand-people is soon surrounding the bright realm in which Tara thrones now. They walk slowly towards her, coming from the sand, and soon Tara is put into a torture cage in the depths of the desert. The cage goes down as by an elevator. It leads to underground worlds below the desert, where the spanish spears rule.

4. The queen of the spanish spears could also turn into a woman. She came close to Tara.

'Well, well,' she said to Tara, 'so you have defeated the desert queen, right ? Just know that the desert will always exist, and replace these queens with something even worse. As now I will become desert queen.'

5. Tara was allowed to come out of the cage, and the queen of the spanish spears took her place. Soon the cage went up as by an elevator. Tara is alone now, but she is glad she is free at least.

6. Meanwhile the queen of the spanish spears possessed the men in the desert realm, living inside of them, living from their meat. Tara wanted to know the mystery of the desert, the secret of it, so she went deeper underground. She came into a tunnel leading to the Ocean of Blood. There were strange smells here. When she finally came on it's beach it was very dark and bloody. There were strange insects looking like chains. Another sort of insects looked like knives.

7. She starts swimming in the ocean of blood, and after a while she reaches an island where pigs live. They are chained by the chain-insects, and the knife-insects are living close to them as well. To Tara it seems that these strange insects live from the blood of the pigs.

8. Further on the island, women lived, huntresses. They lived together with hyenas. They kept men in cages who they had starved. When Tara asked about it, they said that they had let the men get stung by the venom of divorce. Tara felt compassion for the men. When the women slept she opened their cages and took the men to the ocean of blood. Together they swam to another island. Here many fruit trees were, and Tara started feeding the men, who were very weak. When the women woke up, they were in rage. Soon they found out that they were with Tara on another island. Tara would protect the men with her life. She knew the men were still in danger. Not only because of the women, but also because of the strange insects who could turn them into cattle. Tara wondered if there was an anti-venom against it. She became very protective over the men, and was looking for a medicine.

9. One day the queen of the spanish spears visited them. It seemed she had changed a lot. Tara asked her if she knew of an opposite force against the venom. 'Oh yes,' said the queen. 'Servil sugar. That is a sugar living in certain big fruits. They are also here on this island.' Then the queen led them to such trees, and gave them to eat from the sugar inside of the big fruits. It was a sugar to restore marriages, and to turn cattle into men again. The queen took care that the men got their women back, and that they had happy marriages again.

9. Oedoeboege ; I take the bottle, there's a paper in it. It's a letter from you, written in pink. Surrounded by glitters. I follow the strange smells to the island, where I step on the sand. I hope to find you here, but there's no one there.
10. Oedoebole ; I must survive here on this island, or move forwards. I stay awhile on this island, and then I move forwards, heading for the horizons of this sea. The sun is reaching for my heart.
11. Oedoebange ; I see ears in the red skies. Please talk to me, I can only cry. I'm so desperate on this sea, I'm sinking deep into your tears.
12. Belip ; Even if I don't hear anything from you, I will keep on talking to you. I feel the beatings of your heart.
13. The eleven parts will do their best to bring you to the heart of the sea. Even when you cannot hear them, they are there, in high determination to bring you there. They will not sleep, they will not rest until their work is done. The buttocks are two baskets under the spine, and between them is a desert road.
14. Wild animals will come from these baskets, but even wilder ones from the desert road. There are sixty jewels on the desert road, leading to the realms of death. And when the ornaments move, I can move, they give me breath, and let them from the buttocks rise into the skies ... through the layers of the spine we travel ... So move your ornaments, let me breath ...

1. This is all about the journey through death, ending in the journey through hell, as purification, and judgement. Not as punishment, but as the giver of direction. If there is any punishment, then that is as an initiation to that direction. You and Her decide which direction you go. There are four stripes, four paths you need to travel on. The last path is the path of poverty, which ends in hell as the flame of hunger.
2. In hell the indians carry two flowers, in every shoulder one, and a flower in their chest. The further they travel in hell, the softer these flowers become ... It is said that Ea was sent to Mother poverty by Mother Hell. It is said that Mother Hell is an old mountainriver-goddess, and by some she is still seen as a mountaingoddess. Of course there are many dangers on the roads through hell.
3. I swear I will not take any food given than by Mother God, for in her there's my flame. I will not have other flames than the flames of Mother God. Mother God, please accept me in your name. I have seen the bird, and he has put his feather on me. I have been sent by the widowspider, and I pierced the heart of Aiach.

4. Spell to heal the wounds caused by Aiach : Nam Haman Han, Hurakko Irom, Haudundi Imech. Na Hamanhan, Hurko Irm Hadindi Mech Tazula'am. Her herbs will clean your brains, according to the purity of your heart.
5. Words by Ea : Come in through the spiderwebs between the fingers of hell. You can now see the fires through the eye of Eo, for he is the seer of fire. His herbs will calm your brains. Now you will be led to Her to be judged.
6. Words to enter the Hall of Judgement : Receive now the rings of hell. You will receive your armour in hell. By poverty, forests of hell accept me, by loneliness the wildernesses of hell will not spit me out.
7. To teach about the stripes of the underground. There is no life without death, and all life comes forth from the death, who is the mother of the earth. Mother God has the lonely paths to reach the heavens. There is no heavens without loneliness, and all heavens come forth from loneliness, who is the mother of the skies and the heavens.
8. She is a mountaingoddess, and she's also a goddess of wigwams and the crafts and arts. Her home is made of the bones of her male enemies, and that's why her present has a deep and sharp scent. In the winter she is a warrior goddess, and in the summer she is the goddess of trade. It is said that everyone should make the journey to Mother Loneliness once in life, and the ones who weren't able to do, will have to make the journey in the afterlife.
9. To make this journey you will have to go through 'stripes', jungles, on this mountain. All journeys through death end in hell, where judgement takes place. It is the place where you stand naked before Her.

1. Receive the new spine. This is the holy Beruboe.
2. Kil ; Savios met the red skeletons deeper underground. He knew he had to walk the path of pain, depression and fear, as the grades of poverty to have enough mysterious powers to fight the red skeletons. The red skeletons were without mercy, and very mysterious. You could never trust them. They seemed to be of the barbarian age, and they didn't speak. They had huge halls, and everywhere they were burning their victims. Often they went up to kidnap and abduct their victims. But it was like they had to feed something ... something which was out of their control ... It was like these beings weren't free ... They were victims themselves ... Savios could trace some deep inner memories inside about them, but it didn't go deep enough to realize what it was. Savios was in despair ... At some points he even couldn't move ... He saw a red fireball in the middle of a hall where he was standing ... The smell was horrible ... It was like he could vomit every moment ...
3. Kille ; Savios decided to go even deeper underground, for he didn't want to come in hands of these sick skeletons ... But Savios failed and came in their hands ... A fight started ... They were ripping off his flesh ... until Savios was a skeleton himself ... Weird powers were flowing through his bones ... It was like he could breath for the first time in life, and this air was so strong, so thick, which he could breath in so deep ... and it had a strong scent. It was like it was feeding him, but soon enough he realized that this energy was to enslave him ... He had to do their jobs with this energy ... As soon as he would object, the energy would turn against him ... Soon enough he couldn't control the energy anymore, and his bones started to become red also ... Savios was desperate ... Now he was one of them ... and it was like they gave him a reward for that ... He got overwhelmed by extasies and pleasures making him accepting all what was happening, and he got too weak to resist these pleasures ... He became addicted ... but he didn't want to ... Something was taking him over ... and it was like something was drawing him to the red ball of fire in the middle of the hall ...
4. Laat ; Savios was staring at the dark bones, and strange feelings came over him ... He saw burning skeletons walking into the huge bones, and he also went inside one of them ... Inside there were tunnels everywhere He tried to find his direction for every skeleton was walking into another direction ... It was one big chaos, and they were all screaming ... Before him a big head appeared, a woman's head, saying : 'I am your ancestor ... follow the grades of poverty to find us ... We have been sunk so deep ...' Savios was shocked. He knew that he could reach her only if he went as deep as her ... Suddenly the bones were breaking, and the skeletons were screaming louder ... Everyone fell into a deep pit Savios was now like a flying mind ... He lost contact to his bones ... He was now like a spirit but very slowly his spirit started to bring forth new bones, but of another sort material ... It was stronger, but also more flexible ... and it was like it was feeding him juice ...
5. Redda ; Kisses of pain to bring the marks. We have to swim awhile ... until we are on the island ... with the kisses of pain ... intestines between you and me ... in Zkum we live ... my heart is turning into an intestine ... a scar ... I hear your words by my heart, and they

Oh, pyramid of pyramids, the seventh pyramid of hell, as the spirit of the first chief of hell. You have raised all his warriors. You are the king. Allow me to have breath to open the seven doors of your pyramids, so that all my souls who are worthy to enter can enter, and so that all my spirits who are worthy to enter can enter. Then when I'm in I will close all these doors hermetically, so that no intruder can enter. I will be the fire to protect your pyramid as my spirit moves forward. Grant me permission to travel further, for you to give me the blue line to pass over dangerous bridges on my track. I will not fall, I will not fail, for your feathers are over me. The blood of hell by which we move. Eighth pyramid of hell, open, for our breath is traveling. As our lives grow we seem to worship it, for it is the shelter of the gods, and the passage to the depths. We have seen it as the guard of the treasures and tombes of hell. We enter through the seventy gates of the urn. We are now free in the pyramids of everchange.
10. Hinnik ; You are the fifth pyramid of hell, longing to open your mouth and eat, for the rivers are dry and without food, to make us as candles in the night. You will not give me the helmet, but the first chief of hell will do, for you are servants. Counters of hell, I command you to be silent when the first chief of hell speaks, when he multiplies himself throughout the sunlights of hell and the sacred fires of voice. You are servants of the helmet, and servants of the first chief of hell. You will not rest or sleep, for you need to persecute the attackers of the helmet to protect the one who's wearing it.

33. My eyes are hurting me, they never speak to me, they're only watching, writing down the lies, My eyes are hurting me, yes, they are killing me, To so many things I'm blind since I used my eyes, The trickster had given them to me, but now please take them out, or are they protecting me against the voices too loud, My ears are hurting me, they never speak to me, They only let me hear the lies, they only come to me in disguise, There are so many things I cannot hear since I started to use them, The trickster had given them to me, but please now take them out, or are they here to protect me against the sights spinning me around, Since I used my eyes, I never see true beauty, only the things pushing my feelings around, They are nothing but raising the screens, Dance, I will be your boots, will be your breath, will be your movements, Dance, I will run to you, I will climb over the edge to say goodbye to my eyes, to get a new friend, goodbye to my eyes and ears, goodbye to the skies under my feet, goodbye to all the tricksters who tried to get me underneath, Dance, dance, let's push the screens down to let them be streets in your town coming alive, Dance.

34. She stepped on my eye, she pierced the strange drum. Then explain me, teach me, how can I read this cryptic files, how can I understand them, as they're making my life so miserable, it's cryptic tragedy, hiding a message I need to know to fly away into a deeper fantasy, feeling myself in locked up tragedy, as I can never split these two, they belong together, as the eternal cryptic paradox, the mighty vibration, keeping us alive, transforming it all in right translation, but where do I find the key, or do I just have to wait and die.
35. And then the trickster came to me again bowing down before me, taking my hand, telling me the translation and the misunderstanding belong together like a cryptic marriage, it's legal, but sometimes it's taking an unknown bend of ignorance, like cryptic adultery.
36. So all I must do is finding out about the cryptic marriages and their cryptic adulteries ? Do I wish to stay in such strange situation, is there any escape or a better view ? Can I break or leave the screen, or must I worship the cryptic marriages and their cryptic adulteries ?
37. Finally I'm searching for the perfect screen, deep enough to touch and feel, deep enough to pull away and escape, I know this process can only be safe in a sexual tax-machine. Everyone belongs to each other, everyone belongs to everyone, while a trickster steals away the screens, for a cryptic transformation, we will never be the same.
38. These nipple screens are killers, they have killed the screens of kisses, they have torn away their blankets, they have torn away their smiles, they have broken all the bottles they left behind,
39. These nipple screens are killers, you see visions when you drink their milks, it's turning all the pages, it lets you feel their morningskies, but too much feelings would burn you away, so sometimes they would bring back these kisses-blankets to take it all away, to leave you into waters cold as ice, in loneliness forever you will find the dice, and then play the game again, let the nipple screens arise again, to bath in milk and sandy-lands, to finally understand, it was all a game of tie and untie.
40. Come, I can finally hear your voice, Come, I can finally watch you, although it's in the distance, Yes, I can see you bathing in my milk and odors, it's turning all the pages, to the pictures in the sky, Come, I can finally feel you, who you are, there are no clothes between us, no masks, no disguise,
41. Come, take my hand in this nipple wonderland, our heads and minds come free, as we freed ourselves from our buttons, to now be you and me Yes, our hands and feet come free, a sexual tax-machine has saved you and me, for the milk of love is flowing pumped through all the stations, by the Big Heart.
42. Come, she is free, her nipples beat, like the hearts, all our dreams come true, there are no screens between me and you, only some nipples to let the milk pierce through, opening so many hearts between us, but still we have to tie and untie, or otherwise we would lose this delicious love, Teach me the language of cryptic sex, It scares me, and I have to run away,

Feeling so small, feeling so ashamed, It's like this isn't my destiny, It rips me apart, I know the giant stands above me, It's having me under it's feet, I'm watching the screens, Teach me the language of cryptic love, It frightens me, I have to run away, Can I watch it from the distance, under the Giant's Feet, or I will float away, teach me the lessons of cryptic love, make all the words sound softer, for otherwise it won't work, I am too sensitive, but baby float away, for in the night I'm a creature of horror, taking it's prey ...

43. Teach me the lessons of cryptic horror, I am like a werewolf in the night, losing all my borderlines, losing all my laws, like I am turned upside down, I do not understand this, my love, Please can you explain to me and dry my tears, I am so ashamed, inside I am pierced, by the laws of a different land, please understand, there's a creature of cryptic paradox inside of me, Do I need to run and hide, I can't escape from this night, But maybe all I need to see is it's message coming to me, and finally be free, though I will always be a prisoner inside, I am the slave and the king, I am the predator and it's prey, Something strange is living inside of me, Like I committed the greatest crime, but reached the greatest serenity, But it's only in my mind only a dream fading away when you take me in I'm living in a cryptic paradise with you, I cannot move, Finally I can move the nipple screens to have some communication between you and me. Finally I can direct the milk to different streams, I'm beginning to learn what you have taught me, But still I am under the Giant's Feet, not able to run, I'm tied, I cannot breath, Please give me the ability and the powers to move the screens of his heavy feet, The pressure is too much, I'm breaking inside, there's no way to have some compromise, But finally I learn what you taught, I'm beginning to move the screens of the giant's feet, I'm beginning to direct the food to different streams, i can divide, I can perfectly split my mind ...

44. This game is now in my hand, I'm telling everyone I can now rise, and I can bend, But then some other guy is putting his feet on me, there I go, I cannot breath, I can only die, I have to move the screens of his feet, to come alive, to split my mind, to decipher the cryptic lie, The goatman and the chickenman has put their feet on me, they are pushing hard, piercing my childhood dreams, I can never understand them, as they speak in different language, I have to decipher this misunderstanding. But finally I learn what you have taught me, the game is still in my hand, I'm telling everyone, I can now rise and bend. The pigman and the oxman had put their feet on me, they are pushing hard, piercing my childhood dreams, but finally I learn what you have taught me all the time, the game is still in my hand, to decipher the crime, I can see the tragedy in your eye, seeing all the tears you cry, and I am moving the screens, I'm sending cryptic messages to you, but you don't believe. You think you have lost me, I have thrown you away, but I'm closer to you now, I am moving all the screens of unbelief, I can turn it around. I am moving all the screens of hate, but still this bird of unbelief is bringing me down. I am moving all the screens of depression, finally to get a message through, I am moving the screens of fear, finally you see my hand coming through, but you're hiding away in a tear, I am moving the screens of anger, I am not a stalker, but your saviour, I am a sexual tax-machine, Help me, I am weak, but when strength comes, I do not know my strength, help me, it's like spasm, I cannot direct nor predict it I am out of control, so weak, but yet so strong. I'm a cryptic primeval orgasm coming through, I penetrate your mind, don't touch me, I'm before you, just bend a bit over, I will touch your face, and then just run away, it's over you ... and it will never leave you this orgasm will penetrate your life ... There's a new screen before you new visions and dreams

Someone is only teasing you, for also the white orgasmic lullabies will all march away

God's Table

- 46.The white orgy from paradise, just a beautiful woman like a mind full of lullabies, like a jelly-fish from heaven walking slowly to the edge, all the sacrifices she has to bring tonight, it's driving her insane but still her baby inside sais no one is to blame She's a cryptic sovenir from a place called hell where ornaments have died not been able to decipher the spell there was a heaven inside Deep in hell, there's heaven, deep in heaven there's hell baby can you tell how can we free the cryptic orgasms out of the deeper unknown prisons of heaven, where angels bleed away, where they have to die to become someone's prey Is it God or something else making such a mess on the dinnertable they eat fish and jelly-fish please free the cryptic orgasms from this place Is God a sex-machine ? There's nothing above a sexual tax machine Is God behind orgasmic screens, eating the orgies like fish and jelly-fish ?There's nothing above a sexual tax machine Who's behind the screens ? Who's eating these babies Can I let them win
- 47.Orange orgasm from paradise, just a beautiful woman, full lips, with an orgasmic knife Can we raise these babies in cryptic paradise Baby can't you see, they're taking all the ornaments away from you and me to donate it to a sexual tax-machine We have to agree It's better like this forget about the orange orgy

Marriage of Prey

53. Can you take my heart away, I don't want to be taken by a Marriage of Prey, These strange religions have so many things to say, While I'm running away, They say I'm a whore, And they call you a liar, But we will still be together, I'm so full of fear, Don't let them take my baby away.

54. This gamble machine with the christ faces, so many gods and sometimes crosses,
Gamble machine with the gamble babies taking my hearts away,
This marriage is aching me, oh Whore of Babylon, take me away,
Oh Gamble City, got a 6 6 6 on my machine, now everything fell away,
Can I come to Jericho again to rebuild it's walls,
Or can I better push some buttons to let this whole circus fall,
Gamble machine with the christ faces and faces of ducks,
Taking me away to a better game, a better gamble game
Game Over (The la-la bird)

55. In the dark nights, gamble machines all fade away,

I cannot move, cannot run, and nobody can hear,
I'm singing : la la la la la la la la la la la la
And then she comes, she's just a la-la bird,
She lets me escape, through the narrow window,
And then she tells all these secrets and stories to me,
Like I'm in hell, cannot reach for heaven's city,
And I say : la la la la la la la la la la la la
56. And then she moves over me, and I say : baby, you're hurting me,
I take my gun, and then I shoot her around the garden,
But then she only laughs and opens her eyes,
And there I see the gamble machines, I start to cry, I start to scream,
I'm reaching out my hands to her, but then she leaves, and I will burn, and I sing : la la la la la la la la la la la la
57. And then we talk it over, a few days after,
And then she tells new stories in full laughter,
I cannot understand her, her mouth is like the gun,
And then she says : girl, game is over, let's take a run
58. Our love was not forever,
Now we're digging in the ground,
Deep in the darkness we find our lost baby,
She grew up, but she's foul
59. We will find our ways back to the wilderness,
We cannot fly, we hit the ground,
There's something deeper, crying loud
60. We watch the screen,
The horror we believed in, it has us in its grip
61. Where the skies will be filled by clouds and high towers,
No one's standing on feet anymore,
Planes only get higher,
To see shocking sights,
There are dolls around the table,
Cannot understand the things I'm telling them

62. Where skies filled by clouds and high towers, bring the planes higher,
We see sights in the poor world,
A mother crying for her baby,
For it isn't there anymore, because there was no food

63. And we get fatter in Amsterdam,
We float too high to do something,
They call us the nuclear bomb,
We laugh and ask for more,
On the moon we don't see anymore,
The earth is pretty, nothing's wrong,
Eyes are closed,
It's dinnertime already, can you pass me the salt

64. On tv dolls behind the windows,
Let them show up, place enough, but we won't reach out, for it's sunday,
And on mondays we all have our own jobs,
we can handle a lot,
Here we all get richer, and we bath on Mars,
In champagne, getting blind in golden rain, breakfast is healthy, eat the brain,
To laugh is to live, and those who die are insane

65. Where skies get filled by clouds and high towers,
A voice is calling, but we are too far away,
Fattened up in our cars, we let the dolls go home

Girl

66. girl, full of lies, she comes to me in disguise,
She has skeletons underwater, in her boots she breeds the thunder,
Cannot argue with this girl, sending big brother for a thrill,
Her sister smokes, she has her style,
She never listens, only to her sister's cry,
It's a family-thing going around the table,
From a girl you never win

67. Showed her the red machine one day,
She never found her way out,
She found her cowboy deep inside,
She feels so safe now, and all I do is float
68. girl, full of lies, she came to me in disguise,
She came to me in her helicopter,
Fell out of it to be my doctor,
She's playing the clown again,
But I'm not her automaton,
Showed her the red machine today,
Game's over now, and she finally feels safe

69. In her boots she breeds the thunder,
Can't bring her home tonight,
She's with me in red delights,
Can't bring her home tonight,
Wait for the morning, sending you her sights

Mysterious Girl

70. Mysterious girl, like a picture in my head,
She's made of liquid feathers and she looks so sad,
Wasn't she a doll I would leave her, wasn't she like a statue I would deceive her,
Mysterious girl in my hand, in my head, it's breaking me inside,
Mysterious girl, I'm inviting you to my world

71. Mysterious girl, made of plastic waters,
Made of tears, of fragile years,
And she still looks so sad,
Was she happy then I would leave her, was she of flesh and blood I would deceive her,
She's a rubberband girl, stretching like the waters, waves get so tall, it walks against my walls,
Come into my world, I'm opening my portal to your world

Red Girl

72. And I was said, I ran to the forest, where a red girl stood,
And I said were you red before, and where is your wolf,
And she said : wolf is gone, please come with me to a place where we belong

Automatically I took her hand, and she made me understand,
So many tales underneath her address,
She lives in number sixtysix, found her toys, was she the one who had done this all,
It was all a big big carnival
73. Underneath your words there is a waterfall of tales unheard,
Underneath your pretty smile, ghosts are dancing there for awhile,
But you never smile, you never smile, it was all my misunderstanding, I don't know why,
You're a sad girl, you're a smart girl, but it was all my misunderstanding,
For you're a wild girl, loving to do the carnival, loving to deceive me

74. There are places I better not come,
With all the time-bombs, not a good one,
Can I trust you, is my question,
Better not taking the risk, but you have already grasped me,
Are you a martian girl, where wolves don't dare to come

75. There are places I better not come, is it your place, is it you,
Maybe I am a wolf myself, and that's why I dare not coming to you,
I would freeze, you would thrill me, you would shatter me, you would eat me,
But I have so many tales to tell, to bring you under the wolf's spell

76. There was a red girl, trying to deceive me, in the playground she decided to hurt me,
I almost fell down, but then I decided, to come to her in disguise,
Let's do the carnival, let's push the buttons of our hearts,
Let's believe the red girls statements, wolf is gone, but his spell is still raging

77. This girl, she told me tales, I was her doll, I was of her age,
But since the mask came off, she remembers me, I am her deadly stuff

Stop

78. There's a time to take your head up, take it in the skies,
There's a time to take a plane and to head for paradise,
There's a time to lose any game you have invented,
There's a time to watch the tv of your neighbour's,
System watches you, moving to your neighbour's neighbours,
All they see is you are getting through

79. There's a time to make your mind up, make it real,

There's a time to steal a fantasy from someone real,
There's a time to play the game you have always looking for,
Even when you didn't find it yet, just play it,
Dolls are on tv, dolls are on tv this summer,
Freezing your whole memory

80. There's a time to stand up and rise,
There's a time to let it play on without you,
There's a time to make it up, before you lose your mind,
Lose your mind, make it all stop

Soldiers of Love

81. They want to get my attention, these soldiers of love,
Making nasty movements, taking all my hope away,
I know it sounds strange, but when they speak it's hurting me,
While soldiers of lust always take me away

82. My baby is staring outside the window, while soldiers of lust are in the air,
Coming from the mountains, having so much to share,
There's passion deep inside her heart, she takes the soldiers in,
They're telling her keep quiet, telling her she'll never win

83. Soldiers of love, soldiers of ancient times telling lies,
But soldiers of lust, they'll never win,
Soldiers of love, full of nasty lies, it never satisfies,
But all these soldiers of lust, always full of compromises,
Always full of trust, the lies will capture them,
While no one understands them,
Soldiers of love, they'll never go away

Soldier

84. From far away he comes,
Fires in his eyes, no one knows his name,
The sacrifice he has to bring,
Is more than he can take,
He lost his family, lost his life,
Only to get a piece of old wine and cake

85. From far away, he walks fast,
To find his love behind walls of glass,
you gave your son away,
To become a bird of prey,
Still you say you are so proud,
In God you trust, you say this loud
86. slaughterhouse, dangerous womb,
You abort your sons, a screen of blood,
To entertain the world, it's like Christ and God,
The sacrifice you brought to save the world

Lie

87. I'm still coming from down under,
Cannot see the skies nor the seas,
Cannot see the smiles you're hiding,
I'm just a ghost locked up in tv
88. Your number I do not know,
I just watch the show,
Coming in every night,
To leave by a small light
89. lie, you believe in love,
But the morning after, the kids are growing up,
Not knowing where to go,
lie, you always see them later,
As a shoulder on which they can cry
90. You took so much away,
You are their only hope,
So now they have to survive,
It's the land of the eternal life
91. In this land we never die,
Even in hell they find us, adding to our cry,

Breaking Out

92. Many went through the gate,

But I couldn't find you

93. I'm wondering where you all,

All these moments last so long,

And the walls of time are too strong

94. One day I will break out,

In search for you , I will find you somewhere in the sky,

Like liquid layers you roll there, and do you know why ?

Because I feel you near, although I cannot hear you,

Cannot touch you, but it's like everything's coming through

95. Speak louder, from behind the curtains,

Give me a sign, a trace, like you did before, I know you,

You would never leave me without a good bootlace,

In search for you, in search for your boots,

Your shores are warm, but now I want to see the icycle so erected,

A colder place where I can leave it all

War-machine

96. It all seems clear to me,

You're a warmachine to me,

Undercover, that's your trick,

So no one believes me, you're making me sick

97. It all seems clear to me,

You pushed the spear into me,

But you covered it up by fairytales,

And now I doubt myself,

You're looking like an angel to me

98. Tales you tell like no one can,

Do you ever sleep, did you kill sandman,

War-machine, machine of angels,

Come closer to me

99. People say you're so friendly to me,

But when they're gone you're killing me

100. You give orphans a home, to breed them for slaughter,

You give orphans a home,
You're a war-machine undercover
101. And what is this war about,
I do not know,
No one believes me, but I know you're just a show,
You're telling tales to let everything look pretty,
You never sleep, always busy,
To push the spear a bit deeper,
Far away from the surface, while it all becomes prettier,
I know what's happening inside,
It's an addiction, where can we hide
102. Can I make a deal with you,
Taking you away to something unreal,
Nothing matters anymore, it's our point of view letting everything go astray
Can I make a deal with you,
Can I take you out of the real,
Path of compromise is what we want, point of view is turning in our hand,
Can I make a deal with you baby,
Me on high heels, you on the border,
Together we walk out of the land, point of view is changing in our hand
Cocoon

103. And I know, you're so adventurous, dangerous,
And I know, you're reading books to escape from us,
It's better for us, I know it's also strengthening you,
I hope it will be all a cocoon

104. These chains are scaring me, I must agree, this love is not forever,

105. Hunterman of passion,
Hanging there like Jesus Christ,

I must say it's a good disguise,
For no one knows it's you this way

106. Through the sound of silence, and the colour of darkness, I always hear your voice, through the wet velvet curtains and fleeces I always feel your emptiness descending into me, embracing me like there was nothing between us, so much to fill, you're gliding through me, searching for my hiding energy. with a bow and strange arrows of emptiness and silence, you try to deceive my guards, to get a hold of me. Like the emptiness you flow, while you descend along the multiple stages of the world of tomorrow, where no one reigns or rules, only some fools are searching through the ages, all what they have left behind, some stones and some strange rods, awakening their own prides. Like a madman gliding from the mountains and the borderlines of view, into the forests there in the midst of heavens, where all dreams come true, I can only say my heart belongs to her. While she's descending along all these layers, she pierces herself in my shadow, where the lakes begin to enter in.

107. Here I sit again, thinking about all what went wrong. I do not understand myself, like something is hiding itself. Come my confused child, let us forget about the morning, it's now evening, the night is falling, overflowing the afternoon. With a soft embrace you will reach the morningskies, where you can forget about all these yesterday's delights. Grasp the new day, ask for some access. Only a small gate will do, we will slide and our shadows will rest.

Language of the Soul

108. there are rippling layers in you, in the atmosphere above you your soul can hide. It's the language of your spirit shining through, it's the language of your heart, bringing you all these days in blue. Ask a little bit access, our souls will glide, leaving our shadows in the night. Ask a little bit access, we don't need much, only a drip of consciousness big enough to keep the flame of love burning in our heart. A little bit of love is all we need to hold these tears in our arms, to soothe these babies, letting no one tearing them apart.

Lullaby

109. you must fly, fly away, you cannot stay, there's a world ascending in your mind, where your soul can play and hide. fly, you cannot stay, these years float away. You can follow them, and I would love to float together with this day. Bye Bye love, float away, on the month of love you will fly away, will always keep you warm, just keep on moving along this tall embrace. Bye Bye love, run away, to the worlds we cannot find today, yes the morning brings you there by grace, so bye bye my love, don't stay, let your mother buy you some roses today, cannot come this way with you, got some other things to do So bye bye my love, swim away, these seas are longing for you to embrace, well the islands will for sure run away, but you can float away to their hiding place, bye bye, love, float away, these days are almost over, please give them a new way to ...

Strange desirable fight

110. the days are getting stronger, holding me so tight. I am fragile, I am like a thousand times too late. I am fragile, you win in this strange game, cannot survive your strike, cannot stand when you hit me, please do not continue this fight. I am about to escape your tight embrace, cannot fight the morning so I must just die, here and I will fly away, where all my lullabies let my soul escape out of your basket full of roses, of our love, we used to fight, dying deeper into this darker night. I cannot hide when your tear takes me away, it's like the morning of an indian soldier throwing all our games away Silent nights throwing it all away, and then I'm longing for this fight again, just to get a sight, an old friend's delight. Fly again, my underwear is too heavy to translate, fly again, like a stone, a waterfall, I'm sliding down to the beginning of our dream ...

Talking to the Dead

111. Soft mornings, I'm standing to receive my goddess in an embrace of a thousand years ago. I'm watching the dreams where she started to melt away. It's my destiny to stand on my own again, like the hermit, like the penetrator of the soul, looking for the flow inside, drawing me to the pool, where your love unfolds. I stopped dreaming since that day, looking for a silent place, Can't you hear my soul, silence is my soul, can't you see my spirit, dark is my spirit, to develop price for virginity in a lake as cold as ice, where you died so long ago. It's the chemistry burning away the old days by a fire we cannot control.

Exit of Hell

112. These roads we must not find, they're leaving our souls behind, just want to die in your love, to hold the pencil of the dead, escaping all these wonderful roads leading to hell instead. These words, I try to explain, these words, but roses must take the other way, no, don't walk, just take the train, for hell's swallowing all these walkers searching for an explanation in vain. Sympathy, I'm catching the words in the skies of destiny, was a grasp just in front of my eyes, while I will not speak, this secret is torturing my mind, while you, you bow down on your knees to get a glimpse of me. Baby it's in your destiny, to find a breath in me, while the colder day takes you away, you must not miss your train. Why all these explanations while our souls can bathe in extasy. Come with me, take me away, oh child, escape with me, let's die again in destiny.

Lullaby of the Dead

113. Oh, sweet death like lullabies, mother is speaking to me, like lullabies and riddles, she's coming over me ... with a rythm like her wings grasping away my jealousy, she needs a good umbrella, sweet, when she's dying again in silent mystery. Mom, come on, I'm ... Why did this rose die, so young, so pretty, she slided through the houses of unbelief No one knows why she died this baby, crying on her grave, roses growing in her tight embrace, she still speaks to me Why can't you wait for something she tells, the day after it's there on the floor behind the door just a grasp away ... touch her mystery her day, her smile, not that she needs you, it's just her Son, tell me, in silent speech there is no other mother to hold your grief ... Son, baby, this love between you and me, like a fragile bridge between life and death, holding so many dreams of you and me Son, I believe, I must take this grief, and continue on my road to heaven, cannot die here, lovers will find me ... Lullaby of death, lullaby of grief, lullaby of sweet destiny, turn me over, rainbows like my lover's letter, rainbows like my soulrose matter, burning the hell out of me ... burning like the fruit, so many fleeces of loves ejaculating in strange reflecting and bending views.

Sensitive

114. Can't believe the mystery you have sent today to me, or was it just a present from so many years ago, trousers from the flower and the rose. Caught the lights, these purple blue delights from a million years ago, the message was sensitive, like snares shivering in the eternal snow. Saw the fruit, the missing baby, saw her hiding her tears and heart, but the rose could open her stores, her broken heart still broken apart, this boy doesn't have a heart. Sensitive, the air full of sounds born from all these silent years, born from all these missing babies, I'm waiting till they disappear.

Trembling

115. Where do you go, you're trembling, stepping on the traces of the ladder of my mind, with your bow and arrows you need to make some things clear, but I'm not ready for this, so please walk away. Maybe you can return when summer falls, like in a dream you can watch a glimpse of me, there, at the lake, where I always bathe with so many flowers, soft will be your tender embrace. Go away, you hard man, no worries, for I'll feed your wife and children, will even feed your enemy. There are dreams which won't come true, my darling, these are the dreams between me and you, cannot explain how you hurt me when you said you won't be here tonight, so special were these lights, but now they have faded away. Into my arms you will glide for another dream, into my lights you will unfold your needs. But I will go the other way, my dear, for some sweet roses are near. You have loved your family like hell and heaven, you have loved the circle of your friends, like ... it was your only destiny, but now, look further, down on your knees, this little rose, blooming towards your dream. Cannot say I have you in my heart, for I won't lie, you're only in my mind, playing with so many buttons of me, but I'm late, I will leave you to your destiny, with all these roses, oh sure I love you, but you have left when the lights were falling, had to care about these babies on my own, so now it's over, our dream is gone, but please try it later when my heart's not frozen anymore, when you have your own babies running in you ...

Hard Judges

116. It doesn't mean anything to me, cannot explain what you are up to, descending in me, I'm not interested at all, my doors were wide open, but you dived through all my windows, you broke them without leaving a spot, is this my destiny to watch this movie, you're roaring underground, searching for my roots, cutting away my smile, I'm dying underneath your desperate trial. Can I breath, your judges are hard to me.

Temperament ; Black Lady

117. Like the rythm of a long lost dream, you're penetrating soft and wide the illusions of my mind. Descending along the layers of the mountains of my inner sounds, they're melting under harmony and virtuous temperamant, black lady.

Day of Grief

118. in all it's energy, hunting after my dreams to see me, gliding like the rose of a thousand destinies, all swelling in this day of grief.

Floating Back to You

119. I'm happy, your tongues speak a thousand tales, while I can't hear them, I'm only following. I'm happy, like the embrace forgetting about all what you did to me, like the rose's bitterness I see you, my eyes have fallen down, I breath through you, this is past, these days are over, I'm now floating back to you.

My own tears

120. It's an adventure no one understands, these dreams are all in my hand, cannot follow all their instructions, cannot follow all these tears, it's tearing us apart, first I need to be stronger, but now I won't do anything, just let me lie down in nothing, just let me have my own tears.

Run Away

121. glowing in the seas of heaven following you, I see you are afraid, trembling in the destinies of a week ago, but now, my dear dear prince it's time to flow ... away to the glowing in the sea, I've seen it, I just hope it will not run away ... Once upon a time, a rose was dying within my sight, she climbed the ladders of my fragile mind, couldn't help her, couldn't touch her. My love is for everyone, that's why I'm dying together with the one who's coming near. Why do these tears always run away, showing me the treasures of their seas.

Lies

122. When yesterday struck, all these dreams were in fire, while the smoke hid me. Can't you see the windows she has put between you and me, girl you're lost in fire, but that doesn't mean that I would strike this dream. She was always like a mother, soft, her nipples overflowing of the wildest dream making us free, out of the order between you and me.

Mother's All-denying

123. blanket coming over me, this clothe, but I want to escape, falling on my knees. You crowned me, for I was your son, but would I be a beggar you would make me the one you would love all your life as a wife would do. I'm your son, you never granted me any of your delights, but this beggar gets all your pride, you move over him, showing him all your pearls of poverty, all the sweetness of your dreams, your tears, your pains, and then you agree, he pays you sixty dollars, he pays he gives his heart, and now he is one of yours, still the devil's prostitute, still a devil's lovers tale ... And I'm still your son, covered by a trauma, cannot touch her, cannot watch her, she's always hiding like mother's all-denying.

Idiocy

124. hell has struck me, She wants me, Tantalos, I could never break the screen, still yelling, still angry, it hurts my brain. One day I will break through the screen, hell has struck me again, and all you can do is yell. and I'm getting so tired of it, don't want to play in this disaster. Please let me dream again, take me again. This nightmare, a horror in my mind, eating away these skies. Tomorrow never comes, I will ride this horse today. I'm frozen again, in a hall full of horses, bending their heads, it's time for them to pray, for a sinner comes their way. All these laws of books I have broken. She won't be my mother anymore, I'm now an orphan, a foundling in a rose, a beggar in a rose's dream. I'm frozen again, She has struck me and yells again, but I'm so far away, can't understand her language when she prays, her lips go faster than my mind, am I a prisoner again, or am I just descending in a new delight. Fires break through again, me behind the windows, breaking all these dreams again, and fruits are lying before me, like delights, like the black spells, it's coming over me. I have to leave now, no time for all this idiocy.

Tanak ; Foul Indian

125. Foul Indian, descending along the layers of my mind, a rippling tragedy, expecting me to hide. Alarms are following me, to bring me down on my knees. For I need to pray, I need to go my own way, for this devil needs a chance to get to heaven. I don't care about what you said to me, don't care about your dreams. You're fighting against each other, all over me. Am I a good piece of prey for your heavens, where these devils get their ways in these heavens. And yes, I needed to burn in your hells. Foul Indian Rose, descending along the curtains of my mind, wanting to penetrate my conscience once again. Foul Indian, expecting me to bow down on my knees, to say your prayers again. Foul Indian, give me a chance to escape. I'm bowing down in misery, cannot lose my poverty.

Realms of the Martian Smiles

126. war, was descending to me, like the killer's tragedy, silent sounds on his bow he penetrated my destiny, like the shadows on the wall, like the smoke in it's fall, curtains rising up again, before the windows I was in. Wolves were howling, while I was safe behind my windows with her milk flowing, like the flashes of new mornings, her nipples were rising erected, penetrating my soul in so many reflections, get him away from the wolves. Now the fragile mornings raise their bows again, pure separated colours, seven in a crown, they descend, a perfect mark for travelers in these realms of the Martian Smiles.

127. these mysteries in which my soul finds a way to hide, the language of her smile, so full of tears her lips are swelling after the cruel night.

128. On a cold day morning, all the feathers were rising, leaving all these orphans erected in pain, waiting for the strike which lets them quiver in the nights, so many mountains still between us, evergrowing in size, until the surveys share some light. On a cold day morning, I was hiding all my fears, stepping forward in illusive courage, like I was your knight, my dear, like a fragile rose, trembling inside, while the butterflies of my dreams were leaving me side by side, while in emptiness I watched, and suddenly a flash was in my head, melting all the metal of my screens away, I was drinking from the pale, a black fading lullaby, a sandcastle's scream, an ornament of pride now so humiliated deep inside. Fruits of the mornings were swelling, waiting for my lover's bite, but I could only run away and hide, to watch the story behind. I was devastated, intimately horrified, ripped in many pieces, side by side, watching my dying pride. I didn't want to mention it, so I sent myriads and myriads of papers about what happened in the world today, not wanting them having attention for me as prey. Forgive me for these pictures of this rose's dream, a strange strange fruit, of growing destiny, like the fluids of a rose tree finding yesterday's exit.

Nowhere to Run

129. as you glide down into the fragile layers of my soul, I can only run and hide, not ready for this kind of show, this delight. I'm still young, not ready to be a slave like that in these tournaments of fun. I am a child of hell, a child of prayer, but I have nowhere to run.

130. Softly he is bowing his head, he has no friends, for no one understands. He's on his own, the tears leave when he cries. No one wants to be his home, and I'm standing there, watching from the mountain of my pride. Come with me, have pride when you're with me, there is nothing to hide, my flames will find you. Come with me, I have seen your tears, I am your Jesus of the Rose, crucified in your fears. he stood erect, watching my ... Jesusian Pride with strange delight, no one wants to be with him, in fear that he devours them. Come with me, have some pride, I will give you all you need. Come with me, this Jesus of the Rose has interest in you, fly away with me. As he showed his back I didn't see any wings, but he could fly like the melody, a tingling dream. Can I help you, dear sir, you have grown so tall, can I help you in, this lover's tale will bring you all you need.

131. watch the wild coming over you, stigmatizing your lover's bite. Scars and trauma's, play with me, come outside your dens, and throw it all over me, Rivers of Hell, Suns of Heaven, come over me, I am the kettle of your dreams. Strange invocations, challenge the gods to fight, their titles are a rose's destiny. Their marks to doubt, go, wrestle with them, go to Pniel's Rose Paradise. These arena's are good for your soul to grow to develop your lovebite to develop your rose's strike.

132. I'm a mother's lover, a destiny's wind, a Jesusian Scream, I can bring you where I want on my soft roses shadows. I'm the Bragger of Paradise, I'm the Lucifer of all your delights, I'm of misty sands, in the midst of all your dreams you find the icecream's lovers-temple, a mirror's sentimental pride, so sensitive and sensual, but always running away to find the pearls of new shores to enter in. You can never win, for I'm the Rose's Striker, invent me to your parties, invent me to your feasts, I'll make your birthday disappear in fears, so run and hide. Challenge me in a strange Invocation, go to Pniel's Rose Paradise, I bet you have fears to enter the ring, but you'll see it's for your delight. Come ascend with me, I am the Rose's Striker, I am a silly dream, but also one of grief. Do you want to swim with me in these rivers of tears, leading to the seas. Which fishes can you expect there, they found the treasures in their nightmares, they have changed throughout all these years. Enter with me a new dream, in Pniel's Rose Paradise. Wrestle with these gods and devils, throw the dice. Let us walk the puzzle, the playboard, we are living pawns of paradise. Let us play the games, to search for rose's light, it is the language of her soul, the sensuality of her mind, she cannot reach our shores, she just runs and hides, inventing all these games to have some room to speak, to have a chance to release her fears, the rose's tournaments, make all the views bend, rippling like the shattered switchboard-screens as the receptor of the rose's lights.

The Rose's Advice

133. As lights descend in hesitation, slowing down in every trace, like the rose's heart pulsating, it's reaching for the night, where the mothers of yesterday wait for the trains to pick them up again, they didn't lose their sensuality, but it's now under a spell. They cannot move this day, they stand frozen in the stations of the rose. Father is like liquid licorice, but he's a sailor, he never reaches their shores. It's such an automatic soft button, sliding away when you try to push it, like Tantalos idea, still the Torturer of so many minds. As the rose is unfolding in my soul, far away in the night, she's speaking in myriads of languages, her words are shattered, her lights are born in tranquilizing delights. It doesn't matter anymore, it's the way you view a card. You can turn it around to view from different sights, to find the rose's lights. In purple and pink they descend, showing their unique combinations, descending into darkness, ready for another night. You have to learn to stand on your own, my child, you are your own dream, you don't need to be in another ones dream, for you weren't designed for slavery, for manipulating mirrors cutting away your smile.

Stigmata of Lovers

134. like an ejaculation overnight in paradise, no one can hunt for this price. It's something within dreams, something within the waters between these curtains and these fleeces, No experience will guide you there, but the nothingness will lead you higher, penetrating my flesh, for the temple, a sacrifice, stigmatizing.

135. No one can wash this heart of mine, it's too far gone, it's foul like purple flowers along dirty rivers. Jesus was our all-dying heart, pierced by religion and politics.

Words

136. Hail the soldiers. Worship is but an excuse, a demand of the one who has captured us. all these prisoners, who is going to set them free. Hail the soldiers, when She pierced Jesus with all her legknives and her red arrows. Worship is but an excuse, worship is but an escape, let god just rise once again, to share his prayer, to a god they don't believe in. These words will never fail, like the arrows of Her desire hunting for some prey. Worship is just an escape.

Creator Lies

137. The priest is rising towards all the cannibals of my mind. He speaks his spells, and asks me to believe in him. But all these strange movements are just a broken shell. I need someone to pour some wine inside of me. When will I escape all these religions, these pathways to hell, like my father's broken spell. When will I escape these desires of kings and slaves, but who is guarding who that is the question. Creation is an illusion. The creation created the creator, to make their own development safe, they're just distracting our minds. These religions are strange walls they created behind which they are safe in having their own identities, these butterflies, developping themselves by creator lies. I'm an atheist caught by the gods of the roses. They created them in which they could develop their smiles. I was distracted and still I am, for these love spells are eating my mind. Who created who that is the question. Soldiers take your weapons, don't fight creators anymore, but the creations of your mind. Bend the views by rose's lights, to open the seals and portals, to free the rose's lights. These gods are just an excuse. I'm trapped in a web of lies, born from rose's lights, and they're hiding behind you. Who are you ? The roses stang me without mercy, storing into me all their lies, all their sweet sweet roses bringing me into ejaculations of pride. On equilibrium they have built me, on equinox and eclipse, but still I'm asking myself if creators don't exist, I created my creator, all these roses with their lies, behind which I could develop my smile. But this smile is one of tears and trauma, descending through the lakelayers. These smiles are just lights from roses, offering me some pride. How many layers of illusive creations, where does it end, where does it go.

Agony ; Wild dance

138. Can you hear my breath in this wild dance of life. Can you descend into the world of my feelings, to understand me. Can you reach into this heart of mine, telling all these stories, can you hear the story behind it all, it's like a flower pitfall, drawing you deeper inside, into these strange delights, into the nightmare of your soul, where you get born again after the fall. To rise up you first have to fall, to gain light you first need to gain the darkness. Into the darkness of your soul, where the indian howls, so many destinies and riddles undercover, flowing into your conscious layers of destiny. Behold the unconscious world, where your spirit is free to translate, but it's unheard. I'm gathering all your shatters as you penetrate deeper into me, into my shadows, where my grief is still alive. I can be cruel, I don't know why, but I always find myself deeper in the pit of your denial. It's all a denial to me, the way you act, the way you move. Can't you come with me, to watch the story behind this show. Can you still hear the sounds in the distance, as I draw you deeper into the darkness of my soul. You try to call it evil, by your strange sentimental denial, but in the dephts I will break it all. You have called for me, oh soldier, these fireseas you cannot hide, it will overflow, like the sun of the flowerfields, this rose's denial. Watch this show and come alive. I show you the art you've never seen, the art of suffering. I show you the lights you've never seen, by the tentacles of your dream, I raise them up like never before, I draw them to my shores, as I descend into the layers of your seas, your fleeces come over me. These rose's light will pierce you in the fight. The foam of new tomorrows will rise. I am unfolding in your mirrors and sands, like the fishes of your destinies.

139. Do you still call me an evil creature, oh Evil One. Bow before me, I'm the One you do not understand. I'm shifting the layers and stripes of your memory, an invocation, to the rose who was purple but now it's green, in ornamental scene. All these views, like the fishes of your unconsciousness, they're breaking through, you smell the plants of new delights. As I gain my place inside your fearful heart, as I dominate the essence of your other parts. You try to strangle me in mighty caves of the wild. You try to break me in your tight desire. I am laughing at you. I am laughing at you. Behold the night will come to break a piece away from you. Behold the night will raise it's fist against you, oh Evil One, Evil Soul, oh Evil One, I do not understand. Was this misunderstanding the plan ? After this denial I put my fist in you. As I gained the love of the harvest of your soul brandnew. Your lights are breaking in my sight, I see your ornamental pride of the love you once knew. As I come closer to your night, I discover your ornament of light, oh Evil One, you are not the Evil One, oh Evil One, not the Evil One. You're the Deeper One, oh Evil One, Deeper One, not the Evil One. As I raise my lights to open your deeper caves, I watch the slime of snakes you stole from their dens. It's ejaculating in my mind, like the blossom of Hell. There I go again.

The Pope's Marionet

140. Jesus Christ, Son of the Pope, Fire of all the Ages, Jesus Christ, rise to your goal, make your father, the pope, being whole. Jesus Christ, a martyrs paranoia, a martyr in delay, coming to devour you, coming to translate, this message of so long ago, everyone seems to know his name.

141. Jesus Christ, the Pope's Marionet, call him Christ or Satan, that's just the rule of our chessboard today, tomorrow we play the Martian Game.

142. Jesus Christ, Spell, Son of a martyr, martyr's cry, it never ends, will you ever understand, these sight of deserts will bend, showing the oasis in this dream. High above us, Bikerman is biking, his wheels are spinning like hell, he comes to take some prisoners out of their shell. Oh, how we worship you, bikerman, how we watch the days you form in your hands, take us away, our friend, our little friend, don't tease us today. Jesus Christ our sentiment, come along with us, to show you some real pride. Let us escape out of our graves, oh bikerman, the lights of roses are in my hands to make a marionet of you. I am the Tamer of Gods, I am the Tamer of Devils, they're eating out of my hand, I make them understand. I am the boss of all these chessboards, tomorrow we do the Martian Spell.

Her Daughters

143. colours, stripes, like liquid lights, shivering, shattering into myriads and myriads, in the worlds above, waiting for the spear to pierce through the fleece keeping these two layers separated. The spear is weeping, she's crying alone in her bed, like a prayer, descending into me, It doesn't breath, it's standing there, frozen. In this mysterious sea, where She hides Her daughters. But the spear is leading me to them. She's standing there with her bow, charged by silent arrows of preprogrammed ejaculations. Then she pierces me by her spear, telling me the year is over, and I do agree. My feelings want to overflow, but she has closed the door, she takes me with her, by her spear, like ejaculations hesitating in my head, searching for prey, she takes my soul from me.

144. Through her undercave I'm reaching for her shore, where the blossom of hell grows, foul like the indian spell, I can smell, your dirty eyes tell. I reach the bridge, these coming feelings roaring in the seas, and suddenly I stop for I can't have her babies. I turn around to watch her smile, she's sitting on her knees. Then she binds my hands, and shows me she's a killer. After all these nightmares I still can't be myself. Throughout the underworld she reigns.

145. Don't you realize you have to fly, or you will be a pawn again the other day. we watched the skies, where our babies died. We could not save them, for we were just pawns, but deep inside your memory you remember where these fruits flow from. I feel like a pawn today, but I will try it tonight. cannot break the chain, cannot reach the shore. Drowning in these sentiments of a primeval lake. Someone brought me a fruit, this fruit, it was penetrating my mind, descending into my pride. I thought I felt like a pawn, but now I feel like coiling inside, rising up to die, the flowercutter's head, he's afraid and now I'm dead. But my soul finds the thread leading me deeper into death, not seeking for revenge to bite the flowercutter's head, I just follow all these lights deep inside, guiding me to darker places, guiding me to the ghostship of all these lost ages. Don't need a future, I only need to die to travel back again, where I came from, with the lights I have found, to save this child. I let her drink from the waters flowing. I cannot hear her voice, but I'll make her understand. I'm giving her from the fruits.

146. Like lightening she stood before me, the tall light, penetrating so many hearts, like the tear, these lights broken apart. Come with me, do you agree, to enter these worlds, soothing thunder, while cold ejaculations guide the ghostship.

147. I was trembling on my knees, begging her to save my life, as she stood there holding her knife against my throat. It was a nightmare, her mouth was like the threatening kiss, descending to pierce my soul, to steal my bliss. Am I in heaven or in hell, or is this just a shell, like the strange roaring cocoon vibrating like a spell. Her dark embrace, telling me I had died into her caves she drew me, while I couldn't hide.

148. A part of me is saying it is all a lie, while another part of me says it's all real. I couldn't breath, I lost your embrace, until the hard man struck me, I was dead for many ages, can't you see, where can I run to, to who can I go to tell what I need. My senses are all broken, I do not understand. In these seas of misunderstanding I wander for so long, I understand that only weakness opens the eye. By strength we only see illusions, and I don't know why, will you help me to believe in you.

149. to primeval drums and insanity, to find the broken lights of destiny. they surround me, spinning like the delights, where all the dolls come alive, to die again in strange fights.

150. The silences are on my bow, I can shoot to open their barrels, where their fluids of extasy hide. These sounds are only breaths, taking me away, swelling up until they break away, descending tenderly in my emotional vibrations to bring my conscience in delights. I have lived behind these bars for so long, I want to find the caves, the deeper caves, bringing me closer to your heart, All I can do is hide away following all my tears, these threads get stronger everyday, until they are a new cave to live in.

151. I'm locked up in this prison. I'm locked up in this embrace, but still lights are descending here, while they don't belong here. All these ages I'm locked up, in this cage with a strange clock, the fragile layers of my mind and my pride found the broken lights today. My lights are rising up, for She found my cave, she is staring through the windows while my memory breaks ... sucked away into a danger worse than this prayer.

152. prayers are coming over me, prayers floating away, for other gods come here to pray to their gods, all these ladders of the mystery, it brings me on my knees, but I will rise again, my spirit slides deeper to ornamental destiny.

Shelter in You

153. always after all the travels I have to make I always have a shelter in you Shelter in you, place of the softest feathers, when you speak peace breaks through, imprisoning my mind again, I cannot think and calmness flows through me Shelter in you, place of the softest feathers.

154. Your boots are soft like feathers, your eyes are brown, they're telling me, all the things I need to know You're taking me away to my childhood where you heal me ... My eyes are watering, you stand there, like a wall to protect me, like a wall of feathers to keep me soft, and the days you take like a bracelet you're standing there in the dungeons and the valleys of my childhood to break all the chains to quench all the flames of hate You open the doors of my cages for me, you lead me out of my caves into the fresh air filled with licorice You lead me out, I can run through many forests, I am free, and alive and you are standing behind me With a candle in your hand, you lead me out, and cover me by your blanket in my bed You're holding my hand You're making me at peace Until I fall asleep my head on your lap my head on your shoulder I'm weak and I dream

155. As I was swimming towards the mysterious and tranquilizing shore of soft misty flickering and shifting sights I thought I was losing my consciousness because I was so tired. I was almost there, but now I started to lose it. But from my insides a strange strong and concentrated consciousness started to ripple along my spine, giving me the feeling I would survive. Devasted I came to the sands of this mysterious shore. It was like an island, and soft shimmering lights were embracing me.

156. I was in a strange shell, an island in this horrible sea of terror, but more and more I found out it was a fish. It had saved me. Where would it bring me ? I saw the intestines of the fish like layers in the sky, very wet, and their rays penetrated my heart by which a wet strong energy flew up like a well in me. Did I feel this before ? As I was sliding away into my memory I could breath for the first time in my life, and I could mold the memories in my hands like it was wet clay. I had the strange feeling I had been here before, but maybe it was only a small part of my spirit touching this ground before ... I didn't know ... As I was crumbling forwards I realized I was bleeding a bit. Suddenly I saw a dead fish before me. The fish was ripped open, and I could see it's bones. A strange feeling was gliding into me, like I was that fish. It was like lightening struck me.

157. My bones started to tingle in a strange vibration. As I was gliding forwards I realized the the inner realms of the fish who had saved me were slimy. It was a sort of delicious freedom coming from it, for the slime was cold and like anti-magnetic. I always felt I was living in a sea of glue, stuck to everything, while I couldn't move. But this was something else.

158. And I came into a cave where strange skeletons were. They were called the thrillers, and they were strange saviours. A woman was playing the piano, but it was like she was just playing my heart, and I felt strange tingling in my nipples. I had to swallow a few times, as she stood up, and came to me like a watering statue. She was like the thriller having so many other thrillers on her bow. She shot me in the arm. I took the arrow out of my arm ... It was a red arrow. When I watched her closer I saw she was very lionian. It was very strange. Behind her, there was a door, as she was playing the piano again. My wound started bleeding while I ran outside. I came in a huge desert. A leopard stood next to the door, and told me he could bring me across this desert. I said okay. It was a long long trip, like it would never end. In the distance I saw a sort of ghostcastle or even palace, glimmering in the bright hot sun. It was striking me like lightening, but the sight was also misty, watering and shifting. Did I again lose my consciousness so that this fish would swallow me ? The castle was made of fishbones as we came closer. The leopard was still by my side as I had stepped from it's back. As I moved towards the ghostcastle strange things were happening to me. It was like nights and dawns were rippling here like strange smells, and it was like the deeper I lost consciousness, the higher I could rise in it, giving me such brilliant sights. I could go down the stairs which was like a large intestine of a giant snake. Where was I ?

159. Inside there was a cave in which a lot of skeletons stood. Again, they were called the thrillers, strange saviours. In the midst of them a ghostwoman and a ghostman were making love, while butterflies were rising from them. It was like they gave birth to something. Behind them there was a door, and shimmering light came through it. Together with the leopard I went to the door, but suddenly the woman stood up, took her bow and shot another arrow in my arm, and then one in my forehead. I took the arrows out, one was blue and the other was pink. I started bleeding again, while we ran through the door. Some of the thriller-skeletons started to roar. They were like wild cats and strange wild fishes. The leopard knew the road here a bit, and sometimes he said : This way. After a while we didn't hear any skeleton anymore. We were deep in the ghostcastle now. There was a lightening ball appearing before us, with striking rays and lines blocking our ways. The leopard bit into the ball and the ball broke, while it's lights were fading away. 'Damned,' the ball said. And then again he said : 'Damned'. I stepped on the leopards back again, for I got scared. The leopard started to run like never before. We were looking for the exit. But that had to be at the end of this castle. There would be a new desert. After awhile we found the exit and a new fresh desert was staring at us. In the distance we heard the ball still screaming : Damned.

160. The leopard started to run again. I was still sitting on his back holding him tight. He was like a warm friend to me. Again the same sort lightening balls as in the castle started to appear before us, forming webs and nets to block us. The leopard started to bite them like he did with the previous one, and while they broke and while they lost their lights they said : 'Damned' all the time. I was getting sick of it, but at the same time it was a delicious feeling of being released. The leopard was very skilled in this, like he did it before. I was holding him tight, for sometimes he had to jump high. After awhile we came into a cave underneath the desert, where pillars of lionbones were holding the ceilings up. There was a lake there, and also a small boat. As we sat in the boat the leopard said : 'Do not touch these bone-pillars, for they are implodes. When you touch them they explode, destroy and devour you, and then they're recovering themselves.' After awhile when we reached the other side of the lake we saw there strange toadstools growing. Again we couldn't touch these as they were implodes. We saw a monkey playing with a sort of heart. The leopard told me how foolish this monkey was, for it was a time-implode. After you touched it it would only be a matter of time and then it would explode. As we moved further it didn't take too long or we heard a scream. The heart had been exploded.

161. Was there a way to become immune to these implodes ? Or did we have to be paranoid like this all our lives ? When we got deeper into the spheres behind the lake, also the leopard started to become more careful than ever. He said that were we had come now, there were implodes not only destroying our bodies, but also our inner realms. If that would happen, then a thrillerghost would get born inside. A strange ball was moving before us, it was misty, shimmering and went from one side to the other. The leopard said that it was such an implode. It was too dangerous to bite it, even for him. So we crept under it, moving forward very slowly. We had to hold in our breaths, for the leopard told that there could also be implodes reacting to breath.

162. Suddenly I found myself behind a thriller-skeleton on a motor. There was strange gass or strange oil on which it was running. It was moving towards an enormous city. Short after the skeleton stepped off from the bike, and had to take some drink in a petrol-station. He also gave a sort of bottle to me. There was this reddish juice in it, and as I started to drink I felt energy flowing through me, very fresh and strong. When we were driving through a gate, there was a lot of police, all skeletons. He stopped somewhere close to a tall house, and took his bow and aimed at a certain window. From the bow a white red arrow chased through the open window and there was an explosion. I saw a red rope hanging, while the skeleton took it in his hands and started to climb upwards. 'Follow me,' he whispered, which I did. It was already night in the city. I heard the sirens of policecars in the distance while I was climbing higher and higher. When I almost reached the window, the skeleton took my arm and pulled me through it.

163. When we were inside the house, there was also a sort of piano. The skeleton went to it, and started to play. It was a strange song : 'Oh, when you're willing to deceive me, give me some time to slide away. I guess you'll never see it, got to raise these mothers on their way.' A Woman entered in, she was like a crocodile, so dreadfull. She had a bow, with so many arrows in her quiver. She took one of the arrows and I got shot. Then the woman was running away. The skeleton took the arrow out of me. It didn't bleed as much as I had expected, but as the blood came out it was green. The skeleton showed me a tall hall of stairways. We had to move on upwards. At the top there was a door. Someone opened it, another woman. The skeleton pushed her aside and walked in, while I was following. He went through the refridgerator and opened it. Inside there were a lot of bottles, and he started to drink, giving me also some bottles. It was strange juice, very strong, almost sweet, but it was more that of a strange delicious and delightful blend. It smelled delicious, but it didn't bring extasy, but it had more a neutralizing effect, not calming, but neither addictive. It was like it was giving enough, every swallow, every sensation of taste and smell. There was another strange piano here, and again the skeleton started to play it, again this strange song : 'Oh, when you're willing to deceive me, give me some time to slide away, I guess you'll never see it, got to raise these mothers on their way. And again a Woman like a crocodile entered in, and shot me. Blue blood was coming out of me. The skeleton didn't say anything. The woman had already been gone.

164. The skeleton took me to a stairway leading to a sort of gigantic attic, where dolls stood against the walls. Some were in boxes, and they all looked like they had to be sold. The skeleton said that these were the erotic thrillers. Suddenly some of these marionets started to move, taking their bows and shot me. Many arrows, very thin, had pierced my arm. I tried to run away, but I couldn't. It was like I couldn't think anymore. Then they took me away. The skeleton got mad, and tried to help me, but they threw him to the stairway and then they threw him off of it. I was helpless, and it was like strange poison was running through me. They took me to a room, and started to yell at me.

165. Long long ago the bluefoot-waspian were in war against the whitenipple-waspian. Both races were from the blue blooded empire. This war penetrated deep into the heart of the empire, and the emperor thought that he could only stop the war by letting a few members of the bluefoot-waspian fall in love with a few members of the whitenipple-waspian. The emperor succeeded in his plans, and from the relationships a new race had been born. They were called the erotic thrillers. But there were a lot more fights between the different races of the blue blooded waspian empire, and also between the different blue blooded waspian empires.

166. A priest stopped reading. He tried to make clear to the members of his church that divinity was in the hands of the blue blooded waspians, but since a certain race of spiderians got the overhand it all changed. Since then they had to deal with a certain spiderian god called 'God', and his followers were called 'church'. The priest told his members that he came to earth to lead them back to the blue blooded waspian bloodlines. He said he had the knife to cut the bloodline of the present sort of spiderian bloodline. His members watched him with big eyes.

On high horses I ride She has ensnared him He has misunderstood her it will pierce your heart, these seas will all be of blood and tears, When the waves will come, believe in poetry, don't be so positive, my friend And these softer rythms were like the jungle rain, like Noah's Arc, My trousers are wet

168. the spear It has killed king David, it has killed king Saul, but it was just a misunderstanding in the temple of Solomon, mines of Solomon full of treasures, like the thief it comes, but it was just something between me and you

169. It's standing tall in the temple, She has a spear in her hand, king David has fallen, where Goliath rose they fell these were all kings of the jungle like monkeys they stare How can we misunderstand them more ?

170. Oh doll, I found you in Salomon's temple, threehundred spears opened the garden again, and we could flee together to beaches and sand close your eyes, and jump, for cruise is coming through Threehundred spears opened the jungle again Threehundred spears are coming through through the underworld it picks you up It's the survey of paradise trousers on beds, Threehundred spears to open a gate, A gate between me and you, Threehundred spears through Solomon's doors Now what is stronger, religion or poetry ? At the end of the night you can send all your soldiers home, all your prophets and priests for the poet gets his crown threehundred spears through his head but these are only words, and I do not believe in words, I believe in threehundred spears through the head ... then all is done and said

Warfeathers and Bloody Indians

171. They have built their worlds by words meaning nothing They have given it feeling and sentiment, they have raised their laws, but it doesn't mean anything, for all creators are fake everything is artificial, so give me a break

172. I saw the soles today, and I saw the hunters running, running after helpless prey I saw the hunters running to the small house, and in disguise they went in, in the bathroom they sat down They are children of the rain, they are orphans of all these suns going down

173. I watched the soles of your boots today, and I saw these running kids come out of the trees, it's late And I saw myself running there, They were all running, running home

174. And I saw them making war, like indian wars, like the ivory towers of the song of songs, a war-tv a warsong of orphans

175. And I saw your lips, it was a pretty picture, so many hunters, many soldiers sliding down.

Inua

1. She climbed through a window of the palace, took her bow from behind her back, then an arrow and shot the prince. Then she took his jaguarcoat, and ran through the corridor into another room where the princess was bathing. Another arrow was enough to kill the princess and to make the bath bloodred. Snakes were soon sliding into the bath to eat from their mistress' body. Inua then walked through further tunnels and gracious halls of the palace, along the portals high on the walls, and she ran. She found a red rope hanging, and swung to the other side of the palace. A black hooded warrior stood before her all of a sudden with a sword shining in the sun. It almost blinded her eyes. She could stoop just in time and pushed a knife in his leg. Then she pushed him from the wall. Another black hooded warrior came, and a red one. But she took another rope and swung to the next part of the palace. Then she ran upstairs. Here the queen and the king lived. They were just drinking from their golden cups. She used two arrows in one shot, and killed them at the same time. Then she ran to the entry of a tall tower. She knew a sorcerer lived there, holding the hearts of those who lived in the land. He had poisoned them by his medicin. Quickly the warlock spoke his spell. He had a red garment with a large cape. Inua fell to the ground, like she was struck by a strong drink. The warlock took his sword from the wall and wanted to kill her.
2. 'Demibrazi,' a voice said, 'don't do that.' A man with a harpoon stood in the windowgate, shoot through the wire holding the lamp, while the lamp fell on the warlock. 'Are you okay, Inua ?' the man asked. But Inua didn't answer. He took her on his back and brought her to his home. After awhile she woke up.

3. 'That was pretty dumb what you were doing there,' the man said. 'The warlock could kill you.'
4. 'I'm not scared of him, if I would die, it would be so, but I had to do it,' Inua said.
5. 'You are a brave woman,' the man said.
6. In the night Inua returned to the palace, and this time she could kill the wizard. She entered through a portal where a strange elevator stood. Suddenly the man stood before her holding her arm down. She wanted to push the button to open the elevator. 'Let me go with you,' the man said. Then they stepped in the elevator together. They visited a city in the sky, where gods and goddesses lived. They guarded the so-called Eye of Blood, by which they ruled. Inua had already an arrow on her bow, ready to shoot. She could see the eye from the elevator, and shot through it's fleeces. The elevator fell back, together with the whole city of gods. It was all coming down. The man didn't survive the fall, but Inua did, and ran into the wilderness. Then she went back to her cave. The Eye of Blood was a conspiracy of ghosts who had implanted thin and small saws into the genitals of their victims, to let them live in deceiving visions.
7. She was now the bloodbather, behind the walls of paradise, where she dwelled between the volcanoes of death and blood. She was now weaving her palaces in the sky like the widow spider, from all the tears of men and gods, from all those royal tears, and she wove the hearts together of all the fallen warriors and their intestines, to raise the fleeces of pestilence and drunkenness, she would settle her throne in war. She was the queen of delirium and intoxication, a huntress of deception. There was no seducer like her, time would come into slow motion around her, her arrows were sweet, bringing the weight of tragedy and torture, finally a deeper bitterness. She was from the garden of the snake, a wardancer, a poisonblower, through tubes of death and confusion. The intestines of fallen warriors she had woven into chalices, and she made dishes of their hearts.
8. She was the intoxicator, carrying the ancient secrets. She was a designer of heavenly cities, a conspiracy as well. She was a whisperer, a threat to the kings and their sons, to the queens and their daughters. She was an everlasting flame from hell, torturing the chosen ones by visions.
9. She was a treasure, a troll treasure. She was hell's calculated bartender. All she wanted was to make cigarettes of her visitors. And their heads would glow and she would bring the fire in them, all she wanted to see was them burning.
10. She was a weaver, taking the testicles and eyes of her enemies. She had a horned helmet, by which she showed the sweet venomous paths leading to the bitterness. She was the spider, the whore of destiny.
11. In the nights she would become the seven faces of Mercury, spoiling them by delights, all to fatten them up for a butcher called history. They had no names, but she would call them, to be a number and a slave. In her hands they grew, and by testicles she built her screaming walls behind which she hid her silences, where the mercury was her poison to hold. So many testicles of fallen warriors bound together. She could be found on beaches, where he lured them to watch her, until the sting of mercury took them away. They could not eat nor sleep, they could not breath nor move in bed, for she was in their head. By a bisonhat she showed them the paths of venomous sweetness ending in a bitter death.

12. She was a calculated horror, with cups from mars and spain. She was living in Jerusalem, rebuilding it again. Was it a hidden Rome so sugared, hiding the sting of hell, or was it innocence and ignorance, unable to find the right spell. The spell to raise the new mind, testicles bound together in a well, where fishes were nothing but testicles, and shrieking hunters possessed by sharp objects letting them bleed inside. They cannot stop their hunt. Something wants to come out. And this is all her pride.
13. The kings rise on their morningbeds, all ready for a new day, while she rides on peacocks, the warrior goddess. She is a weaver, a dancer of swords and spears. And while she is pregnant she is so soft, until the morning comes with it's black blood and grey coffins. Jerusalem is in her hands, her feet are demanding, equipping soldiers to open the gates of the promised land. She is the black spider, white in her strike, rebuilding the heavens, by the testicles of the fallen. Where Mercury had it's seat, she rises with fleeces, so thick, surrounding the mind, where soldiers had their stands, she speaks deadly accurate words.
14. In a bleeding bed she has her Spain, the grapes are ripe. In a bleeding bed she welcomes her tomorrow, as a bleeding dove, ready for sacrifice. She tastes death so many times, she has sweet feet hiding the bitter seat, a golden sun of scorn, testicles woven together by the whore. She has her chalice here under black waters, filled with brown desires. Mercury was here before, now she is riding it's horse. Yes, seven faces she has, to spread her evil, and mess. It is the new mind, a new calculator, on the testicles of once such mighty men, they are in hell while their tops are broken. The eye of the spider has spoken. It is here, Mercury had it's place, but the night is over.
15. She is the one with many feet, they call her a spider, setting them free. She is torn inside, for there was always a fight between her and her mercury, she lives in an eternal war, and the chemical disease spreads it, by pestilence and hysteria. There is war in her chalice, and much paranoia. The skin of her back is soft, swept by swans and heavenly feathers, while her mind is hell, covered by bats and zombies. She is the tormentor of the new day, the knocker on hearts.
16. In a spanish church she has her many faces, where the whore of dentistry has her coffins. Where angels of scorn and no care lead the mass by fear. Testicles have been pierced by the chains of Mercury, her seven faces. When she speaks, soldiers are near. Her voice like a moderator, rivers of poisonous deaths to raise the leg of the ballerina, her feet denying everything, on her toes it's written she doesn't care. Lethe has them in her hands, the trips across the Styx were dangerous and expensive, while Charon comforts their souls.
17. where the trolls run free in the huntingfields. Mercury has them in chains, with cups full of liberties. She is the black spider, stretching out on her beds, while so many are dying. On her toes it's written queen of scorn. Seven toes will rise in the black night, to guide them by her light. She is the queen of scorn, a moderator of hell. When she speaks the snares are breaking, and men are weeping. The church she closes by her wings. She speaks while temples are rising, and then the poison catches them all. She holds them in a tight grip, waiting for them on a tall shore. She lets them fall when they have almost made it, and they fall hard, like goats thrown from a tower. She builds her sands, and by deserts she creates time, all to lock them up in prisons of lights.

18. She is in chains, this woman, her nipples pierced, deep into her breasts, whenever she moves the sweetness falls to the earth. Oh, the whore, dwelling among the testicles of bulls. The seven faces of orion is she, a secret of mercury perfectly denied.

Mercurian Archers

19. In the gates of Bellatrix, a bard was standing, a troubadour, where I found the key. Here the guards of Bellatrix stood, hiding the secrets of Rome. For one Rome is yellow, another Rome is green, and the black Rome is Jerusalem, in her cup was the mercury, from which her disciples drank, to raise the black spider. Here she moves slowly, her nipples chained, spreading sweet poisons to feed her children. Here the whore of the ages dances, to entertain the black jokers, who hide deep in their churches. Here she lives behind tall and thick walls of tragedy, bathing in splendour and prosperity. Here the guards of Bellatrix rise, her popes, to spread their pestilences. Here she had her robe, woven of the testicles of her enemies, and the eyes of slain cattle. Here she licked the blood from her lips, and mercury was still the flame in her heart. And the fat on her body, on her thighs and buttocks, testify against her, where the hyenas are writing in her head, the words of an old song and an old story.
20. Can we come across the walls of Jerusalem, and enter our freedom again, free on the fields, or are we in her grip forever. Her eyes are enchanting, her mouth is chanting, her body is moving, intoxicating our minds.
21. We have seen her, we have watched her, we have read her spells. We have seen the pharisees rising in our midst, the whisperers, and still we felt safe in her, for she was our mother. Can anyone break the black bloodline. We have seen her dancing, and we wanted to be like her, loved by a million stars. In the gates of Bellatrix the guards are standing, these soldiers of a black night. Was she just another slave of Rome ?
22. This Rome is black, tortured by Spanish soldiers, driven in her cage, where she dances day and night. She is the marjorette.
23. Mercury church, where the kings are shouting, where the guards of Bellatrix stand tall ... When Mercury rises tall in Bellatrix, they will all fall ...
24. A mystery called Inua was their queen, slowly sliding through the veils, showing the apocalypse, the war under the skin ... She raises her poisoned apple high, and then she takes a bite ... Queen of intoxication you have always been my delight
25. In mercury church it's snowing, where they sit, bound and chained, and someone preaches from the letters, by mercury they were filled. Here they have their dances, and those who can't dance will be killed. From here the tornadoes are rising until you understand the secret, mercury was it's veils.
26. I was frozen when I understood the riddle, and the guards of Bellatrix followed me. They were the moderators of hell, and the age of mercury had just begun ...

The Needles of Pill-A ; The Eye of Tears

3. A captive woke up in a camp of native american women. He had been a prisoner here for awhile. The women seemed to be insane, claiming he had committed an unforgivable sin, and therefore he was their prisoner of doom. They had put him in an arena where he had to fight, and where he actually got partly paralyzed and spasmic. Now he was laying there, in a tent, inbetween some native women, waiting for the everlasting torment to come, as a punishment for his wicked deeds, of which he didn't know what it was. He felt misjudged, but his dreams at nights seemed beautiful, deep, haunting, as was this place.
4. He felt a hand on his shoulder. A woman stood before him. It was Tara from Rhodes, his saviour. She led him out of this place. She brought him to her home, somewhere behind rocks, in a sandy cave. It was raining outside. She took care of his wounds. The women with their evil grins still tormented his mind, but this woman was so different. She gave him a sword and a knife, but he was still paralyzed and in spasm. But when he held it, soon power streamed through his body. 'What is that ?' he asked.
5. 'You have been chosen by the gods,' Tara spoke.
6. 'For what ?' he asked.
7. She didn't speak. After awhile she said : 'Just believe it.'
8. He admired this woman, so he believed what she said. She had saved him.
9. 'Please, don't let me have to go back to where I came from,' he begged her.
10. 'You are safe here,' she spoke. Two wolves were licking him. Outside he could see a river where crocodiles were. On the sandy shore there were also some leopards.
11. 'The animals keep you safe,' she spoke.
12. He was still trembling, but she caressed him and calmed him. He was in her arms. He fell asleep and dreamt about the drugs of nature, the serums of paradise. Spiders were stinging his muscles, and they were like dying, and an organ in his stomach took control, soft powers, guided by an unknown sun. In his dreams he saw the lovely face of Tara.
13. He woke up and knew that everything was but a dream. He was still the captive of these native american women, savage indians, who had his heart. There was red lace tied around his hips. These women seemed to be very organized as there were more captives with red lace.
14. One day he had to appear before their queen, who was painted in red, and he asked her what he had done wrong. 'First of all, you are a male,' she said. 'Second : you have muscles. Third : you have brains.'
15. 'But you have them too,' he said.
16. 'No,' the queen spoke. 'Just advanced nipples.'
17. 'Can I have them too ?' he asked.

- 18.'No,' the queen said. 'It is unforgivable that you have been like this, and that you have used it. It is called abuse, you have abused your powers, your false powers, you have used your muscles and brains against women.'
- 19.'No, I have not,' he said. 'I have never used my muscles against women. I have never hit a woman, only maybe for self defense.'
- 20.'You are starting to get insecure, by saying : maybe,' said the queen, 'and what about your brains. Didn't you use them to humiliate women ?'
- 21.'Never,' said the man.
- 22.'Is that all you can say ?' asked the queen. 'Here females are above males. You have to get used to that. Here we rule. No one comes against us. Spiders will feast on your muscles. You will be a good snack, then a good slave.'
- 23.'You have to give me a second chance,' said the man. 'A chance to let me be more like you.'
- 24.'Never,' said the queen. 'You will never be like us. Deal with that. You belong to the everlasting torment and the everlasting arena.'
- 25.The man watched the cruel faces of the other girls who were with the queen. They stood there merciless. He knew that every escape from here would just be a dream. They didn't let him sleep much, but sometimes he just fainted.
- 26.'There is no hope for creatures like you,' the queen said. 'Neither for your children.'
- 27.'That sounds racistic,' said the man.
- 28.'I don't care what you think,' the queen said. All captives were allowed to see the queen only one time in their lives, so the queen took the time for him, but he couldn't get through to her. Slowly she turned into a python, and went away.
- 29.It was like she had stung him, and he felt like he was dying. He knew there was nothing left to do but to accept that he was in this place forever, and that he had comfort in his dreams. It was not all that bad, as he could sleep and faint. He led a double life, and he knew that these two lives would form and transform each other, until he would have a satisfying point of view on them.
- 30.In his dreams he dreamt about the nipple sun, with nipplian warriors, invading everything. The creatures on here were wild, beyond the duck sun. The nipple sun was like a mind police, beheading the giants of the muscle age. Cobras took their bodies over, and showed their heads on their bodies. Tara from Rhodes was big in his dreams, and she made his terrible life with the native women look like fragments. It was like it was all just a few seconds of the day. All flashes. he fainted more and more, entering his dream world, just different frequencies of life. He could tune in and out.
- 31.The source of Pill-A was on the nipple sun, where he also found a substance called Pill-B, nipplian seed. This seemed to be the secret of Tara from Rhodes, the secret of her power. She ruled over the illusions with her sword, taking him in.
- 32.She took him to Mars, and to it's core, Betelgeuse, to which the nipple sun was just a key. Here nature and life was good. The crocodiles were big. The rivers were of blood. It was hell. She was a sharp voice in his head, the voice of the python, whispering. She showed him the key, a solar key, of so many suns, of a solar stairway, transforming him, and bringing him into the depths of Betelgeuse, absorbing all the other experiences he ever had. Here the hippos were. It was the core of Mars. The flies ruled here. The Eye of Tax was soaring here. Tara said it was the last enemy to be defeated. It was the creator of the muscles and the brains, as in a conspiracy, as it made captives.

33.'How to defeat it ?' he asked.

34.'Only a female can do it,' Tara spoke. She told a vague story about a yellow pyramid which would lead to the yellow sun, a good security against the Eye of Tax. In the distance a stairway seemed to be burning. Tara spoke that the yellow sun was a key to enter deeper into Betelgeuse. She said that in the depths of Betelgeuse the yellow sun would release substances which would trigger a doom in the universe to transform everything. This was why the yellow sun was an important path or elevator in Betelgeuse.

35.Some said the yellow sun was the sun of tears, while others said it was the sun of jokes and the sun of laughing. Fact was that anyone who would approach the yellow sun would stop aging, unless the yellow sun would not let them through, then they would age even faster. There were of course ways to age in the depths of Betelgeuse, but it was just more controllable.

36.The laugh gas of the yellow sun made people happy, although that was what it looked like, when Tara took the man on a trip. But it was scorn, and it led to tears. There were many tear lakes in the depths of Betelgeuse, which was like a hot desert area. Tara gave the man a ring on which his oxygen statistics could be seen, and it was to be controlled from there. The yellow sun was like a train into the depths of this desert, guided by tall paradise birds. He needed to control his oxygen, or he would die here. He needed to learn how to breath. She led him along the pee-lakes of monsters and beasts, where they had peed, wells of healing. She taught him the secrets of nature, there, in the depths of Betelgeuse. His mind broke free from so many restrictions, but he also had to worship the goddess. He had to live in devotion to her. And for the sake of nature he had to be sacrificed to her, and her wrath had to be poured out on him, as in an eternal punishment. He had to be rejected, as a religious experience of doom, he had to feel the everlasting torment.

37.It was Betelgeuse's Theology demanding this, and there was no escape. There could not be an everlasting bliss without this everlasting damnation. There could not be an everlasting peace without an everlasting war. There was such a balance here, by such a split. There could not be an everlasting marriage to the goddess without the everlasting divorce to the goddess. Tara said that this was the reset of the chip and it was nothing but a game. She told him that the goddess loved him very much, and that he was chosen by her for this game. She wanted to heal his past. She would arm him through this ritual.

38.The Eye of Tax was still soaring above them, looking like an insect. It looked like a big swollen muscle, through which slime was streaming. It was very slimy and greasy. Tara took the man into a lake of monster-pee, where the pee of beasts was mixed, and the pee of dragons, and it seemed to be a healing well, but after awhile it caused trauma. But there seemed to be no other option. The man was confused, and so was Tara. The Eye of Tax was after them. It stalked them. The traumas seemed to actually protect them against the Eye, as

- otherwise it would enslave them. They both felt a pressure on them. Tara was fighting for her life, and at the same time she had to protect the man, but it was hard on her. They heard noises in the distance. Gigantic dragons showed up, but they could begin nothing against the Eye of Tax. Suddenly the Eye of Tax swallowed Tara. When it spat her out she was under slime, as in an egg. She felt like she was burning. She was screaming. The man got stung by the Eye and got paralyzed. He remembered this feeling. It was like his past was taking over.
39. Cream came forth from the Eye, covering them both. They were both like burning, as in a flame. Soon they were surrounded by males with big breasts and big muscles. 'The splinters of Fragma,' said Tara.
40. 'What is that ?' the man asked.
41. 'These men are just parts of this Eye,' Tara said. 'They are the workers of it's foam, Fragma, his spirit. It keeps them drunk. They do not care, only for their pleasure. They live in jokes, lies.'
42. They both fell into an enormous depth, while the Eye of Tax seemed to be feasting on their flesh. 'These men are guards of another world,' Tara said, 'but they will soon die.'
43. 'I hope so,' the man said. 'They are evil.'
44. Suddenly they were gliding into the tear lakes of beasts, monsters and dragons. It was like their traumas were soothing. 'it works,' Tara said. 'Whenever the Eye of Tax stalks, it leads us to these lakes.'
45. 'What will happen ?' the man asked.
46. The lakes were like burning, but it was also calming them, as there was a softening substance in it. The tears were very neutralizing. It attached itself to their bodies, and started to heal the wounds.
47. 'Manerka,' a voice spoke. There was another man in the lake. Soon they saw beasts, dragons and monsters appearing. The Eye of Tax was shrieking. The tears were on them like foam and jewelry, like fleeces as lace. It was enslaving them for war.
48. 'I can breath !' the man shouted.
49. 'Welcome to the army,' the other man said.
50. On a dragon a queen-like woman was riding, sitting on a saddle. She was covered by lace and leather, as in a traditional armor. She had horns, and she was partly veiled, and had a short skirt. She was moving towards them, but then fell away.
51. The Eye of Tax was spitting fire, but the tear lake was swallowing them into it's depths. The man lost his consciousness. He felt like dreaming, and suddenly he could shake so many worlds off of him. He watched his dreams shifting in a huge pearl. The pearl was slimy and greasy, very steamy. 'Don't touch the pearl,' a voice spoke. It was the queen-like figure with the horns. 'I am here to intoxicate you, you need the witch,' she said. 'Here all the realities shift.'
52. 'I do not know what is real and what is not,' said the man. 'I do not know what to trust and what not, I do not know the truth.'

- 53.'Come,' said the queen, and led him to a hall behind them. The hall was full of beastly warriors. They formed the elements of animals. They looked like rhinos. 'The watchers of Doom,' said the queen. 'They are waiting for their hour.'
- 54.'Who are they, and what are they going to do ?' asked the man.
- 55.'They are eye-eaters,' said the queen. 'They are going to eat the Eye of Tax.'
- 56.'Who leads them ?' asked the man.
- 57.'Tara from Rhodes will lead them,' said the queen. 'I sent her to you, as you have been chosen by the gods. She is the Law of Tax, the opposite force, waiting to blind the eye, and endarken it.'
- 58.A darkness fell upon them. The hour was almost there. Tara from Rhodes soared above the rhinos, as if she had wings of light, but it was darkness. She had a trumpet and a viking helmet, a horned helmet.
- 59.'Who or what is Tax ?' asked the man.
- 60.'The thief,' said the queen. 'But if the thief is not bound to the law, then the thief is evil. The thief needs to be legal, stealing back what others have reaved.'
- 61.'Oh,' said the man, 'sounds interesting.'
- 62.'Interesting, right ?' said the queen. Then it was silent for awhile. The man lost consciousness again. he knew he was in the tear lakes. It felt like his whole body was crying, and like his eye was dying. It felt like he completely lost it. He was blind, and the only light was the darkness. The Eye of Tax was a criminal and a murderer, but Tara arrested it.
- 63.In dreams he saw her and he worshipped her, as she was the harmony. She was the paradox. He wanted to know this Law of Tax. He wanted to be on her side. But he also knew inside there would always be an eye, so he had to search for the right eye. He fell into a field of bison hunters. The eyes of the bisons were red. They had the eyes of tax. He could see this empire in the distance, where bison hunters ruled. He knew the only eye who could set them free was the Eye of Tears. He knew they worshipped it in the empire, he just knew. It was like a vision went right through him. He saw angels on horses, but then he fell away again. The Eye of Tears in him was like a drug.

The Dark Side of Betelgeuse

64. The Eye of Tax was a machine of snobs, men who thought they were superior, an elite. In the depths of Betelgeuse there were the starvation farms, where men were turned into those who had the weakness of little babies. They were prepared to become slaves of the Eye of Tears. Soon the man was there as well, all other visions were dying. He had to live in a tear. The tear would feed them, although not too much. It was a sort of milk to make them even weaker. The tear would give them power, but not too much, often by spasm. They lived by strange contractions and hyperventilation. The theology was that they had to become weak and empty to be able to receive the power of the Eye of Tears, the goddess. And this theology demanded also that they went through the divorce with Her, and to be completely rejected by her, to be doomed by her, living under her wrath as an eternal punishment. In this they would reach enlightenment, by the depths of endarkenment. She was a cruel goddess, only to show them the flashes of grace. There was no grace for those doomed by Her. They were nothing but her milk-cows. But it was to awaken an extra sense. He felt like a weak child, stung by spiders, he felt like a fly guided by strange power. He was not able to hold anything. Everything slid through his fingers. He was bathing in milk lakes of monsters, beasts and dragons.

65. He had seen the dark side of Betelgeuse, where the females were the stronger race, and the males the weaker, where the eyes were the seals of drugs. And the breasts of native women, savage indians, were the taps of the milk of confusion. There were no answers, no one was helping him, and soon he was thinking that it was all an evil conspiracy, and he accepted the evilness in his life. There was no other way. Resisting it was pointless.

66. He was sinking away in the experience, while death was calling him. He found an oracle like a disc, like a wheel, and he held it tight. 'The male represents youth,' said the oracle, 'while the female represents growth and death. And you have to go into the depths rather than fighting at the surface. But we are all children after all.'

67. In the depths he saw the beauty of death, all colours torn apart until there was only white and red. He felt it as a rebirth. Everything moved by death, by falling from great height, by huge pain, but at the same time there was bliss and softness, as the softness of feathers. Only pale colours came through, yet it was intense. Here the Eye of Death was soaring, as a tap of the fluids of extasy. These all came as pale lights. It was all painted by thunder and lightening. The beauty of death was an ingredient the cook of life used.

Hyena Girls

68. The pirates were on a low hill, where they were gambling. In the forests hyena girls were howling. Soon they had captured the pirates, and killed them. It was quiet now on the island. No sounds, no streaming of beer. The pirates often made such a noise, but it was over now. The hyena girls could live on in peace. At least that was what they wished, what they tried to gain.

69. Horrotensia was a loud girl, but also quiet now. She stared at the trees, and felt herself getting cloaked by the jungle. She was a hyena girl, a leader. Hyena girls were arrogant and proud, often noisy, but this time they were silent. They enjoyed the sudden death of the pirates. They had waited for this so long. They had finally prepared a good attack. It was good now.

70. They were almost sliding through the wet jungle, covering themselves in mud, and soon howling again. And they opened up to the natural savage sounds of the jungle again. The pirates were dead, and they rejoiced.

But soon more pirates came to the island, and a war started. The hyenas didn't want to reveal themselves, but this time they had to. They had to defend their island. Many pirates got killed, and the others fled. Some were even naked, because their clothes had been stripped off. It was almost like the hyenas had given them a chance to escape. But it was to their shame that they had lost their clothes.

71. I was wandering through the jungles of Tallus. When I was young hyena girls had pierced my muscles by sharp bones with feathers tied to both sides. It would prevent my muscles from developing themselves too much. They were afraid that I would dominate them when

I would grow up. They starved me also. They had collared me, but I could escape. Now I was wandering in the jungles again, because in the cities gross men ruled over women. Their bodies were deformed by an overload of muscles. They formed a threat to anyone. I would rather be free in the jungles, although there was a risk that I would be caught again by hyena girls.

72. In Troslik, a city of Tallus, I spoke to a guy named Max Laatner. He knew some places in the jungle safe from hyena girls. So I was on my way to these places. I found myself a cave, and dressed up as savage as I could. I had to hunt to survive. There lived many pigs here, oxes, wildebeasts, all sorts of goats, lambs, chickens and buffaloes. I started farming them more or less. Max Laatner said that a lot of berries grew here which could be deadly for the children of the hyena girls.
73. Hyena girls usually tied up their captives very tight, so that it would disturb the blood circulation, and that especially children couldn't develop themselves well. It would give them the signs of spasm and hyperventilation, while it disturbed their mental orientation as well. Some weren't capable of speaking well, but this was all to maintain the rule of the hyena girls, and to prevent any form of male domination. This was how the hyena girls preserved their race.
74. She was smiling. Suddenly she stood before me with ropes. She asked me to kneel before her. 'Why?' I asked. 'Are you scared of me?' Before I knew she had struck me down, and I was rolling in pain at her feet. 'Finally you kneel,' she said with a grin. I looked upwards to her. 'Who ... who are you?' I asked. 'That's none of your business,' she said. She tied my hands behind my back and I felt pretty hopeless. Then she tied my neck, and took me with her on a leash. It was a long walk. She brought me to a camp of hyena girls. They were mocking me when I entered, laughing at me. I felt weak and humiliated. Some girl took care of my wound. The other girl had hit me pretty hard by an object. 'Don't think you will ever escape from here,' said the girl softly. She had feathers and small beads around her waste, tied around some animal skin. It looked like pig leather. I was actually scared and felt like crying. Her big breasts were very close to me, which spread a milky scent, and it made me feel paralyzed even more. Some said the scent of the breasts of hyena girls was one of their most dangerous weapons. It could mind-control their prey. Max Laatner had also said this. The girl who had caught me would have been wandering around in order to find prey. It was a nasty capture. I was shaking wildly before the girl who cared for my wound, trying to get rid of the rope which had tied my hands together. She smiled. 'Why do you want to escape?' she said. 'The jungles are full of predators who would eat you alive. We have much better manners.' I sighed. Her body felt warm, but she also kept a certain distance. She took two sharp bones with feathers tied to their ends. Then she pushed them softly through my arm muscles. I cried of pain, and started shrieking. 'This is to keep you from ruling over us, boy,' she spoke softly. I could hardly hear her. She was almost whispering. I was shivering. Now she started to care for these wounds also. I was bleeding. I had troubles breathing. I was scared they would push more of such sharp thin bones through me. I was crying at her feet, begging her for mercy, but she was just grinning. She had an evil look on her face, but also calm and almost innocent. She acted like it was all right. I could maybe understand her, for a grown up man could be a terrible threat. They didn't take any risks. There was always the danger lurking around for them of being enslaved by men from the cities or pirates.

Suddenly she kicked me hard into my stomach, and I rolled over again. When I woke up I had many more sharp thin bones with feathers through my muscles. Everywhere on my body. I felt like in torture. They brought me to one of their leaders. I was still bleeding. When she saw me she laughed. 'Good, he can't do much against us now,' she said. She was also covered in pig skin, while her big brown breasts were revealed as a threat towards me. I felt dizzy, and in sharp pain. It looked like some fluids were dripping from her breasts, but others had told me that these could also be ghost visions. It was when the pirates were tapping beer and letting it stream richly, such things could happen. It was the most horrible sound ever. The streaming of beer was a great horror. I was very scared of her breasts. They looked intimidating. She could see it in my eyes, and smelled my fear. 'Why are you scared of some naked women ?' she asked with scorn. 'You are a weakling, aren't you. You are weak.' ... 'Maybe he doesn't like to see naked women,' another girl spoke. 'Kneel before me, boy,' the leader said. I had to sit down. I was almost crying of pain and dizziness. But they didn't let me sit. I had to kneel. 'No one will help you here,' she said with a harsh tone. 'You're lost.' Then they took me to a bamboo cage. I was hungry, but they didn't feed me. I still had the idea that some fluid was dripping from their breasts, or maybe they were just oily. My wounds healed very well, and I had to live with these piercings in my muscles. They would also tie leashes to these piercings at times to yank me with them. This was a very painful thing, because these spots were so sensitive. They seemed very sadistic and cruel to me, but on the other side it was for their survival. They didn't take any risks with men. They would feed me sometimes with these breast fluids in a cup, to keep me from dying. But it was a fact that they were starving me.

75. She moved her belt a bit lower, until it started to reveal some pubic hair. Then she removed the belt together with the pig leather, so that all her pubic hair was revealed. I was struck by terror when she stood there with her huge hips, while her female hood was exposed to me. The smell of it made me in fear about what she would do to me. I suddenly felt even weaker and helpless. She said down with her legs in front of her and moved her legs closer to me. She firmly pushed her huge feet against my body. I was lying down while shivering. Then she started to push softly. When her feet touched one of my nipples I felt a strong feeling of despair. I was in a shock. I didn't know what she wanted. I could smell the strong scent of her feet. As if it wanted to tell me that she was superior to me, and dominant. I was in a caged part in the cave where I had slept, where she had entered. My upper body was not covered by the cow skin and the pig skin blankets anymore. She pulled the leash of my collar. 'Kneel for me, slave,' she said. ... 'Why ?' I asked. 'I was sleeping.' ... 'Because I want it,' she said. She had a rod in her hand, which looked like a whip. 'You don't want to be punished, don't you ?' she asked. I knelt before her. 'Good boy,' she said. Her feet were almost oily. She gave me a cup with fluids, and I had to drink. It smelled like her feet ... My throat started to tinkle, as if I had drunk strong spicy ale. She smiled. 'Good boy,' she said. A softness was flowing through my body, and a warmth, not only making me soft, but also much weaker.

76. The next day I had to work on their farm, feeding the pigs.

77. Long ago, at the coasts of Keter, genderless pirates, who were like ghosts and jokers, created manhood as an attempt to rule Tallus. They created it as a fluid, and it partly succeeded. But they couldn't conquer the hyena girls. The pirates of Keter, these tricksters, have often tried since then, but with not much success. However in the cities they ruled, and they could increase their trade market. The power of the hyena girls only grew, as they saw in men a slave. Those who could escape from the hyena girls were called hyena boys, but they were often captured by the hyena girls again. Then they were mockingly called pig boys. I guess I was both. I wanted to join the hyena boys, who would live somewhere in the jungle.

78. She moved closer to me ... Her arms crossed, covering her breasts ... She sat down, and told me I had to learn about the over thousand sorts of pigs they had, their differences, and how they felt. That was a huge task. I told her about my dream of being saved by hyena boys. She showed me their cages, where they had been tied behind their backs, starved. She told me that I had to give up my dreams.

79. There were many sorts of cows as well. I had to feed them. I wondered if hyena boys could really be free with such girls in the neighbourhood. Some said that hyena boys had a dark secret, that they were still living in slavery to hyena girls. But I didn't know. Maybe there were just many different sorts of camps. I just knew I wanted to join them. But here these hyena girls discouraged that. Actually they would guard me even more now. I felt like I had betrayed myself. 'You have to stay close to us, boy,' she said. 'The jungle is dangerous, and hyena boys in freedom are more dangerous than we are. They do much crueller things than we do. They kill visitors by drowning.' ... 'Oh, I'm sure they will have to protect themselves,' I said. 'They might be very paranoid because of what has happened to them. But it is interesting.' ... 'Well, we save you from drowning,' she said. 'Drowning is a terrible death.'

The Chalice of Pehnen

80. In a time even far before Atlantis a group of ravenous and wasted men came from a war. Their bodies were bony and they cried like babies. They were slayers. The air was hot, and the rivers smelled like the urine of beasts. It was a waste land. Their bodies were aching, as if they had been stung by strange flies. They washed their wounds in the river and laid down. They were hungry as there was no food. They had gone insane by the hunger already long ago. Often they had the habit to play a game, and the loser or losers had to become the meal of the day. They were cannibals. But this time they were so tired that they couldn't afford themselves to play any game. They wouldn't even fight for a piece of meat. Somehow something was preventing them. Suddenly there was lightening everywhere. On a chariot surrounded by leopards a woman stood, wellfed, much thicker than they were. 'Asla'in,' she shouted. 'Stand on your feet.' One of the men slowly crept to her and tried to stand on his legs, but then fell to the ground again in the dust. Then she shouted some other names, and they also came forward to her, trying to stand on their legs, but they were trembling because of the heat. The war and the weather made them like this, and the fact that they were so hungry.

81. 'You know what has been promised to the hungry warriors, right ?' the woman shouted. Then the woman left again. The men crept further along the river until they reached the oasis. Here they had their tents and their huts. Another woman was here, surrounded by large cats. She held a skull in her hands, while the slayers were staring at her. 'The skull of Solvotor, sorceror of the winds,' one of the men whispered. 'By this device they rule us.' She came closer to them. A lizard tongue came forth from the skull, and it was like the men were struck in their brains.

81. One of the cats started to lick one of the men. 'What do you want from us ?' another man was shouting. He was almost shrieking, because these men couldn't talk normal anymore. Suddenly the wind struck them again, and the men became so insane that they started the war against their own group. Smaller groups began to arise, and the waste land was in a strange flame, even their oasis was wasted now. The woman left while laughing.
82. The men became even more wasted now, until they were like boys. Asla'in and some others could escape from this tragic fate. They wandered along the river, in search for their goddess. They feared her, they were captivated by her, but they were also longing for her. They wanted to cross the river to go to her palace, to beg for mercy. But while they swam across the river, full of the urine of beasts they lost their last piece of sanity. Asla'in couldn't hold himself up anymore, and was slowly drowning. In the distance he saw the palace. He was struck by confusion. She showed him in a chrystal ball the insane wasted ones who died at stakes. The chrystal ball was overflowing with blood. 'And you know I have the skull of abundance,' she said. He knew she was talking about the skull of Solvotor. She looked wellfed. He didn't dare to question her. All who would eat from the insides of the skull would become like her. She showed him the skull. He knew the skull could strike. He hoped she would have favour on him. She gave him a piece of meat from out of the skull. He carefully ate, but he immediately began to burn. Then she gave him the skull, but she held it tight in her hands also. 'Here, drink of the blood,' she said. He drank, while something struck him in the head. He fell down, and she started laughing. 'You have drunk of the skull of Solvotor, the chalice of Pehnen.'

Spears of Mars

83. She was walking on a path over the hills near the mountains and the sea. Beautiful large flowers were growing here, producing so many tantalizing smells. The sun was radiating very strongly on her body. In the distance she saw the sunbeams like falling on the mountains and the waters, like washing them by the most serene reflections. She had no idea of the horror taking place in the waters, a horror which would soon take her also. A wind would come from the waters and take her, to move with her to the mountains. There the wind would show her a gate into the depths of Mars, a secret path to Tantalos, the place of hunger.
84. A woman was waking up from her dream. Today she would go to a shaman in a mountain close to her place. When she got there, she told the shaman about her dream. 'Oh, but I know the road to Tantalos,' the old man said. He showed her a map and directed his finger to a covered hole in the ground. 'There the souls of no hope live. They are doomed to hunt forever. They have never enough.'
85. The woman smiled. She took care of her horse by caressing its hair. She didn't believe the old man. Then the old man started to laugh too. 'But once there was a time' the man said 'that this place really existed. It was like a world underground. This was in the days that Nectracter was the king of Mars. He banned a lot of warprisoners to that place. They had to work with horses. Feeding them and using them in warfare. Here they had to fight in the so-called Gladiator Wars.' The old man bowed a bit forward and started to tell the story :
86. 'Long ago there was an old shaman, who guarded the gate to Tantalos. He was one of Nectracters servants. He begged Nectracter to not let young boys go to the area, for the old shaman couldn't sleep of the crying coming through the gate. So Nectracter once closed the gate. Since then no one could find the path to Tantalos again, and no one ever saw one of them back. But since the old shaman died the villagers close to the mountain heard all sorts of noises coming from the mountain every night, and it was getting louder and louder, like shrieking boys. So one night some villagers went to the mountain to find out about the noise, but they couldn't find anything.

87. There was one woman in the village who told about the story of the nine spears. The story came from the time of Nectracter. It was about Nectracter who went to the place called Tantalos, and he asked for the nine spears. These nine spears were in the hands of gladiators who would also win, so Nectracter thought these spears were miracle-spears. He took the nine spears away from these gladiators and they all died in the next war. Nectracter took the spears to his palace in Wiktorossus, the royal city. They said that Nectracter was the only one who could visit Tantalos since then, by the miracle-spears.'

88. Then the old shaman smiled to the woman. He walked towards the covered hole, opened it, and took a spear out of the whole. 'This is one of these spears,' he said. 'I got it from my teacher who gave it to me just before he died. He had served Nectracter's son for a long time, and got it as a present. But now I want to give it to you, as I am getting older,' the shaman said to the woman.

89. She never forgot about this moment, when she got the spear. By the spear she became a ruler of Tantalos, but there were also eight other rulers, all bearers of the spears of Nectracter.

90. Originally these spears weren't from gladiators, but from martyrs in the depths of Tantalos. Now they were in the hands of nine rulers. In the West there was the kingdom of Vivikwiktus, the sorceror. He had one of the spears and his powers were enormous. His hiding place was surrounded by an area they called the Python Chess. These were caves in which white hairy tiles were moving. On some tiles you could step, but others faded away after awhile, or fell into the depths. Sometimes if you would stay too long on a certain tile, arrows would come forward from it. Vivikwiktus ruled time and chronology in Tantalos, as he had the spear of time. He could freeze the minds and bodies of his enemies, or burn them, by this spear of time.

91. The only one who could come close to Vivikwiktus was the raven. Vivikwiktus had a place where the flames of time were dwelling. Some of his captured ravens he used to bring these flames all over Mars, to rule everything.

92. But Vivikwiktus also wanted the other eight spears to have absolute powers. And he needed his ravens for this evil plan.

93. In the North of the Westside of Tantalos Sareaster lived, an old man. He was a shaman, a sorceror and a necromancer, having the spear of family. He could bring powerful visions over Mars to give the illusion of birth and parentship. He tied souls together by giving them the illusion of power in such a net. But it was Sareaster who made these divisions and actually weakened these souls. These family-frames were prisons and slaveries, but also breedings. Vivikwiktus desired this spear, as he wanted to zombificate Mars into his plans.

94. One day a raven came to the woman. She wanted to trick her, and asked her to come to the realms of Vivikwiktus, as he had interest in a conversation with her. The woman stepped on the back of the raven, and took her spear with her. In the palace of Vivikwiktus he was already waiting for her. Immediately he started talking about her spear, how he desired it. The woman smiled, and thought he was making a joke. He had his own spear. She knew he was another ruler of Tantalos, but she didn't know of his evil intentions. She had the South, and he the West. But he invited her to do a game with him. The one who won got both spears.

95. But the woman refused. Vivikwiktus then tried to hypnotize her, and to lure her to the room of games. The room was like a building, where huge automatons stood tall. The woman got attracted, and soon she found herself playing behind such an automaton. On the screen she saw a three dimensional city with cars, like she was looking through a tall window. It was almost like she could step into that world. Then Vivikwiktus said they could. They could take a car and drive through the city, to the finish. A strange desire suddenly started to master the woman and her feelings. Before she knew it, she sat in the car, but then it was like her conscience was screaming to her : 'Don't do ! Call for your spear !'

96. So the woman called for her spear, and all of a sudden she stood in the gamehall again. She held her spear tight. Vivikwiktus stood before her, staring at her, also taking his spear tight. Then he directed his spear at her, and said loud : We will battle for the dominion and power over Mars !

97. The woman suddenly felt weak, and knew she made a mistake of going here. A horrible fight started, and finally Vivikwiktus took her hair and held his spear against her throat. 'Everything moves, because of me,' he said. 'I am master of time, and I will be master of Mars.' Her spear fell out of her hands, as she felt weakness flowing through her hands, slowly starting to freeze her. A cold feeling was climbing up through her spine, searching for her mouth to gag her, but quickly she called for her spear to save her. As in a second Vivikwiktus layed on the ground, and the woman ran away. She suddenly felt there was a strong force flowing around the spear, and the spear took her up, and flew away with her through a window. She now knew that she couldn't trust Vivikwiktus, and that he was a dangerous enemy. She had to be on her guard. And she also realised that the other seven rulers might also be enemies. She was losing more and more the trust she had. She could only trust her spear.

98. But on the other hand she was thinking maybe she needed the other seven when Vivikwiktus would strike again. Maybe she had to warn them. But first she needed to know more about them.

1. Be slaves of Mother God in great fear, and rejoice in trembling. Salvation and victory belongs to Mother God. Her blessing, as a gift of peace and a wind to cause to kneel is on Her people.
2. How long will She turn my glory into shame, insulting and humiliating me ? How long will She confuse me ?
3. I have to offer sacrifices, to slay in divine judgement.
4. She has put pleasure in my heart with great fear and grief.

5. She has established me as a butcher. Her glory on me is heavy and burdensome.
6. Listen to my shriek, oh Mother God. For to You I will pray.
7. Don't rebuke me in your anger. Have mercy on me, Mother God, for I am weak and exhausted. My bones are terrified.
8. Put your enemies in fear, oh Mother God.
9. Their mouths are full of cursing, deceit and oppressing fraud. Their tongues are full of slander, vanity and idolatry.
10. When their foundations are destroyed, what can they do ?
11. Mother God is in Her holy temple, Her throne is in hell.
12. Upon the wicked and the guilty, upon the criminals and the condemned She will rain snares, fire and brimstone, and a raging sorrow.
13. To fear the Mother God is forever, to be more desired than fine gold, sweeter than honey.
14. It will bring pigs at Her feet, where they lick Her feet, begging for mercy, while there will be no mercy.
15. For they have sinned against Her, and broken Her laws. Under guilt they will live.
16. Some trust in chariots and others in horses, but we will remember the Name of the Mother God.
17. We will remember Her, but She cannot be trusted. She is holy.
18. In Her anger She deceives and punishes. She has made snares, even for the righteous ones. No one is keeping Her commandments, therefore the earth is doomed. In Her wrath there is no hope and trust.
19. Some trust in their father gods, and the sons of these gods, but Mother God will tread them, and tear them down. You have put your trust in wood and stones. And you have sinned to the point of no return.
20. Mother God has turned you into pigs. You have become pigs by your sins. And Her hunt has begun. Where can you hide ? There is no place to hide for the Wrath of Mother God.
21. You are brought down and fallen, kneeling at Her feet.
22. The voice of Mother God is on the waters, Her voice is on the wilderness, and they all tremble.
23. Let no man trust in Her, for She cannot be trusted. She is Hell, She is Wrath, for they have sinned against Her. They have broken Her Laws. Mother God is Hate, not love. She is punishment and righteousness. There is no hope for a man finding out about Her ways. Weeping he will fall at Her feet, and Her mercy will not be upon him. In despair is the man who finds out about Her paths.
24. She has prepared the earth for slaughter.
25. Mother God has come to ensnare the earth, because of what was done to Her.

26. Mother God is fairer than the children of men, grace is poured into Her lips, therefore we are blessed.
27. Gird your knife upon your thigh, oh Mother God.
28. Your righteous hand teaches terrible things.
29. Your arrows are sharp in the hearts of your victims, where they fall.
30. For Mother God is terrible.
31. All the nations will be subdued under Her feet.
32. Therefore do not trust in Her. She is holy. She has evil plans with the world. Therefore get to know Her. Search for the hyena gnosis, Her knowledge.
33. She has calculated evil against the world, therefore be in brokenness.
34. How long do you think She can take sin ? She will wash Her feet in the blood of the wicked. She will tread down Her enemies.
35. Do not trust in Her. She is a wild animal. Do not think you can tame Her. She will not hear your prayers.
36. When you praise Her, you will betray your shelter, and She will come to devour you, because She smelled blood.
37. Do not have hope in Her. She is not hope, but terror.
38. Come therefore to Her in the deepest of the wilderness, for it is better to suffer close to Her, than to suffer far away.
39. To be with Her should be enough.
40. Through everlasting damnation She will lead to honey dripping from Her breast.
41. She is not a shield. When we fall in the hands of our enemies, She doesn't deliver us. She is of no forgiveness.
42. Her fierce wrath goes over me, Her terrors have destroyed me. Her alarms in my head and soul came against me.
43. She has a mighty arm and a strong hand.
44. Justice is fastened firmly to Her body, and is the foundation of Her throne. There is no mercy and truth before Her throne.
45. She punishes the sinners with stripes. She clothes Her enemies with shame.
46. We can expect nothing but scorn from Her.

8.

1. She leads her captured kings to the underworld, where She mocks them. She dresses them with robes of scorn.
2. Her naked buttocks are a sign of scorn and terror.

3. In fear they will lay at her feet, after which she pushes them into the river to be devoured by wild beasts.

Kim the Pigslayer

4. She will drag doomed sinners to the places of punishment by leashes. And she will establish Her Vihod, which is the softness of horses, but also the yellow, the insanity and disease. The Hanik-Vuh is the priestly slavery by which we have to sacrifice, until we can approach Her.
5. We have to sacrifice and fight, in order to have Hanik-Vuh as the gift of prophesy. It is the sweet priestly slavery of Hanik-Vuh. Hunters, come closer and sacrifice your fish, in order to hear Mother God. Much blood has to flow to speak one word, and to hear one word.
6. Much has to be sacrificed, hunters and warriors, to enter. Only in blood we can hear Her. Her voice will enter us to pierce our hearts and enslave us. By the Hanik-Vuvod, remorse, we are Her gladiators, to be led into Her deeper arenas. Her messages come as a piercing smell from her altars of slaughter, and we have tied Her enemies to stakes.
7. We lost our hearts on the battlefield to Her. Pigs are the veils of the gnosis, the knowledge. Kim-Vuk is the pighunter, Kim-Varu is the pighell and Kim-Darm is the pigbreeder, literally the green stinging fly, and sometimes : bleeding pig, stretching, making taller.
8. The Kim-Varu-Darm is the pigsmith, and the Kim-Darm-Vuk is the pigtailor, the Kim-Varu-Vuk is the pighut-builder.

III – The Apocryphs of the Higher Mother Bible

The Ghost-children of Pendilot

In the depths of Orion, Dagva had his slaves, who he had pierced in their teeth by strange implants. This was how he controlled his slaves. They were remote devices. He wanted his slaves to build pyramids for his empire. Dagva was a zombie under the wrath of the gods, but he had built his own religious order. They were called the Zamgda. By the pyramids he had the powers to dig deep in the depths of Orion for a substance used as money, the Ontragolin Metal. This was a soft metal which could become hard by certain processes. It could also live in the people to control them. They could get possessed by it.

The Orion pyramids were huge and gigantic, and in one of these, Dagva lived. One day he was visited by Tara from Rhodes who immediately attacked him. Blood was coming from his eyes, and he turned into a dragon. The dragon spouted flames at her, but she could block it by her shield. 'I know what you want, Dagva,' Tara shouted. 'But you are not going to get it.'

Then Dagva all of a sudden stood before her as a skeleton, while blood was still streaming from his eyes. 'You shouldn't have come here,' he roared. He grasped her neck and tried to strangle her. Tara slammed him away by her sword, but then he came back, turning into a bear, and then into a lion, to spit fire at her again, which she could block by her shield again.

'Your games are over,' he roared, while Tara felt weak all of a sudden, and later she woke up in a dungeon cage. He had done something with her head. She had a terrible headache, and she found out that she had strange implants in her teeth. No one would control her like this, but there was nothing she could do. Some dark weeks followed in the cage. Tara began to feel hopeless.

When she was allowed to come out of her cage, Dagva wanted to sacrifice her in a pool of fire, which was like an oven underground. She was led to the edge from which she would be pushed. She was tied, her hands behind her back. She was also blindfolded. They wanted to hang her, and let her sink into the flames. The rope was already around her neck. Suddenly a little boy showed up, who shouted : 'No !' Dagva seemed to be upset. 'Go home, child,' he shouted.

The little boy came from a stairway, and ran to Tara to hug her. Then the guards of Dagva, the tooth-piercers, tried to grasp the boy, but the boy ran away and disappeared into the nothing. 'Those silly, stupid ghost-children,' Dagva roared. 'Hang her now !'

Suddenly many more ghost-children appeared, took the rope off her neck, and led her away, while a strange smoke was blinding Dagva and his guards. 'Don't let them escape !' Dagva shrieked.

Suddenly Tara was in a white smoke. She wasn't tied and blindfolded anymore. Lions were surrounding her, and on the back of the lions she and the children were brought to a dark castle, the castle of Pendilot, where the children were living. 'It is a great day !' one of the children was shouting, a boy, when they had entered the main hall of the castle. 'Dagva has lost it this time. His empire is falling.' All the children were joyfully shouting. They had once suffered under his hand, but now they were free, and helped to free others. They were the ghost-children of Pendilot. They were the souls who died under the cruel regime of Dagva and the tooth-piercers. The lions always took care of them.

'Am I dead ?' Tara asked.

'No,' said a boy. 'We saved you before that could happen.' Suddenly the castle dematerialized, and disappeared into the nothing, and Tara found herself in the desert. She wondered what had happened to Dagva. In the distance she saw the army of tooth-piercers. She wouldn't be able to begin much against such a big army. But then it faded away. Someone was laughing in her head, which sounded like Dagva's voice, but then it faded away also. Tara was very thirsty and sat down. She still felt very weak. She wondered if she was safe.

Suddenly from the sand a skeleton came forth. It was Dagva. He grasped her, and pulled her into the depth, like in shift-sand. Everything was tumbling in Tara's head. Suddenly she woke up in a bed in the castle of Pendilot. A boy was staring at her. 'Am I dead ?' she asked.

'No, you just slept,' said the boy. 'Maybe you had a bad dream.'

'Well, you can say that,' Tara said. 'Am I safe ?'

The boy nodded.

'What happened to Dagva ?' Tara asked.

The boy didn't say anything, and then left. A while later another boy came to Tara, and asked how she slept. Tara told him about the dream. 'It wasn't a dream, Tara,' said the boy. 'Dagva is after your soul.'

'How can we terminate him ?' Tara asked.

'Well,' said the boy. 'Dagva's power is in the Ontragolin Metal. He could make it hard and use it as tooth-piercings. It is a ghost. There is only one way to stay safe against this ghost. We still get tortured by this ghost when we are asleep.'

'What is the only way ?' Tara asked.

'Well,' said the boy, 'the only way is to find the Hyena Tower, a powerful ghost tower in the depths of the Pendilot desert, but first we have to find the portal to the Pendilot desert. It should be somewhere below the castle of Pendilot.'

'I think I was in this desert,' Tara said.

'Really ?' said the boy. 'Tell me about it.'

'It was only for a short period I was there,' Tara said. 'And I met Dagva and the army of the tooth-piercers. Dagva grasped me, and together we sunk into shift sand.'

'Did you see the tower ?' the boy asked.

'No,' Tara said.

'There is a place of shift sand in the underground of the castle, deep down below. No one dares to go there, because it is a haunted place, but I think we have no other choice then,' said the boy. 'I think the shift sand is the portal to the desert then.'

Together they went there, and slid into the shift sand. Soon they both stood in a huge desert. There were pyramids all around them. Behind the pyramids there was the huge Hyena Tower, like a stairway into the sky. But no matter how long they walked, they didn't come closer to it. It seemed like the place was bewitched.

'Maybe the clue is in the pyramids,' said the boy.

But the pyramids seemed to be unreachable as well. The only thing they could do was go back to the place of the shift sand, and return to the castle. That was which they did, and later they told about it to the other children.

'Maybe the tower can only be reached by another way,' one of the children said.

One of the children had found out that the tooth-piercers had found their fortress. They were already knocking on the doors and the walls. The children got upset, and knew that they had to go downstairs now. Suddenly Dagva stood before them and tried to possess their minds. Some children fainted.

'Run for your life !' one of the boys shouted. Soon they were surrounded by tooth-piercers, but Tara and a few boys could escape to the place of shift sand. Again they went through the shift sand to the desert. They knew they couldn't return anymore. One boy soon found a sort of elevator hidden under sand. They made the portal free, and soon they reached the Hyena Tower. There was a lot of white smoke here, and lions. Soon they ran up the stairways.

The tower started shaking, and they heard laughing. Soon they stood eye to eye with Dagva again. It seemed he was the one laughing. 'This tower is mine,' he laughed.

'No, it isn't !' one of the boys shouted. Tara took an arrow from behind her back, and aimed at Dagva. Then she shot right through him. He caught flame, but he was just laughing. 'Let me grasp you now !' he laughed. The boys shrieked and ran downstairs again. Tara wondered if they were at the right place. And if they were, there would be a battle to get what they wanted. The tooth-piercers were already running upstairs also. There was no way to escape. Tara soon was hit on her head a few times, and later she woke up in a dungeon, together with the children. 'There must be a way,' one of them said. Some dark weeks followed. It seemed the children were trapped.

'There is no way for us to survive this,' cried one of the boys.

'Let's be glad we are all together again,' said Tara. 'We are still alive.'

The children began to sing songs to comfort each other. They feared they would be sacrificed.

Soon they were all led to the court hall of Dagva to be judged. They were surrounded by tooth-piercers who slowly turned into the most horrible predators. Some of the children started to shriek. Suddenly it was like the skies were tearing open, and the ghost-lions of the children were appearing. They were spreading a red smoke, by which the tooth-piercers started to melt away. They took the children and Tara on their backs, and disappeared. They took them to the wilderness, to a place of hyenas. The hyenas would care over the children now. The place was called Hyena Tower, but it was not a real tower. It was a jungle. Here all sorts of exotic plants, trees and flowers grew. It brought forth a honey to let the Ontragolin Metal piercings melt, and restore the teeth. Tara hoped they were finally free from Dagva now.

Land of the Hypocrits

There was once a society in the Martian deserts, where a man's tribe had enslaved women. There was not the usual idea of marriage, but all these wives had been enslaved. In the desert a man spoke to his wife, she was enslaved. He spoke softly to her, and she reacted. Outside these regions she would die. Her husband protected her, but it was a dirty deal. She had mixed feelings about it, and the man also. It was kind of a necessity, as it was always on Mars with slavery : It was a way of survival. Women were too free and impulsive of nature, and would easily bring themselves and others in troubles by not serving their responsibilities, and forsaking care. This was what the men were aware of. Oh yes, they gave them great power, as there was a tight base of matriarchy. Under the umbrella of the male they could develop themselves. Free women were a curse, and they often suffered under bad circumstances, dying young. So the men invaded many bases of women, to enslave them to higher purposes. The men had predators for that, charged by an unknown source. For a woman it was almost the highest good to bow at the feet of such a man. And the guiding predators would take care that the women would not make compromises. It was a total slavery. This was what they demanded.

Males not woken up to this lived often a miserable life. They could not defend themselves, and they often seemed to get lost in tragic poverty. It was for a man essential to wake up to this reality. The devices of such female slavery were in the hands of Debrichiar, a monster tiger. He taught the men of Mars that grotesque was a weakness in their system, and that it could be fatal to the devices, so the monster held a tight discipline over the heads of the men. If a woman could make a man muscular by her devices, then the man would lose his power to her, and he would become like clay in her hands. The muscle men formed a big threat against the plans of the monster. And it would threaten the surfaces of Mars. This was why the monster once sent out a swarm of fire wasps, to sting the muscles of men. A few leaks in the body of the man would be enough, if not then Mars would turn into a disaster.

In the depths of the deserts there were fire lakes, by which men could get ready for the devices of the monster. It was the task of the fire wasps to bring them to these. Young boys always shrieked when the fire wasps brought them to the fire lakes where they had to begin their long journey, but it was to save them. The fire wasps would guide them and guard them. The fire lakes finally led to the great Ocean of Fire in the center of the desert, where they would receive the final mark, the mark to wake them up. This fire would kill the spirit of grotesque totally. It would awaken the savage part of the man. It was a great evil there, as the secret of the sea. It gave them access to desert island, in the center of the sea.

A man in the desert tried to talk to his wife. She reacted. She had been dead for a long time. He could finally reach her, and she reacted to his quiet voice. Visions were spinning in her head, of the love of her man, and she felt loved for the first time in her life, and she could love him. He took her hands and she felt the warmth for the first time in her life. Her hand reacted to it. She was drowning in his love, and in the distance she saw the fortress. 'No, not the fortress,' she said. But inside she liked it, and finally she gave herself over to the feeling. They were one now, for the first time of their lives. The steel on his body was hot, and the steel of his carriage pulled forth by predators. Her feet were burning on it, but it didn't hurt her, it woke her up. She watched the jewelry of her husband, and kissed it.

She drew him to their tent, she put him to sleep, while his predators were waking over him. She went outside of the tent to do some laundry. Everything was hot. Soon it was like the tent was exploding. There was fire everywhere. She grasped his body, and kissed him, and he held her tight. 'Close your eyes and dream,' he said. 'We're only bringing forth evil spirits in this land of the hypocrits.'

3.

The Invaders

In the depths of the wilderness the snakes ruled, together with the Lord of the snakes. He was once chased away to the wilderness by his partner, princess Sheleila, princess of the serpents. She first wanted to kill him, but later she had some mercy on him, and banned him to the wilderness. Her reasons were unknown. The Lord of the snakes grieved very much about this, but all the snakes of the wilderness were at his side. The royal serpents were on the side of princess Sheleila, their princess. In the wilderness he met someone else, a savage girl. She led him to the desert where he found a new life. In a desert fortress complex he was welcomed very warmly. New blood was moving through his veins, new life.

The queen of Horr was ruling in the deserts, she was the queen of dogs. She had built here an empire of slavery. She was the mistress of death. The secret of her power was the dog stone she once found in the ocean behind the deserts. It made her such a high rule on Mars. The stone was like tall rough scarlet chrystal, like a thick vein. A snake guarded the stone. The men here were all but grotesque, they were tall and slim, having belts with tall aprons. The wings of death were her watchers, they looked like birds made of just one wing.

She heard the story about what princess Sheleila did to her guest. She offered him a living here. It was for the Lord of Snakes five years of slavery here, and then she dumped him too. The Lord of Snakes returned to the wilderness again, in wrath. He wanted to build his own empire now, and he wanted revenge. He didn't understand why women could be so. But both the princess and the queen had too much power. He couldn't begin anything against them. One day in a cave he found an old man with a lot of wisdom. The old man had the wrath of the gods in his eyes, but on the other side he said to the Lord of the Snakes that he had to humble himself before the women. First the Lord of the Snakes went to the princess of serpents to beg for her mercy, together with the old man. He had humbled himself, and wanted to bring it to a deeper level. The princess was surprised. She always feared his male powers, but now she saw he was somewhat broken.

'Bring me the head of the queen of Horr,' she spoke, 'and I will let you in.'

'Her powers are too huge,' he said.

'Then I will let you die at the front of my gates,' the princess said, and left.

Together with the old man he went to the queen of Horr to humble himself. She didn't want to talk to him at first, but later she sent a wing of death to him, who tortured him and the old man very badly.

‘What is the reason of this,’ the Lord of the Snakes screamed.

‘The reason is unknown,’ the wing of death said. ‘It is the will of the queen.’

‘She tries to break my brains,’ the Lord of the Snakes screamed.

‘She fears the male brain,’ the wing of death said.

‘So is there life after the torture and death she inflicts on me ?’ the Lord of the Snakes asked.

The Lord of the snakes decided to take a raft to leave on the ocean. He came to a strange island, everything was very hot here, a burning atmosphere. A savage woman came to him and the old man to welcome them. ‘You come from far, strangers, I can see,’ she said. She took them to her hut, where she made them a meal. ‘You must be hungry,’ she said.

The Lord of the Snakes told her how he was dumped by two royal women, losing his life more or less. ‘Oh yes,’ the woman said, ‘I know the royals. If they can find some better slaves, they dump the old ones.’

‘Do you miss them ?’ the woman asked.

‘Yes,’ the Lord of the Snakes said, ‘for they have my heart. I lost my life to them.’

‘Good,’ the woman said.

‘Good ?’

‘Yes,’ the woman said, ‘losing your grotesque male power and your male brain is essential.’

‘What sort of brain do I suppose to have ?’ he asked.

‘A chicken brain,’ she said.

The old man nodded.

‘How do I get that ?’ the Lord of the Snakes asked.

‘Go to the beach and wait for her,’ she said.

‘Wait for who ?’ he asked.

‘The queen of the flames,’ she said. ‘She can give it to you.’

‘How ?’ he asked.

‘By letting her invade you,’ she said.

The Hounds of Hell

Shandra, Shandra, he was saying. His wife stood up and grasped his hand. They shared love for many years already. They were somewhat amazed by all the coconuts laying around them, brought by the monkeys. ‘On love,’ he said, took one and drank from it. His wife did the same. She was shy, she had grown like this by what happened in the past, a past so dark that he didn’t know half of it. She could not speak very well, always kept her words in. He took her in her arms and soothed her. She had been bitten by a group of dogs, wild dogs. Since then she could not speak. She always hesitated when she spoke. Her husband took her lovingly in his arms, he wanted to take her out of this fire, but it had burnt him too. He always felt rejected, as if she didn't love him enough. The wild dogs laughed, they enjoyed upsetting marriages, they enjoyed making a mess of it. They had a strange kitchen.

Shandra had to work in it day and night, her husband was the food. She always sacrificed him to the dogs, so that he would understand where she was going through. She wanted him to feel the bites she had, and it tore them apart. The dogs were now inbetween, as a fire. They were both paralyzed now, he couldn't speak, and now she felt rejected as well, as if he didn't love her enough, and the wild dogs laughed and made their dinner. They were both on the plate now, to be sacrificed to the king of the wild dogs. 'What have you done to them ?' he asked.

'We have made them like we are,' the dogs said. The king took a bite, and both the man and the woman became wild dogs as well. 'Shandra, Shandra,' he said. But she didn't answer. She was running with the wild dogs, and he did the same. But he could not enjoy it, and he got mad, and bit them, biting them like the king once bit him, so that they would feel it and understand him. He had a sadness because of this, but the dogs only became wilder.

He wanted to become indifferent like them, but at the same time he wanted to attack the king, for the king was the cause of all this in his eyes. So he went to the king and attacked him, bit him, but then the king begged for mercy, and said : 'Please don't make it too hard on me. My wife had passed, I miss her, life is cruel.'

But then the man said : 'But you cannot destroy relationships just because your own relationship is broken.'

'I wanted you to feel what I felt, so that the pain would be healed,' the king said.

'What can I do to help you,' the man asked.

'Please become king in my place, as I cannot live with these wild dogs anymore,' the king said.

And so it happened, the man became king and could finally sooth the wild dogs.

The Machine

The cow-people ruled here with their low and slow voices without mercy, without any care. They were rude and stubborn, like deaf. They did not take anyone serious but themselves. By a strange disease they were turning into cows more and more, and they became huge and big like predators. There was witchcraft in this world of cows, they had their powers by jewels.

Saltenni took his sword and started to slay them all. He was the slayer of the coasts and they started to fear him more and more. He visited their royal houses and their aristocratic appartments. He wanted to become the cow farmer. He hated them. He was crueller than them, but also softer with more grace. He was a man of opposites. Saltinni had always lived at the coasts since child, but now he was taking the land.

He became a legend, setting so many people free from the curse of the cow-people. Some said he was a witch, and yes, he used witchcraft, as he once got his own jewels by whicked he covered his body. He believed in amulets. They taught him how to fight, how to use his sword. They spoke to him in the night. It was a heritage of his grandmother.

She said to him : ‘use them well, for one time you might need them.’

He always kept her dear in her heart. He was graceful to older people, and he was their guard. He had a heart of gold. He wanted to build a new world, based on equality, communication, and the rule of love. He would give them a new system, but then he would leave to the wilderness, for that was where he belonged. For many years he drew back to the wilderness, but when he returned, he was sad, for the people behaved like the cow-people again. Again he took his sword and brought slaughter. He wanted to root this evil cow-spirit out. But he also remembered the words of his grandmother : ‘Restore the worship of the stones.’ She meant the stones she once gave to him. So he did. He took off his amulets, placed them in the middle of the land, and raised a religion. He returned to the wilderness again, this time more naked than he was before. This time he hoped that things would work out. Many years later he returned again to the system, but there were religious wars everywhere. Everyone seemed to have another interpretation of the stones, and they behaved like the cow-people to each other again. This time he would rule them himself. He skinned a cow, took it’s skin as his robe, and used it’s head and horns as his helmet. He put up a low and slow voice like the cow people, and fear came in the hearts of the people. He made the laws, and brought terror more than the cow-people ever did. It was his machine. And this time things would go his way.

The Justice Machine

A martian prince rode with the princess of hyenas, in a hot spot of Mars called the Sun of Mars. She was older than him, kind of his mother. But they had a relationship, and ruled the Sun of Mars. His muscles had been stung by strange pins, and bound by stripes, so that his male power would not become like a wild river which couldn’t be quenched anymore. She did this to him, she had tortured him, as she was afraid of his male pride.

But he could understand her, and he loved her. They were together for many years. Once they had a fight, in which she won. But he had lovingly submitted himself to her. She took care of him, and was his guard, but she could also rip him apart, and that was why he feared her.

When she would get angry, her nipples would grow big, and they would start to spit fire. These things could cause disasters on Mars. Whenever a muscle would grow on a man, an alarm went on, and the muscle had to be pierced, so that the male mind would not take control, for that was which she feared. Men lived in great fear because of her, the muscle alarms were horrible and traumatic. She had bought herself a justice machine long ago, with many switches and lamps. She was against the male mind, and wanted to plant her matriarchy. She bred special stuff in her garden, for once she would invade the whole of Mars to rule, together with her hyenas. She had the hyena gnosis in her heart demanding that all the bones of the males would be pierced and lead them to paralysis, so that she could raise them as slaves from there. She would grant them power, and she would grant them weakness, whenever she wished, and wherever. They would become her zombies in which the hyena mind would take place, and in which the male mind would die. She was of course a zombificator with her justice machine. The hynena mind would take over, to let these men bow at her feet. It was of course her fantasy, that wherever there was a male chest a female breast would rise instead. But not much did she know of the depths of this hyena gnosis, which would also turn against herself. The prize of such a machine was high. She was just a doll in the eyes of hyenas, a spoilt princess, wanting to have everything her way. They would give it to her, but then she would have to pay the prize. She would become their trophée.

By sweetness they invited her in, waiting to put her jaws in her, when she would be deep enough, to the point of no return. They were intelligent and complicated, while she wanted it the simple way, fast. She did not know much about the gnosis of hyenas living inside of her. She was just a princess.

Queen of Hyenas

She was safe with her husband in the royal cabin. Outside martian hyenas were tearing a swine up. And after that they went for a wounded bison. They left enough meat for the queen. She came outside with a spear or they would attack her as well. She dragged the meat into the royal cabin and fed her husband. No one would understand what they went through. The bison was still half living. The black queen was on her horse, armed with arrows. When she stepped from her horse her feet got red of the blood. She was from the south, and went into the cabin as well. Soon it turned into a fight. Shamia took her knife and slew the black queen.

Her husband couldn't move. He was still in a shock. He always feared the black queen, but she was dead now. His wife embraced him. 'You must eat,' she spoke. Hyenas surrounded the royal cabin. They had smelled the blood. Shamia took the body of the dead queen and threw it outside. Of course she would be hyena food now, and she deserved it. She had tortured her husband for so long. 'You are safe with me,' she whispered to her husband. He was fragile.

'I can't believe she is dead,' he said. 'I had to drink poison from her cup. I still feel so weak.'

'Here, drink some swine blood,' Shamia said, and held a cup to his lips. 'It is to heal you.' After that she gave him bison blood. Was this the woman who breastfed hyenas, and why were they against her? They were still savage. They loved and hated their mother. They would tear her up if they would see her, but they still sacrificed great pieces of their prey to her. The blood was warm, and it made him shiver. Now the black queen of the south was dead, the Tartars could invade her territorium. There would be a new queen of hyenas now. Shamia, once rejected by them, was a perfect candidate for it. She would now become the alpha-female after so many years of bitter rejection. Her husband was proud of her. The territorium of the Tartars grew since that day. The hyenas accepted their new queen and licked her.

The Hyena Pyramid

The man planet was in war against the woman planet. The dog planet would be a good initiator in this. They were aware of it. Eleduus was imprisoned on the man planet. Being a man himself, he thought that women were mistreated here. He was an activist on the side of the women, that's why they imprisoned him. He often couldn't understand the deep obsessions of certain women with men. He had been imprisoned on woman planet as well, just because he was a man, and they were scared of him, like they were scared of any man, and they thought they would be better bridled. This he could understand. Men were potentially a great danger, even himself.

Here on man planet he was imprisoned together with Zaqedas, an older man. Zaqedas knew a lot about men, and how they worked, and he was assured that man planet would fail and would be taken over by women. He was on a mission here to do that. Eleduus and Zaqedas had a lot of conversations. There was also a woman with them. She acted very paranoid and strange. She was also an activist for women, but she didn't trust any men.

Zaqedas knew about Petirias, the monster in the swamp, producing these men who wanted to dominate women and the whole planet. He would impregnate women by coming to them in the form of a man. This form could adapt to any man, slowly absorbing them and taking them over. Zaqedas had built a dog machine which could absorb man power. It started with bringing the golden balance between man power and woman power back, and a red track would bring people back to woman planet. But officials found the dog machine, took it in their possession and imprisoned Zaqedas.

Zaqedas told it to Eleduus and the woman. 'So what these officials do not know,' said Zaqedas, 'is that the dog machine has a hidden program, a third program, which will get activated when intruders want to take the dog machine with them, or change it's programming. This program works slow but steady. It is the hyena track, the pyramid of dog-planet. It is a defense mechanism so that the plan will not fail.

Zaqedas looked at Eleduus. 'This planet, man planet, has some weak spots. Nature will take care of itself. Dog planet will soon invade, then woman planet will take over. They want to restore the woman.'

It was happening in the night. Dog planet, man planet and woman planet seemed to grow together, melting. And a pyramid was rising, the hyena pyramid. Everything was reducing to it's child form again, and from there things started to grow. Children with swords defended their kingdoms, guarded by crocodiles. When children became older, they turned into dogs. Those who reached the hyena pyramid before they got older, became hyenas.

Traghar came closer to the aztec beauty. It was lying on a chair, a perfect red gem almost wrapped by zebra skin. He held it in his arms like a baby, soothing it almost. Then he stepped forward to the aztec king. 'I have heard about your daughter,' Traghar said. 'Like many have, and I will assure you that I will bring her back.'

'I will reward you richly,' the king said.

Traghar went out of the aztec palace. The white stones were shining in the light of the day, and Traghar was almost blinded by the sight. How he loved to watch this palace. He ran into the jungle, where some monkeys were waiting for him. These apes cared about nothing else but Traghar and to fulfill his orders. He was a god to them. He told them about the aztec beauty, and about the princess he was looking for.

'Nachtur Kawa,' said one of the apes. Together they ran deeper into the jungle, to the place where they lived, which was almost like a village. Keenat was the name of the lost aztec princess. Traghar shouted her name. He wondered where she could be. There was no trace.

Traghar also visited the black monkey king, to tell him about the princess. No one knew where she was. Clearblue the tiger came close to Traghar. They were all sad that the princess was lost, as they loved the king. He had done so much for them. Then Traghar went deeper into the jungle, close to the steaming lake. Here he found the princess. She was bathing there and he wondered why. There were crocodiles all around her. Slowly he came closer to her. 'Why are you here ?' Traghar asked. But the girl didn't say anything.

'Did you lose your speech or so ?' Traghar asked. But the girl was all silent. Then Traghar came even more closer. It looked like she was spellstruck. She went deeper into the water and swam to the other side, together with the crocodiles. 'Hey, wait,' Traghar said loud. Then he followed her. He wanted to know what was going on. He followed her into a cave behind the lake, where a lot of apes were. They surrounded her. 'May I ask what is going on,' Traghar said. But the girl didn't answer.

Traghar wanted to take her back to the aztec king, but she didn't want. It looked like she was under a spell, or she had lost her memory. 'What can I do for you ?' Traghar asked. Then suddenly a monkey took Traghar and pushed him hard into the water. The girl hid behind this big ape. Traghar didn't want to upset her, but on the other hand he had the feeling that she was a captive. He had to use wisdom now. The monkeys became more angry, and Traghar really had to leave now, as he didn't want to cause a bloodbath because of the presence of the princess. In the night he returned to the cave, but there was no one. He went deeper into the wilderness behind the steaming lake, where he found the girl sleeping between the apes. Carefully he took her on his back, and climbed into a tree, and then went from tree to tree by lianas.

When he came into the aztec palace the princess was still sleeping. The king was glad to see her. But soon there was an invasion of apes in the palace, as they wanted the princess back. Traghar had never seen so many apes in his whole life. But this time he just had to cause a bloodbath. The pillars were shaking. Traghar called for Kendira the lion, and when the lion showed up, the bloodbath became even greater. Later the king found out that the princess was not really the princess but a clone of her, made of rubber, and it was almost perfect. Traghar had just taken a doll. This was why the princess didn't speak.

Traghar went deeper into the jungle. After a long run of many hours he came to a temple who had two clones of her before the portal. They didn't speak, but they were armed. Traghar could escape from them and entered the temple. There another clone of the princess was sitting on a throne, but this clone could speak.

'What have you done to the princess,' Traghar asked.

'Oh, she is safe with us,' the clone said. Traghar ran deeper into the temple, into a chamber, where he found her in a golden cage. Immediately the cage started to move upwards, and disappeared through the ceiling. The clone stood behind him. 'Blood in the mornings for those who search the treasures lost,' the clone said. 'You will not find what you search for. You have to give it up.'

'Never,' said Traghar. He grasped his knife, and came into a fight with her. In the distance he heard the princess screaming. He jumped up and went through the tunnel in the ceiling, and finally through a muddy path he came to a throne where a panthress was sitting, a black panthress. She was holding an inca treasure, and said that it was a time bomb of the flood, that the whole planet would drown in blood soon.

'What do you want with the aztec princess,' Traghar asked.

'We will eat her,' the panthress said. 'Her meat will make us immune.'

Traghar knew about the inca stone. It would cause blood to rain and prey would fall down like meat, all to help the hunters. But maybe this was another stone. It was a powerful stone for sure.

'Ghosts are living in this stone,' the panthress said, 'and they have kidnapped the princess, and made so many clones of her.'

Traghar came closer to her, while she grasped her spear. 'One step closer and you are dead meat,' she said.

'My dad has a mayan stone,' the princess screamed from her cage. 'Please bring it here to neutralize these energies.'

Traghar ran back to the aztec palace, and told the aztec king what happened. He gave him the mayan stone, and Traghar ran back to the place where the princess was, but when he came to the temple it had been surrounded by monkeys. Traghar called for lions to invade the temple. They caused blood baths everywhere, but the princess was nowhere to be found.

'It is almost time this planet to be drowned in blood,' a voice said.

Traghar didn't know where the voice was coming from.

'What is that stone you have there,' the voice said.

'It is the maya stone,' Traghar said, 'the bleeding mouth, the princess asked for it.'

'Ha ha,' said the voice, 'the princess is gone.'

Traghar stared at the mud between his toes. It was like the voice was coming from the underground. When he laid the stone on the ground suddenly a light was blinding them all. The lions started roaring and the ground seemed to open itself up. There he heard the screaming of the princess again, and went into the opening. Soon he came to an open space in the underground. He held the stone to his chest. He saw her lying on a table, and she was surrounded by apes with knives. They were ready to cut her. 'Throw the stone, Traghar !' the princess shouted. With one swing he hit one of the apes. There the panthress came with the inca stone.

He took her in a grip, a tight grip. The apes were all fearing the mayan stone. 'I am losing my powers,' the panthress spoke. I see the mayan stone is stronger than the inca stone, so there will come no flood of blood. We don't need the meat of the aztec princess anymore to become immune. Then she fell down for the mayan stone and worshipped it. Traghar took the aztec princess and together they left the palace.

The king was very pleased to see her again. It was through the bushes Traghar could see so many red stones now, so many aztec stones awakening. There was a new nature coming alive on the planet Betelgeuse.

He was an aztec priest in so many ways. The aztec king could always count on him. The aztec king gave him his daughter as a gift. Together they would wander through the wildernesses and jungles of Betelgeuse. They lived here with the beasts.

Traghar was in the desert fighting against a red giant worm. It came out of the ground to attack Traghar, and he had a hard time with it. Keenat the aztec princess soon joined him, and they could get rid of it, and together they threw it into the ravine. It was dying there.

There was a desert war between the Esakites and the Nomiites. The war was about zebra oil, but the war was actually caused by a demonic pillar, the pillar of Znatun. Traghar had to bring this pillar down. He didn't want to see this fight anymore. A skeleton goddess called Pink helped him to find the pillar of Znatun. She was aware that the war didn't lead to anything. There was actually no escape from this war, as she knew that if the pillar would break it would be two times worse. But she gave Traghar a try. Maybe he could deactivate this pillar.

When he approached her in her desert palace he was amazed by all the treasures she had. 'Travel south,' she spoke to Traghar.

When Traghar approached the Pillar of Znatun he soon found out it was an oracle. Two powers were fighting each other to open an ancient door. This door was called the Door of Peace, but it clearly meant the opposite. Traghar went through the portal in the pillar, and saw the future. It was a repeat of a long forgotten past.

Traghar thought the only way to forget about this was to enter deeper into the desert, into the wilderness, to start a new life and forget about it all. He took his princess with him. She was faithful to him, loving, strong.

The crocodile lake was in the depths of the wilderness. There were sliding so many unknown reptiles here, unknown to the world above. Traghar loved the depths of the wilderness. Soon he swam together with him, and they knew he was their Lord. They loved him as well. The water was cool, yet it was slimy and warm, and mystery was boiling there. They swam together, he and she. They were wanting the gnosis, the deeper knowledge of it all, and almost begged the reptiles to show it to them. The path went to become steamy, almost like a swamp. There was an island in this lake, salty and sandy, where strange trees grew. It was indeed the land of the pillar.

And of course this was a pillar of worms, shapeshifting in the head of Traghar. It was his worm-helmet keeping him in this state. There were inca crosses in his head, ghosts from a long forgotten past. He was under the curse of a worm, the great red one. If he should have known better he would know that after the death of this red worm there would also be another part, as worms have many parts, living on separated, in this sense as the Pillar of Znatun, the causer of all war.

The great desert was lurking him, where he would find his grave of worms, and from which he would rise. It was a great place with many pillars : the pillar of sand, the pillar of water, the pillar of salt, and the pillar of blood, all dedicated to the great worm. Traghar wanted to know the secret of this cult here.

The Jewels of Phalir

Travahl was on his way to the palace of princess Phalir. She was dressed in fur, and on her belly hung red chrystals. Travahl couldn't get his eyes off of her. She was a beauty of the highest grade, but Travahl was a savage, so he didn't have any mercy on her. He abducted her, took her to a cave and made sure she understood his plans. He wanted the elite of Afir to fall down.

He wanted to use her for that. She needed to tell him about the place where the keys were to the underworld. In the underworld the elite had their secret conspiracies. Travahl wasn't glad with any of them. He wanted to slay them coldblooded.

Of course Phalir didn't tell him where the keys were, but she misled him and he came into a trap. Phalir wouldn't have mercy on him. Travahl came into a pit full of snakes, while guards blocked the way out. Here Travahl had to die, but savage as he was, he lived from the snake meat.

Every night he dreamt about Phalir. But soon he started to hate her more and more. Savage as he was he dug a hole in the snake pit. After months of digging he reached the underworld by himself, and slayed all the elite.

Phalir was now in his hands. He dressed her with the most beautiful stones and adorned her with the treasures in the underworld. Here he would rule with her. But Phalir hated him. It was a forced relationship. Travahl didn't seem to understand that. He saw her as an object, his object.

One night when he slept Phalir chained him, and fled. She found some hope and rest with the snakes of Mordid, a friend of hers. Mordid was the only one she could go to. And the snakes protected her, like they protected Mordid.

When Travahl woke up and found out that he had been chained he roared and screamed, but there was no one to help him. Days of hunger followed, but suddenly he got so much strength that he could break the chains.

In the forests he searched for Phalir. He missed her.

After awhile he came to the place of Mordid, and he had a fight against the awful snakeguards. But savage as he was, he soon ate from their meat and enjoyed it. He called for Phalir, but then Mordid stood before him with a sword.

'What is your wish, savage man ?' she asked.

'I ask you for the hand of Phalir,' Travahl said. 'I know she is with you. I can smell it.'

'She doesn't want you,' Mordid said. 'Why don't you lay yourself down in this fate. Go outside into the forest and cry for a few days, and then go on with your life.'

'No,' Travahl said. 'She needs me. I don't want her to fall in the hands of the elite again. Those aristocrats do not have any manners.'

Mordid aimed her sword at him, but Travahl grasped her pulse. 'Now, can't I be more clear. Phalir is mine,' he shouted.

'No, she is my sister,' Mordid said.

'What kind of man does she want,' Travahl said.

'She doesn't want a man,' Mordid said.

'Why not ?' Travahl asked.

'She cannot live with a man,' Mordid said. 'She has a handicap.'

'What is her handicap ?' Travahl asked.

'Well,' Mordid said, 'Have you ever seen her naked ? She's a spotted woman.'

‘I don’t care,’ Travahl said.

‘Well, she’s ashamed of it,’ Mordid said.

‘I think spots are beautiful,’ Travahl said.

But when he saw her he became afraid. She had turned into a spotted dog.

‘That is her secret,’ Mordid said.

The spotted dog jumped at Travahl and bit him. Travahl was bleeding. ‘Since I have your scar, can I marry you ?’ he asked.

‘I marry you,’ Phalir said. ‘For you have seen my secret and still loved me.’

Travahl got a ring around his neck, and soon they got married. Mordid was their witness. Since then Travahl lived in the underworld and ruled together with Phalir. They became a warrior couple, fighting side by side. While Mordid was their everlasting hope and fortress.

12.

Inner Weakness

It was cold in the heart of Travahl. Together with Phalir he ruled the underworld. They had clothed themselves with the jewels of tigers. Their realm was full of the treasures of the elephant. Torches were burning everywhere, but still their hearts got colder. They often had fights.

One day Phalir broke the marriage and ran away. Travahl was broken. He slew his own tigers in rage, and hung his panthers. Phalir was everything to him, but now his heart was empty.

He dreamt about her every night. No one dared to come closer to him. He clothed himself in dread.

Ameko was a warrior close to his heart. He came to Travahl one day and offered him a spear. ‘Here, take this,’ Ameko said. ‘Take revenge.’

But Travahl refused. He loved Phalir too much. But later he accepted the gift of Ameko, and started to hunt. Not after Phalir, but after deer. He hung the whole palace full with deer, in hope Phalir would come to him again.

But Phalir found herself another place, and built her own kingdom. She became a worse ruler than she ever was, but Travahl still didn’t lose his love for her.

One day he sent Ameko to her to ask her what she wanted from Travahl for her return. She answered : ‘Let him bring me the teeth of Dwahlar, and I will marry him again.’ Dwahlar was a monster in the depths of the underworld. When Ameko told it to Travahl he got into rage, took Ameko’s spear and went down in the underworld to slay the monster and rip his teeth out. He made a necklace of it and brought it to Phalir.

But Phalir was laughing. ‘I will not return to you, Travahl,’ she said. ‘First bring me the head of a camel on a dish. Then I will marry you.’ Travahl did what she asked, but still she wouldn’t marry him. ‘What do you want me to do next ?’ Travahl asked.

‘Dance for me,’ Phalir said.

‘But how ?’ Travahl asked. ‘I’m a savage. I cannot dance.’

‘I don’t care,’ Phalir said. ‘Just do it.’

Travahl danced. Phalir stood up from her throne after awhile. 'You fool,' she said. 'I won't marry a man who can't dance.' This time Travahl came into the worst rage, took his spear, threw it, and just missed.

'Conquer me,' Phalir said, while she grasped her knife. It became a fight on life and death. Phalir had become so much more powerful, and Travahl started to fear her. He couldn't beat her.

'You're a liar, Phalir,' Travahl said. 'You never do what you promise.'

'And you are naïve, Travahl,' Phalir said. 'You don't know the strategies of the battle.'

'I know you try to break me,' Travahl said. 'I guess you look for a horse to ride on.'

'No, Travahl,' Phalir said. 'I will never be with you again, unless you conquer me.'

Travahl knew that was easier said than done. But by the fights he would be close to her, although he knew she was dangerous. One day she became too dangerous for him, and he left. He went to the forest and tried to forget about her. She was too strong. She let him feel weak. But the further he went away from her, the weaker he began to feel himself, like she was inside of him. He got torn apart between fear and weakness, causing him to grieve much. But one day he slew a monster tiger and took the skin of it's head to dress himself with. Then he went back to Phalir and challenged her.

'So you came back to me ?' Phalir asked mocking. 'What did you make returning to me ?'

'Your precious beauty, oh my Phalir, destroyed my fear of you,' Travahl said, aimed his sword at her, but immediately faced her big knife. 'Do you remember this one ? she asked. Then she kicked him in his stomach.

'Please Phalir, have some mercy on me,' Travahl moaned.

'I don't feel anything for losers and weaklings like you, Travahl,' Phalir said, 'you're a slave of your desire, but you don't establish anything. You are a windhunter.'

'Then help me a bit,' Travahl moaned. 'You are so cruel.'

But Phalir kicked him in the stomach again, and this time ten times harder. He got slammed against the wall, and blood was dripping fast. After awhile Travahl woke up in a bloodbath. It felt like he had lost himself this time. 'Die, you bastard,' Phalir shouted, while she held her knife against his neck. Travahl rolled away, and could escape finally. This time he would never ever return to her again. He had to become a man, a real man, standing on himself, not depending on anyone. That was his challenge. She would forget him, as that was her nature. Her life went on. She was an independent woman, also with an inner weakness. She was too weak to handle man.

Travahl find some friendship with independent animals like black panthers. Travahl could forget about her as well this time, and found a new princess he adored. Her name was Effud. But she was almost like Phalir, and soon their friendship ended. This time Travahl already got used to it. He became coldhearted, a hard man. He became a no one's friend, only to some snakes. He learned about their jewels, and soon he had a new obsession. He finally overcame himself.

Efatas

1. Op de godenberg schiep God de engelen, op de berg van Eeden, waar hij als eerste de behemoth schiep, die later van de Heere zou afvallen. 2. Zo schiep Hij ook de morgensterren waaronder ook lucifer was, de zoon des dageraads. 3. Ook schiep hij de zonen Gods, de aartsengelen, zoals Michael, Raphael, Gabriel, Uriel, en ook Jupitaster die later van de Heere zou afvallen en satan zou heten. 4. Ook schiep God de cherubs zoals Linjaser en Belial die later van de Heere zou afvallen. 5. Verder schiep God de seraphs zoals Latou en ook de Leviathan die later van de Heere zou afvallen. En de Heere bekleedde hen met kostbare edelstenen op de berg der goden, en de Heere gaf hen woningen in de zee. 6. En de Heere zag dat het goed was, en zegende dat deel van de hemelen en het engelen paradijs. 7. En de Heere plantte bomen op de berg der goden, en de engelen mochten van die allen eten, maar er was één boom waarvan de Heere hen had verboden te eten. 8. En die boom was genaamd de boom der zonde. Maar Jupitaster wandelde eens voorbij de boom der zonde, en wist wat de Heere over de boom had gezegd. 9. Nu was daar een slang genaamd de Virtus, en de slang richtte zich tot Jupitaster. 'God wil niet dat je van deze boom eet,' sprak de slang, 'want dan zult gij worden als Hem.' 10. De slang nu was een verborgen schepsel van ongekende schoonheid en mysterie, en Jupitaster werd gevuld met een begeerte meer van de slang te weten. 11. 'God weet wel dat uw ogen geopend zullen worden wanneer gij van de boom eet, daarom heeft Hij het verboden.' 12. En Jupitaster begeerde van de boom te eten, daar hij had geluisterd naar de slang. En Jupitaster hoorde het gekrijs van engelen die zagen hoe dicht hij bij de slang en de boom was gekomen, maar andere engelen kwamen ook dichterbij. 13. En Jupitaster begeerde te zijn als God, met geopende ogen, en hij begeerde een hogere troon, tot het bevredigen van zijn trots. 14. En hij zag hoe de boom der zonde een lust was, en hoe de slang naar hem lonkte. En Jupitaster nam van de zwarte vrucht, at, en gaf een deel aan Klajafus, een andere engel, die het dichtste bij hem stond, en ook begeerde van de vrucht te eten. 15. Toen gaf hij een ander deel aan Dismef, een tweede engel, en toen een deel aan Esjaf, een derde. Vervolgens gaf hij een deel aan Kwammahas, en als laatste aan Dimhikstel. 16. Toen was er een luid gekrijs in de hemelen, en omdat zij van de Saktakus hadden gegeten, de vervloekte vrucht, werden zij en hun legioenen uit de hemelen gejaagd door de Engelen des Heeren die hun Heer getrouw waren gebleven. 17. En de Heere vernam alles wat er was gebeurd, en Hij liet twee engelen opstellen om de weg tot de boom des hemels te bewaken, opdat de gevallen engelen niet zouden wederkeren tot de hemelen. En zo viel er op één dag één derde van de engelen.

18. En de Heere stelde de engel Efatas aan om het boek des hemels te bewaken waarin alle engelen beschreven stonden, en op die dag werden er velen uit het boek des hemels gewist. 19. En de Heere stelde Efatas aan tot een nieuw begin der hemelen. En de Heere richtte zich tot de Virtus, maakte hem lang en dun, en wierp hem in het stof, waar hij werd tot een paal. En de Heere zwoer dat Hij elke engel die zou zondigen aan deze paal zou spietsen. 20. En de Heere richtte vervolgens de paal op, en maakte de paal tot een schrik voor alle engelen. En die dag viel er een grote vrees op de engelen, en zij dienden de Heere. Vanaf die dag werd Jupitaster Satan genoemd.

Korok

1. In den beginne, nog voordat de engelen werden geschapen op de heilige berg van Eeden, schiep God in het allerverborgenste de goden in een mysterie, op de top van de berg, in de hof der goden. 2. En de allereerste onder hen was Jezus Christus, die later ook als een mens en engel geworden is om de wereld te redden. En als tweede schiep God de Virtus, die later van de Heere zou afvallen. Ook schiep Hij de zeven Geesten voor Zijn troon. 3. En God sprak : Laat daar licht zijn in de hof, en er was licht. En God nam van Zijn eigen hart, en schiep daarvan de goden van de Troiade, het oude boek. 4. En God nam van Zijn ingewanden en schiep de Elohim. En in de eerste dagen vielen velen van de Elohim af, en werden uit de hof der goden gezet. En toen God op een lager deel van de berg de engelen schiep zwoeren zij wraak te nemen. 5. Zij dan zonden Virtus, die inmiddels ook van de Heere was afgefallen, om vele engelen te misleiden. En de Heere was bedroefd en Zijn hart bezwaard. En de Heere sprak een vloek uit over de Virtus, die tot een slang werd. 6. En de Virtus nam vele engelen weg van het hart des Heeren, en zo werd de Virtus tot een schrik onder de engelen. En de Heere sprak dat er lange tijd niet over de Virtus gesproken mocht worden, totdat de Heere het zegel van het einde der tijden zou hebben verbroken. En de Heere woonde in de hof der goden, en liet regen komen om de hof en de berg te wassen en te zuiveren van elk onheil. 7. En de Heere toornde op Zijn heilige berg, en Hij gaf Zijn engelen en goden een beschutting. En de Heere bracht een vloed om de goden en de engelen te testen, en velen weken af van de Heere. Waakt daarom, want er zijn vele vallen van goden en engelen, en gij weet niet van de dag noch het uur, noch van hen die zijn afgeweken. 8. En de Heere liet twee arken bouwen, voor zijn engelen en zijn goden, opdat zij een beschutting hadden tegen de toorn en de vloed des Heeren. En toen de vloed was gezakt liet de Heere op de berg van Eeden twee tempels bouwen voor zijn engelen en goden. En ook liet de Heere daar twee arken van een nieuw verbond neerzetten. 9. En de Heere sprak door de arken.

10. En dan, geliefde broeders en zusters, wat is het geheimenis van God ? Het geheimenis dan ligt in de God-slangen, zoals Mozes de slang ophief om het volk te redden. 11. Zo ligt dan in het midden van de hof der goden de hof van God de Heere, en Zijn paradijsen : Kimalt, Maken, Mashalt, Matte, Matongo, Mashan, Marzan, Matavarus, Machinie, Chinnen, Kikmus, Kikmot, Mokoken, Motoken, Tokok, Korok, Korokhuk, Huks. En zo zijn dan de God-slangen meer dan de goden, en zij vormen het wezen van God. 12. En door de Turan, de wolk van Jezus Christus, en door de Pakunieten, de sleutelen der hemelen, mogen ook wij de berg van Eeden opgaan om tot de hof van God de Heere te komen.

13. Zouden dan alle God-slangen die het wezen van God zijn zich hebben gehouden aan de goddelijke wet, of zouden ook sommigen van hen zijn afgefallen van de Levende God om zo de goden en de engelen te misleiden, en ook de mens ? 14. Waakt dan, want gij hebt van deze dingen geen weet. Maar ik zal u een geheimenis vertellen : ook enkele van deze God-slangen vielen af van hun wezen. En zij bouwden een kerk van gevallen goden en engelen.

Het Boek des Levens

1. En toen de discipelen tot de poorten des hemels kwamen, en daardoor naar binnen gingen, zagen zij de Heere zitten op een witte troon. En zij vroegen : Heer, wie staan er geschreven in het boek des levens ? En toen zei de Heere : de armen, de verstotenen en de geslagenen, zij die de lusten dragen van de doornenkroon en de lusten van het kruis. En toen vroegen zij : Heere, wiens namen staan niet opgetekend in het boek des levens ? 2. En de Heere sprak : de echtbrekers, de overspeligen, de leugenaars, en zij die de hoer volgen. En toen begonnen de discipelen deze woorden te overpeinzen, om te zien of zij daar enig licht in zagen. En toen sprak er één : Heere, en de rijken ? Zullen zij staan in het boek des levens ? 3. En de Heere sprak : Neen, want de rijke is een dief, en dieven zullen geenszins in het boek des levens geschreven staan. En na deze woorden treurden zij, want vele van hun vrienden waren rijk. En zij begrepen de woorden van de Heere niet, omdat de Heere over geestelijke dingen sprak.

4. Toen nam de Heere een lamp als een lantaarn en stak de kaars aan. Toen stond de Heere op, en liep met de brandende lantaarn langs de discipelen. En hun aantal was groot, en de Heere vroeg wie van hen Zijn licht wilde dragen. Maar zij zeiden : Och Heere, uw licht is zo groot en sterk. Wij zouden het niet kunnen dragen. Toen wees de Heere één discipel onder hen uit en gaf hem de brandende lantaarn. 'Zie Ik geef u kracht om mijn licht te zijn,' sprak de Heere, en de man steeg op. En alle discipelen keken in verbazing naar de man die was opgestegen, en zij gaven eer aan de Heere.

5. En de Heere sprak : De lusten des Heeren zijn als slakken. Zij gaan langzaam voort en bereiken langzaam hun doel. Voor zulken is het koninkrijk des Heeren. En de Heere sprak over de lusten van angst en de lusten van het lijden, en daarna sprak hij over de lusten van het spotkleed. En Hij zeide : Laat u dan bekleden met de lusten des Heeren om niet deel te hebben aan de lusten der wereld en de lusten der zonden. En vanuit de hemel daalden stukken vlees, en zij aten allen aan een grote tafel. En zo was dat wat zij aten hemels vlees, en de Heere sprak : Zij die van het hemels vlees eten zullen zeker in het boek des levens staan. En het vlees veranderde hun lichamen, en hun lichamen begonnen licht te geven. 6. En de Heere sprak : De zon en de maan hebben wij niet nodig voor licht, daar de stad des Heeren verlicht wordt door hen van het boek des levens. En de Heere deed vele wonderen en tekenen, en sommigen onder hen werden vol van angst, maar de Heere sprak : Vertrouw op Mij.

7. Zo zal dan het boek des levens spreken over de nieuwe hemel en de nieuwe aarde en hen die daar wonen. En de Heere nam een vuur om dat op de aarde te werpen, en de Heere sprak : Zie Ik maak alle dingen nieuw. En de Heere bouwde een nieuwe stad op aarde, wiens poorten van edelgesteente waren. En een vreemd licht dwaalde over de stad, en de Heere sprak : Dit zijn de zielen die rust zoeken sinds de grondlegging der wereld. Zij die van het boek des levens zijn zullen in de stad toegelaten worden, maar zij die niet opgetekend zijn in het boek zullen buitengeworpen worden. En de Heere zond een tweede vuur, en het licht werd gezuiverd. 8. En de Heere sprak : Nu is de ure gekomen dat er bekend wordt gemaakt wie tot het boek des levens behoren en wie niet. Niemand zal dan doorgang vinden in de stad dan door het boek.

1. En de Heere nam een touw, en in zijn andere hand had Hij een boek genaamd het Eeuwig Evangelie, en de tweede bijbel, en de Heere spande een net uit over de aarde, en sprak : Nu is het de tijd dat Ik de oogst van de aarde opneem, en zij zullen Mijn Woord horen en verstaan. En er vloog een vogel in de hemelen, en riep in een onverstaanbare taal. 2. En er kwam donder en bliksem van de vogel af, en aldus was de vogel des Heeren. En er waren gezichten in de hemelen, en een vrouw met de kop van een slang en de kop van een leeuw en het hoofd van een mens kwam naar voren, en zij spreidde een wit poeder over de aarde als een plaag van netels. En de aarde werd wederom gezuiverd. En de vrouw sprak : Nu is dan de canon verbroken, het juk dat zo lang op de heiligen heeft gerust. En vele zegels werden geopend, en vele dieren vielen in zee, en de golven waren hoog en woest. En de vrouw sprak weer, terwijl er een gif uit de bek van de slang kwam op de aarde wederom te zuiveren. 3. En de vrouw nam een beker, en sprak : Uit vier bekers des Heeren zullen de heiligen drinken om de Heere zuiver te verstaan, en om hun namen in het boek des levens opgetekend te hebben. En toen zij de eerste beker over de aarde uitgoot was er geschreeuw en daarna een grootse stilte. En vanuit de aarde, van onder de aarde, verscheen er een oranje draak, en zijn macht was groot. En hij brulde tot de heiligen die zich in de stad bevonden, en hij sleurde enkelen van hen uit de stad, en sprak : De nacht van Leviathan is gekomen. Leviathan zal niet sterven. Maar de Heere nam een vuur en verslond daarmee de oranje draak, en er was een gewoon in de hel, in het binnenste der aarde. 4. En de Heere sprak : In Sheool open Ik poorten, en zet Ik gevangenen vrij, want Leviathan, de meester, is overgeleverd aan de poel des vuurs, om te vergaan in hagel en zwavel tot in alle eeuwigheden. Nooit meer zal Leviathan, de meester, de aarde teisteren. Ik heb de aarde en de wereld der zonde tot in al zijn schandelijke lusten zijn meester ontnomen. En na deze woorden gesproken te hebben viel er een harde en zware deur dicht. En geesten vielen uit het paradijs, en de hemelen rolden zich op als boekrollen, terwijl de aarde beefde.

5. En weer sprak de vrouw, en goot de tweede beker over de aarde uit. En deze beker was rood en als het geschreeuw van een vrouw. En er verschenen weer gezichten in de hemelen, en iemand spuwde op de aarde. Toen was er een groot gekrijs zoals er nog nooit was geweest, en zoals er nooit meer zou zijn. En de schepen der aarde begonnen weg te rotten, en de zee moest plaats maken voor het paradijs. En de Heere sprak tot Mammon : Oh, gij koopman, en rijke heer der aarde, uw meester is gevallen, en ook gij zult vallen. Want de Heere heeft het begin en eind van uw tijden vastgesteld, en ziet, gij zult in ketenen en boeien gaan, en de plaats bezoeken die de Heere voor u bestemd heeft, voor dit uur. En twee engelen grepen de Mammon en wierpen hem in de zee die nog over was, en de zee overstroomde het paradijs om tot rivieren te worden. En de Heere sprak tot de zee : Ik zet u vrij. En een slang van reusachtige omvang viel vanuit de hemelen in de zee, en de engelen die in en onder de zee opgesloten waren werden vrijgezet.

6. Toen nam de vrouw de derde beker en de hemelen werden zwart, terwijl ze het gif over de aarde uitgoot. En kort daarop goot ze de vierde beker uit over de aarde, wat was als rood zout. En gezichten en wielen verschenen er in de hemelen, en de geesten der zeeën kwamen tot de hemelen, en al wiens namen stonden opgetekend in het boek des levens vonden toegang. Zij wiens namen niet waren opgetekend werden teruggedreven tot de zeeën der aarde en de zeeën onder de aarde. En de Heere sprak met luide stem : Nu de vier bekers over de aarde zijn uitgegoten, neem de oogst op.

En een groot net werd over de aarde uitgespannen, en vele discipelen werden in de hemelen aangenomen.

7. En de Heere sprak weer : Voor dit uur heb ik de kolken des hemels bewaard. En de Heere opende de deuren van hemelse schuren en opslagplaatsen, en een kolkende massa kwam van alle kanten naar de aarde. En de draken der zee krijsten tot de hemelpoorten, maar deze bleven gesloten, want de Heere was met Zijn oordeel gekomen. Ook kwamen er vrouwen vanuit de zeeën en strekten zich uit naar de hemelpoorten, maar voor hen werd niet opengedaan, omdat de Heere met Zijn oordeel gekomen was. En zij droegen een vreemd zegel op hun voorhoofden, en vreemde tekens op hun handen. En een groot gehuil steeg op, maar de Heere opende de deuren niet. En de vrouwen kleedden zich als arme vrouwen en begonnen op de hemelpoorten te kloppen, en sommigen maakten zich op als oude vrouwen, maar de Heere opende voor hen niet. Zo was dan het oordeel over de rijken en hen die de lusten der wereld aanhingen. En zij begonnen te smeken en te klagen, of de Heere hun namen wilde optekenen in het boek des levens, maar de Heere luisterde naar hen niet. Aldus was de koppigheid des Heeren.

8. En de vrouwen brachten enkele gezalfden op die niet van de Heere waren, maar de Heere verteerde hen door vuur. En enkele van de vrouwen die nog overwaren ontteden zichzelf van kleding, en trachtten de Heere te verleiden, maar het vuur van de Heere kwam in grote verbolgenheid over hen, en hun ogen smolten in hun kassen weg. En de laatste vrouw die over was was genaamd de koningin der haaien, en zij was als een skelet, en ook werd zij heks genoemd. En zij vroeg de Heere om toegang, en haar macht was zo groot dat zij ware het mogelijk de Heere zou kunnen verslinden, maar door Zijn beker kon zij het niet, en moest zij op afstand blijven. En zelfs de verheerlijkte engelen durfden haar naam niet uit te spreken, en brachten geen oordeel over haar uit. Zij hielden hun mond, terwijl de Heere het boek des levens nam, wat in een zwaard veranderde. En zo had de Heere een gevecht met haar wat duizend dagen en nachten duurde. En na dit gevecht nam de Heere haar op, en wierp haar in de poel des vuurs. En de prometheus, de hades, de tantalus en de atlas moesten hun zielen uitspuwen.

9. En zo zit de Heere op het paard van de morgen, oorlog voerende in heiligheid. En zijn vrouwen volgen Hem, hen die de lusten van het kruis dragen, en de lusten van het ijs en de eenzaamheid. En de Heere voert macht over de heiligen, om hen in de rechte paden van het eeuwig leven te leiden. Maar er zijn vele eeuwigheden, en de Heere heeft vele rechte paden. Zo houdt hij de schapen van de bokken gescheiden, de kippen van de varkens en de runderen van de zwijnen. De Heere kent hen allen, en ziet of hun namen staan opgetekend in het boek des levens. Daarom, wanneer gij de geesten beproeft, beproef hen door het zwaard dat de Heere u gegeven heeft : het boek des levens. Het boek des levens bevat dan alle lusten des Heeren, en de lusten van Jezus Christus die gekruisigd is. Zo worden dan alle lusten van het kruis en van het wiel door het boek des levens en deze vuren beschreven, tot in alle eeuwigheden. Daarom is het : Geloofd zij de Heere, die door Jezus Christus, de gekruisigde, het boek des levens en haar vuren heeft gebracht tot de Zijnen, tot een heilige Jakobs ladder tot de hemelen. Ziet dan toe dat gij niet zondige, want de Heere zal Zijn boek zuiveren.

10. En tot mij kwam een vuur en een bliksemschicht met donder, en de Heere sprak : Teken deze dingen op, opdat uw hart gezuiverd zal worden, en gij niet aansprakelijk zult zijn voor de dingen die op de aarde gebeuren. Wees dan rein van alle bloed, en kom hogerop. En ik zag een deur geopend worden waar vanuit licht en bliksem kwam, en een duif verscheen met de verheerlijkte Christus. En ik ging door die deur naar binnen, en voor mij stond een tafel met vlees. En de Heere sprak : Eet, want dit is het vlees der hemelen. En ik at, en de duif des hemels daalde op mij neer. En de Heere sprak : Gij moet veel profeteren, want Ik kom spoedig. En de Heere gaf mij een vlag en een penseel, en het penseel kreeg vleugels en begon te bloeden. En de Heere sprak : Dit dan is het bloed van Christus en het bloed des Geestes. Open uw mond, en uw woorden zullen zuiver zijn. En ik opende mijn mond, maar woorden kwamen niet uit mij. Ik moest schrijven. En het papier waarop ik schreef begon te bloeden, en de Heere sprak : Dit is het bloed van de Heere en Zijn getrouwe profeten.

11. En ik begon op papier te profeteren en schreef de tongen des Heeren op, maar toen nam de Heere het papier en verzegelde het. En de Heere sprak : Het Boek van Bloed zal pas op een later tijdstip geopend worden. Nu dan, spreek er niet over wat ge hebt opgeschreven. En de Heer wierp het bloedende boek in de lucht, en het vloog weg als een vogel. En de Heere sprak tot mij : Zij die in het boek des levens staan hebben eeuwig leven, maar zij die in het boek des bloeds staan hebben toegang tot de eeuwigheden van het kruis. Maar zij die niet opgetekend zijn in het boek des bloeds zullen niet deelhebben aan de lusten van het bloed en het vlees van Christus Jezus. Zij blijven buiten vele poorten, en zullen schade lijden door de vierde dood.

12. En de Heere sprak tot Zijn discipelen over de heilige haat tot de zonde, en de lusten van die haat, ook wel de haat des Heeren genoemd. En de discipelen zaten met de Heere aan een groot meer der hemelen. En grote slangen begonnen vanuit de hoogtes in het grote meer te vallen. Aldus waren de slangen des Heeren de lusten van Zijn haat. En de Heere sprak dat de valse en overmoedige liefde als een vals vuur was, opwekkende eerezucht en machtszucht als de lusten der wereld. Deze kwamen om de mens te binden. En toen sprak de Heere over de hogere liefdes en de lusten daarvan, die allen des Heeren waren. En ziet, deze lusten stonden beschreven in het boek des bloeds. En de Heere opende een put in de hemelen waarin vreemd gedierte krioelde. En de Heere noemde het gedierte : het zaad van de lusten des Heeren. En een donderslag kwam om de put weer te verzegelen. En de Heere sprak over de leeuw die zegels verbrak, en deze leeuw was als van ijzer. En de Heere zei dat deze leeuw het zwaard van Mozes droeg. Ook droeg de leeuw geschiedenisboeken, en een mes waarmee het tijden kon ziften en kon lossnijden. Aldus waren de tongen des Heeren. En de leeuw werd woest voor het aangezicht des Heeren, en de leeuw sprak : Nu zijn de dagen gekomen dat de lusten van het wilde des Heeren zullen gaan spreken en tot de discipelen gaan komen. En de discipelen werden met vreemde tongen en lusten vervuld, alsof ze van verborgen bomen van het paradijs hadden gegeten.

13. En de Heere leidde hen tot de boom des levens en de boom des bloeds, en zij aten van vreemde vruchten des Heeren en van vreemd vlees. En de discipelen werden door de Heere op de leeuw geholpen, en de leeuw bracht hen tot de dieptes des hemels. En de Heere sprak : Nu is het de tijd dat Ik het Woord geheel zal transformeren, en ze zal onfeilbaar zijn. En de onfeilbaarheid des Heeren daalde als een griffioen en een basilisk tot hen, en zij beiden spuwden gif om de discipelen te reinigen. En toen de basilisk, de vliegende slang, sprak vielen de discipelen allen op hun aangezicht vanwege het licht. En een vrouw kwam naar voren, die een vrouw des Heeren was, en de basilisk begon om haar lichaam te kronkelen. En de vrouw klapte in haar handen en riep de harem des Heeren naar voren.

2. Aldus was de eerste harem des Heeren. En zij beelden de lusten van het kruis en het ijs uit. Sommigen dan hadden de huiden van slangen, en anderen hadden de huiden van panthers. Toen kwam de tweede harem des Heeren naar voren, en zij namen de griffioen mee naar een kamer. En zij droegen de namen van de bloedlijnen des Heeren : Mezo, Meza, Karu, Jettes, Jetta, Jasit, Jabat, Janbi, Janbil, Jatus, Jaspi, Kali, en Balmi. 4. En zo had de Heere nog achtendertig andere harems die de namen van zijn geschiedenissen droegen, en dus in totaal veertig harems. En zij droegen vreemde en uitheemse namen die de Heere sinds de grondlegging der wereld verborgen had gehouden. En de Heere werd als een gevleugelde zon.

5. En een wezen genaamd Sta kwam naar voren, en zie, zij was als een python, maar zij had armen en benen. En zij nam de gevleugelde zon in haar armen, en zij begon te stralen. En zij begon de discipelen uit te leggen over de principes van behoudenis, en de discipelen raakten verschrikt, en vroegen : Maar wie zal dan nog behouden worden ? En Sta legde uit over de vele eeuwigheden, met allemaal hun eigen voorwaardes. En zie, deze waren als de lusten des Heeren en als zijn wapenen. En Sta sprak over het grote Toronto als de hoer die aan vele tafelen zit, en zij sprak over die lusten als over de lusten der farizeeers en de lusten der wereld. En Sta sprak over de oordelen die de Heere zou uitwerpen over de pinkstergemeente. En zij sprak over de pinkstergemeente als een bron waaruit reizigers konden drinken, maar als ze te lang bij die bron zouden blijven, dan zouden vreemde wezens opkomen om hen te grijpen en hen die bron te doen laten verdrinken. En Sta gaf de discipelen rode gescheurde klederen die zij konden dragen, en zij leidde hen door een paarlen poort. Vanuit hier konden ze de geschiedenissen zien, maar de geschiedenissen begonnen voor hun hoofden te draaien en te veranderen. En Sta nam een zwaard en wierp het in de bron der geschiedenis, en zie, het werd als een bron van bloed. Ook de rivieren van het paradijs veranderden langzaam in bloed. Aldus was het bloed van Jezus Christus, de gekruisigde.

6. En in het paradijs kwamen de discipelen tot verborgen kruizen, en er waren verborgen bronnen van bloed. En Sta sprak met hen over de geheimenissen van de doornenkroon. En de doornenkroon was als een brandend wiel in de hemelen boven het paradijs, als een klok, en er woonden vrouwen in die zongen als vogels. En zij brachten vele wonden aan, en openden vele bloedbronnen, maar ook hadden zij de macht de bloedbronnen te verzegelen. Toen sprak Sta met de discipelen over de lusten der armoe, en de lusten van de haat des Heeren. En Sta sprak : Er is alleen overwinning door het kruis des Heeren en Zijn ijs, want hierdoor worden Zijn lusten voortgebracht en Zijn wapenen.

Weest daarom soldaten des kruizes en strijdt tegen de geesten die door de doornenkroon u aanvallen om Zijnentwille, want de doornenkroon is de enige die visioenen schenkt. En zij sprak over een diep geheimenis des Heeren. En ziet, vogels die op de doornenkroon zaten begonnen hen te bespotten om hun rode gescheurde klederen, en wonden begonnen op hun huid te verschijnen. En Sta sprak : Ziet, gij dan draagt de wonden des Heeren, en de lusten van Zijn spotkleed. Weest als soldaten van het kruis, geeft uw leven voor elkaar, opdat gij diepe genezing vinde.

7. En Sta zei dat hoewel ze nu in de hemel en het eeuwig leven, de reis door de dood en door de hel, als het zuiverende vuur des geestes nog niet voorbij was. En Sta liet een sieraad zien van de dood van Christus, genaamd de grote Krurg. En zie het was als de harem van de doornenkroon, en hun namen waren : Spimas, Spassam, Spussum, Spolam, Spolus, Spulus, Spulum, Spukkus, Flijm, Flaim, Fluis, Fluim, Spijm, Spuim, Schuim, Korres, Zettus-B, Kahel, Korg, Korgel, Kaslam, Kwadret, Kabuls, Kabulsch, Horrijn, Jakis, Zette, Maaslim, Tas-Lamen, Nikneit, Narit, Tzartvongen, Tzartvingen, Vesnit, Vakin, Rakin. En toen liet Sta een sieraad zien van de hellevaart van Christus, genaamd de Prosmon. En het sieraad was zeer krachtig, en was de tweede harem van de doornenkroon. En hun namen waren : Didomet, Kurgras, Kurgbosse, Kurgtom, Smalnes, Kurgdomet, Spaakdom, Domekals, Kalshut, Kamel, Tonije, Ergturg, Turgdom, Turgfisse, Fissekodom, Heidom, Heidem, Hergsiti, Hergheidom, Keidonne, Keidos, Keislert.

8. En de derde harem van de doornenkroon was genaamd de Grote Jaganta, en zij was het sieraad dat de ogen kon openen en visioenen en dromen kon geven. En hun namen waren : Fanir, Fassa, Fessa, Fissa, Jiskas, Jiskitte, Jiskidde, Jiskide, Julof, Kaker, Kamit, Kande, Kandij, Kandije, IJe, Jamba, Jasbo, Dekhelt, Daslo, Buslos, Boslus, Baake, Spoeme, Propoppe, Pidis, Pide, Kirch, Paake, Botte, Berhim, Parhas, Poos, Polk, Plaak, Poermoes, Proxmi, Pirtis, Pirklille, Hochshelt, Pookhelt, Pamix, Pirkmin, Pirkminne, Porklos, Porklosse, Padissa, Padamin, Podosluul, Kurtlit, Kerlenke, Kershwinne, Kamin, Kaminne, Kierklin, Kiswin, Kurlenze, Koslau, Kanik, Kerlentes, Kokwonen, Kokwau, Kokesses, Irksdwakei, Dirfwinne, Dirfwrum, Dirfwinnesse, Dirfwenkes, Dirfwentes, Daakschwin, Daakschwinne, Kirkmin, Kontau, Korkwanne, Korkwanin, Koflo, Kotlo, Korschwon, Korschlondo, Kortenu, Kortedane, Kortedame, Mirkwin, Deklos, Karhut, Karhutdaanschwinne, Miktes, Mikteschwinne, Korschkanau, Kwanut, Borschlon, Borschlonne, Buchtes, Buchtinne, Birisch, Bizanto, Birschwin, Bochteld, Baschwesse. En zij hadden grote macht, ook tot het sluiten van ogen en het wegnemen der gaven van visioenen, dromen en andere profetische gaven van het oog.

Het Boek des Bloeds

1. Dank aan Jezus, de Eeuwige, die ons de duif en de ekster heeft gezonden. Hij heeft het eeuwig evangelie ontzegeld, de zegels verbrekende aan het kruis. Dank aan Jezus, de Zoon, die door de psalmen tot ons heeft gesproken : Welzalig de man die niet wandelt in de raad der goddelozen, die niet staat op de weg der zondaars, nog zit in de kring der spotters. Hij die gesproken heeft : maar aan des Heeren wet zijn welgevallen heeft, en diens wet overpeinst bij dag en bij nacht. Hij die gezegd heeft : Ik ben de Wet. Hij die gezegd heeft : Want hij is als een boom, geplant aan waterstromen, die zijn vrucht geeft op Zijn tijd, welks loof niet verwelkt ; al wat hij onderneemt gelukt. Hij die heeft gesproken is dichterbij gekomen, totdat de morgenster oprijst in uw harten, en gij de woorden der profetie als een lamp zult volgen op een nieuw pad.

2. Ik ben de Wet, heeft de Heere gezegd, een Wet niet gemaakt door mensenharten, maar stromende vanuit de duif en de ekster. De Heere dan heeft gesproken zoete woorden van liefde, maar ook woorden van toorn, omdat de Heere uw God het kwade haat. Zo heeft Hij gesproken, en Zijn woord gestalte gegeven. Ja, tot volle wasdom bracht Hij Zijn Woord, en door Christus verbrak Hij de duisternis, die is de Mammon.

3. Want de materie heeft u het Woord niet geopenbaard, maar gesloten gehouden, en gesluierd. Maar de Heilige Geest heeft door de Eeuwige gesproken, en de schellen van uw ogen laten vallen. Laten zij dan die naderbij zijn gekomen Hem vrezen, want de Heere Heere is een verterend vuur. De Heere dan opene uw harten, opdat gij het woord zal verstaan. Prijst dan Jezus, de Eeuwige, die de ekster heeft gezonden, tezamen met de duif. En deze twee zijn als een zuiverend verbond. En de duif is dan wel van het oude, maar de ekster, die van het nieuwe is, heeft de duif gezuiverd, tot een eeuwig en heilig verbond.

4. De Heere Heere heeft tot u gesproken door de psalmen, als stromend licht, spoedig ontwakende in uw harten, waar gij de morgenster zult ontvangen, het morgenrood en het avondrood. Zo zal dan de werker niet tevergeefs hebben gewerkt, en de lijdende niet tevergeefs hebben geleden, maar alles zal ontvouwd worden in het wonderlijke licht dat de Heere zal brengen. Daarom : brengt heil tot uw God, opent uw oren, en spreekt met Hem, want Hij is degene die spreekt. Ook is Hij de luisterende en Hij die gebeden verhoort. Ziet dan, Hij laat Zich verbidden. De Heere heeft u zo een machtig wapen gegeven : het gebed, om met Hem te regeren. Laat daarom niemand zulk een gave misbruiken, want de toorn des Heere is snel.

5. Zo staat gij dan dag aan dag voor de oordeelstroon des Heeren om rekenschap af te leggen van uw woorden en daden. De Heere zal naar u luisteren wanneer gij spreekt, maar wanneer gij zonde in uw hart draagt, dan is elk woord de Heere een gruwel. Ja, zulke lieden zal de Heere voorzeker uitspuwen, en Hij zal spreken : Ik heb hen niet gestuurd. Vreselijk zal voor hen de dag zijn waarop de Heere wederkere.

6. Zo heeft dan David gesproken : Oh Heere, hoe talrijk zijn mijn tegenstanders ; velen staan tegen mij op ; velen zeggen van mij : Hij vindt geen hulp bij God. Maar Gij, Heere, zijt een schild dat mij dekt, mijn eer, en die mijn hoofd opheft. Als ik luide roep tot de Heere, antwoordt Hij mij van Zijn Heilige Berg. Ik legde mij neder en sliep ; ik ontwaakte, want de heere schraagt mij. Ik vrees niet voor tienduizenden van mijn volk, die zich rondom tegen mij stellen. Sta op, Heere, verlos mij, mijn God. Ja, gij hebt al mijn vijanden op de kaak geslagen, en de tanden der goddelozen verbrijzeld. De verlossing is van de Heere, uw zegen zij over uw volk.

7. Heere mijn God, bij u schuil ik, verlos mij van al mijn vervolgers en red mij, opdat hij niet als een leeuw mij verscheure, wegslepe zodat niemand redt. Sta op Heere, in uw toorn, verhef u tegen de woede van hen die mij benauwen. Waak op tot mijn hulp. Hij regent op de goddelozen vurige kolen en zwavel, schroeiende wind is het deel van hun beker. Help toch, Heere, want er zijn geen vromen meer ; ja de getrouwen onder de mensenkinderen zijn schaars. Zij spreken valsheden onder elkaar, dubbelhartig met gladde lippen. De Heere verdelge alle gladde lippen en elke grootsprekende tong ; hen die zeggen : Met onze tong zijn wij sterk ; onze lippen zijn met ons, wie is heer over ons ? Ik prijs de Heere die mij raad heeft gegeven, zelfs bij nacht onderwijzen mij mijn nieren. Ik stel mij de Heere bestendig voor ogen ; omdat Hij aan mijn rechterhand staat, wankel ik niet. Daarom verheugt zich mijn hart en juicht mijn ziel, zelfs mijn vlees zal in veiligheid wonen. Gods weg is volmaakt ; des Heeren woord is zuiver. Hij is een schild voor allen die bij Hem schuilen. Want wie is God behalve onze Heere ? Wie is een rots buiten onze God ? De God die mij met kracht omgordt, en mijn weg effen maakt. De wet des Heeren is volmaakt, zij verkwikt de ziel. Het gebod des heeren is louter. Het verlicht de ogen. Zelfs al ga ik door een dal van diepe duisternis. Ik vrees geen kwaad, want gij zijt bij mij ; uw stok en uw staf die vertroosten mij. Gij richt voor mij een dis aan voor de ogen van wie mij benauwen. Des Heeren is de aarde en haar volheid. Ja, op stromen heeft hij haar gevestigd, op pilaren van vuur. Wie mag de berg des Heeren beklimmen ? Hij die een rein hart heeft.

8. Zo spreekt dan David nog steeds tot Zijn Heere, en de Heere spreekt tot Hem. Zo spreekt hij nog steeds vanuit de wolk der getuigen, voortgeleid als een lichtende wolk door de Heere, verlichtende de harten van velen.

9. Diezelfde David heeft ook gesproken : Bij U, Heere, schuil ik, laat mij nimmer beschaamd staan. Doe mij ontkomen door uw gerechtigheid. Wees mij tot een beschuttende rots. Gij zult mij trekken uit het net dat men voor mij had verborgen, want Gij zijt mijn veste. In uw handen beveel ik mijn geest. Twist, Heere, tegen wie met mij twisten, bestrijd wie mij bestrijden. Grijp schild en rondas, sta op, mij ter hulpe. Zwaai speer en strijdbijl tegen mijn vervolgers, zeg tot mijn ziel : Ik ben uw Verlosser. Een rivier, haar stromen verheugen de stad Gods. God is in haar midden. Zij zal niet wankelen. God zal haar helpen bij het aanbreken van de morgen. Red mij oh Heere van de boze mensen, bewaar mij voor de mannen van het geweld, die boze dingen in hun hart beramen, de ganse dag strijd verwekken. Zij hebben hun tong gescherpt als een slang. Addervergif is onder hun lippen. Behoed mij, oh Heere, voor de handen der goddelozen, bewaar mij voor de mannen van het geweld, die zich voornemen mij de voet te lichten. Hovaardigen verborgen voor mij een strik met koorden. Zij spanden een net langs het pad. Hij doe hen vallen in het vuur, in kuilen, zodat zij niet weder opstaan. Geprezen zij de Heere, mijn Rots, die mijn vingers oefent voor de strijd. Mijn goedertierenheid en vesting, mijn schild, en verlossing. Gij zijt mijn vertrouwen.

10. En zo spreekt David nog steeds vanuit de lichtende wolk die het volk leidt : Heere, mijn God, mijn burcht, mijn vaste woning en Mijn licht. Leid mij, en bestuur mij, want gij zijt de Wet, gij zijt het zoete en de toorn. Vurige kolen zijn in uw hart vanwaar gij spreekt, om goddelozen te verbrijzelen, en in het dodenrijk om te brengen. Gij doorstoot de hoogmoedige, en haalt neer hen die valsheid prediken. Oh, Heere, eeuwige rots, doe mij recht, laat uw vijanden beschaamd staan. Ik haat hen die U haten. Ik heb lief hen die U liefhebben.

11. Jezus, U bent de Eeuwige Zoon, sprekende in het licht. Wanneer gij spreekt sluit de duisternis haar deuren, wanneer gij predikt verdrijft gij haar. U zond uw Geest, de Eeuwige om harten te verlichten, om tot hen te brengen het morgenrood en het avondrood. U zond uw duif en ekster, om de morgenster op te laten komen in onze harten, sprekende van een Eeuwig Woord. U bent de eeuwige, u bent gekomen.

12. Heere, leidt uw volk tot de armoe, laat haar niet ten verderfe gaan door de welvaart. Heere, ontmasker hen in uw volk die de Mammon volgen. Oh Heere, u heeft de heilige armoe tot ons gezonden om te getuigen van een hemelse rijkdom. Dit is de rijkdom van uw Woord. Heere, u heeft ons gereinigd door Uw bloed. Verbreekt dan ook de Mammon door uw bloed. Ja, door het kruis is de Mammon verslagen, en door het kruis hebt gij de grote Jom geveld, en gij hebt ons geleid tot de lokogamen, de sieraden van het lijden. Gij hebt ons rijkelijk bekleed.

13. En ik zag een deur van licht zich openen, en een duif en een ekster vlogen tot de Heere, en zetten zichzelf op zijn arm, en later op zijn schouders, en de Heere sprak woorden van donder, en zeide : Nu is het de tijd dat de zegels van het Eeuwig Evangelie worden verwijderd. En ik zag een grote engel komen die de zegels verwijderde, honderdvier in aantal, en hij wierp hen in de zee van bloed. En de engel sprak met een donderende stem, en ik kon het niet verstaan. Toen sprak de Heere : Prijst dan Jezus, de morgenster die in uw harten opkomt, want het Eeuwig Evangelie is naderbij gekomen. En ik zag een grote schare engelen die voor de voeten van Jezus neervielen, en zij aanbaden Hem. En ik zag een grote engel als een standbeeld, en deze engel was groter dan elke engel die ik ooit had gezien. En hij droeg een boek. Toen zag ik de ekster die opkwam vanaf de schouder des Heeren, vloog naar de engel toe en pikte het boek uit zijn armen om het tot de Heere te brengen. Toen opende de duif het boek, en de Heere sprak : Geeft nu eer aan Jezus, want de Grote Jom is gevallen, zij en haar tienduizenden. En ik zag een gestalte van bloed uit de hemel vallen, en zij stortte in de zee. En de Heere sprak : Weent oh gij aarde, want de Grote Jom is op u gevallen, en zij weet dat zij weinig tijd heeft. Weent dan, gij zee, want haar tienduizenden zullen haastig zoeken om te verslinden. En ik zag Rafael en Michael komen, en zij droegen Uriel tot de Heere. En ik zag grote scharen Jezus danken, en Jezus sprak : Dit is het moment waarop ik Mijn Eeuwige Geest rijkelijk uitstort. En een grote ekster kwam over de massa, en bracht de massa in beroering. En nieuwe tongen vielen op de scharen en zij profeteerden van grote dingen.

14. En toen begon Jezus te prediken, en zeide : Het koninkrijk der hemelen is nabij gekomen. En de ekster kwam op zijn schouder zitten, en daarna de duif, en Jezus deed grote wonderen. En vanuit het bloed der zee kwamen de martelaren voort, en zij stonden rein voor hun God. En de grote ekster leidde hen des daags naar de Eeuwige Stad, en de grote duif des nachts, daar zij lichtende verschijningen waren. Dank dan de Heere die David wederom tot u gezonden heeft, dank dan Jezus, want de grote stad is dichterbij gekomen. En de Heere zal zijn engelen zenden om u binnen te halen, en de Heere zal uw licht zijn. De Heere zal zijn Woord stand doen houden en tot gestalte brengen, als een schuilplaats waar gij voor eeuwig zult wonen. Zo is dan Jezus het licht van hen die in Hem geloven en Hem aanroepen. Ook zult gij Maria aanschouwen in al haar heerlijkheid, en zullen de poorten der engelen geopend worden. Richt u daarom op het bloed van Christus dat u heeft vrijgekocht, wetende dat dit kostbaar bloed ook uw geweten en verstand zal wassen en zal heiligen voor de Heere. De Heere zal zo een nieuw en heilig priesterschap oprichten. U bent dan naderbij gekomen tot het altaar van David, waar de Heere de vijand heeft geslacht. Weet dan dat gij niet alleen door het bloed van Christus word gewassen, maar meer nog door het bloed van de vijand, want zij die de Heere waarlijk liefhebben strijden voor Hem. Zo zult gij dan rein en heilig voor de Heere staan. En de Heere zal tot u zeggen : Gaat dan in, gij getrouwe slaaf, want gij hebt wel gehandeld. Maar tot hen die hun zwaarden rein hebben gehouden van bloed zal de Heere zeggen : Weest vervloekt, gij nietsnuttige lieden, want gij hebt de wet veracht, welke tot uw leven was. Nu dan, gaat heen, want gij zijt buitengeworpen. En de Heere zal tot hen zeggen : In het vuur zal alles gewassen worden, en door het vuur zal ik op zoek gaan naar een tweede oogst, en Ik zal oogsten hebben tot in alle eeuwigheden. Zorg dus dat gij daaraan deel hebt. En zo zal de Heere een bron zijn van liefde en zuivering tot in alle eeuwigheden, waarin velen tot verlichting zullen komen. En de Heere zal David wederom oprichten, en hem aanstellen tot een licht. En David zal het volk onderrichten in de krijgskunsten des Heeren, en hij zal de tempel herbouwen. En zij die de naam van David dragen zullen zalig zijn. En zo is dan David een machtig geheimenis van de kracht van Christus. En David zal zijn als de zwarte panter, kennende en spelende de verborgen liederen des Heeren. En zijn harp zal gerechtigheid brengen, en zijn fluit liefde. Ook zullen zijn harems door tamboerijnen zachtmoedigheid en tederheid brengen, en dit leren aan het volk. Want het is een kunst met de Heere te zijn, en een kunst met hem te regeren.

15. En ik zag een grote ekster en een grote duif op de schouders van David zitten, nadat een deur van licht zich had geopend, en ik zag David grote wonderen doen. En David werd genoemd : 'slachter van goddelozen', en 'rechtvaardige burcht'.

1. En ik zag grote mannen Gods naar voren komen, zoals Mozes, Simson, en Salomo, en zij kregen allemaal een duif en een ekster op hun schouders, en dit was als het nieuwe en eeuwige teken des Heeren waarmee Hij hen verzegelde, en een raaf leidde hen weg. En Mozes werd geplaatst om te regeren over de hel, en Simson werd aangesteld als de heerser van het dodenrijk. Salomo dan werd aangesteld over de schatkamers des Heeren. Ook zag ik Noach naar voren komen, en een nieuwe ark werd gebouwd.

Het Boek van de Heilige Voetspijkers

1. Het geheim van de profeten ligt in de doornenkroon, zij die visioenen geeft en dromen. Laten de profeten vol zijn met de lusten des Heeren, opdat zij aan de lusten der wereld ontkomen. Laten zij de Geesten des Heeren aanhangen, opdat zij de vreemde vrouwen kunnen ontvluchten. Zo heeft dan een iedere profeet een hemelse harem om zichzelf rein en onbevlekt te houden van de vrouwen der wereld. Want vele verleidingen zullen op de profeten worden afgezonden, en vele geesten van valsheid. Daarom, oh profeet, trekt u het Lot des Heeren aan, die gekruisigd werd, doorboort in voeten en handen. Draagt daarom ook de spijkers diep binnenin u als het zegel van uw verlossing. Want allen die in Christus zijn, zijn met Hem medekruisigd, en zij zondigen niet, daar zij door hetgeen zij geleden hebben aan de zonde onttrokken zijn. Maar velen die zeggen met Christus te lijden, lijden als een Petrus en een Judas. Zij verloochenen de Heere in Zijn lijden, en zij verraden Hem. Zij dan die met de Heere lijden zijn aan handen en voeten gekruisigd en dragen de spijkers van Zijn lijden diep binnenin. Ja, zij hebben zich door de spijkers laten reinigen in de dieptes van hun geest. Nu dan, de spijker die Zijn voeten doorboorde draagt een diep geheimenis, want deze spijker bracht Hem tot het dodenrijk en het rijk van de hel. En zo is de spijker die Zijn voeten doorboorde een pad door de onderwereld, een pad dat ook gij behoort te gaan. Zij dan die deze spijker niet in hun voeten dragen zijn geen christenen, daar zij niet het pad des Heeren volgen. Zij worden gegrepen door de wereld en haar lusten. Maar zij die de spijker dragen hebben de lusten des Heeren, en zij zijn daardoor aan de zonde onttrokken.

2. Daarom zijn hen die waarlijk in Christus zijn ook het pad door de dood en de hel gegaan, en zijn zij door de spijker medegekruisigd diep in hun geest. En door deze spijker hebben zij een wapen tegen de lust der wereld, en zijn zij mede-soldaten met Christus.

3. Zo is dan de heilige voetspijker de sleutel van het Grote Pasen, van het dodenrijk en van de hel. Deze spijker is de sleutel van het Pad van Christus, en zonder deze sleutel kunt gij niet tot de Heere komen. En zij die deze spijker dragen kunnen het pad van de wereld niet begaan, en worden daarom veelal bespot door de geesten der wereld, maar zij dragen de lusten des Heeren diep binnenin, en zij kennen Zijn vrede. Zij hebben een onoverwinnelijk wapen waarmee zij de geesten der wereld fokken, en aan het einde der tijden zullen zij deze geesten doorsteken zoals zij doorstoken waren. Zo zult gij het lijden aanvaarden als een middel om door de spijker tot Christus te komen, en gij zult geen van deze wapenen voor hun tijd gebruiken, want daarmee zult gij de Christus verliezen. Maar velen hebben overmoedig hun wapenen genomen om zo het lijden des Heeren te verachten. En de Heere zal hen in de eindtijd nemen om hen op Zijn grote wagen te zetten, en zij zullen tot een schande zijn. De Heere zal hen vernederen door hen in tijden van dorheid en kaalheid te brengen, en van de geesten der wereld zal de Heere de ogen uitrukken. Zo zal het sieraad der profeten velen die door de wereld vernederd waren tot eer strekken.

4. Aanbidt daarom de spijker, in plaats van allerlei vaagheden. De Heere wil geprezen worden in Zijn lijden, en door uw allerheiligste persoonlijke deelname. De Heere zal de lippen slaan van hen die Hem op een afstand blijven prijzen. Zij die de Heilige voetspijker waarmede Hij gekruisigd was, aanbidden zoals zij het kruis aanbidden en Zijn doornenkroon, zij hebben Hem gevonden, en zullen met Hem zijn. Maar de Heere zal de vuile harten slaan.

5. Zo hebt gij in de voetspijker een sleutel om tot Hem te komen, en om Eén met Hem te zijn. Volgt Hem dan in al Zijn voetstappen, en print Zijn geboden door de spijker in uw gedachtes, opdat gij ze voor eeuwig zult bewaren. Ja, de voorwerpen des kruises zijn voor eeuwig, en zij dienen geprezen te worden, opdat gij ze in uw allerheiligste deelname kunt gebruiken. Want weet gij niet dat door deel te hebben aan het kruis, gij ook deel zult hebben aan de wapenen des kruises ? Maar wekt hen dan niet voortijdig op, opdat zij zich niet tegen u zullen keren.

6. Maar er zijn enkelen onder u die de gemeente van de eenvoudige toewijding aan de spijker willen afleiden. Zij hebben de paden der farizeeers aangelegd. Maar gij geheel anders : Luistert niet naar zulke lieden die niet over de spijker prediken, want hun paden leiden tot dood en duisternis. Laat u dan ook niet door vrienden, kennissen, ouders of kinderen afhouden van de wegen des Heeren. Ook al waren zij uw broeders en zusters, zulken zijn niets anders dan wonden. Toch draagt gij zulke wonden getrouw, en legt hen voor aan de Heere. Door uw toewijding aan de Heere en Zijn spijker, zult gij die heilig zijt, het pad van ijs begaan, daar dit het pad des Heeren is. De Heere rekent niet met familie, maar met hen die Zijn geboden onderhouden. Zulke ouders en zulke kinderen zijn goud waard, maar de rest zal vergaan. Kleeft daarom niet vast aan hen die de Wil des Heeren niet doen, of aan hen die zeggen de Wil des Heeren te doen, maar de paden der farizeeers bewandelen. Volgt ook geen profeten die voorspoed aanhangen, want zij zijn geen profeten, maar dieven. Volg de paden der profeten over en langs de paden van de armoe. Want ziet, de armoe is uw hemelse harem die u afhoudt van de begeertes der mensen. De begeertes der mensen leiden tot verderf en het afsluiten van de zintuigen. Zij hebben hun genot in niets en in schaamteloze gevoelloosheid. Zij zullen nog meer gevoel verliezen, en hun hardheid zal dan afbrokkelen in de hel. Maar hangt hen die zeggen dat de hel altijd duurt niet aan, want zij zijn wreed en harteloos. Ziet, zij hebben reeds hun gevoel verloren, zij zijn vleeseters en hoereerders, daar zij vrienden van de wereld zijn en metterdaad vijanden van God. De hel zal opgelost worden in de hemel, daar de hel een reinigend vuur was om een ieder te louteren, uitgezonden door de hemel, en terugkerende tot de hemel. De Heere houdt de zonde niet in stand, en ook niet de zondaar. Zij die dat zeggen willen de zonde niet loslaten. De Heere rekent niet met hen, en rekent hen tot de spotters. Maar velen onder u hebben vroeger zo gedacht in uw tijden van zonde, en de Heere heeft u verlost. Zo heeft de Heere velen verlicht, en zal de Heere nog velen verlichten. Spot dan niet met deze woorden, want zij die zulke woorden afwijzen hebben reeds de Heere afgewezen. Maar toets deze woorden in heiligheid en in vreze en beven, want de Heere mocht eens spreken. Ziet dan toe dat gij Hem die spreekt niet afwijst, want velen sliepen terwijl Hij leed en sprak. Waakt dan op, gij die slaapt, opdat Christus over u zal lichten. En Zijn spijker is als de lantaarn op uw pad.

7. Zo zullen er dan in het laatste der tijden vele vijanden van God opstaan. En zij zullen hun kerken hebben, en zij zullen daarin mensen vangen met hun netten. Maar gij geheel anders : Blijft ver bij hen uit de buurt. De Heere heeft Zijn stad voor u opengesteld, en het zij u genoeg. Zo hebt gij die de Heere volgt ook uw ziel gekruisigd door de spijker, en het zij u als een wachter voor uw mond. Zo hebben dan allen die de doornenkroon des Heeren dragen door de spijker een lantaarn en een lamp op het pad der profeten en het pad des Heeren, en zij zullen vele gezichten zien. Ja, zij hebben een middel om de profetische gaven aan te wakkeren, als een heilig vuur des Heeren. Ja, want ook in de hemelen zijn de spijkers machtige pilaren, en gij dient erop acht te geven als op wegen omhoog. En de engelen en de harems des Heeren dalen over deze pilaren af, en stijgen er langs op.

8. Zo hebben dan de spijkers van Christus velen gezaligd, en vele paden hebben zij geopend. Ja, want door de handspijker Hebt gij een bediening des Heeren gekregen, en hebt gij werk des Heeren gedaan. En door de voetspijker hebt gij reine paden betreden, en hebt gij reizen in de geest gemaakt. En ja, sommigen onder u zijn predictaten des Heeren. En door het spotkleed te dragen zijt ge apostel geworden voor het aangezicht des Heeren, en de Heere is getrouw tot u en behoedde u. En door de doornenkroon te dragen werd ge profeet voor het aangezicht des Heeren, en schonk Hij u visioenen door Zijn bloed. En zij die door de speer des Heeren waren doorstoken zoals Hij eens werd aan het kruis, en zij die deze speer dragen en aanbidden als de heiligheid van de Heere, zij zijn als richters voor het aangezicht van God.

9. En zo zijn ook enkele heel zuiveren hermitaat geworden door de voetspijker des Heeren, omdat zij zijn wegen niet hebben veracht. En zij hebben een reis in hun binnenste gemaakt om de Heere te ontmoeten en te omhullen. En nu is de Heere hun omhulling door de voetspijker. De Heere is getrouw tot wie Hem dienen, en bekleed en heiligt hen door de voorwerpen des kruises.
